DAR researches historic gravesites

The first fall meeting on the Colonel Thomas Lothrop-Old Colony Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution was held at the home of Barbara Dillon. The group discussed the marking of the graves of the many Revolutionary War soldiers who served the towns of Cohasset and Hingham.

If anyone who has any information about these graves, contact Dillon at 781-383-0025.

Some of the graves already have markers but the list of those who served does not identify where they are buried. It would be greatly appreciated, the group reported, if anyone who has any information about these graves, contact Dillon at 781-383-0025.

The next meeting of the chapter will be a genealogy workshop at the Lightkeepers Residence on Nov. 4 from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. The workshop is designed to help prospective members with their research. If you are interested, you are encouraged to come. Any questions, call Dillon or Nancy O'Toole at 781-383-1547.

COHASSET REVITALIZATION CORPORATION

Support Article 15 at Special Town Meeting on Monday, November 5, 7:00 pm at Cohasset High School

Cohasset Village Streetscape and Circulation Improvement Program

This plan represents one of five village areas to be presented at town meeting.

Article 15: To see if the Town will vote to approve a plan for improvements to the Downtown Village Area as proposed by the Village Revitalization Task Force, in conjunction with the Cohasset Revitalization Corporation, more or less as shown on plans on file in the Office of the Town Clerk, or to take any other action relative thereto.

What is Article 15 asking you to approve?

- The design concept depicted in the community generated plans drawn by The Cecil Group to improve infrastructure and streetscapes within the village. The proposed designs will improve pedestrian and vehicle safety, circulation and accessibility, as well as enhance the aesthetic nature and economic stability of the downtown environment.
- These goals will be accomplished through the creation of new sidewalks and crosswalks, improved intersection design and parking configurations, and the addition of general streetscape elements such as pedestrian scale lighting, flower and tree planting, and uniform street and directional signage.
- It is important to note that the completion of the final drawings, as well as the final designs associated with the James Brook Flood Control Project, and the possible renovation of the MBTA Greenbush Line may slightly alter some of the presented designs (thus the term "more or less" in the Warrant Article).

What is Article 15 NOT asking you to approve at this time?

- Sidewalk and crosswalk surface materials, style of light fixtures, species and exact locations of flowers and trees, and style and location of street and directional signage.

Please Note: These are critical design elements, which need further review and public input. The VRTF and the CRC will continue to research options and their associated costs. After further public input and analysis, a recommendation will be made to the Board of Selectmen for approval.

What are the Fiscal Impacts of Article 15?

- Article 15 does not ask the town to allocate any financial resources to this project at this time.

Current construction estimates range from $1.7 million (all concrete sidewalks) to $2.4 million (all brick sidewalks). The Town currently has approximately $2.2 million in grant money and MBTA mitigation funds earmarked for the described improvements.

Why is it important to endorse Article 15 at this time?

- The VRTF and the Board of Selectmen will be able to proceed with the creation of final designs and construction drawings necessary to complete the described improvements. With the final drawings in hand by the Spring/Summer of 2002, the town will be in the position to cost effectively coordinate planned projects in the Village such as the James Brook Flood Control Project and possible restoration of the MBTA Greenbush Line. Efficient management and oversight will maximize the dollars spent in the Village, and minimize the disruption for residents and businesses.

The completion of community created and endorsed plans will enable the Town to effectively coordinate the design and construction of all future village projects in a manner that shapes the village the way the community wants, not the way the independent contractors/agencies may want.

Stars of the Week

Brendan Goff, Stephen Davis, Jari Martin, Wil Prendergast and Cosimo Cambi.

The glamour players for the Cohasset High football team have piled up the yards, points and accolades for the surprising 7-0 Skippers this fall. Any knowledgeable football fan will tell you, however, that any success on offense almost always starts at the line, and any knowledgeable Cohasset High football fan will tell you that their team's success is not an exception to this case. The five players listed, left to right, are the quiet heroes of the well oiled Skippers machine.

Boys keep rolling into post-season

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

A meaningless regular season finale between non-league rivals who've already qualified for the post-season?...Hardly.

Friday's regular season-ending showdown between neighboring Cohasset and Scituate was anything but a tepid affair, as the pitch of play clearly belied the import of the game.

The memories from Cohasset's hard-fought, 3-1, win just 13 days earlier was obviously still fresh in the minds of both teams, as fans from both towns packed the stands at Cohasset's Alumni Field on Friday — this game part of the school's Homecoming weekend festivities.

Both teams were already without All-Star players — Cohasset coach Dave Nigro sitting sweeper Greg O'Connell to let him rest his slightly sprained ankle for tourney and Scituate without top scorer Alex Knight, who broke his wrist two days earlier against Middleboro.

And 70 minutes of physical, scoreless soccer didn't help the mood for either team.

Cohasset controlled the tempo for much of the game, but Scituate's All-Eastern Mass keeper Greg Levin (12 saves) came up big repeatedly to keep the Skippers off the board.

Emotions boiled over following the awarding of a penalty kick to Cohasset for contact in the box with 10 minutes remaining. The end result was a red card and automatic two-game suspension for Scituate sweeper Ryan Cahill, a Patriot League All-Star.

Levin stopped the penalty kick from Cohasset's Matt Bilodeau, a fellow All Eastern Mass All-Star, but the Skippers continued to pour it on with the man advantage (Cahill's spot left unfilled) and, with just three minutes remaining, a blast from Cohasset captain Pete Maitland from approximately 20 yards out deflected off a Scituate player and by the surprised Levin.

"I was pleased with the way we kept the pressure on against a good team all night," said coach Nigro following the game. "Even though we only scored the one goal, I thought this was a pretty good offensive performance to go in to the tourney off of. Hopefully, we just won't see too many goalies like Levin (in the tourney)."

The Skippers also had the offense clicking the previous day, taking down Hull 3-0 in their final South Shore League contest — a game the Skippers dominated territorially pretty much throughout. Junior Evan Pestone netted a pair of goals, Bilodeau the third.

Finishing with a 12-3-2 record overall, the Skippers can probably expect a top five seed when the south sectional brackets are released today by the MIAA. There seems a good chance, along with this, that the Cohasset boys could get a couple of home games as they strive to improve on last year's semi-final run.

All-Stars

The annual South Shore League versus Patriot League All-Star soccer games will be played tonight at Duxbury High School (girls at 5:30, boys at 7:30). The Skippers will be represented by O'Connell, a junior, and senior captains Bilodeau and Maitland.

22-0 swamping of Nantucket sets stage for SSL championship showdown with Abington

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

Last Saturday, the football Skippers showed a non-league opponent what has made them the talk of this year's South Shore League.

Improving to 7-0, Cohasset ripped apart the Whalers from Nantucket, 22-0, in front of a very large and Homecoming crowd. The win was a perfect way to cap off Spirit Week, Pep Rally and all.

"We really, really played well," stated fourth year head coach responsive Tony Rolfe. "The whole week had been a big build-up."

Recording their second shutout of the year, the defense was as dominant as it has been all season. Cohasset shut down Nantucket on the ground from the start, consistently hitting Whaler backs behind the line of scrimmage.

Leading the way in that department were the Skippers' front defensive line. Senior captain Paul Previte led all tacklers, recording six for the balanced

Girls soccer team appears loaded for 2002

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

Although the season may be over for the girls soccer team, they have plenty to look forward to for next year.

Coach Deb Beal, who has been establishing her system of play since she began coaching four years ago, truly believes that next year will be the year her team moves away from the losing record.

The 2001 team should have 12 seniors, and many more juniors, six of whom started this year as sophomores. For the first time in her coaching career, Beal said she may have to make cuts. But that is a price she is willing to pay to win more games.

"It is going to be a battle," conceded the coach. "Come fall time, it is going to be about who wants it more."

Next year's team will feature all returning players, including junior Julie Lordan, who made the All-Star team for her season. Also returning for the defense will be junior Maura McKenney, and sophomores Holly Graham and Brenna O'Donnell, all of whom had great seasons as first year starters.

Behind the defense, junior Kelly Holway and sophomore Brittaney Novak will be fighting for the top goalie position next fall. Holway was the reliable starter for the Lady Skippers all

Brothers lead Pee Wee-C team

What a victory for coach John Hernon and his mighty Coastal Stars Pee Wee C-1 team. Long admired for his coaching ability, coach Hernon showed he also might have some promise as a G.M. In an effort to strengthen his already solid team, Hernon looked north and brought to his team the powerful tandem of Canadian twin brothers, Alex and Cory MacDonald.

Hernon's two new recruits played their first game for the Coastal Stars this past weekend and contributed greatly to their team's 5-2 victory over Plymouth in a well played game Saturday afternoon in Hingham.

The drama unfolded early. On the first shift of the game Star's forward Bryan Sheehan set the tone by notching a quick goal with help from fellow winger John Hernon. The stubborn Plymouth team's persistent effort was rewarded by the period's end as they managed two late goals to take a 2-1 lead.

The second period was characterized by stellar Star defense. Goalie, and new player, Alex MacDonald, shut out the Plymouth attack with help from a very strong defensive foursome of Alex Langley, Paul Berchtold , Patrick Leary, and twin brother Cory MacDonald. While the Star defense stoned the Plymouth attack the offense turned on the pressure with Star forward, Matt McNally scoring two goals to enable the Stars to reclaim the lead. It was McNally's heads up play and tireless effort that contributed to his second goal as he tapped in a loose puck that was dancing on the goal line.

Armed with a 3-2 lead going into the third, the Stars momentum continued with a thrilling penalty shot

Future bright for C.H.S. field hockey

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Deb Bostwick loved the character her 23 girls showed in their spirited stretch run that saw them ultimately come up just one point short of post-season qualification at 6-7-5.

"I look back at a lot of those ties and losses that could have been wins and I think if we'd gotten just one more goal in any of those situations we'd be getting ready for the tourney rather than saying good bye to the seniors and see you next year to the rest of the girls," said Bostwick this week following the season ending 1-0 win over Silver Lake on Friday.

Don't despair too much for the veteran coach or her Cohasset field hockey program, however, as she gets all but five of these girls back for next season—which leaves the Lady Skippers in much better position than most of those teams that just barely squeaked by them this season.

"These (senior) girls really showed their leadership when things were coming together for us down the stretch. They'll be missed for their leadership and their play, but I think we have enough coming back to take a nice step up next season, that is as long as everyone continues to work hard."

Cohasset field hockey coach Deb Bostwick

This is not to say Cohasset won't miss captain Abbey Coakley, who scored the lone goal in the season finale, or her four fellow seniors—Allison Scott, Suzanne Lynner, Jackie Goines and Katie Silva—all of whom started for Cohasset.

"These girls really showed their leadership when things were coming together for us down the stretch," said Bostwick, whose team went 5-3-2 over its final 10 games. "They'll be missed for their leadership and their play, but I think we have enough coming back to take a nice step up next season, that is as long as everyone continues to work hard."

Whatever retooling needs to take place will be done around junior captain midfielder Heather Peraino—who was named as a South Shore League All-Star this week along with Goines and Coakley.

All four of Cohasset's fall athletic teams played at home over this past weekend as part of the school's annual Homecoming festivities, with wins being notched by the boys soccer, field hockey and football teams.

Friday's games by the field hockey team and both soccer squads were also the regular season finales. The boys wrapped up their 13-3-2season with a 1-0 win over Scituate, sending them off into the state toruney this coming weekend on a high note. The girls soccer and field hockey teams both missed out on the post-season, the latter two teams by one point in the standings.

The football team wrapped up the weekend's sporting events with a decisive 22-0 win over Nantucket on Saturday, setting the stage for this Friday night's showdown at home with Abington for first place in the South Shore League.

Cohasset's Jason Brown (#14) led the charge offensively in Saturday's 22-0 win over Nantucket with tow touchdown and 143 yards rushing.

things go for us this season," said Bostwick. "And she'll be looked to for that again next year, but it looks like she'll have plenty of help, which is good, because she's more effective when she doesn't have to do it all."

Other juniors who played a key role this season include starters Sera Genovese in goal, midfielder Lindsay Grossman and Deanna Brown, forwards Sarah Brady and Rachel Smith, and fullbacks Sarah Dennis and Kimmy Ulmner.

The quick and athletic Grossman (also a standout basketball and tennis player for C.H.S.) teamed increasingly well with Peraino at midfield as the season wore on, prompting Bostwick to offer that this could be an area of dominance in 2002.

The veteran coach already feels extremely content with the prospects on defense, with Genovese returning between the pipes and Dennis and Ulmner having emerged as formidable forces on the backline.

Sophomores Rachel Doyle, Frannie Noble, Danielle Pinkus, Jessie Guild and Kelly Hurley all also played bigger and bigger roles as the season wore on.

year, but Novak made a serious charge for a full-time spot on the varsity team late in the season.

Cohasset's forward line will be hit by the graduations of seniors Kate Grimm and Becky Ross. Both were valuable attackers who made serious bids at raising Cohasset's goal total.

"Kate Grimm has been a multi-functional player," observed Beal of the lefty. "She has been one of the most versatile players this year.

"Becky has really developed a nice cut move, and worked herself nicely into the forward line."

Junior Molly Flanagan and sophomore Gillian Weber, both second year starters, should lead the way in picking up the slack on offense in 2002.

At midfield, the Lady Skippers will be faced with the immensely difficult task of filling the void that will be created by the graduation of Maggie O'Neill. A two-time South Shore League All-Star, O'Neill had the ability to dominate the middle of the field with her powerful drives and slick footwork.

"Her presence, her strength and her foot skills will be dearly missed," reported Beal.

Hoping to help compensate for this loss will be junior Yasmine Afshar and sophomore Jen Buckley, who each improved their speed and skills this season to create a formidable midfield tandem along with O'Neil.

The Lady Skippers completed their season with one of their best games of the year, a 2-1 loss to Div. 2 tourney bound Scituate on Homecoming Friday.

The Lady Sailors had blasted past Cohasset just 13 days earlier, 5-0, making everyone in the Skipper camp wishing they had scheduled a different opponent for Homecoming.

But Scituate, confident after wins over the powerhouses Quincy and Middleboro, could only muster a penalty kick goal in the first half.

Maggie O'Neill took over the game for her team, forcing openings through the talented Scituate defense. O'Neill tied the score on a free kick from 25 yards out, blasting the shot top shelf past the helpless Scituate keeper Christina Obert.

Cohasset very nearly took the lead on a corner kick from O'Neill that Afshar put on net.

Although it was not the ideal way to finish off the season at home, Beal was quite pleased with how her team played. And she is even more pleased about the prospects of next year's squad.

"If any year comes together for us," she noted, "it will be next year."

defense.

Senior Chris Caron and juniors Chris McKenna, Ben Lynner and Cosimo Cambi plugged up the middle all day, stopping the usually elusive Aaron Riley of Nantucket. In addition to his four tackles, Caron was credited with knocking loose a fumble that McKenna pounced on midway through the third quarter.

Sophomore Tony Truglia had by far his best game of the season at linebacker, tallying four tackles, including a vicious sack for a big loss.

The defense's most exciting play of the game came after a beautiful 70-yard punt by junior Tom Anderson was downed by senior David Bouchard on the Nantucket one-yard line. On the ensuing play, the Whalers elected to try to rush the ball straight through Cohasset's defensive line.

This proved to be a costly mistake. Cambi put his team up 16-0 with a safety when he hammered Riley immediately after the Whaler running back received the hand-off.

"I got the warm and fuzzies watching that on film," admitted Rolfe.

The secondary had just as impressive a day, keeping the Whalers' air attack at bay.

Sophomore Chris Bilodeau picked off two passes and senior Eric Libby intercepted another from Nantucket's rattled passer. The Whalers completed only five passes, three of them for less than seven yards.

Not to be outdone, the offense broke 20 points for the third time this year.

Junior fullback Braun Goodson started the scoring with a 37 yard rumble into the end zone, his third touchdown of the year. Primarily used for blocking, Goodson finished the day with 114 yards, by far his most productive day running the ball. He also had a 25-yard reception over the middle.

Senior running back Jason Brown continued his All-Star caliber year, with touchdown runs of eight and 50 yards. He took an early exit from the game with the big lead after amassing 143 rushing yards on 22 carries.

Junior quarterback Mike Snowdale had another impressive day, throwing 6-for-10 for 100 yards, and an interception.

Rolfe was extremely pleased with not only the end result of the game, but with the way his team played nearly mistake free. They had only one turnover (not including turnovers on downs), and a variety of heads-up plays on special teams.

"We weren't pleased with the way we played against Norton (two weeks ago), and we didn't want to repeat that," offered the coach.

Rolfe hopes the momentum of this win carries over into next week's match-up against Abington. The winner of this game will likely win the South Shore League, and will probably go to the Div. 5 Super Bowl.

"I think we are the underdogs," said Rolfe in earnest, after the Green Wave washed over the Clippers of Norwell last week, 14-0. "We cannot make any mistakes, and we are not going to let them get the cheap scores."

Rolfe was not hesitant in saying that this was not the game of the year. In fact, he said, for Cohasset football, "this is the game of the decade."

Game Notes

- All of Snowdale's completions went for more than 10 yards.
- With the exception of the final drive that ended with the half expiring, Cohasset's offense amassed an average of 64 yards per drive in the first half.
- Cohasset finished with 15 first downs to Nantucket's four.
- Nantucket committed all five of its turnovers in the second half.
- The first six tackles made by the Skippers were by different players.
- Snowdale completed his first five passes.

Davis starting for Stonehill

NOTES FROM THE NEXT LEVEL

Former Cohasset High football captain Matt Davis, a 2001 graduate, had earned a starting job on the offensive line for Stonehill's varsity football team as a freshman until a sprained ankle last week put him on the shelf.

Interestingly, Davis, a 2000 Mariner All-Scholastic selection, is playing alongside former South Shore League rival Rob Scully, Hull's standout quarterback the last few season who also graduated this past spring. Scully has been receiving some playing time at wide receiver.

Davis has not yet declared a college major. According to his father, though, Matt is presently leaning towards teaching and football coaching.

Pierson named to academic team

Vassar's Elizabeth Pierson was named to the 2001 field hockey Academic All-Upstate Collegiate Athletic Association, the conference announced today.

Pierson, a junior from Cohasset and an environmental science major, is one of nine Brewers to qualify for the team. No other school had more field hockey players selected to the UCAA's academic team.

To qualify, a student-athlete must have at least a sophomore academic standing, a minimum 3.20 GPA and participated in at least 50 percent of varsity competition.

The UCAA is comprised of 10 New York based colleges and includes Clarkson, Hamilton, Hobart, Rensselaer, Rochester, Saint Lawrence, Skidmore, Union, William Smith and Vassar.

score by Star forward Jake Metcalfe. Using his speed and a clever deke Metcalfe watched his shot trickle by the Plymouth's goalie to put the Stars up 4-2. Metcalfe than appeared to put the game out of reach as he fed the high scoring forward Hernon for the Stars' fifth goal.

The game seemed to be over with a 5-2 lead late into the third. While coach Hernon and his assistant Verri Langley implored their team to maintain their intensity, the Stars let up and found themselves down two players as two quick penalties were called against them. The game was finally sealed by the relentless forechecking and hustle of penalty killers Bruce Boulter and Jeff Mooney who did not allow a single shot in a two minute five on three advantage.

While parents and friends applauded coach Hernon for importing the new Canadian Stars, coach Hernon realized that he was the lucky beneficiary of a good family deciding to move to Marshfield that enabled the twin boys to play for the Stars. Coach Hernon said of the MacDonalds that they are a nice addition to an already impressive team with a group of well disciplined, highly motivated players and a great group of parents.

SPORTS NOTES

Pep Rally Friday

The Cohasset High student body will try to send their boys soccer and football teams off into this weekend's big challenges on as high a note as possible Friday afternoon with a pep rally scheduled for 1:45 on Alumni Field.

The 7-0 football team is hosting unbeaten South Shore League rival Abington Friday night on Alumni field in a game that will quite likely determine the league's Super Bowl representative this fall.

The soccer team, which finished up the regular season with a 13-3-2 record, was expected to discover last night who its first round opponent in the state tourney will be—with a Saturday or Sunday game at Cohasset High likely.

Cohasset girls basketball signups

Fifth-, sixth-, seventh- and eighth-grade girls tryouts for the Old Colony League will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 8, at 7 p.m. at the Deer Hill gym. Cohasset will have three teams, fifth and sixth grade, seventh grade and eighth grade. Inter-town games begin in December. For more information call Dan Belz at 781-383-0813.

Stingrays play in Super Bowl Sunday

The Scituate/Cohasset Stingrays will host Duxbury in the PeeWee Super Bowl this Sunday (12:15 kickoff) at Scituate High School.

The Stingrays finished their regular season with a 5-1-1 record, the lone loss coming to the same Duxbury team it faces off with on Sunday.

The Stingrays are coached by Ralph Froio.

The team includes Cody Adamson, Kevin Ayala, Joseph Barrsano, Robert Carlezon, Thomas Chamberlain, Kyle Crowley, Frankie Dixon, Michael Fassnacht, James Finnegan, Michael Froio, David Gordan, Mike Judge, Daniel Judge, Dean Kennedy, Joey Leary, Nick Lieberman, Alexander Livingstone, Nicholas Lombardo, John McKenna, Sean McQuaid, Christopher Mogan, Christopher Munson, Martin Noenick, Christopher O'Brien, Kurt Ohrenberger, Brian O'Reilly, Paul Pozniak, James Reichardt, Nicholas Savage, Derek Schwantner, Eric Selander, Jake Simpson, John Spence, Derek St. Peter, Charlie Taylor, Kenton Toney and Jonathon Wells.

Gridiron Club urges support

The Gridiron Club would like to invite the public to come support Cohasset Football. This past weekend, Cohasset's football team beat Nantucket, 22-0, which means Cohasset and Abington are both undefeated with the same record: seven wins, no losses. These two teams will be playing each other in Cohasset, Friday evening, Nov. 2, at 7 p.m.

The football game promises to be an exciting one with both teams trying to remain undefeated. The team will greatly appreciate a packed house cheering them on to VICTORY.

What is it going to take?

FROM THE SIDELINES

JULIE ANN NEVERO

How many times have parents told their children to "Grow up" or "Act their age."?

Well, it seems to me that when it comes to how one should act on a playing field, the kids are grown up and they do act their age. Parents, on the other hand, may be receiving too much credit and perhaps should learn to heed their own advice.

What is it going to take to make parents realize that violence at youth sporting events is simply not acceptable?

It's been nearly a year since I first posed this question in a column entitled, "Parents fight, kids watch" and it appears that an answer is no closer and that violent outbursts on Massachusetts playing fields are only getting worse.

In the latest – and most inconceivable – of a string of incidents, the father of a Weymouth High soccer player walked out onto the field and assaulted an student-athlete from the opposing Framingham team. With :24 seconds remaining in the Oct. 23 contest between the two Bay State League rivals, 45-year-old Kieman Whelan tripped and punched Framingham's Eric Dannenberg.

Whelan was apparently reacting to Dannenberg's slide tackle on Weymouth's Matt Walsh, a teammate of Whelan's son, which occurred just moments after Weymouth – the number one team in the nation – scored the lone goal of the game. The play was ruled legal by the game's two referees, but Whelan apparently thought otherwise and decided to take the matter into his own hands.

"The two officials were right there on top of it and said it was a completely clean play," Framingham AD Jim O'Connor told The Boston Globe. "[Dannenberg] hit the ball first and his momentum took him into [Walsh].

"When our young man got up, he was attacked by a man from Weymouth and hit a couple of times in the face," he added. Dannenberg apparently suffered a sore jaw and neck, but returned to school the following day. Whelan has not commented on the incident since it occurred and will answer to assault and battery charges at a Nov. 21 pretrial hearing in Framingham District Court.

"It's totally unbelievable," Marshfield field hockey coach Carol Anderson said of Whelan's actions. "Games are supposed to be for the kids to have fun and to learn what it's like to be part of a team. People have to learn that in life, you're not always going to get what you want and that's something that we as coaches try to instill in the kids. I mean, what was he (Whelan) thinking?"

Indeed I'm not sure what parents have been thinking lately. I mean, I understand that parents want the best for their children. Of course they want to protect and support their kids and of course they want to see them succeed. I don't have to have a child of my own to understand that.

What I don't understand is how some parents – who are supposed to be adults, mind you – feel the need to resort to violence as a means to settle a disagreement. And for that matter, is a disagreement at a youth sporting event even a means for an argument, let alone a physical confrontation? I don't understand why some parents don't think before they act. I mean, what did Whelan think he would accomplish by attacking the athlete? What is it that possesses a man to walk onto a field and attack an athlete? What in his mind tells him that it's okay to do something like that? Did he not think about the embarrassment his attack would cause the kid, his own son or even himself?

Obviously not.

As I mentioned in my last column on this subject, we sports writers witness dozens of collisions/confrontations between athletes, on all types of playing fields. But we understand – as do the majority of the kids, I'm sure – that most of the time, its just part of playing the game.

We've all seen it. Maybe two players go up for a header in a soccer game and crash into each other or two hockey players go after a puck and get rammed into the boards. The hit may be hard, but almost every athlete I've seen involved in such a collision doesn't seem the slightest bit phased.

This is not to say that no intentional roughness ever occurs (i.e. intentional fouls in basketball or continuing a play after the whistle in a football or soccer game), but in most cases, it just comes with the territory. Sports are very physical activities and I think the athletes expect to suffer some bumps and bruises. Why else would they come out of huddles yelling phrases like, "Go hard or go home"? Until last week's incident, all of the recent assaults at Bay State youth sporting events have involved parents and coaches. Never athletes.

The most serious of these incidents occurred in July 2000, when an argument between two fathers at a youth hockey game led to the beating death of Michael Costin of Lynnfield. Thomas Junta, of Reading, and Costin were apparently disputing over rough play on the ice between the sons of the two men. Junta is currently standing trial in Middlesex Superior Court on manslaughter charges.

Six months later, a Holbrook man was arrested after he was charged with assaulting a hockey coach he claimed was picking on his son. Shortly afterward, the father of a Foxboro High hockey player was accused of attacking the coach of an opposing team.

Earlier this year, a disgruntled mother joined her male counterparts in getting violent when she burst into a first-grade classroom in a Jamaica Plain Elementary School and assaulted her six-year-old son's teacher, Carla Revelliotty, fracturing her jaw in the process. The assailant, Angela Brinson – who was sentenced to anger management classes in June — believed the 53-year-old teacher was mistreating her unruly son.

We've also all heard it. Spectators reactions to these confrontations. Parents screaming from the stands at a referee, taunting opposing players, encouraging more aggressive play from their own kids. While these actions may not be physical and seem innocent enough, they are violent nonetheless.

To make matters worse, these violent incidents are still occurring despite the fact that we are at war. Right now, thousands of US troops are putting their lives on the line, fighting the war on terrorism in Afghanistan. New York firefighters have been down at ground zero since the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Center Towers digging through dust and debris in an attempt to recover the remains of more than 6,000 people. Some children are now parentless and some parents are without their children.

All this is going on and we still can't keep violence out of school sporting events. Since the slew of incidents, many local high schools have made attempts to educate parents by hosting informational workshops. Programs like Hingham High's "Parent Night" – which features a variety of speakers, who focus on the meaning of good sportsmanship, how to build positive relationships between parents and coaches, and issuing a set of guidelines for being spectators – were conducted in an attempt to teach parents.

Still, the question of why this violence even occurs really has yet to be answered. I can't even attempt to and furthermore, I can't believe I had to write another one of these! It's really something that can only be answered by the parents themselves. What I do suggest is that parents talk to their kids about it. See what your children think about how you act at their games. They may just open your eyes.

OBITUARIES

Agnes O'Donnell

Agnes I. O'Donnell, 100, of Cohasset, a retired secretary, died Tuesday at the Elizabeth Seton Residence in Wellesley.

She worked for the state for 40 years before retiring in 1961.

Born in Boston, she was a resident of Cohasset for many years.

She is survived by two nieces; Sr. Helen, C.S.J., of Framingham and Marion O'Donnell of Braintree; and a cousin Mary F. Carey of Braintree.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Agatha's Church, 432 Adams St., Milton. Burial was in Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Donations may be made to the Friends of the Sisters of St. Joseph, 637 Cambridge St., Brighton 02135.

Margaret E. Taylor

Margaret Elizabeth (Keating) Taylor, 85, of Cohasset, an insurance claims clerk, died Sunday at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth after a brief illness.

Mrs. Taylor worked for Commercial Union Assurance Co. in Boston from 1968 to 1981. She worked at St. Anthony's rectory as a housekeeper in the early 1960s.

Mrs. Taylor was a member of Friends of South Shore Hospital and was a longtime volunteer at the hospital.

She was a communicant of St. Anthony's Church.

Born, raised and educated in Cohasset, she graduated from Cohasset High School in 1934 and was a longtime resident. Wife of the late Charles H. Taylor, she is survived by a son, Deane C. Taylor of Abington; a daughter, Susan E. Twofoot of Kingston; seven grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony's on Oct. 26, with burial in Woodside Cemetery.

Donations may be made to St. Anthony's Parish Building Fund, 10 Summer St., Cohasset 02025.

Arrangements made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Kimberely Wolgomuth

WORSHIP NEWS

Monday evenings with the Rabbi

At Congregation Sha-aray Shalom, 1112 Main St. in Hingham, Rabbi Stephen Karol will teach a course on Monday evenings in November and December, entitled, "What Judaism Can Teach You and the People You Love About God." The course will be based on Neil Gillman's new book, "The Way into Encountering God in Judaism." This class will be from 8-9:15 p.m. on Nov. 5, 19, 26, Dec. 3 and 10.

Whether your knowledge of Jewish theology and liturgy is advanced or elementary, you are welcome to participate and learn from the Rabbi and your classmates. The book is available in most bookstores. There is no fee for the class itself.

Non-members are always welcome, and the Temple is wheelchair accessible. To get more information, to sign up for this course, or to get directions, please call 781-749-8103.

First Friday at St. Anthony's

In honor of First Friday, Mass will be celebrated at 5 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 2 at St. Anthony Church. Benediction will follow and the Blessed Sacrament will be exposed for private prayer until closing services at 10 p.m.

On Monday, Nov. 5, the Respect Life Committee will meet from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the parish center. New members are welcome and attendees are asked to bring a brown-bag lunch. The committee hosts a weekly pro-life rosary each Friday after the 7 a.m. Mass and has just held a baby shower in which parishoners donated hundreds of new baby items for three local crisis pregnancy centers.

Silver Spoon pumpkin contest results

This year's Annual Pumpkin Painting Contest at the Silver Spoon Café in Cohasset Village was a smashing success! More than 60 contestants painted pumpkins at the café during a three-day period. Everyone was a winner and received a spooky trick or treat bag. A grand prize was awarded to the "best" pumpkin for each age group between the ages of four and 12. Editor of the Cohasset Mariner, Mary Ford, was judge and had a tough job choosing the best pumpkin for each age group.

The Grand Prize Winners were: Max Meiselman, age 4; Jackie Driscoll, age 5; Sara Campadelli, age 6; Alison Whealen, age 7; Emily Toomey, age 8; Logan Breslow, age 9; Thomas Jaffee, age 10; Chloe Koines, age 11; and Austin Breslow, age 12.

A special thanks to everyone who made this year such a success: The Silver Spoon Café, Russo & Sons, Wise Chips, Dole & Bailey, Pain d'Avignon, Perkins Paper, Cerelli's, PJ Distributors, Rosey Dairy, New England Coffee, Polar Beverages, and the South Shore Community Nursery School.

Meet spooky books author

Author Darren Shan will speak and sign his latest book "Cirque Du Freak: The Vampire's Assistant" at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset on Nov. 7 from 3-5 p.m. This is the sequel to Shan's popular novel "Cirque Du Freak: A Living Nightmare". "Cirque Du Freak", is a mysterious freak show that is always on the move and staged in dark and remote locations. Shan grew up watching old Dracula movies and reading spooky books, which were the inspiration for his books. Born in London, Shan grew up in Limerick, Ireland, with his parents and younger brother. He was always interested in horror, both books and movies, and loved to give himself nightmares. He wanted to tell a story that he would have loved to read when he was 10 or 11. Free. Letitia Baldrige, a lady, first and foremost

Buttonwood offers tea and book signing

By Dorothy V. Malcolm
CORRESPONDENT

For "baby boomers" and older folks, the name Tish Baldrige is synonymous with the Kennedy White House, sensible good manners, foreign embassies, Tiffany diamonds. And names like JFK, Jackie, Caroline and John-John, Pierre Salinger, Nancy Dickerson, Oleg Cassini — and a host of other luminaries during the early 1960s — stir bittersweet memories in most of us old enough to remember.

Letitia Baldrige's latest book, "A Lady, First" chronicles her life in the Kennedy White House and the American Embassies in Paris (with Clare Boothe Luce) and in Rome (with David Bruce), as well as Manhattan's Tiffany & Co. She appeared last week at Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset and wowed an audience of nearly 100 devotees with anecdotes of her life and times, laced with tea in china cups, salmon and egg and cucumber sandwiches. With fans riveted to their chairs listening to her life story, memories of a more-genteel time, blended with glamour and history, were resurrected at the informal talk and book-signing at Buttonwood's.

At 75, Baldrige is as much the dynamo that dashed about the halls of the Kennedy White House and the U.S. embassies of Paris and Rome. A woman of wit, intellect, charm and common sense, she has had the good grace to be true to herself, shrewdly discreet yet straightforward as a pistol. And if discretion is the better part of valor, then her triumphs and ordeals are the stuff of civility.

Born in Miami Beach, she was raised and spent an amusing childhood in Nebraska, in a large house with her parents and two feisty brothers. Her father, Malcolm Baldrige supported his family as an attorney but when the great depression hit, the Baldriges suffered through it with the rest of the country.

Baldrige writes, "Despite the depression, I had a childhood rich in things other than money. The Baldrige house and yard were the meeting places of neighborhood kids...there were broken roller skates, battered footballs, baseballs, hats and mitts in the mud room for the use of any kids who wanted them for play...poor sportsmanship was absolutely unknown."

Despite the tomfoolery with two older brothers, Baldrige did manage some playtime with girls as well: "Mother ...would ask, 'Why don't you come in and read a book, play with your dolls, or something?'" And so she did, occasionally. The one "girlish" anecdote in the first chapter of the book describes a few delightful times in the attic of the Baldrige home. "The girls fought for position in front of the tall standing mirror between the attic closets, where old clothes had been saved in steamer trunks. We were given permission to play dress-up with the most marvelous array of what today would be called costumes, but back then were simply...lavish Paris evening dresses, slouchy velvet capes, ostrich feather fans and headbands encrusted with brilliants."

As she grew up — to six feet, in fact — she laughingly remembers school dances and how she "towered over the boys." But when Attorney Malcolm Baldrige became a congressman and the depression behind them, he was able to send his only daughter to Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn. and on to Vassar College. After World War II, she explained how hard she had tried, but in vain, to land a job overseas.

"I quickly realized that the U.S. Foreign Service was probably the only way to do it...A job at our embassy in France was a nice, neat solution, but there was the usual problem: only men were being hired...I was told I was unqualified because I couldn't type, take dictation, or even file."

Undaunted, and replete with a baccalaureate-plus degree to her credit, she enrolled in a secretarial school in Washington, D.C. to learn typing and other secretarial skills because she knew it was her only chance to find work abroad. She mastered French as well as the keyboard, and applied for the post. With some fits and starts, and really good connections, she ultimately landed a job as junior assistant to the U.S. Ambassador to France, David Bruce.

Baldrige succeeded professionally and enjoyed her time at the American Embassy in Paris. While stationed there, she met the Kennedy sisters and spent some time with an old-alumna-and-friend-from-Farmington, Jackie Bouvier. But several years were to pass before she became connected with Jackie in an official sense—and a few more noteworthy adventures to live before the heady White House days of the early '60s. Her relationship with Jackie Bouvier was more as a close, sorority-type confidante than a tender friendship, but her personal connection with Jackie was solid, nonetheless.

Baldrige was eventually contacted with an opportunity to take a job in Rome as assistant to Clare Boothe Luce, the first female ambassador to a major country. Because she knew some Italian, Baldrige jumped at the opportunity. She was off to Italy where she not only had a-career-to-die-for, she had as her mentor, the indomitable Clare Boothe Luce as the most extraordinary role model of Baldrige's life. She had a dramatic impact on her life and character, career, discernment and approach to living.

"Clare Boothe Luce was a natural teacher. Her thoughts were beautifully expressed. She looked at everything in terms of what is good, better and best, and one should always reach for the best...I had learned the worst about her, but I found the best in her. She knew I was impressionable, that I wanted to reach the sky, and she made it one of her projects in life to bring me back to earth, to make me realize I wasn't tough enough to reach the sky, but that down where I was, sitting on the treetops, was a very satisfactory place to be. She said...'live in a world of good friends. Stay where they are...'"

At the end of her assignment in Rome and equipped with an armory of protocol survival skills, not to mention life skills, Baldrige returned to the states and took a public relations position with the jeweler, Tiffany & Co. in Manhattan. That chapter of her book is entitled "Breakfast, Lunch and Dinner at Tiffany's." Working at Tiffany's was a coup in the heady world of NY-PR — not only did Baldrige pull it off in her usual grand style, but got to enjoy the glittering benefits as well.

"I have passionately loved and coveted jewelry all my life, but never owned any...One of the greatest perks at Tiffany's was that I could borrow the store's jewelry, to show off in all the right places, for publicity purposes."

"It was only a question of time before Truman Capote's best-selling novel, 'Breakfast at Tiffany's,' would be made into a film...Of course the film was a huge success...scores of people came to the store because of that movie...'On what floor are you serving breakfast?' They were greatly disappointed to discover that they could be served diamonds and rubies, but no bacon and eggs."

From her celebrated career at Tiffany's, Baldrige then went on to Washington, D.C., where she was approached about the position of Jackie Kennedy's Social Secretary in the White House.

"Jackie was on fire with plans for making her mark as an exceptional first lady...She understood with clarity what her mission was going to be, because she had designed it herself...Prior to the inauguration, my job was to serve as Jackie's liaison with the whole world, it seemed, while ensuring her privacy. Her 'best friends' were now crawling out of the woodwork...Everyone wanted at her, from Buckingham Palace...to the Daughters of the American Revolution."

While Baldrige's respect and admiration of Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy is genuine and deep, she became well aware of the difficulties of working for a friend, much less the glamorous first lady. However intractable and arcane Jackie might have behaved at times, Baldrige freely acknowledges and admires her inspiring achievements as a parent: "Jacqueline Kennedy was the exemplary manager of life with children in an impossible official goldfish bowl...It was remarkable the way that Jackie taught her children manners. There would be no bratty, noisy, objectionable children in the Kennedy household...When people gave them presents, they said thank you with grace and a minimum of prompting. Endless thank-you notes went out from the White House."

Baldrige is still amused by the questions she receives, even to this day 40 years later, about the Kennedys. "I would be a wealthy woman if I had a quarter for every person who asked me, 'What was Jackie really like?'"

One of her most difficult decisions was to leave her severely demanding job at the White House. Baldrige claims she "had no life" and was becoming increasingly unhappy with the pressure and monumental responsibilities she had to oftentimes shoulder alone. She didn't quite know how to handle the delicate situation and she consulted her parents. It was her father who urged her to "go see the president."

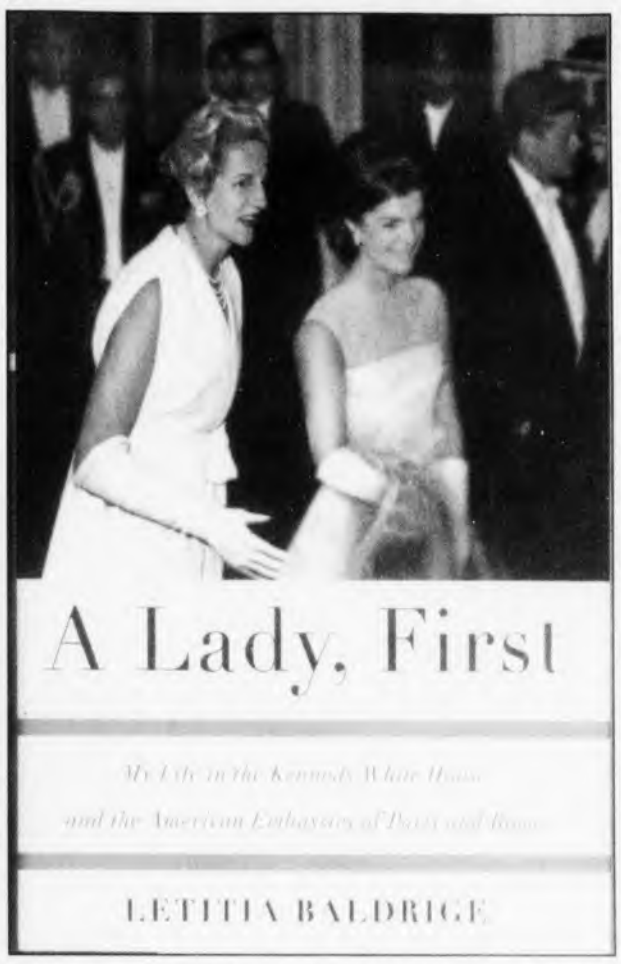
She did and President Kennedy seemed crestfallen at her announcement to leave the White House. With typical Kennedy sparkle though, he offered her a challenge: "I thought your brothers had raised you to be tough, to take things on the chin!" Then Kennedy added, "'But I need you there, in the East Wing, in that very spot. I want Jackie to feel protected and not persecuted by the demands of her job'...He was being typically JFK, not believing that any of his loyal crew could desert his ship. And, of course, I couldn't. I adored this man, not in an amorous way but as our president...we [the staff] quite simply loved this man."

She stuck it out for several more months, and with eventual 20/20 clarity, she knew her entire existence, even her health, had been badly affected by what we might today call "burn-out." With the fondest farewells and going-away parties at the White House, Baldrige left Washington and started a new career in business at Chicago's Merchandise Mart. Though she left on favorable terms with the Kennedys, it was a bittersweet departure. A few months later, while having lunch in a restaurant, her waiter exclaimed, "I can't believe it. Someone has shot the president." Within five hours, Baldrige was back at the White House assisting with the funeral arrangements.

"Jackie moved quietly in and out of the White House rooms for short periods, greeting people, telling them to be strong...She planned that funeral, every second of it...and the result was the most solemn, majestic two days this country has ever seen."

Time goes on and it was during Baldrige's stretch in Chicago that she met the man she would marry. She was 37, and real estate developer Bob Hollensteiner was five years younger. "When you're in your thirties, you don't horse around...Bob was a breath of fresh air, a real person, with the gift I prize most: a perfect sense of humor. ...Bob and I decided the only way to pull it off [their wedding after a three-month courtship] was to do it quickly...My brothers moved in on my parents like a flying commando squad to calm them down...my parents had fantasized about my large 'state' wedding to an ambassador, senator, or governor...[and] my magical mother did it again, pulling off the impossible, the perfect small wedding." Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hollensteiner honeymooned in Phoenix with Henry and Clare Boothe Luce — her mentor in Rome and the woman responsible for bracing the already-formidable backbone in the young Tish Baldrige.

Baby Clare and baby Malcolm (named after her beloved father) followed and a life of authoring books, public appearances, social consultations to more first ladies, becoming an interior designer "by osmosis," starting her own company as a public relations executive responsible for Elizabeth Arden's Red Door Salon; the Sears conglomerate; Burlington Industries; reestablishing grand old hotels; the principality of Liechtenstein, Missoni designer knitwear, Valentino haute couture — the list of accounts is as fascinating as it is long.



Letitia Baldrige will go down in history as an extraordinary, self-actualized woman who knew, instinctively when she was in the middle of a great opportunity, event, or a history-in-the-making moment. She has rubbed elbows with the glamorous, the powerful and the celebrated; and she has known the love of man who, to some, didn't "fit" the perfect profile of a fantasy-lover/husband but their chemistry was striking. She has been blessed with two children, been on the cover of Time Magazine, and hailed internationally as a sensitive yet no-nonsense arbiter of good taste and manners. She has coached the likes of an old Boston firm when she was told, "We need a little help on people skills around here." She has been asked "to give lessons on being 'a class act instead of an uncouth jerk.'" as one of her clients described it.

Yes, Tish Baldrige has "had it all," though she'd be the first to admit not-all-at-once. Throughout her 75 years of "having it all," she has remained foremost, a lady, first.

Shakhashiri-mania

Scientist has great chemistry with kids

Prof. Bassam Shakhashiri may be the only guy who can bring a rock 'n' roll atmosphere to chemistry. He tours regularly and plays to screaming fans. And, with a show that's also part comedy (but predominantly science), he tends to bring both kids and their parents to their feet.

"Everyone from toddlers to Ph.D.s fight to get into his presentations," says Doris Lewis, professor and chairwoman of the chemistry department at Suffolk University, and an eye-witness to Shakhashiri-mania.

Shakhashiri makes his next local tour stop for a National Chemistry Week symposium. This year's theme is "Celebrating Chemistry and Art," with family-oriented events at the Museum of Science on Nov. 4, and then a series of lectures for the older set on Nov. 6, at the Forsyth Institute (next to the Museum of Fine Art) in Boston.

At the Forsyth, various experts will talk about the connections between chemistry and art, including the science of authenticating and preserving works of art. And Dr. Orrie Friedman will talk about combining his apparently diverse interests in chemistry and art.

But the highlight of the events seems destined to be Prof. Shakhashiri, at least among the youngsters in the audience. He's a man who can turn a simple "clock reaction" into a stage show. His comic timing brings the whole thing to life, as he takes science and adds a dash of Soupy Sales.

"I can't tell you why it was so effective, but he got kids and parents leaping to their feet and screaming," reports Lewis.

She also remembers the amazing finale of one of his past performances. It featured a big dose of dry ice, and in their unbridled enthusiasm, the little ones in the audience inadvertently became part of the show.

"The youngest children couldn't contain themselves, and ran down [into the dry ice]," she remembers. "Their heads were poking out like little angels."

Putting the disturbance in 'Domestic Disturbance'

Vince Vaughn has a history of playing crazy characters

By Ed Symkus
SENIOR STAFF WRITER

Vince Vaughn, a big, strapping, gangly guy, sits in a small room at the Four Seasons Hotel in Boston with a lit cigarette gripped between his fingers. It's difficult to tell if he's nervous or tired; perhaps it's a mixture of both. His eyes are puffy and he can't stop moving his legs — they shift back and forth and he rapidly taps one of his feet.

But the co-star of "Domestic Disturbance," working opposite John Travolta — Travolta is the hero, Vaughn is the heel — brightens up noticeably when asked how he goes about his craft, how he convincingly manages to make Rick, the stepfather character who comes between Travolta and his son, more and more threatening as the film goes on, even though it wasn't shot in sequence.

Vince Vaughn says he chooses his roles on a case-by-case basis.

"To a large degree it's an impossibility to shoot in sequence," he says. "But sometimes it works in your favor if it's not. If you're familiar with the material — and you've obviously looked at the material on your character — then whatever scene you jump into you can commit to that reality. You just have to trust that whatever is going on that day is what's most consistent for the truth of the piece. So sometimes it's easier to shoot where you're going — the final ending — and then shoot earlier stuff and you discover things that make you say, 'Wow, so that's what makes me go there.'"

Vaughn, 31, knows a lot about playing the bad guy. He's done it before, as Lester, the sparkling-eyed killer in the little-seen "Clay Pigeons" and as Norman, the dead-eyed killer in Gus Van Sant's remake of "Psycho." Yet he's still probably best known for his first feature, "Swingers," in which he played Trent, a lady killer of a different sort, actually not a killer at all, but a self-described lothario. And he's played a straight up hero opposite Vincent D'Onofrio and Jennifer Lopez in "The Cell."

His choices for roles, he says, have come on a case-by-case basis.

"Sometimes it's the material," he explains. "But in the case of 'Psycho,' it was Gus. I wanted to work with Gus. And 'Domestic Disturbance' was very much about me working with John. I thought I messed up when I met with him. At the first meeting I said, 'You know, I grew up on you. I love your stuff.' I thought maybe that wasn't the best thing to say.

"But I also thought the scenario was interesting," he adds. "In that when a parent gets involved with someone romantically, they have a courtship period and a time to get to know each other, and then both the significant other and the child are thrown into a very intimate situation but with no time to choose that. What I liked about the script was it wasn't gratuitous and didn't rely on shocking the audience about how despicably violent I was with the child. It was more about what could happen. It was a threat."

Known for his skills as an improvisational actor, Vaughn has found that different directors give him different amounts of leeway in approaching his roles.

"I think improvisation can give an energy and spontaneity to a performance if things are happening for the first time or if emotions involved in a conflict are discovered while that's going on," he says. "That's my way of working. And I think there are marvelous actors and storytellers that work in the other way. It's a style thing. It's funny, sometimes you get hired on these bigger things and they love what they've seen you do or that energy you've had. But when you get there, they don't want that. So it's like, 'Why did you hire me in the first place? You know what I do, and that's how I go about it.' But they have a controlling point of view of their movie and how they see it, and on a bigger film a lot of times the focus is a concept, so what I've done doesn't really fit into the movie. But as an actor it's not my job to worry about the movie and its conception. So it's freeing in a way. I worry about my part and how I'm fitting into the director's movie."

Vaughn will go on and on about his work, but is a little shy on the personal stuff. So even though it's public that he was romantically linked with actress Joey Lauren Adams for a while, he doesn't talk much about his love life today. But he does offer a revealing look at his upbringing, when he was raised in a house full of women.

"It was my dad and mom and two sisters and a grandmother," he says. "I think I might have an edge over other guys in understanding women in that you have a way to relate and communicate with women that's not sexual, so you're able to have conversations in how they think. So I think that, even in meeting girls, I never put a lot of pressure on myself, which a lot of guys do normally. Because I just saw it as conversational. I never saw it as an intimidation thing. Of course there've been times when I was very young and I had my first crushes, and I didn't know what to do with the emotion. And still, even now, if I get a big crush, I can be all shy with somebody."

But he's not at all bashful in talking about the difficulties he went through as a kid in school in the suburbs of Chicago.

"I had to go to a class an hour a day for learning disabilities," he says. "But it was like we were 12 and playing Candyland. It wasn't like we were having any big therapy, it was more of we can't deal with these kids all day, let's give the teachers a break from them. But I wasn't ever disruptive. It was more sort of not being able to fully focus or concentrate on what was being discussed in class. And if there were teachers with rules, then I would question things. But it was only because I didn't understand some rule. And they didn't want to take five minutes out to explain it to me during class. I wasn't a troublemaker. In English class or history class I would do very well, but in science or math it was very hard for me to grasp things. I moved slowly at it."

But he sure moves quickly from one movie to the next these days. He's got a great cameo as one of Ben Stiller's brothers in "Zoolander." And his mind is set on another role opposite Stiller next year — the big screen adaptation of the '70s TV show "Starsky and Hutch."

"I'm not sure about me," he says. "I'm pretty sure it's happening for Ben but I don't know yet if I'm going to be Hutch. It would be fun to go blond and sort of commit to like the groovy '70s of it all. I think it would be funny. It might happen, but I'm just not sure yet."

"Domestic Disturbance" opens nationally on Nov. 2.

Chickpea Soup

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Chickpea soup, especially when made with canned chickpeas, is often an uninspired and insipid mess, reminding one of peas porridge from the nursery rhyme. The question was, how to add flavor and a freshness to what should be a simple and delicious pantry soup.

I made lots of recipes including one from "The Naked Chef," which I liked a lot, and others from regional cookbooks such as the Wedding Soup from "Sultan's Kitchen." The former recipe combined chickpeas with potato and a pile of leeks but this unlikely trio worked well. However, I did find room for improvement - the balance of ingredients was skewed towards the leeks, there was not enough liquid, and the soup needed a sharp garnish to offset the rather subtle flavors of the soup.

My first question, however, was whether canned chickpeas are a suitable substitute for dried. The answer was an unequivocal no. Canned chickpeas lack the complex and earthly quality of the freshly cooked variety. However, dried chickpeas come in many different types and sizes - I purchased organic and conventional, prepackaged and bulk. I also found that cooking times varied from 45 minutes to 1 1/2 hours but this did not correlate to the size of the peas themselves. (Organic chickpeas were the smallest but did not have the shortest cooking time.) For best results, I found that the chickpeas need to be soaked overnight and then cooked in 4 cups of lightly salted water. Cooking times were irrelevant so I simply cooked them until tender.

Although Jamie Oliver "The Naked Chef" calls for five leeks, I found that one leek, 1 1/4 inch thick, was sufficient. Halved lengthwise and thinly sliced, using the white and light parts only, it yields about 2 cups leek. This was plenty to impart lots of flavor. I also tried using onion in its place or in combination with the leek and found the leek by itself was best. Also, if the leeks are added to the pot without being sautéed the soup tasted slightly flat in comparison.

For the potatoes, I tried russet, Yukon gold and red varieties. The red potatoes were too waxy and didn't offer enough flavor for this recipe. I liked the russet but the buttery flavor of the Yukon gold was my clear favorite. Two medium potatoes, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch dice, were just right. I used 3 1/2 cups of homemade chicken stock for most of the testing of this recipe. While low sodium, store-bought is an okay substitute (at Cook's Illustrated, we use Swanson's) the cleaner, fresher taste of the homemade was my preference. (To make homemade stock, place a 3 1/2 pound chicken in 2 1/2 quarts cold water and simmer for 30 minutes or until the chicken is cooked. Use the meat for sandwiches or salad.)

After the soup was cooked, I wondered if some of it required puréeing. This is a matter of personal taste and if you do purée some of the soup, 2 cups is enough. Return the puréed soup to the pot to simmer for a couple of minutes, otherwise, it will remain foamy. (The puréed version is heartier; the regular version has a clearer, cleaner flavor and texture.) The soup, of course needed salt (about 1/2 teaspoon), freshly ground pepper, and also benefited from a pinch of sugar. I topped the soup with a drizzle of olive oil and some grated Parmesan cheese.

Still, the soup needed some sort of simple garnish to provide a counterpoint to its earthy, simple flavors. I tried combinations of bold ingredients such as diced tomato, olives, capers, parsley, chive, tarragon, anchovy, scallion, garlic, and shallot. I also went the other route and tried a knob of butter, a dollop of sour cream, or bit of heavy cream. I finally settled on lemon rind combined with chopped parsley and garlic. Now I had a Saturday night soup made with Tuesday night ingredients.

CHICKPEA SOUP WITH LEEKS, POTATOES, AND LEMON ZEST

Do not use canned chickpeas for this soup. It will not be worth eating.

1cup dried chickpeas (about 6 ounces), rinsed and picked over and soaked in a bowl of cold water overnight
3/4 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 leek about 1 1/4 inch thick, halved lengthwise, rinsed and thinly sliced, white and very light parts only, about 2 cups
3 1/2 cups chicken stock, homemade or low sodium
2 medium potatoes, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch dice, Yukon gold or russet preferred
Pinch sugar
Freshly ground pepper
1/4 cup flat Italian parsley
Zest from one medium lemon, finely chopped
1 medium garlic clove, finely minced or pressed
Extra virgin olive oil and freshly ground Parmesan cheese

1. Place the chickpeas in a medium saucepan with 4 cups water and 1/4 teaspoon of the salt over medium heat. Bring to a boil and reduce heat to maintain a gentle simmer. Cover and cook until just tender, about 45 minutes to 1 hour. (Depending on the age and size of your chickpeas they may take up to 1 1/2 hours to become tender.)

2. Place the butter and olive oil in a soup pot or large saucepan over medium heat. Once the butter has foamed add the leeks and sauté until soft but not at all colored, about 5 minutes. Drain the chickpeas and add them to the pot along with the potatoes, sugar and remaining 1/2-teaspoon salt. Cook until the potatoes are tender, about 20 minutes. Adjust the seasonings with additional salt, if needed and freshly ground pepper. If desired purée 2 cups of the soup in a blender or food processor and return to the pot to simmer for an additional 1 to 2 minutes or until the foam has subsided.

3. Meanwhile coarsely chop the parsley leaves with the lemon zest and garlic or alternatively use a mortar and pestle to combine the flavors and break up the parsley. Ladle the soup into bowls and garnish with a teaspoon of the parsley mixture along with a drizzle of olive oil and some freshly grated Parmesan cheese.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 1

November begins and ends with a full moon, setting the stage for a high-energy, intense month. You can cut through obstacles and move forward in your personal or professional life. Today the full moon culminates at 12:41 a.m., 9-degrees of Taurus/Scorpio. Venus and Mercury form harmonious contacts to Uranus, prompting you to be more inventive, go with new innovative ideas. The moon continues active travel in Taurus until 11:20 p.m., when it aligns with Uranus.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 2

Conflicting planetary influences can make for a challenging day. Saturn opposes Pluto for the second time this year. Jupiter begins retrograde travel at 10:35 a.m., 16-degrees Cancer. The moon continues inactive travel until 4:12 p.m. Take extra time out for yourself. Review and reassess your progress toward present goals. Let go of people or situations that may be holding you back, cut your losses. This is a time to reconsider, regroup, modify your game plan. At 4:12 p.m. the moon enters Gemini. In addition, Mercury and Venus prepare to align in Libra. The evening rates high for socializing, partying, romance.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3

If you are working today, it is best to handle a variety of jobs, finish projects already begun, clean and reorganize. Influences are also favorable for developing art, music, photography projects. Stay upbeat and donÕt allow minor obstacles to get you down, particularly between 3:21-6:39 p.m., when the Gemini moon aligns with Saturn and Pluto. The remainder of the evening, however, is ideal for relaxing and enjoying favorite friends and pastimes.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 4

An applying alignment of Mars and Neptune prompts you to kick back, rest and recharge your batteries. Pursue favorite leisure activities, enjoy quality time with friends and family. The moon continues to travel in sociable Gemini, active until 2:45 p.m. All communications get the green light; contact friends you havenÕt heard from in a while, write letters, send e-mails. At 10:44 p.m. the moon enters the sign Cancer. Get extra rest tonight. Pay attention to your dreams.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 5

At 7:44 a.m. Mars and Neptune come together at 6-degrees of Aquarius, making for a slow start to this day. Take your time and drive with care. Others may be sleepy, careless, forgetful. However, blue skies and sunshine break through this afternoon, and the green light for new starts goes on. You can be most productive. Zero in on home, family, property issues; now is the time to act.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 6

A Cancer moon makes this a great day to tackle domestic jobs. Focus on projects youÕve been putting off and get them out of the way. Clean out drawers, closets, garages; get your life in order. Be more nurturing and sensitive to the needs of loved ones. Plan a special dinner with close friends and family.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7

Conflicting planetary influences can make for a hectic day. The Cancer moon becomes inactive at 2:10 a.m. until 3:34 a.m., when a Leo moon takes over. The Leo moon opposes Neptune at 2:08 p.m. and Mars at 4:58 p.m., warning you to slow down. Stay alert and use common sense. The planet Mercury moves into Scorpio at 2:53 p.m., remaining there until November 26. You can initiate new projects, make long-range plans between 6:00-7:01 p.m., when the sun and Jupiter align.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8

The last quarter phase of the moon occurs at 7:21 a.m. The moon decreases in light until November 15, when the new moon culminates. Venus moves into Scorpio at 8:28 a.m., remaining there until December 2. Sidestep power struggles with others; be willing to make a concession or two. A lunar polarity to Uranus at 3:30 p.m. may disrupt the flow of the day. At this time the Leo moon becomes inactive. Kick back, relax and unwind this evening.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9

The moon enters Virgo at 6:49 a.m. This is a day to get things done. Make up a list of things to do and stick to it. Postpone launching new ventures or signing contracts until next week, however, when favorable influences occur. Instead, finish jobs already begun, review and redo, clean out and reorganize. Get back on track with diet, exercise and self-improvement programs.

Colorful fall fruits and foliages

By Suzanne Mahler

Green thumbs up

The fleeting multicolored foliages of fall float to the ground as brisk breezes scatter the crisp leaf litter like the dying embers of a smoldering fire, creating a tapestry of fiery red, gold and orange against a carpet of green velvet. While many of our deciduous trees and shrubs have shed their vibrant-colored robes, the foliage of a few typically enduring species linger well into the month of November. Beech, willow, pears, oaks and dogwoods provide temporary splashes of glowing reds, yellows, golds and rich, lustrous mahogany tones to the autumn landscape. In a few short weeks, even these last few remnants of this growing season will lie beneath bare branches leaving the stark silhouettes of the winter landscape as gardeners turn their attention to the holiday season.

Despite the brief duration of the fall foliage extravaganza, it seems appropriate that Mother Nature paint our landscapes with one final fireworks display at season's end, a farewell celebration for six months of flowers, foliage and the pleasure derived from tilling the soil. Our native maples lead the parade, producing a broad palette of glorious shades. Brilliant reds, yellows, golds and oranges are characteristic of both the swamp maple (Acer rubrum) and the sugar maple (Acer saccharum). The broad leaves of the Norway maple (A. platanoides), of European origin, tend to develop their yellow color later in the season. Many of these large species of maples pose considerable challenges for gardeners as they cast significant shade, seed prolifically and are superficially rooted, monopolizing moisture and nutrients. Few plants can successfully compete with their greedy roots, during periods of drought, and once their large leaves drop, they tend to mat when they become wet, suffocating underlying grass and plants. On larger properties, they may serve as excellent perimeter plants but may not be ideal for smaller landscapes.

Several other species of native trees and shrubs demonstrate showy, multi-colored foliage in the autumn landscape. A childhood favorite, the irregularly shaped leaves of the sassafras tree, many of them resembling mittens, were a joy to collect in my youth to use for leaf-rubbings and to crush for their pleasing, aromatic scent. Reaching 30 to 60 feet at maturity, they require significant space but thrive in poor, gravelly soils where other trees might struggle to survive. Transplanting can be difficult due to their deep taproots and may be more successful when trees are saplings. For smaller, moist landscapes, the serviceberry or shadblow (Amelanchier) might be a better choice as it reaches a maximum height of 15 to 20 feet. A multitude of tiny white flowers smother this multi-stemmed tree or shrub in spring, followed by edible berries which tend to be quickly devoured by birds. Members of the family of fothergilla, should be more widely grown for their unique, white flowers which resemble bottle-brushes and their spectacular fall foliage. Ideal for the middle of the shrub border, these compact plants provide attractive foliage throughout the growing season in moisture-retentive, well-drained soils in sun or light shade.

Perhaps the best known, most popular plant for fall color is the omnipresent burning bush (Euonymus alatus) with its spectacular, fiery red foliage. This vigorous, adaptable shrub makes an attractive, deciduous hedge which glows in the autumn landscape. Plant in full sun to achieve optimum color and prune regularly as even the compact form may grow to 10 feet. Burning bushes seed prolifically and are rapidly spreading throughout our region, competing with our native plants for space in the wild.

Additional sources of red to russet foliage include the family of viburnums which offers a variety of fabulous cultivars which display clusters of fragrant, white flowers in spring, and attractive fruits in red or black in autumn. Enkianthus is a distinctive shrub which presents a layered effect with its tiers of branches. In May, clusters of pretty pale cream bells with red veins appear and its brilliant red, glossy foliage shines across the garden late in the season. The late-summer blooming sourwood tree (Oxydendrum), with flower clusters reminiscent of andromeda, is yet another multi-season star with lustrous dark green leaves which become a vibrant scarlet later in the season. Each of these lovely specimens prefers acid, organic, moisture-retentive soils.

Dogwoods and ornamental pears provide handsome, deep reddish-purple tints to the fall landscape. A mature, ornamental pear displays a nearly perfect, symmetrical form without pruning with the added benefit of spectacular clouds of glistening white flowers in spring. This drought-tolerant tree is usually one of the last to lose its foliage in November and has become a popular street tree as a result of its adaptability and beauty throughout the growing season. Along our roadsides, few plants rival sumac for its glorious, radiant red leaves and blueberry bushes appear to be on fire in the late afternoon sunlight.

For a late splash of showy, yellow leaves, look for beech, birch, poplar, cherry, katsura or the handsome, statuesque tulip tree. Carolina allspice (Calycanthus) provides unique, fragrant blossoms throughout the summer and sunny yellow foliage late in the season and despite its invasive tendencies, bittersweet is a knockout during this season with its lemon-colored leaves and orange fruits. Take a few moments this coming month to appreciate nature's resplendent beauty before the snow flies.

Brudnoy AT THE MOVIES

Stellar performances from star men

David Brudnoy
CNC Film Critic

K-PAX (B+)

Kevin Spacey and Jeff Bridges discuss life, the universe, etc.

While we fret about whether the coffee and donut guy at the T station might be Osama bin Laden's local operative, at least nobody has come up (yet) with the brilliant idea that when we say "alien" we should mean not Islamic terrorists but folks from outer space. Akin to the nutty idea popularized a few decades ago that the pyramids were built by charioteers of the gods (aliens) is the notion that "they" hover about, maybe as body snatchers or who-knows-what.

"K-PAX" — the title suggests an over-the-counter drug for hemorrhoids or an outlet chain — is actually a planet in the Whoop-dee-doo galaxy (I've forgotten the name but if you consult the stars you'll see it), denizens from which periodically visit earth to study us. They mean us no harm, they are far ahead in science and technology, although their mating procedure is painful and seems to have nothing to recommend it except, obviously, for perpetuating their species.

Currently one K-PAXian, Prot (rhymes with gloat) has popped in to visit. He's a few hundred years old but (when in Rome appear as the Romans do) he looks like Kevin Spacey; we resist the obvious pun. "K-PAX" is a fable about truth, the will to believe (William James' essay on why people believe remains solid after a century), and the rigidity of modern scientific Man to analyze everything, even if that sometimes adds not less but more perplexity to our lives.

Prot appears one day at the railroad station, and because he isn't like the rest of us he is incarcerated in the Manhattan Institute for Psychiatry, a pleasant enough place, though civil libertarians and other nice folks might question the state's power to do this to weird folks and yet leave Howard Stern at large. There Prot falls into the tender clutches of a thoughtful shrink, Dr. Powell (Jeff Bridges, whose incarnation of an alien visitor in "Starman" will come to mind). Powell thinks Prot is human. Prot knows he's not, and a trip to the Rose Center for Earth and Space at the Museum of Natural History brings about an amazing display: Prot shows the astronomer graybeards where he's from and what his planet's trajectory is and other fancy things, mind-boggling to one and all. Dr. Powell begins to believe, despite his scientific training.

But we moderns are enlightened: we can hardly wait till the kids learn the truth about Santa (I won't tell, in case precocious children read my columns, as they ought to). So Powell cannot leave well enough alone, and though Prot proves to be a wonder-worker to the other patients, bringing hope and joy and the prospect of release from their confinement, both within their minds and in the institution, and even wowing Powell's wife and daughters on a trip to see how normal folk live — even with all that, Powell is bent on proving that Prot is one of us.

In this lovely, engaging, but ultimately deflating film, the lead performers so thoroughly inhabit their roles that one wishes only that Powell and Prot could make common cause. But Powell and we are not ready for Prot, as the ending sadly reveals, even with a smidgen of ambiguity to tantalize us and give us some expectation of a happier answer to our questions.

Ledge will have to wait

Issue could come back in the spring

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Monday's special Town Meeting had plenty of issues to resolve but none were perhaps as anticipated as the one that didn't get voted on — whether to amend the zoning by-law to preserve ledge in town.

With a top attendance of more than 350 citizens in the high school gym, Town Meeting decided the fate of 22 articles or items of business. Eleven of those articles were decided on in one motion as there was no opposition to them.

But Article 17 — concerning preserving the ledge in town — was bound to open the proverbial can of worms.

A hot topic around water coolers for some time, the issue was effectively shelved by the Planning Board last week – when a majority of the board voted to continue the public hearing on the matter until Nov. 7 – two days after Town Meeting..

But the article's group of supporters weren't going down without a fight and proposed continuing Town Meeting until tonight, Thursday Nov. 8, to allow the Planning Board time to complete the hearing slated for last night.

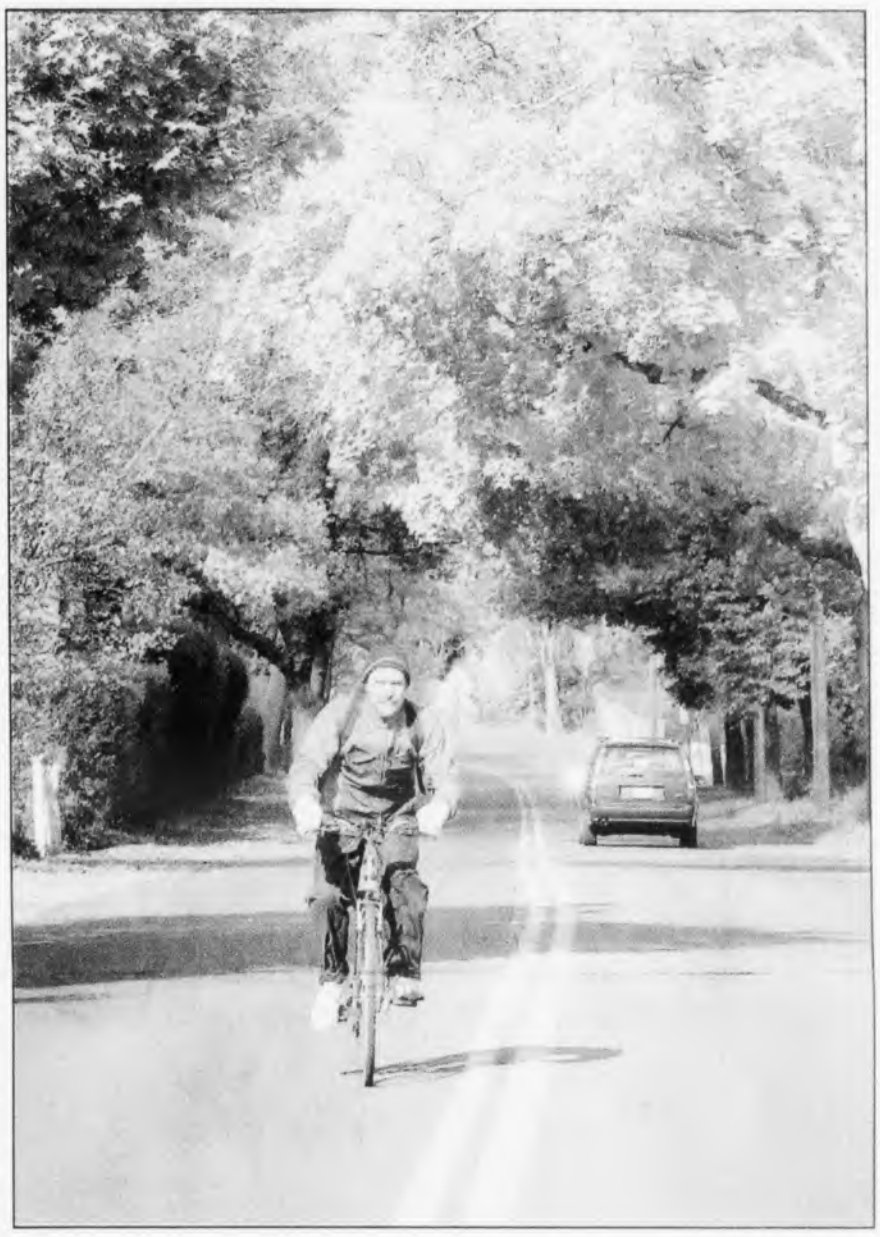
Patience rewarded by library backers

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

This was the first time the library didn't mind the roaring din of the masses.

To the tune of thunderous applause, Monday's special Town Meeting approved Article 17 which appropriates $2.1 million towards the construction of the new library.

Town Meeting was asked to approve two items concerned with the article. The first, was to change the wording of a past article which stated that the library construction was not to begin without the state grant in hand. Currently, Cohasset is first on the waiting list for the grant.



As a result of Monday's vote, the town will now advance $1.5 million to the library trustees with the understanding that the grant will be realized. The trustees promised to pay the interest on the borrowing from the endowment and building fund.

The second condition of the article was that Town Meeting was asked to appropriate an additional $600,000 towards construction of the new building. Unforeseen costs ballooned the price of the library an extra $1 million but trustees have raised $400,000 of that amount.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said the trustees have done a great job in raising the extra money and encouraged Town Meeting to approve the article because it was "the right thing to do."

Vietnam veteran to give speech

Dedication is on Sunday

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

After serving in Vietnam, Capt. Jane McCarthy knows what war is like.

That's why when Glenn Pratt of the Woodside Cemetery Expansion Committee asked her to be the keynote speaker at the Gold Star Mothers dedication at the Woodside Cemetery, she excepted without hesitation.

"I was thrilled and flattered to be asked to give this speech. It's so important to have memorials to remember wars for the sacrifices that were made," McCarthy said.

Pratt said he chose McCarthy because she grew up in Cohasset, made a career in the military, and is a mother herself.

McCarthy currently works with the U.S. Public Health Service Commissioned Core and has served on the board of directors at the American Association of Nurse Anesthetists since 1976. At 20, McCarthy left the serene surroundings of Cohasset to enter the war in Vietnam. After her stint in the war McCarthy felt that all losses suffered during a conflict must be remembered.

"I try to come back every year for the Memorial Day parade. I feel it's that important," she said. McCarthy, who lives in Olney, Md. just outside Washington, D.C., hopes that there will be a large Selectmen will discuss the fate of the Hagerty House, shown here from across the harbor, at their meeting Tuesday at Town Hall.

Jury is out on the Hagerty House

Selectmen to air options Tuesday

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Trying to figure out what to do with the Hagerty House might prove more difficult than predicting who was going to win the World Series.

So the town is turning towards its citizens for an answer.

Residents are encouraged to share ideas about the fate of the Hagerty House with selectmen on Nov. 13. At their meeting, selectmen plan to discuss what to do with the former Cohasset Colonials building that could potentially generate money for the town.

"I think they should turn the downstairs over to the sailing club and the upstairs should be given to the harbormaster."

— Al Moore, former Hagerty Committee chairman

The 2.1 acres is assessed at $273,000 and what's on the land (including the Hagerty House and boathouse) is assessed at $367,800 which brings the total assessed value of the property to $640,800. While the property does have value, so far no one has been able to realize the potential of the Victorian house, which had served as the offices and showroom for Cohasset Colonials that manufactured furniture kits.

Selectmen recently terminated the Cohasset Lobster Lab's lease of the building because the non-

Cohasset students make the grade

MCAS results are in

By Evan Schiff and Carol Meyer
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Cohasset students are up to the test. MCAS scores were released last week and Cohasset 10th graders fared very well.

Tenth-grade students scored high on both the English/Language Arts section and the math section. The students ranked 26 out of the 319 schools in the state on the two sections.

That comes as welcomed news because students who plan to graduate in 2003 — this year's juniors — are the first required to pass the English and math portions as sophomores in order to graduate from high school.

The 10th-grade ranked 26 out of the 319 schools in the state on the two sections.

Students are placed into four categories once they've taken the lengthy test: failing, needs improvement, proficient or advanced.

For tenth graders at CMHS, 21 students were advanced in English, 46 were proficient, nine fell into the needs improvement category, and two failed. In the math section, 28 students were advanced, 31 were proficient, 17 needed improvement and two failed.

Eight graders at CMHS did very well also, four were advanced in English, 76 were proficient, 11 needed improvement, and no students failed. In the math section, 27 students were advanced, 29 were proficient, 21, needed improvement, and four students failed.

Supt. Edward Malvey said they he was very pleased with the overall results. After a first analysis Malvey felt that, "we are very, very strong in some areas and in what we've accomplished." Malvey credits the high scores to a combination of positive factors. He said community support for the education process, and the quality of the staff at the high school are just two of the reasons.

Malvey went on to say that once the school district receives the names of the students to go along with the scores they will identify those who failed and attempt to help them. He said that the schools will be offering remedial programs in the summer which he hopes will identify individual problems. "We are going to do our best to make sure our kids to their best," Malvey said.

Students will have a number of opportunities to retake a shorter version of the original test at a later date.

The Department of Education also launched a seven-week, on-line tutoring program to help all students in the Class of 2003 improve their math and English skills. A contract was signed with the Princeton Review to offer the free tutorial to students through its

New name for park

Special Town Meeting voters on Monday agreed to name the 2.1-acre former Hagerty property off Parker Avenue, Mariners Park.

Makeup of CPC

The Community Preservation Committee, formed under the auspices of the Community Preservation Act that Cohasset adopted last spring, will consist of three citizens at large and one member each from the Conservation Commission, Historical Commission, Planning Board, park department, Housing Authority and Open Space Committee. The committee will study community preservation and make recommendations to Town Meeting for acquisition and preservation of historic resources, open space, land for recreation and affordable housing. Then Town Meeting may make appropriations for those purposes from the community preservation funds acquired through a property tax surcharge.

Master Plan funded

Special Town Meeting voted to appropriate $60,000 for consulting services to help the town develop a Master Plan.

RTF closed Nov. 11

The Department of Public Works has issued a public notice that the Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) will be closed on Sunday, Nov. 11 in observance of Veterans Day.

Upcoming meetings

The following meetings were posted at Town Hall as of Monday Nov. 5:

Conservation Commission, 7:30 p.m., Nov. 8

School Committee, 7:30 p.m., Nov. 8 at Cohasset High School

Water Commission, 7:30 p.m., Nov. 15 at 339 King St.

Selectmen, 7:30 p.m., Nov. 13

Town History Committee, 7:30 p.m. at the Lothrop House

Sewer Commission, 6 p.m., Nov. 19

Zoning Board, 7:30 p.m., Nov. 19

All meetings at Town Hall unless otherwise noted.

Hedlund office hours

Sen. Robert Hedlund's (R-Weymouth) office hours for Cohasset will be held in the Cohasset Town Hall Thursday, Nov. 15, from noon to 1 p.m. in the 2A Vestibule.

Hedlund also maintains a district office at 66 Sea St., North Weymouth, that is accessible Monday through Friday for constituents and appointments with the senator. The telephone number is 781-340-9866.

Bradley office hours

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D – Hingham, will hold district office hours this Thursday, Nov. 15, at the Hingham Town Hall, from 4:30 – 5:30 p.m. If you are unable to attend this scheduled office hours, but would like to meet with Bradley, call (617) 722-2120 to schedule an appointment.

Time for walk-ins

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes early in their meetings, usually at 7:40 p.m., to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda. Call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105 for more information. Selectmen's meetings start at 7:30 p.m., Tuesdays. The next meeting is Nov. 13.

Bruce Pratt of Sohier Street says the aftermath of Sept. 11 has hurt the airline industry and there won't be a need for a new runway at Logan Airport.

Voters say no to Logan lawsuit

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Cohasset decided it doesn't want another lawsuit.

With a vote of 184 to 140, residents rejected appropriating an additional $30,000 towards the legal fund to join a lawsuit with neighboring towns, Hull and Hingham. The money would have been used to try and stop proposed runway 14/32 at Logan.

Concerns were voiced about how much money would eventually be thrown into the suit, some feared it was a black hole. Selectman Merle Brown warned, "before we know it we could have spent $500,000."

Peter Wood, 77 Summer St. said, "the money should be spent on the town of Cohasset." Wood warned that entering a lawsuit without any end in the foreseeable future was walking down a "long and slippery slope."

Bruce Pratt, 83 Sohier St., said he has worked for the aviation industry for 35 years and since Sept. 11 there have been big changes in the industry. "The town should save its money. United Airlines has lost $1.16 billion, Delta has lost $400 million, and many of the airlines are parking 100s of planes. There is no need for another runway anymore."

Both the selectmen and the Advisory Committee recommended that the town spend the $30,000. Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said that he believed the lawsuit could be won. "After reading the lawsuit I believe Massport cannot be trusted. We will be well represented in the suit," he said. He added that spending the $30,000 now did not necessarily mean that the town would spend more on the suit in the future.

South Shore Jet Pollution member Ralph Dormitzer, of 334 S. Main St., said Cohasset is at the crossroads for all departing and arriving flights and with the new runway the noise and pollution will only get worse. He said, "sharing the cost of the lawsuit is better than going in alone."

Court sides with former landfill

Says it operated legally

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Paul Barry won a Pyrrhic victory last week when the state Appeals Court reversed the judgment of the Land Court and ruled Cohasset Heights Landfill was operating legally after all.

However, for Barry even the sweet taste of success can turn sour. The landfill closed in 1998, so the legality of its operations is now a moot point.

The Cohasset resident has been in the trash business in town since 1982 when he bought the Route 3A landfill from James Tyeryar. From that point on, Barry's been in a legal morass with the town, fighting one long regulatory issue after another. Over the years the town and CHL have been embroiled in a total of seven lawsuits.

On one side is Barry, who was trying to run a landfill business and on the other side is the town and a grass-roots group, dubbed SAFE [Stop Any Further Expansion] — whose members have attacked the landfill at every turn on environmental issues.

In 1986, the town passed a bylaw creating a water resources overly district prohibiting landfill operations on part of CHL's land. SAFE discovered the special permit granted to Tyeryar back in 1976 was never recorded and complained to the building inspector who issued a cease and desist order on the grounds the permit was invalid because it had never been recorded. That formed the basis for allegations the landfill wasn't legal.

But the Appeals Court said the issuance of a special permit marks the beginning of protection as a prior nonconforming use from subsequent zoning changes. The court said the fact the special permit had not taken effect did not mean it had not been issued — and the issuance alone qualifies a special permit as a prior non-conforming use.

Yet SAFE, whose spokesman is John K. McNabb Jr., isn't ready to let the issue drop.

McNabb said he and the other "interveners" in the lawsuit plan to appeal the Appeals Court ruling to Superior Court.

"We will file a notice of appeal," McNabb said. "We think it's a wrong decision. It's the principle of the thing."

McNabb, who is also chairman of the water commission, said the decision is disappointing and noted it flies in the face of the judgment of the building inspector, zoning board and land court.

profit organization did not meet the conditions of the lease in terms of building upkeep and fund-raising. Cohasset High School teacher Jack Buckley, founder of the Cohasset Maritime Institute based at the boathouse on the Hagerty property, is proposing using the first-floor of the building for his program.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said issues for the selectmen to consider are razing the building, selling the building or another compatible use, such as Buckley's proposal.

Opinions around town run the gamut on what to do with the building.

Murray Campbell, chairman of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation that has jurisdiction over the Lightkeepers Residence, believes that Buckley's initiative to have the Maritime Institute take over the house is the best idea. Campbell said that while the Maritime Institute could have the bottom floor of the house, the second and third floors should be converted to apartments so that the town can make money off the rent.

But Joe McElroy, who was the force behind the mammoth Lightkeepers Residence renovation project disagrees. "I wish the best of luck to the Maritime Institute," he said. "It seems to me that they already have their hands full with the boathouse and I'm skeptical they could maintain a unit of that size."

Hagerty Committee chairman Russ Bonetti said he wouldn't mind if the house got knocked down. "I think it may get torn down. I'd love to see it turned into a park or something that everyone in the town could benefit from," he said. He said originally the committee, which spearheaded the development of Mariners Park on the former Hagerty property, considered selling the house but it was more trouble than it was worth. The town would have to rezone the land, which is currently zoned open space, to allow the house to be used as a residence.

Martha Gjesteby, president of the historical society, also thinks the house should go. "I don't think the Maritime Institute should get a hold of the property. I'd love to see children playing in a park there someday," she said.

Planning Board chairman Al Moore, who is a former Hagerty committee chairman, said the town should think outside the box when trying to figure out the enigma that is the Hagerty House. "I think they should turn the downstairs over to the sailing club and the upstairs should be given to the harbormaster," Moore said. He said the town should do something interesting with the property that everyone could enjoy but added, "I wouldn't cry if it disappeared in the night."

But if it did disappear, the Hagerty House would take a lot of history with its destruction.

Cohasset Colonials occupied the building and two-acre Hagerty site for some 50 years. The Hagerty house — so called because the late Francis Hagerty once owned Cohasset Colonials — was moved from the Rowe's Wharf area in Boston to Parker Avenue in the early 1900s. Back in 1993, when Cohasset Colonials relocated to Hingham, Town Meeting agreed to spend a maximum of $485,000 to purchase the 2.1 acre harborfront site with the Cohasset Conservation Trust, a private group, offering $50,000 to offset the cost. By purchasing the land, the town prevented another industrial use there and opened up the possibilities of a public park at the waterfront. At that time, officials floated the idea of selling the house to offset the cost of buying the property.

In 1993, the estimated value of the house was $200,000. Helen Pratt, a realtor with Hunneman Coldwell Banker, estimates the house would have a market value of $350,000 today. But she said there are a lot of variables involved most significantly if the house could be hooked up to the sewer which is being extended to Parker Avenue.

In 1995 as selectmen grappled with potential uses for the Hagerty house, Cohasset Harbor Marina expressed interest in the building hoping to turn it into a ship's chandlery. The town eventually leased the building to the Lobster Lab in 1998.

Vietnam veteran to give speech crowd at the dedication and she aims to inform those in attendance about the significance of the event.

"I hope to connect with the people of Cohasset and let them know how meaningful this is to me," McCarthy said.

In her speech, McCarthy touches on the tragedies of Sept. 11 and how they have affected everyone. "These recent events somehow give even more weight and importance to remember our wars and our mothers' sons," McCarthy says. McCarthy feels the Gold Star Mothers is a wonderful organization that is well deserving of a memorial.

The American Gold Star Mothers is an organization open to any mothers who have lost children in the service since World War I, and works closely with and is respected by all veterans organizations. Cohasset has a total of 22 Gold Star Mothers, three of whom — June Simeone, Elizabeth Maree, and Mary Reardon — all who lost sons in Vietnam, still live in town.

The monument at Woodside is designed to be the focal point of the expansion of the cemetery which is underway. A large stone, standing eight feet tall, is at the center of the memorial. Extending 50 feet on either end of the large stone will be 22 individual stones listing the mother's name, the son's name, and the war in which he perished. A path that is flanked by pillars that gradually fade in color will lead up to the memorial. The monument was designed so it will never be obstructed by grave stones. Pratt emphasized that no town can ever do enough to honor its veterans.

Capt. Jane McCarthy

The event will be held on Nov. 11 at 1 p.m. A parade of Cohasset veterans and servicemen will march into Woodside Cemetery to begin the dedication. McCarthy will deliver the keynote speech followed by veterans of each of the four wars individually honoring a Gold Star mother and her son by placing a rose on the memorial.

The event is expected to last an hour.

Hotel tax rejected

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Competition among hotels and motels is fierce, Joe Campbell, director of Kimball's by the Sea, told Monday's special Town Meeting.

"Since Sept. 11, the hospitality industry has been hit hard," he said. "The timing of this excise tax couldn't be worse."

A majority of voters agreed and defeated the article that would have imposed a 4 percent local room-occupancy tax that would have added money to town coffers.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said the tax would raise an estimated $38,000 annually for the town. "We thought it was one way to raise funds without hurting any individual," he said.

The Advisory Committee said other towns such as Hull, Weymouth, Rockland and Marshfield have similar taxes.

But Andrew Quigley of 38 Jerusalem Road said the "big chains" could perhaps absorb the cost, but not the smaller establishments. "This is the wrong tax at the wrong time on the wrong industry," he said.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce also spoke against the article.

CHS Gridiron Club honors football moms

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

LOTS OF NEWS

Hello Cohasset. We have a lot of fantastic news to share this week. Between new babies, football and some very busy fundraisers, the news is flowing. Please keep it coming as we head into our holiday season. It is so wonderful to hear about family and friends who are visiting, events and holiday get-togethers so make sure to send in all the news and photos. Remember also to honor our Veterans this Sunday on Veterans Day.

HURRAY SKIPPERS

Go Blue, Go White! The Cohasset High School Football team is awesome and last Friday; they played a fantastic game against another great team, Abington. Both teams came into Friday with 7 wins, 0 losses so it was an important game for them both. Guess what? Cohasset won in a beautiful victory in which it seemed like the entire town came out to cheer the players on.

Thank you to all of the Cohasset fans. The weather was perfect for fans and they made a spectacular showing to ensure Cohasset's undefeated football team stayed that way. The Gridiron Club extends an invitation to all to support this team on Friday, Nov. 9 at 6 p.m. at Norwell High School. Be a part of the adventure to help send this team to the Super Bowl by cheering them on to victory against Norwell!

A special thanks goes out from the Cohasset Football Team to the Cohasset High School Band for the superb music they provided which added to the excitement of this game. The team even noticed fans in the stands dancing to the music so they responded by dancing their way to victory.

TOP EQUESTRIENNE

This past weekend, Abby Adams Greer, a Cohasset native and resident, won top ribbons at the National Horse Show held at Madison Square Garden. Her impressive track record this show season aboard Amir, owned by Debra Zildjian, placed her in the top ten nationwide and qualified her for this prestigious competition. Abby is a professional rider and trainer at River Wind Farm in Pembroke. Congratulations Abby!

Abby Adams Greer won top ribbons at the National Horse Show held at Madison Square Garden.

MOMS RECOGNIZED

The Cohasset Gridiron Club honored mothers of the senior members of this undefeated team on Friday night before the game. Blue and White corsages were presented to the mothers of Tom Bilodeau, Nick Bolster, Dave Bouchard, Jason Brown, Chris Caron, Brendan Goff, John Hussey, Eric Libby, Jari Roine Martin, Liam Roine Martin, Marc Musco, Will Prendegast and Paul Previtte.

GO STINGRAYS!

More Football news, this time from the Scituate/Cohasset B Stingrays. This team hosted a super bowl game vs. Duxbury this past Sunday. The Stingrays beat the Duxbury team 14-6 with an interception in the fourth quarter leading to a touchdown. The Cohasset Players on this team are: Derek Schwantner, Nick Lieberman, John McKenna, Mike Froio, Alec Livingstone, Derek St. Peter, James Reichardt, Nick Savage and Paul Posniak. The team finished out with 6 wins, 1 loss and 1 tie. Cohasset Varsity Football Coach Bob Silvia was seen on the sidelines cheering (and scouting) for future gridiron stars. Congratulations to this awesome young team!

PEACE CONCERT

I don't know about all of you but music is such a wonderful and healing tool for me when life gets a little overwhelming. This Sunday, Nov. 11 at 5 p.m., the Second Congregational Church Peace Concert is being held at the Second Congregational Church on Highland Ave. The Choir, Music Committee and Music Director, Ellen Brown are planning this event in response to the Sept. 11 tragedies. Music will be performed by the SCC "Peace Choir" and special friends of SCC. Mark your calendar and save this date for this special event featuring Patriotic and uplifting music. Donations will benefit victims of this tragedy.

LOVE THAT TUPPERWARE

Everyone out there who is looking for Tupperware products need look no further! Cohasset's Deer Hill Sixth Grade class is holding a Tupperware Fundraiser to raise money for their treasured yearbook that they receive at the end of the year. This fundraiser starts on Thursday, Nov. 8 and will end on Friday, Nov. 16. If you do not know a sixth grader, you may request a catalog by emailing me at piepstupper@yahoo.com or calling 781-383-0143. You may also log onto the Tupperware website at www.tupperware.com, write down the items you wish and send them to the email listed in this message. Your support is greatly appreciated by all the members of this class!

NEW ADDITIONS!

The first beautiful little girl is the daughter of Rebecca Stuzman and Torin Sweeney. Miss Olivia Mary Sweeney was born on Sept. 22, 2001 weighing in at 6 lbs. 1 oz and was 18-3/4 inches long. Oh, thank heavens for little girls.... Congratulations! I am sure that this little lady will be making plenty of appearances with her Daddy at CHMS!

Michelle and Mark Appleby of Bates Lane would like to announce their new addition, Ian Duncan, who was born on Sept. 27, 2001 at 2:47 p.m.. He weighed in at 7 lbs., 11 oz. and was 20-1/2 inches long. Ian's maternal grandparents are William and Laurie DeVoir of Andover, Mass. His paternal grandparents are Peter and Betsy Appleby of Marshfield. Congratulations to you all on this wonderful news!

And last, but certainly not least is the announcement of the birth of Hayden Irvin Startzell, son Allison and Kennan Startzell of Scituate. Hayden was born on Oct. 17 at 2:29 p.m., weighing in at 7 lbs. 6 oz. and was 21 inches long. Hayden has a big brother, Kennan Ross, who is really happy to have a baby brother. Grandparents are Jeff and Marcia Ludlow of Mashpee,(formerly of Cohasset) and Beverly and Harry Startzell of Levittown, Penn.. Congratulations to this wonderful and happy family!

1964 CLASSMATE

I had a note from a former CHS graduate from the class of 1964. Geoff Mullette is looking for a classmate who graduated in the year 1966. Her name is Betsy Mercer and Betsy had a brother named Andy who was a basketball standout in the early 1960s. They lived in Cohasset just past Sandy Beach on the way to Hull. Anyone who could give Geoff any information on her whereabouts can send an email to downunder7@aol.com or, they can contact him by mail or phone at Geoff Mullette, 522 Mt. Pleasant Ave, W. Orange, NJ 07052. Phone or fax him at 973-325-8320. Geoff is also looking for information on any reunions or get- togethers.

UNICEF DONATION

A Joseph Osgood third-grader, Kerry McCabe would like to thank her neighbors, friends and relatives for donating to UNICEF this Halloween. The $109.11 Kerry raised will be used by UNICEF to provide children in Afghanistan with medicine, clean water, emergency relief and more. UNICEK's website is www.unicefusa.org.

Great work Kerry!

BOOK SALE

Books, Books, Books! What wonderful gifts to give for the holiday season. The Deer Hill shopping night at Buttonwood Books is being held on Thursday, Nov. 15 from 7-9 p.m. This is a great opportunity to stock up on Birthday gifts, holiday presents and teacher gifts. Marge Murphy, the Deer Hill librarian, will be on hand to make book suggestions for your children. Wine and cheese will be served and a portion of the sales will go towards the Deer Hill library. If you cannot go at night, you can shop during the day on Thursday and mention that you are with the Deer Hill.

FIRST PLACE

Josh Flanagan, a senior at Middlebury College, recently won 1st place in the Middlebury College triathlon. After finishing in 2nd place the last two years, Josh was thrilled to come in first his senior year. Josh, congratulations on a job very well done.

ON STAGE

Sarah DeLima will be appearing with three-time Tony nominee, Judy Kuhn, in a concert production of the musical, "The Baker's Wife."

Cohasset resident, Sarah DeLima will be appearing with three-time Tony nominee, Judy Kuhn (Les Miserables, Chess, She Loves Me) in a concert production of the musical, "The Baker's Wife." Sarah is delighted and thrilled to be taking part in such a production. We know that this will be a show definitely worth seeing. Show dates are Nov. 15 and 16 at 8 p.m.. Performances will be held at John Hancock Hall in Boston. Tickets are $25 and $50 and can be purchased at Ticketmaster and all Bostix outlets.

I wanted to end the column this week with the following quote that seems quite fitting with all that is happening within the country.

"Courage isn't being unafraid. It's moving ahead matter-of-factly even though you're scared."

That is it for this week! Keep the wonderful news coming in any one of the following ways.

Remembering Revolutionary War soldiers

DAR to mark graves

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Barbara Dillon thinks we should all be thankful for our freedom.

Dillon, regent of the Cohasset and Hingham chapter of DAR (Daughters of the American Revolution), wants people to appreciate the sacrifices of those who fought in the American Revolution, especially around Veterans Day.

"We need to remember what the revolutionary soldiers established for us...our freedom," Dillon said.

In an effort to promote patriotism, Dillon and the 40 members of the local chapter of DAR are trying to preserve the memory of fallen soldiers by marking the graves of those who fought in the Revolutionary War. The organization also plans to maintain the gravestones and wants to ensure there is an American flag next to every grave.

Dillon has been a member of DAR for 21 years and was elected as regent in May, she will serve the position for three years. Dillon says there has been a lot more interest in the group since the attacks on Sept. 11. "Because of what's happened people are thinking more and more that they need to preserve freedom. These soldiers gave us our freedom and I think people can see that now," she said.

DAR is a national organization that was founded in 1890 and now contains more than 3,000 chapters in all 50 states. The Colonel Thomas Lothrop Chapter is the local chapter and was founded in 1896 with only 12 members. Five years ago the Cohasset Chapter merged with Old Colony Chapter of Hingham in order to better pursue the organization's aims.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund presents a citation from the state Senate honoring students who received the DAR good citizen award.

DAR states its objectives as historic preservation, promotion of education, and any patriotic endeavor. The Cohasset chapter placed a stone on the town common in 1902 in order to commemorate the veterans of the Revolutionary War.

In an effort to promote citizenship, on Nov. 10 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., DAR is leading a fundraiser at the Hillside School in Marlboro. The school offers opportunities to disadvantaged children from the inner-city. Pony rides, hayrides, baked goods, animal petting and farm tours will be available on Saturday.

In December, the group will be collecting gifts for veterans, wrapping them, and then delivering them to Brockton Veterans hospital.

As well, there is a good citizen award that DAR presents to a high-school senior every April. The award encourages patriotism, dependability, service and leadership in the high-schools. DAR awards five good citizenship awards to students from Rockland, Weymouth, Hull, Hingham and Cohasset. Three students are selected from each school by their teachers and then voted on by their peers. The winners receive a certificate, pin, and an award that is determined on a yearly basis.

DAR is open to any women who can prove that they have relatives who were patriots of that time. The organization offers help to those who are trying to establish their genealogy. The group meets up to eight times a year. Call Dillon at 781-383-0025 for more information.

IT'S HAPPENING

Bird walk

The Straits Pond Watershed Association will sponsor a free bird walk from 8 to 10 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 19. Participants should meet on Atlantic Avenue in Hull (at the foot of Summit Avenue). The walk will be led by Sally Avery and all are welcome.

For more information, call Lawry Reid at 781-925-8659 or email: viaspeech@mediaone.net.

Vets Day breakfast

The Sons of the American Legion are hosting the annual Thanksgiving Day breakfast from 7-9:30 a.m. at the George H. Mealy Post on Summer Street. Everyone is invited. Adults are $4 and children, $2. All you can eat.

The Jingle Bell Walk, a Cohasset tradition offered by the SSCC, begins at 2 p.m. on Nov. 23, when Santa Claus arrives by boat with his elves at Cohasset Harbor (Border Street).

After Santa distributes jingle bells to the children, he and his elves will board a hayride and the walk continues along the sidewalks of Elm to Main St. in Cohasset. At 2:30 p.m. the South Shore Community Center welcomes you to partake in cookies, a beverage, and a holiday-sing-along. Holiday music and carols will also be sung by all.

Santa will be upstairs in the center to pose for pictures with you and your children. Please stroll through the village to share in the local shops' holiday ambiance.

At 3 p.m. on Cohasset Common there will be a "Turkey Tot Trot" for ages 3 to 10. You may pre-register for this event for $2 or post register the day of the event for $3 per participant. Proceeds will go to benefit the Nursery School. All participants will receive a prize!

Listen to the bells of St. Stephen's playing from 2:30 to 4 p.m., while enjoying a hayride around the Common. Hayrides will be available from 3 to 4 p.m. At 3:30 p.m., gather around the Cohasset Common to listen to the Rusty Skippers Marching Band. The festivities culminate on Cohasset Common at 4:15 p.m. with the lighting of the tree.

There is something for everyone this year at the Jingle Bell Walk. It's a great way to appreciate our picturesque surroundings, while involving the whole family in a Cohasset tradition.

In the event of rain, all outdoor activities will be cancelled and Santa will arrive in the Community Center Gym at 2 p.m.

AAUW to meet

At the Nov. 13 meeting of the Hingham Area Branch, the AAUW (American Association of University Women) we will view the Australian video, Babakiueria, a humorous, yet serious, satirical look at society when power changes. Following the video, Nancy Moore, a member of the AAUW Diversity Task Force, will lead us in a discussion of the issues raised. The meeting is at 7:30 p.m. at Allerton House at Harbor Park, 15 Condito Rd, Hingham. It is free and open to the public. For more information call 781-749-6274.

Exploring movement

The Cohasset Recreation and Cohasset High School come together during a project for community service.

Three high school juniors, Shawna Sullivan, Sarah Dennis and Bryan Bilton, will run a Movement Exploration for ages 4 and 5. These volunteered services will help the children develop their motor skills and basic social skills. It will also provide an opportunity for parents to drop their youngsters off and run a few errands without having to entertain the children.

The program will run on a rotating schedule as follows: 10:50 to 11:40 a.m. Nov. 29, Dec. 6, Dec. 13, and Dec. 20.

For more information, call 781-383-4109. Limited space available. Registration will be at the Town Hall.

Turkey raffle

The American Legion annual Turkey Raffle is at 6 p.m., Nov. 16 at the George H. Mealy Post on Summer Street. See Legion members for tickets or just come to the drawing.

Alzheimer's support

Dr. Robert C. Green, neurologist at Boston Medical Center and associate professor at Boston University School of Medicine, will speak on current research in Alzheimer's Disease Wednesday, Nov. 14, at 7:30 p.m. before the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore. The meeting will be held at the Hingham Senior Center, 220 Central St., Hingham.

Green has been a national leader in research projects in Alzheimer's Disease and has been cited numerous times in Woodward and White's "Best Doctors in America" for behavioral neurology. A question and answer session will follow his presentation.

For further information call Ruth Scully at 781-740-2426 or JoAnn Mitchell at 781-749-5417. The meeting is free and open to the public. Free respite care for an Alzheimer's patient so that the family may attend this lecture is available at Harbor House. Reservations for respite care must be made in advance by calling Gervaise Haley at Harbor House at 781-749-4774, Ext. 843 by 3 p.m. Nov. 14.

Ledge will have to wait

When the issue first hit the floor at 10:45 p.m. Planning Board Chairman Al Moore's made a motion to indefinitely postpone the article. What followed was 30 minutes of what was, at times, raucous debate centered – not on saving ledge – but on alleged governmental shenanigans and how zoning issues should be handled in town.

What was at stake, according to ledge group spokesman Mark DeGiacomo, was preserving the unique character of the town. There was no time to waste, he said, and criticized the Planning Board's tactics to delay the vote until spring as "wrong."

"Indefinite postponement means the article is dead until the annual Town Meeting," he said. "But between now and then, there will be a line outside the building commissioner's office of developers with plans to blast ledge.

"I propose to let the Planning Board meet this Wednesday and then come before the continuance of Town Meeting Thursday so we can vote up or down with their learned recommendation."

Proponents – many of whom live on Beach Street whose ledge could be threatened by development – want the town to require a variance be obtained before ledge eight feet in height or more can be altered in any way. Variances to zoning laws are difficult to get.

Moore accused proponents of rushing the issue. He said the article was flawed and needed careful study and examination before coming to Town Meeting.

"Let's do this the right way," he said.

Moore had his supporters.

Selectman Merle Brown, who was in the minority on his board, described the article as "ambiguous" because the height of ledge can vary from one property to another.

Planning Board member Bill Good, who also sits on the Growth & Development Committee, said the board felt strongly in the importance of protecting ledge but the effort should proceed cautiously.

"Zoning by-law changes impact all across town," he said.

Wayne Sawchuk of 432 Beechwood St., said the issue needed more review. "This article is not well written, was clearly not well prepared and should come back in the spring," he said.

But speaking for the majority of selectmen, Tom Callahan said the article had merit and urged voters to defeat the move to postpone their decision.

But it was not to be – by a vote of 104 to 80 – indefinite postponement won the necessary majority.

In a telephone interview Tuesday, DeGiacomo said the ledge group will work with the planning board to create an article for the annual Town Meeting in March. He said the debate, at the very least, brought the issue of ledge preservation to the forefront of public interest.

Above, Mark DeGiacomo of Beach Street tells voters they should defeat the planning board's request to postpone the article on preserving town ledge.
Below, members of the Planning Board, Bill Good, Al Moore and Bob Sturdy listen carefully to the debate on whether the ledge article should be postponed until the annual Town Meeting.

There was not much opposition to the project however, some voiced concern over the priority of building a new library before a new police station. The article concerning the construction of a new police station was rejected.

Leonora Jenkins, of 198 Jerusalem Road, said she didn't understand the need for a new library because this will be the fourth new library built in Cohasset. The Osgood School, Deer Hill School, and the Middle High-School all have or will have new libraries.

The Advisory Committee also did not support the article because it warned the town that it was a major change for the library trustees to be asking for additional funding. The committee also added that while it seems that the town is in line for the state grant, it is not a certainty that the grant will be funded.

Town Manager Mark Haddad tried to reassure Town Meeting by telling voters that although taxpayers will be responsible for the additional appropriation of $600,000, there would not be an increase in taxes.

Towle disagreed with the doubters and outlined some of the reasons for the town to approve the library article. Towle said that the current library is overcrowded and is cursed with a lack of parking, and the old Osgood School, where the new library will be housed, is being neglected and is in need of a makeover.

Towle said she is delighted that after four years of toiling in paper work, the new library is finally coming to fruition. In an interview after special Town Meeting, Towle said, "it was wonderful to have so much support for the library because we have all worked so hard for it."

Architect Frank Adams awarded the $3.9 million construction bid Tuesday to M. O'Connor Construction and groundbreaking is expected to take place within 30 days.

New police station on hold

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Monday's special Town Meeting was split right down the middle on the issue of whether to build a new police station. The vote of 171 to 171 did not garner the necessary 2/3 majority needed to borrow the money for the design phase of the proposed new police station.

George McGoldrick of the Police/Fire Study Committee, tried to convince voters the town needed a new police station saying that "the current facilities are woefully inadequate." The existing station was built in 1962 for ten people and now houses 28, he said.

McGoldrick said expanding the existing 3,500-square-foot station wasn't an option because there wasn't enough space at the Elm Street site.

Plans are to build the new station on two acres on Route 3A near Sunrise Assisted Living. The land was donated by local businessman Paul Barry.

Both the Advisory Committee and Capital Budget Committee said while they realized the need for a new station – the timing is wrong due to fiscal considerations.

But Police Sgt. Robert Jackson urged voters to back the new station because police were working "in a cramped environment not conducive to police service." When the police station was built the communications center consisted of a wooden desk, rotary telephone and radio.

"We did not envision 9-1-1, a dispatch center and computer network," Jackson said.

Steve Gaumer of the Capital Budget Committee said although the project has merit, it would not be fiscally prudent to build a new police station at this time. Gaumer said that the town's debt service is going to balloon to about 14 percent in the next few years and while the proposed station would not be "a budget buster," it would raise the debt a small percentage at a time when the committee is trying to rein it in.

But Andrew Quigley, 38 Jerusalem Road, felt that if the financial impact would be minimal the town may as well build the station. "We may as well build the police station now because it's only going to cost more in the future," he said.

Bill Foley of the Advisory Committee said after a tour of the facility, the board did not think the town "had a $4 million problem." He said there could be creative solutions that wouldn't cost the town a lot of money.

"The Town of Cohasset has real crime and processes real criminals through that center."
— Selectman Ronnie McMorris

Wayne Sawchuk, 432 Beechwood St., suggested expanding the existing facility into the garage bays. He said the new station was too expensive "even if the land if is free."

Town Manager Mark Haddad said the station would be the town's last, large capital project and believes the town is fiscally responsible enough to handle the extra debt. He said that if the principal concern is with the timing of the project, the town could come back with the estimated $4 million construction appropriation at a later time. The $240,000 that was asked for Monday would have been used to retain architects and other professional services in order to find out the exact construction estimate, which could be brought to Town Meeting later.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris, who also sits on the Police/Fire Station Study Committee, said police and other employees at the station deserve better working conditions. She described a litany of inadequacies from no appropriate place to store firearms to having the 9-1-1 dispatch center in an insecure area.

"The Town of Cohasset has real crime and processes real criminals through that center," she said.

Town Meeting voters did accept Barry's offer of two acres of land for the new station. There is a two-year window on the gift during which the town must show progress toward the new station. But officials said Monday, they thought an extension could be worked out.

McMorris said there is clearly a dire need for a new station and the Police/Fire Station Study Committee will continue to meet.

In a letter to the paper McGoldrick wrote that there were some positives to be taken from the meeting. He said that people have realized that "it's not just space issues but safety and code issues that need to be addressed. The only disagreement is when to move forward."

Field of dreams closer to reality

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Voters gave the proposed transformation of the old gravel pits off North Main Street behind Barnes Little League Field a big boost Monday.

Despite opposition from the Advisory Committee, a majority at the special Town Meeting agreed to appropriate $27,000 to design two baseball fields at the site.

Mark DeGiacomo, president of the Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association, said playing fields are the best use for the former gravel storage yard and the town shouldn't pass up the opportunity.

"The gravel yard simply put is a dump," he said. "It was when I was a child and it is today.

"It's ugly and dangerous."

DeGiacomo explained the Gravel Pits Reuse Committee looked at several options over the past year including a sewer treatment plant, fire station, senior housing, soccer field and Roller Blade park — but decided the best option was a baseball and softball field.

The town had already appropriated $15,000 for an engineering study for the proposal. The money approved Monday for design and bid documents will set the stage for the project to come back to the annual Town Meeting. The construction estimate is about $250,000.

DeGiacomo said the youth baseball organization, which will kick in $5,000 toward the bid documents, would also help raise money to pay for the construction. CYB would also maintain the fields, he said.

Susan Turgiss, speaking for the Advisory Committee, said the issue needed to be fully reviewed before asking the town to commit public land for the fields. She stressed the field situation that involves the schools and recreation department needs to be looked at including whether other sports could use the proposed fields, such as soccer.

"Are the recreational needs of all the youth being met?" she asked.

But Selectman Merle Brown said the field use is the best option for the site. He said there is a problem in town with overuse of existing fields. Both Brown and DeGiacomo said parking would be improved with the new field complex. As it stands now, parking is a big problem during the Little League season at Barnes Field.

"It's wonderful opportunity to take the gravel pit and turn it into something useful for the town."
—Wayne Sawchuk, 432 Beechwood St.

Lynn Eisenhauer of Hobart Lane said it wasn't wise to spend the money in an economic downturn.

"We're in dire need of elderly housing and we are paying for the sewers and schools. It's not fiscally responsible to ask us to come up with another $27,000."

She estimated the total appropriation at the special Town Meeting if all the articles were approved to be about $3.5 million.

"I can't see it within my heart or within my budget to vote yes," she said.

Wayne Sawchuk, 432 Beechwood St., said the fields were a bargain.

He said the town has already obtained $100,000 worth of fill from the school projects to level the site.

"It's wonderful opportunity to take the gravel pit and turn it into something useful for the town," Sawchuk said.

Voters agreed and the article passed with a majority vote.

Taking MCAS seriously

After years of distressing results, state-wide scores on the MCAS tests taken by 10th graders last spring are dramatically better. Two-thirds passed both the English and math tests, which may not call for champagne but is still a big improvement over previous years.

Eighty-two percent of 10th graders passed the English part of the spring 2001 exam, up from 66 percent of 10th graders in 2000. On the math section, 75 percent of 10th graders passed, up from 55 percent last year.

Here in Cohasset 10th-grade scores were again among the best in the state and ranked 26 out of the 319 school districts tested.

Why are the scores up across the state? One big reason, educators say, is that this is the first time the results count. Members of the class of 2003, will have to pass the math and English MCAS tests in order to earn their high school diploma. In previous years, 10th graders considered the standardized tests a waste of time; this year's class took them seriously.

The students aren't the only ones who have only recently begun taking the MCAS tests seriously. As the diploma requirement has grown closer, state-wide efforts to align school curricula with the new standards have accelerated. At every grade level, teachers are stressing the skills that will eventually be tested on the MCAS.

In the last two years, schools have begun focusing on the challenge facing the class of 2003. With local money and state grants, they have established summer "MCAS academies" and after-school programs.

Some districts will offer tutors. Others are asking at-risk students to drop elective courses in exchange for remedial math and English classes during the day. Parents have a role in this as well.

These high school juniors will have four more chances to pass the MCAS tests before it's time to get fitted for a cap and gown. By junior year, most failing students are already giving up on learning. MCAS commits schools and parents to a serious effort to give them another chance.

Even with this year's improvement, the number of failing students is still too high in many communities across the state.. A third or more of the members of the class of 2003 face a difficult road. Teachers' unions and others who have long opposed MCAS can be expected to use those numbers as an excuse to retreat from the graduation requirement.

But before we consider lowering the standards, let alone dropping them altogether, we should ask. If the state's elected leaders hadn't made minimal academic achievement a graduation requirement, would these students be taking this challenge seriously? If diplomas didn't hang in the balance, would local educators be taking these under-achieving students this seriously?

The next 18 months will require a sustained effort to bring a third of the class of 2003 to a level of performance deserving of a high school diploma. The results being announced this month should steel us for that effort, not discourage it.

And here in Cohasset, where the school system is considered among the best and it's very likely our students would do well with or without MCAS – we need to remember not every town is so fortunate. If MCAS does the job to raise the bar across the board, then we all benefit no matter where we live.

Troubling meeting

DEAR SELECTMEN AND MODERATOR,

As a member of the Board of Directors of the Cohasset Historical Society I'd like to thank all of the stalwarts who persevered to the very end of Town Meeting to vote on Article 25. We really appreciate your help and persistence. Thank you!

However, two things occurred at Town Meeting on Monday night that are very troubling.

First, Article 25 was a citizens petition. This means that the words were written by a group of citizens independent from Town Government and placed on the Warrant after obtaining the requisite number of signatures. Yet, this article was rewritten by someone without the petitioners knowledge and presented to Town Meeting as if it were the article originally submitted. Misrepresenting articles is flat out wrong.

Second, near the end of Town meeting the Moderator entertained a motion to end Town Meeting before all of the articles had been heard. This also is flat out wrong since it denies those who placed the respective articles on the Warrant the opportunity to the democratic process of Town Meeting.

Each of these events could serve to mislead the voters and subvert the democratic process of Town Meeting. Fortunately, each of these procedural errors was ultimately discussed and corrected on the floor of Town Meeting with much confusion and furor.

It is very important to know what steps the Selectmen and Moderator will take to prevent these situations from reoccurring in the future.

Tom Gruber
8 Pratt Court

Mr. Gruber provided the Mariner a copy with copy of his letter.

Mishandled article

TO THE EDITOR

Town meeting is the legislative body of town government in Cohasset. It should be a deliberative session, each article explained thoroughly, and thoughtfully voted.

Last night was not a perfect meeting. In particular, the citizen petition regarding sewer costs for the Cohasset Historical Society's Museums was mishandled.

1. The motion for a vote from Town Manager's notes was different than the petition— this is not legal.

2. The moderator did not want to consider the sidewalk article and the citizen petition, due to lateness of the hour — illegal to dissolve meeting before action on all articles.

3. When proponent of citizen petition, Tom Gruber spoke, he was not allowed to explain the reason for the petition due to the late hour. The assembled should have known the Society spent ten months with the Sewer Comm. to resolve the issue — rights abrogated.

4. Amendment by the Sewer Comm not accurate — the Town Counsel opinion only advisory (Sewer Comm. concede at their last meeting) and plumbing inspector said only potable water needed, which we have.

More could be written of the entire meeting, but I will leave it to others.

The Town Moderator should resign.

TO THE EDITOR:

At Monday's town meeting we lost a chance to help control jet noise and air pollution, in failing to back Hull's suit against Massport, by a 180 to 140 vote. Opponents used arguments lacking a factual basis. For example, Mr. Brown indicated Mssrs. Kennedy and Delahunt favor the runway. To our knowledge our Congressional representatives have taken no position — and our State representatives are actively opposing it. He also indicated property values will be unaffected. This defies common sense. No one wants to live under the flight paths of arriving and departing jets. Indeed, real estate agents have already found buyers walking away after experiencing the current level of jet noise.. What will happen when jet arrivals over our town triple?

Another speaker said the runway isn't needed, as the industry will take 15 years to recover from 9/11. The industry has already recovered. Shuttle flights to New York are back at full strength, and Massport is acting accordingly. They've asked the FAA to approve their flawed report, and can use it any time within the next three years to build the runway without further debate.

One voter suggested we need to prove fraud in our suit, which is indeed difficult if that were the case. However, it is not. The California Court rejected Oakland's expansion plan, not because of fraud, but because the information presented was both insufficient and misleading. Such is the case here.

Finally, it was argued that we have already spent $150,000 between the three towns of Hingham, Cohasset and Hull on the suit and it has only just been filed. That money was spent to uncover the facts, with the help of a number of national experts in the fields of noise and air pollution, airport delay, and air space design. We have only just begun to expend funds on the suit itself.

We failed to support a unique multi-town coalition put together by Bill Golden to share the costs of litigation. Cohasset will now be seen as getting a free ride — if Hull wins, we get the benefit courtesy of Hull, Hingham and Revere taxpayers. If they lose, it didn't cost us anything anyway.

Those that voted in favor, including four Selectmen and the Advisory Board, deserve our thanks. They did the right thing in attempting to control an out-of-control Authority whose only interest is in making money to support political patronage and the Big Dig cost overruns. They tried to preserve what's left of the peace and quiet which used to characterize Cohasset.

We believe that runway 14/32 is not the answer to delays and congestion at Logan, and will continue to oppose it on behalf of those citizens who voted to support the suit. Additionally, even though, as Ralph Dormitzer indicated, Masspoort is blocking our effort, we will continue to press for changing flights patterns to over water arrivals and departures.

No secret agenda

TO THE EDITOR:

One speaker at Town Meeting, speaking against acceptance of the village revitalization article, claimed not to be paranoid about it. As evidence, she cited her conviction that the proponents have grandiose and extravagant plans not yet publicly revealed!

She's not alone in her notions of course; many have jumped to the goofy conclusion that there is a secret agenda to Nantucketize our shabby little village.

Admittedly, the CRC made a PR mistake by inviting a couple of architects to let their imaginations soar, and produced some concepts that startled conservatives and terrified the nickel-nursers. But these pipe dreams evaporated quickly in the many public forums. Rather than excluding and ignoring public input, the proponents have pleaded for more participation. The result has been a pretty down-to-earth concept.

Despite the forums, and despite the dissemination of the results to everyone who can read, some at town meeting complained about non-specificity, not enough in the warrant to vote on etc. Reminds me of the voters who whine that there is no info in the voting booth about the candidates, as if it's beyond them to note and digest the plethora of information in advance.

The article passed, but one wonders why anyone would oppose reviving the village with grant money and private donations, at no cost to the taxpayers, when the public has had every opportunity to participate in the specifications. It's nice to be quaint and comfortable, while avoiding cuteness and Nantucketizing, but that isn't equivalent to remaining shabby.

My special bond with the Paul Pratt Library

LINCOLN HILLSIDE

KATHLEEN O'DONNELL

One of the advantages of growing up on Lincoln Hillside was, and is, that children could walk to the Paul Pratt Library by themselves. Once I became old enough to make my way there on my own, I was a frequent visitor. Pulling back the heavy front door of the Paul Pratt Library in the early 1960s meant that you entered a place of cool and quiet. It was a place of whispers and respect, not a gathering place buzzing with social interaction, children's programs and Internet access.

The rotunda with its historic mural of John Smith and associates was a small history lesson. Turn left and enter into what was then the new wing and there was the sunny Children's Room with child-sized tables. Here I encountered and enjoyed Beatrix Potter's sweet series of little books, de Brunhoff's Babar, Caroline Haywood's Betsy series and the daring life of Nancy Drew. In time I moved onto an excellent series of biographies for young readers and became familiar with the challenges and triumphs endured and celebrated by Louis Braille, Amelia Earhart, Abraham Lincoln and Eli Whitney. In the Children's Room, I learned about Roanoke Island, photosynthesis, World War II and hibernation. In time the Children's Room moved downstairs. Like standing in your old neighborhood and remembering who lived in each house in years past, I can stand in today's Fiction Room at the library and recall with warm affection where all my childhood favorites were located in that old Children's Room of 1964.

Years passed and I noticed that some adults crossed the rotunda from the front door and turned right. This led to a black wrought iron staircase onto the floor above. In time I gathered enough courage to go up there myself. Putting on my best "serious/sensible/please please please don't notice me" face I started up the staircase, hoping that none of the librarians would stop me. Success on my first attempt and I stepped into a better world, one for which I was very ready. The second story of the library had glass floors which were a marvel of engineering. How could glass floors support all those books and people too? A wonder! Their shelves contained non-fiction books and very old books, but the best thing they contained was the 800s and 900s. Here were the essays of Henry Thoreau and his Transcendental brother Bronson Alcott, the plays of Ibsen and Pirandello, Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," black and white templates of the Amalfi Coast and the Tomb of Tutankahmun. The books I was drawn to didn't have 3-colour paper printed jackets. These books had fabric covers with gold embossed titles on their spines. They had subtle endpapers. These were old books, books with past due dates of 1931 and 1944. They had acquisition numbers pencilled in them of 384 and 503. These were the books which contemporaries of my parents, grandparents and great-grandparents had read. Like touching old stone carvings, these books were a piece of shared history, which linked my present to my ancestors' Cohasset past. Running my young hands over their fabric covers aroused a feeling in me that I can now recognize as nostalgia.

As more time passed I mixed my choice of very old books with more current works. "The Diary of Anne Frank," "The Autobiography of Malcolm X," "Now Voyager," Jim Bishop's "The Day Christ Died," Dalton Trumbo's "Johnny Got His Gun" and Heinlein's "Stranger in a Strange Land." I was fortunate in having parents who never censored what I chose to read. The result was that because of my easy access to the library I was exposed to worlds far outside anything I could have experienced living in Cohasset at that time.

I lived in a small world but I had the world at my fingertips (or 1016 steps down the street) because I had unlimited access to the Paul Pratt Library.

Lazing in assorted pieces of furniture and hammocks during those years, I learned of dancers and writers, infidelity and murder, of free thinkers and people of moral courage. No one bothered me. I wasn't required to take lots of lessons or classes or learn how to improve myself in any formalized fashion. I was content. I lived in a small world but I had the world at my fingertips (or 1016 steps down the street) because I had unlimited access to the Paul Pratt Library.

In the foyer of the library there is a lovely architect's drawing of the planned new Cohasset Library which will be at the old Osgood School. I'll be sorry to see the yellow building on South Main Street empty of its books. The current library is an old and dear friend to many Cohasset residents, and a place of many good memories. Cohasset needs a larger library to support its ever-growing population, but I'm glad the new library will be still be within walking distance for today's children of Lincoln Hillside.

Kathleen O'Donnell, a CHS graduate, grew up in Cohasset and now lives and works in the UK with her family. Her reflections about growing up on Lincoln Hillside appear occasionally in the Cohasset Mariner.

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The other day when I learned that Congress has passed a bill to make Ronald Reagan's boyhood home in Dixon, Ill., a national historic site despite a cautionary warning from the Interior Department that it has yet to come to grips with a $4.9 billion maintenance backlog.

Dixon, which is in House Speaker Dennis Hastert's district, was chosen to be Reagan's hometown because the family moved there when he was 9 and stayed until he finished high school and hot-footed it to Chicago in search of a job in broadcasting. It wasn't even his birthplace, which was Tampico, Ill.

I hate to be a spoil sport, but haven't we done enough for our 40th president?

"We don't believe and neither do the people in the community believe the legacy of Ronald Reagan needs to be studied. We need to preserve it," said Pete Jeffreys, a spokesman for Hastert, after the House rejected an amendment calling for a feasibility study by the Interior Department.

I hate to be a spoil sport, but haven't we done enough for our 40th president?

Let's see, there's Reagan National Airport, the nuclear aircraft carrier Ronald Reagan, the Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center and the Ronald Reagan Legacy Project is holding out for a monument on the Mall in Washington, his picture on the $10 bill and his head in stone on Mount Rushmore.

Next thing you know, "Bedtime for Bonzo" will be issued a posthumous Oscar and placed beside "Citizen Kane" as one of the great movies of all time.

If that isn't enough, Congress has just appropriated $2.3 million for the construction of a memorial to the Indians who wiped out Lt. Col. George Armstrong Custer and the Seventh Cavalry at the Battle of the Little Big Horn in Montana.

The house at 21 Seventh St., New Bedford, known as the Nathan and Polly Johnson House, has become a National Historic Landmark as a stop on the Underground Railroad that transported black folks from slavery in the American South to freedom in Canada.

Congress has also passed legislation to make a 12,480-acre section of Bill Dawson's farm in Chivington, Colo., a National Historic Site to commemorate the spot where in 1864 troops led by Col. John Chivington killed more than 150 Indians in a raid on their village.

"This will reconcile the anger and misunderstandings that have lasted too long between the native people and the rest of us," said former Cong. Pat Williams of Montana, who started the ball rolling for the Indian memorial at the Little Big Horn battlefield 10 years ago.

Wanna bet?

Conservative leader speaks at Forum

Conservative leader Phyllis Schlafly recently addressed the fifth annual Eagle Forum brunch and fund-raiser at the Lantana Ballroom in Randolph.

Schlafly spoke on "Building the Conservative Movement." She spoke to a packed house, not only from Massachusetts, but also from Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Maine. Schlafly, the founder of the national Eagle Forum political action group spoke on constitutional, economic and social issues. She is the author of the best selling book, "A Choice, Not an Echo," as well as other books that focus on family issues.

The organizations that attended included the Massachusetts Family Institute, Christian Coalition, Massachusetts Citizens for Life, Mass News, Morality in Media, Parents Rights, Concerned Women for America. Also attending were groups promoting drug prevention, the Constitution, traditional marriage and the English language.

Thanks for kicking in

TO THE EDITOR

The members of the Cohasset Permanent Firefighters Local 2804 would like to take this opportunity to thank the many generous donors who participated in our Fill the Boot drive.

Oct. 11, 2001, marked the 30th day since the World Trade Center tragedy, and firefighters all across Massachusetts took up the cause and conducted boot drives and other fundraising activities. The Cohasset Firefighters filled the boot for a total of $3,256 which was forwarded to the New York Firefighters 9-11 Disaster Relief Fund.

The firefighters wish to thank Stop & Shop and Shaw's for providing busy locations to conduct the drive. Also thanks go out to the art students of Ms. Muir and Ms. Berowitz at Cohasset High School for the patriotic posters they created.

Anyone who may have missed the opportunity to contribute, can still participate by donating to the: New York Firefighters 9-11 Disaster Relief Fund, c/o IAFF, 1750 New York Ave., NW, Washington, D.C. 20006.

Airplane noise

TO THE EDITOR:

I'm asking you for help in a situation that's been bothering our family for some time now. We've lived in this town for ten years and we moved here from Milton, Mass. We thought that Cohasset would be a quiet town but each year since we've lived here the noise level from airplanes flying in and out of Logan has gotten increasingly worse.

On Tuesday night I called Massport to complain about the level of airplane noise that our community is subjected to on a daily basis. I asked if they could also mail my complaint to me so that I have a record of it. My question is this: why must airplanes fly directly over our town when we live adjacent to the Atlantic Ocean? It seems to me that the flight path would have to change only slightly with planes flying over the sea instead of directly over our town. This in itself would curb the noise tremendously.

Wouldn't you rather have your children fall asleep at night to the sounds of evening and not to noise pollution?

Please join me and complain to Massport. The telephone number is: (617) 561-3333. Press 2 to make a direct complaint and make sure to have it mailed to you for verification. It only took me one minute to do this! The person I spoke with at Massport was very cordial to me but it will certainly take a lot more than just a call here and there for a positive change to come.

Do your family's ears a favor. Do your Cohasset neighbors a favor. Call today.

Library support

TO THE EDITOR:

Through you, Cohasset's Library Trustees would like to congratulate Cohasset on voting to go ahead with a new library in the old Osgood School! The level of town-wide support for this project is heartening and says something very nice about Cohasset. The generosity that has produced more than $1.1 million in gifts has been matched by three, well-attended Town Meetings, where support of the library's articles was necessary for a successful conclusion. We hope everyone will follow the school's transformation into a beautiful library with excitement and anticipation, with the satisfying knowledge that it is a symbol of Cohasset working as a great and wonderful team.

Historical Society stands its ground

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Don't mess with historical society folks.

That was the message the defiant history buffs gave special Town Meeting Monday when Moderator George Mariette moved to adjourn the meeting before the Cohasset Historical Society's article on sewer abatements for its antique museums was debated.

By the time Article 25 — the final item of business — came up, the clock had ticked well past 11 p.m. and the Nov. 5 special Town Meeting had dragged on for more than four hours, having already tackled such weighty issues as preserving town ledge, village revitalization and the police station proposal.

But the historical society — whose bleary-eyed supporters had sat through it all — threatened to stage an uprising akin to the American Revolution if its Citizen Petition did not get addressed Monday night.

"I'm really appalled," said society president Martha Gyesdley, as she took the microphone in the midst of chaos as people got up to leave. Gyesdley accused the Sewer Commission and Town Counsel of "foul play" for not having the article heard.

Although Mariette understood the issue was moot because it no longer required a Town Meeting vote due to the Sewer Commission's decision to grant the abatements — he quickly turned the situation around and asked voters to agree not to dissolve the meeting.

Then at the encouragement of the remaining crowd, society member Tom Gruber cut short his in-depth historical perspective of the Maritime Museum and Cape John Wilson House, which do not have bathroom facilities, saying it is to say "no thank you" to the sewer connection and resulting fees. After all, he said, the sewer line has gone by the two Elm Street buildings for 30 years with no pressure for abatements or rooms.

But after upgrading the sewer treatment plant, which substantially increased wastewater capacity, the Sewer Commission looked at connecting all those along the line. Initially the commission agreed to provide the abatements to the historical society, but then did an about face when an opinion from Town Counsel interpreted the plumbing code as requiring bathroom facilities in all public buildings.

However, commissioner Sean Cunning offered an amendment to the article, which asked for the abatements, to include a deed restriction to ensure no plumbing would be installed in the buildings.

As Town Counsel Paul DeRensis explained, "As long as there is no plumbing, there is no payment of sewer fees.

"If the historical society goes the full route [installs plumbing], that's a different story," he said.

Town Meeting agreed to add the amendment and endorsed the article — and then everyone went home.

Town Moderator George Mariette tries to retain control over the special Town Meeting which almost ended before the historical society sewer abatement issue could be aired.

Way paved for village work

Voters OK concept

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

It's a good thing that Town Meeting approved the Village Revitalization Task Force's designed plans for improvements to Cohasset's village area, Selectman Michael Sullivan said.

"I really don't know where we would be or what would happen if these plans got voted down," he said.

Tim O'Brien, the chairman of VRTF, outlined the goals of the project and emphasized that if Town Meeting approved Article 15, the plans would only be endorsed in concept.

The improvements will be centered around four areas, Elm Street, Ripley Road, Depot Court, and the town parking lot.

While the majority of voters where in support of the article, some had concerns. Gail Whitehouse, of 17 Ash St., said that she enjoyed the small, quaint, imperfect charm that Cohasset has and does not feel the need to "tidy it up for tourists."

Whitehouse went on to say that she doesn't trust developers from outside Cohasset deciding on the future of what the town is going to look like. "I think that what the developers and selectmen have done is essentially sell out the everyday Cohasset citizen. I resent the marketing of these plans," she said.

Sullivan said that there has been plenty of opportunity for people to have input into the plans. "There have been many public meeting to go over the design of these plans. If anyone had concerns that was the time to voice them," he said.

Michael Dick, 3 Arrowood St., asked what would happen if restoration of the Greenbush Line wasn't built. But Town Manager Mark Haddad explained the $1.5 million state grant recently awarded the town for village improvements is not contingent on the train becoming a reality. The MBTA supported the town's grant efforts.

Howie Altholtz of Summer Street asked that bicycle traffic through the village be accommodated in the plans. O'Brien said the task force would consider the issue.

Voters were also assured plans for a parking garage at the Teen Center were no longer on the table.

Work on the village could start by the end of 2002. The estimated $2-1/4 million revitalization project could be paid for with no direct cost to Cohasset taxpayers, officials have said.

The $1.5 million Public Works Economic Development Grant along with the $169,000 transportation enhancement grant, which will be used for the sidewalk on South Main Street in front of St. Stephen's Church, will pick up most of the tab. The MBTA will pay to reconstruct the town parking lot and the Ripley Road intersection by the South Shore Art Center in the village as part of the Greenbush train restoration project.

Specific design plans will be decided upon at public hearings.

Students make the grade

Homeroom.com program, which was designed to assess and analyze student's academic skills and improve math and reading performances.

The new website may be accessed at www.mcas2003.com from any computer with Internet access, 24 hours a day. The course runs from Oct. 22-Dec. 10.

The program has a database of more than 120,000 multiple-choice test items and 10,000 "skill-specific" lesson plans, activities and additional educational resources which are aligned to the state curriculum standards.

The purpose of the MCAS exams is to help school districts align their curriculum with the state curriculum frameworks so that certain subject matter is covered at a particular grade level regardless of what town the student lives in.

The test have come under attack by the Massachusetts Association of School Committees, which opposes linking the test to graduation.

Malvey said that while he thinks the test is a good idea in concept, "I am not in favor of the graduation requirement."

Help may be on the way for students who don't pass the test at the outset.

Earlier this month, Massachusetts Education Commissioner David Driscoll proposed lowering the cutoff score for students who don't pass the test but otherwise do well in school.

Under that proposal, students who don't achieve the cutoff score of 220, could appeal to the State Education Department to pass with a lower score while at the same time meeting other requirements, such as good attendance and participation in MCAS remedial activities.

Malvey said that he expects the individual reports sent to the school within a few weeks and then the results will be forwarded to the parents along with a brochure that tries to answer questions about the test. Malvey said parents should not hesitate to call the school with any additional questions.

MCAS results for grade 10

The following is a list of the Massachusetts Department of Education's MCAS scores, as of Nov. 1, 2001. The two categories are in English Language Arts and Mathematics for Cohasset Middle-High School, Grade 10.

English Language Arts scores for the year 2001 are as follows: /N—135; /SS—245; %A—21; %P—44; %NI—24; %F—11.

Mathematics scores for the year 2001 are as follows: /N—141; /SS—239; %A—16; %P—35; %NI—31; %F—17.

Mathematics scores for the year 2000 are as follows: /N—80; /SS—249; %A—41; %P—31; %NI—14; %F—14.

Forest Avenue sidewalk OK'd

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Sidewalk construction on Forest Avenue [a.k.a. Roller-Coaster Road] got a $100,000 infusion of cash Monday as special Town Meeting voters agreed with proponents that the roadway needs a safe place for people to perambulate.

Robert D. Silvia, 65 Forest Ave., implored weary voters to hang around to vote the issue even though the Special Town Meeting was entering its fourth hour.

"We've sat through all the rest," Silvia said about the other articles, which are items of business before Town Meeting.

"You have to leap into the bushes to avoid cars. We need a sidewalk on Forest Avenue."

— Mary Ahearn, 100 Forest Ave.

One resident proclaimed the roadway "the most dangerous and the most unsafe in town."

That claim irked former Forest Avenue resident Leonara Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, who had two young children when she lived there. "They grew up there and didn't die," she said.

Jenkins said Jerusalem and Nichols Road and Atlantic Avenue were far more dangerous and more in need of "beautiful sidewalks" than Forest Avenue.

But Mary Ahearn, 100 Forest Ave., said times have changed.

"Traffic has increased over the last 20 years," she said. "You have to leap into the bushes to avoid cars. We need a sidewalk on Forest Avenue."

Voters agreed and the article passed with the necessary two-thirds majority, required for borrowing articles.

Selectman Michael Sullivan explained that $100,000 had been appropriated at a prior Town Meeting to start the job.

"Now we're poised to go forward with all of Forest Avenue," he said about the additional money.

Bradley's district picks up Scituate precinct

By Mary Ford
MFORD@MCNC.COM

Thanks redistricting at the Statehouse, part of Scituate is being lobbed off into another legislative district.

Precinct 3 – that includes North Scituate and Minot — is moving over to the Third Plymouth District, currently represented by Garrett Bradley.

"I'm very happy to have the chance to represent part of Scituate," Bradley said. "My family used to have a summer home on Surfside Road when I was growing up."

The 31-year-old Hingham Democrat, who is mid-way through his first term, would take over the reins in the realigned district in January 2003 if reelected in the state election next November. The Third Plymouth District includes all of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset.

State Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, whose Fourth Plymouth District includes all of Scituate and Marshfield, loses Precinct 3 in Scituate under the redistricting plan which is on the governor's desk. Acting Gov. Jane Swift is expected to sign off on the plan this week.

Under state law, each of the 160 representative districts can have a mean population of 39,882, plus or minus 5 percent. At about 42,000, Hynes' district grew beyond the 5 percent so he has to reduce. Precincts cannot be split and the precinct, which is moved, must be contiguous to its new district. That left two possibilities in Scituate: Precinct 3 [North Scituate] or Precinct 1 [Scituate's West End], both bordering Cohasset.

> "I'm very happy to have the chance to represent part of Scituate."
> — State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham

Bradley says he's familiar with coastal issues, such as seawalls, and the train – both of which affect the 2,900 people in Scituate's Precinct 3. The restoration of the Greenbush Line, which Bradley opposes, traverses North Scituate, Hingham and Cohasset. All Bradley's towns hug the coast.

Bradley said Scituate Selectman Joe Norton, who lives on Fieldstone Road, has offered to host a coffee in his house to introduce him to potential constituents.

"I also plan to call Scituate selectmen and set up a meeting in December or January," Bradley said.

Hynes said he's sad about losing a Scituate precinct but there was no other option.

"I wanted to retain all of Scituate and all of Marshfield but that was impossible," he said.

Hynes explained during the redistricting process, the districts to the west, south and north of his district were looked at. Rep. Robert Nyman's district that includes Norwell, Hanover and Rockland, and Rep. Francis Marini's district of Duxbury, Pembroke and Hanson each have about 40,000 people – just above the mean, Hynes said. Bradley's district has about 38,000.

"It became clear Scituate would lose a precinct," Hynes said. He explained that from a geographic standpoint, it made sense for North Scituate, the most northeast part of town, to be moved.

"What we have is communities of interest," Hynes said about the fact Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and North Scituate share coastal issues and concerns.

Hedlund district gets Norwell

The town of Norwell will officially become part of the Plymouth-Norfolk senatorial district in January 2003. The state Senate approved redistricting plans last week that put Norwell in the district, which is represented by Weymouth Republican Robert Hedlund, and removed three Braintree precincts from the district that stretches from Weymouth to Duxbury. Acting Gov. Jane Swift is expected to sign the redistricting plan, Hedlund said.

Each of the 40 state senatorial districts has about 180,000 people. Redistricting occurs every ten years after the state census is conducted.

When Hedlund, who grew up in Hingham, runs for a sixth term next fall, he will campaign in Norwell as well as the rest of the district that includes Cohasset. If he wins reelection, he would start representing Norwell in January after he is sworn in and the redrawn district lines become official. Norwell is currently represented by state Senator Michael W. Morrissey, D-Quincy.

OBITUARIES

Mauran S. Pearce, Jr.

Mauran S. "Peter" Pearce, Jr., a Cohasset resident of 52 years, died in his home, Sunday, Nov. 4, 2001. He was 83.

Born in Providence, R.I., the son of the late Katharine B.(Schermahorne) Pearce and Mauran S. Pearce.

Mr. Pearce graduated from Pomfret Country Day School and Menlo College, then attended Stanford until enlisting in the Air Force during World War II. He flew P-40 Es under Lt. Gen. Claire Chennault and attained the rank of First Lieutenant. In 1943, Mr. Pearce was shot down over China and received the Purple Heart.

After 35 years in real estate development with Arco, Mr. Pearce retired and shared his talents in the volunteer community. He volunteered for the Social Service League's consignment shop, served on his church's house committee and drove for Fish.

Mr. Pearce enjoyed membership in the Cohasset Yacht Club, The Hope Club of Providence and the Old Goats Club in Cohasset.

He leaves his wife, Betty Lou (Priestley) Pearce; his four children, Katherine Pearce of San Francisco, Calif., Mitchell of San Jose, Calif, Peter of Cohasset and Elizabeth Pearce, of Sea Cliff, N.Y.; his sister, Bushnell Pearce Henry of Middletown, R.I.; and her grandson, Douglas, of Cohasset.

Funeral services will be Saturday, Nov. 10 at 10 a.m. at St. Stephen's church in Cohasset, followed by a private family burial at Swan Point Cemetery in Providence, R.I.

John H. Mullett

John Herbert Mullett, 85, of Cohasset, a retired employee of Otis Elevator Co., died Oct. 28, 2001, at home.

He worked for the Otis Elevator Co. in Buffalo, in Albany and in Boston for 45 years and was a district manager at the time of his retirement in 1979.

Born, raised and educated in Buffalo, N.Y., Mr. Mullett graduated from Lafayette High School in Buffalo in 1934. He moved to Cohasset in 1973.

Mr. Mullett was a member of the Hunt Club, the Old Goats Club and the Cohasset Country Club. He was also a member of St. Stephen Episcopal Church.

He leaves his wife, Suzanne (Walbridge) Mullett of Cohasset; two sons, Peter N. Mullett of Buffalo and Tom Mullett of Newton, Kan.; and a daughter, Barbara Victor of Portsmouth, R.I.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Nov. 9, at St. Stephen Episcopal Church, Cohasset. Interment will be private.

Visiting hours are omitted.

Arrangements were by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Memorial remembrances may be made to St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland St., Cohasset, 02025.

Elizabeth W. Dean

Elizabeth Webster Dean, 92, died Nov. 3, 2001, at Cardigan Nursing Home in Scituate.

Mrs. Dean was born in Wenham, and graduated from Wheaton College in Norton, in 1934.

She worked at the Boston Safe Deposit Company and married John H. Dean in 1942. She was a resident of Cohasset for 55 years until entering Cardigan Nursing Home in 1997.

Mrs. Dean was an avid homemaker and gardener. She served as President of the Cohasset Garden Club from 1957 to 1958, and was made an Honorary member in 1985. She taught Sunday school at St. Stephen's Church for more than a decade and later chaired the crafts table for the Cohasset Village Fair for many years. She was a talented seamstress and is remembered for the many outfits she smocked for her grandchildren.

Wife of the late John H. Dean, who died in 1997, Mrs. Dean leaves two sons, Charles W. Dean and John Stuart Dean both of Cohasset, a daughter, Emilie "Mimi" McBride of Chevy Chase, Md., and seven grandchildren: Charles Dean, Jr. of Cohasset, Webster McBride and Morley McBride of Chevy Chase, Md., and Benjamin D. Dean of San Francisco, and Alida Dean, Carl Dean, and Erica Dean of Cohasset; a sister, Martha W. Sparrow, of East Dennis.

Arrangements were handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

A memorial service will be held at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset at 11 a.m. on Nov. 21.

In lieu of flowers contributions in Libby's memory may be made to Cardigan Nursing Home Activities Fund, Cardigan Nursing Home, 59 Country Way, Scituate, MA 02066.

Penny drive

Children in St. Anthony Parish's religious education program are holding an Afghan Children's Penny Drive during the month of November. More than $200 has been collected to date: donation baskets are at church exits and in the parish center. Also, students in grades 6 to 8 will host a bake sale for the fund after the 9.30 a.m. Mass on Sunday, Nov. 1.

The annual men's winter clothing drive will be held Nov. 17, and 18, to benefit St. Francis House, a homeless shelter and rehabilitation center in Boston. Donations will be taken at the parish center on Saturday, Nov. 17, from 4 to 7 p.m. and on Sunday, Nov. 18, from 7:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. only.

Mike Snowdale and Jason Brown

Cohasset dynamic one-two offensive punch came up big once again in the biggest football game in many years in Cohasset to help the Skippers knock off SSL rival Abington to remain unbeaten and move all alone into first place in the League. Snowdale, a junior quarterback, completed 8-of-13 passes for 86 yards, including a TD pass, and caught a pass himself from Brown for 20 yards on a trick play to help keep the Skippers game winning drive alive. Brown, a senior captain, finished with 103 yards rushing and two TDs.

Skippers ride wave to victory

Cohasset gridders take thrilling battle of the unbeatens over Abington, 20-16

20-16, Cohasset.

The undefeated Skippers took on the undefeated Green Wave of Abington last Friday in a match-up of the best two teams in the South Shore League. Cohasset survived, leaving it two wins away from its first undefeated season since 1959.

"It was so great to do it in front of what seemed like the whole town," said smiling fourth year coach Tony Rolfe, just minutes after the clock ran out on Abington.

Thousands of residents from both towns came out to watch the two unbeatens collide, and no one could go home saying they didn't see the best game in the SSL this year. This game featured five lead changes, and more momentum shifts than could be counted.

Cohasset started the scoring in the second quarter, when Abington gambled and lost on a fourth-and-two from their own 48-yard line. Cohassset took over on downs, and proceeded to drive down the field with impressive precision.

The drive culminated in junior quarterback Mike Snowdale finding sophomore wideout Chris Bilodeau for a 10- yard touchdown. Snowdale completed the day completing 8-of-13 passes for 86 yards, in addition to his 13th touchdown pass of the season.

Bilodeau was by far the most productive receiver on either team, tallying six catches for 74 yards.

Abington struck back later in the quarter, with quarterback Matt Bryan driving the Green Wave 64 yards, capping it off with a one yard QB sneak for the score. Bryan completed the two point conversion, hitting Tom McSharry, his favorite receiver, in the back of the end zone.

Abington carried its 8-6 lead all the way into the fourth quarter, when Skipper safety David Bouchard, a senior, picked off a Bryan pass over the middle, and ran it down inside the Abington red zone. On the next play, senior tailback Jason Brown stepped his way into the end zone to give the lead back to Cohasset.

Abington struck back on their ensuing possession, senior Bob Lacerda rushing for a touchdown and receiving for the two point conversion, giving his team a 16-12 lead with under five minutes remaining.

Cohasset fans were on the edges of their seats, to say the least, when the Skippers faced a third-and-10 at midfield, needing a touchdown for the win. Snowdale handed off to Brown, only to surprise the Abington secondary by sprinting downfield to haul in a 20-yard return pass from Brown (last year's starting QB) to sustain the drive.

"I was so proud of the coaching staff, and I was so proud of the kids," effused Rolfe about that play. "We have saved it for this game."

The play ignited the Skipper offense, and Brown eventually recorded his second touchdown of the quarter, a five yarder.

With a minute left, it was only a matter of letting the clock run off. This was a matter of thwarting

SSL rival Norton boots Cohasset soccer team from post-season

There was no need for introductions.

And there was no guessing to what kind of strategy each of the teams were going to use or even who the key players on both sides were.

By the time the Cohasset High boys soccer team arrived at Wheaton College in Norton to play the Norton High Lancers on Tuesday afternoon, the two teams were very familiar to each other.

During the South Shore League season, they had played to a tie and Norton had managed a victory in the other contest.

This time, the stakes were higher with a spot in the Div. 3 South semifinals at stake.

And it was Norton who was able to advance with a 3-0 win over the Skippers to end Cohasset's season.

"We haven't been able to finish plays all year long," said Skipper coach Dave Nigro. "We're pretty even teams, but when it came right down to it, it wasn't

StingRays slay Dragons in Peewee Super Bowl

The Old Colony Youth Football League PeeWee Division 5 Super Bowl was hosted by Scituate this past Sunday on a perfect fall football day. The game was between division rivals,the Duxbury Green Dragons (6-0-2) and Scituate/Cohasset StingRays (5-1-1). This was the third match of the year between these two teams with Duxbury winning the first game 8-6 and a tie of 8-8 in the second game.

Duxbury's head coach Jack Shields and Scituate's head coach Ralph Froio both complimented one another's teams throughout the year and were happy to be again pit their two evenly matched teams in competition in the Super Bowl.

The game lived up to everyone's expectations. In a thrilling hard fought battle, the StingRays seized the victory by a 14-6 final score.

After a long opening kickoff by Derek St. Peter of the StingRays, Kevin Ayala recovered the kick for the StingRays giving them the ball with excellent field position. After successive runs by Mike Froio, Nick Lombardo and Kyle Crowley, Dean Kennedy faked a handoff to fullback Rob Carlezon and scampered around left end behind the lead blocking of Chris O'Brien and Kyle Crowley for a 25 yard touchdown run.

Rob Carlezon powered into the end zone behind the blocking of Frank Dixon, Nick Savage and Chris Munson for the key extra point.

The StingRays league-leading defense shut down Duxbury's power running attack for the rest of the first quarter. Led by the Judge twins, Mike and Danny, with great pressure and the

Although their record might not have indicated it, this year's very young golf team should be expecting big things in the future.

With 18 of 21 players returning, Cohasset's golf squad might very well contend for a league title as soon as next fall. Also, the fact that they had so many underclassmen this year shows how well they are loaded further down the line.

The three seniors of the team—Will Moody, Robin Murphy and Matt O'Grodnik— all had very solid seasons for the Skippers.

Moody, the team's captain, was the leader of the team through and through. Always at Miliken Field improving his short game, Moody completed a fine career this season with an impressive year at the number two position.

"Moody's leadership was phenomenal," lauded coach Torin Sweeney. "It was the best I could have asked for. He was great with the younger kids, and he was always willing to do anything for the team."

Murphy completed his first and only season of golf with his best rounds of the year, shooting a 42, 42, and 43. Murphy was a varsity left-fielder last spring for the baseball team, when golf was still a spring sport at C.H.S., but his contributions on the links this fall were noteworthy.

"Robin really finished the season strong," offered Sweeney. "He just missed going to the All-League

Abington's last chance Hail Marys down the sideline, which the Skippers did.

In addition to Brown's 103 yards rushing, he was also one of the top defensive performers for Cohasset, tying senior Chris Caron for the team lead in tackles with six.

Senior Paul Previte, junior Cosimo Cambi, and sophomore Tony Truglia all had five tackles, and Truglia recovered a fumble in the first half to halt an Abington drive.

Junior Chris McKenna had three tackles and an interception on Abington's first possession, firing up the Cohasset crowd.

Going into the game, Rolfe had no reserve in admitting his team was the underdog in this match-up. Facing the most potent offense they have seen all year, he was more than pleased with the effort he saw.

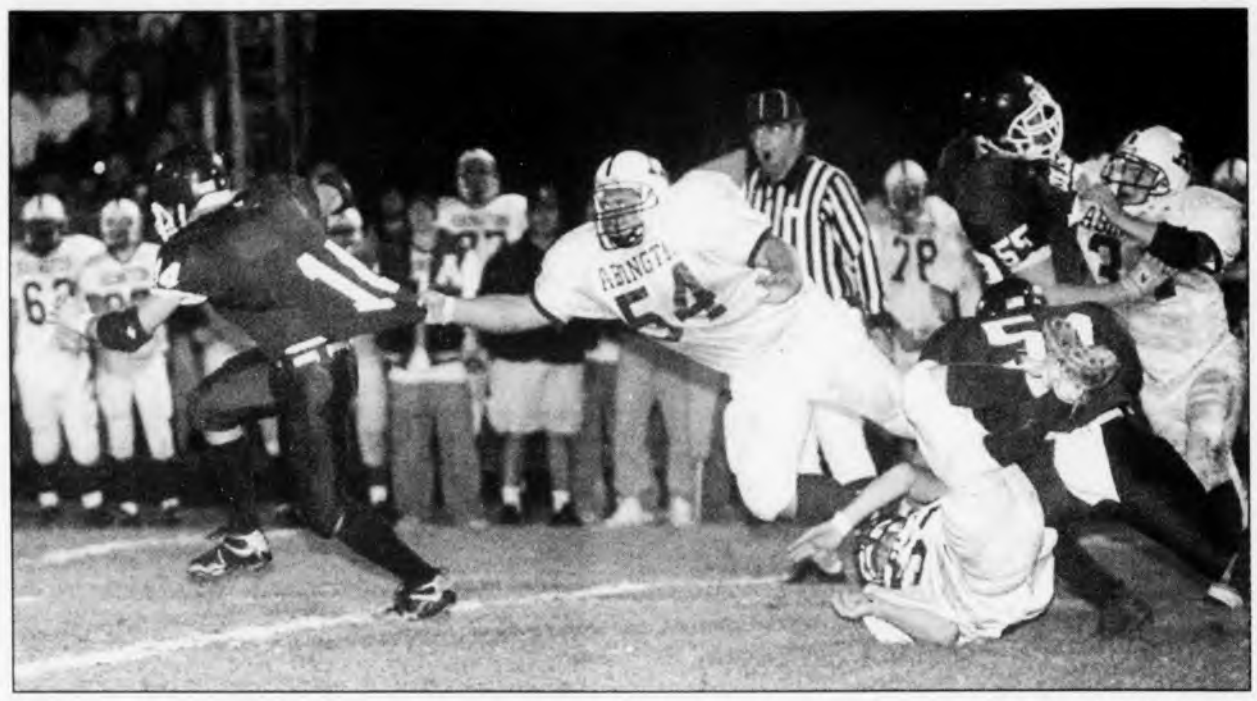
"We thought we could hold them to three (touchdowns)," he said, revealing his pre-game notions. "That was our goal, and maybe even that was ambitious."

Cohasset is now one of only a handful of Eastern Massachusetts schools without anything in the loss column. Cohasset can clinch the South Shore League next week, when Norwell plays host to the Skippers.

Norwell played even with Abington two weeks ago, but turnovers allowed the Green to get the better of the Clippers, 14-0. This did not, however, keep Norwell from dominating Norton last week, 34-0.

For right now, however, the Skippers are just basking in the glory of their recent win. And while I strongly considered closing this article with a corny cliche along the lines of "The Skippers navigated the Green Wave," I think 8-0 says it much better.

Game Notes



-The two teams combined for only three penalties (one declined), but nine turnovers.

-Bob Lacerda and Mike Miller, Abington's feared rushing tandem, combined for 149 yards.

-Abington QB Matt Bryan completed only one of his final 10 passes, including 0-for-6 in the fourth quarter.

-The Skippers have averaged 20.6 points a game this season.

-Cohasset will need to average 218 points a game for their last two contests to break the Massachusetts record for points scored in a season.

Let's do it again, C.H.S. football fans!

Thank you Cohasset football fans! The weather was perfect for the fans and they made a spectacular showing to root the unbeaten Skippers (8-0) on to their biggest victory of the season on Friday, a 20-16 win over previously unbeaten Abington. The Gridiron Club extends an invitation to all to support the team again this Friday, Nov. 9, at Norwell High (6 p.m. kickoff). Be a part of the adventure to help send this team to the Super Bowl by cheerign them to a victory against the Clippers.

consistent tackling by the front line of Eric Selander, Rob Carlezon, Chris Mogan and Derek St. Peter, the StingRays shutout the Green Dragons in the first quarter.

The vaunted passing attack of Will Shields, Ian Whitney and Michael Dimatteo led to the Green Dragons 32-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter. The StingRays got tough and tackled Will Shields attempt for the extra point. StingRays led at the halt 8-6.

The halftime show was awesome as the StingRay Cheerleaders and the Green Dragon cheerleaders put on dazzling displays. The girls were instrumental all year in motivating the StingRays and entertaining the crowds.

The second half opened with a nice return by Alec Livingstone. Joe Barisano alternated with Dean Kennedy at QB, running a nice series of plays with Marty Noenickx running behind Mike Fassnacht , Brian O'Reilly, James Reichardt and David Gordon for the series best gain.

The Scituate defense shut down the Green Dragons in the third quarter led by some key tackles and plays by John McKenna, Kenton Toney, Jake Simpson, John Wells, Paul Pozniak and Cody Adamson.

After a scoreless third, the Green Dragons were marching down the field, throwing the ball successfully, until Rob Carlezon pressured the quarterback and Dean Kennedy made a sensational interception and returned it 70 yards for a touchdown to put the StingRays ahead 14-6. On the ensuing kickoff Kevin Ayala, Kurt Ohrenberger and TJ Chamberlain were in on the tackle. With Duxbury going to the air again and threatening a tie, Kyle Crowley picked off a pass on a tip from John McKenna to seal Duxbury's fate.

Scituate ran some nice finishing plays led by the blocking of Nick Lieberman, Sean McQuaid, Joey Leary, Derek Schwatner and Charlie Taylor. TJ Devane, despite an early season injury, supported the team all year showing great character.

Scituate/Cohasset head coach Ralph Froio, Offensive Coordinators Ed Crowley and John Lombardo, and the defensive coaches, Al St. Peter and Rick Judge, were very thankful to all the parents and volunteers and especially to Scituate president Joe Obert for all his work in setting up the division five program.

StingRays mites play Hingham to scoreless tie in Super Bowl

The Scituate/Cohasset Stingrays played Hingham to a scoreless draw in last Sunday's Mite C division Super Bowl at Scituate High School.

"It was a tough defensive battle for both teams," said Stingrays Coach Bob Jones. "Both teams were very physical. My hat is off to Defensive Coach Sean Dias. He did a great job with the boys this year.

"Neither team was able to move the ball on offense in the first half. We made a few adjustments at half time that worked well in the second half, but we just weren't able to punch the ball into the end zone."

That's not exactly true. The Stingrays did manage to score in the first half when quarterback Robert Jones ran around right end for an apparent 45 yard touchdown. Unfortunately, it was called back for an alleged clip.

Captains John Maher, Craig Dias , Robert Jones along with Westley Hawkins all had an outstanding game.

" These boy were the backbone of the team this year," said coach Jones. "They always played their hearts out."

our day."

For most of the first half, it looked like a typical defensive struggle as both teams struggled to get scoring opportunities. Norton finished the first half with four shots to the Skippers' three.

Norton had the best scoring chance early, but Cohasset keeper Jesse Brewer made the save off a Lancer header.

With 3:20 left in the first half, the Lancers got on the scoreboard as Dan Kelly took a pass from Mike Navedo and drilled a shot into the Skipper net from 20 yards out. Mike Navedo picked up the assist.

"Getting the first goal was key for us," said Norton coach Ed Smith. "We had to dig out of hole when we played them (in the regular season)."

Norton scoring sensation Mike Navedo was able to escape good defensive coverage by the Skippers to head a shot into the Cohasset net off a kick by Justin Warren at the 7:12 mark of the second half.

"Mike Navedo is such a force that he is going to draw a lot of coverage," said Smith. "He is working extra hard for his shots and working hard to get the ball."

With all of the coverage Navedo is receiving defensively, the other Lancers have had to help out in the scoring department.

Warren gave the Lancers their third goal with 22:02 left as he fired a shot into the top left corner for a 3-0 lead.

"We didn't create a lot of opportunities," said Nigro. "They played better than we did."

Cohasset's Matt Bilodeau had an opportunity to spoil Norton keeper Peter Brooks' shutout in the second half at the 24 minute mark with Norton holding on to a 2-0 lead. Unfortunately for the Skippers, his shot just went a little wide.

Greg O'Connell played a solid game at sweeper for Cohasset.

With the exception of his lone score, the Skippers defense kept Navedo in close check.

Next year, the Skippers and the Lancers won't meet in the regular season. Norton is leaving for the Tri-Valley League, but don't count out future tournament matches.

"Seven out of the eight teams left in the tournament were from both of the leagues," said Smith. "You want to play different teams in the tournament, but we were both very familiar with each."

That's why there was no need for the pre-game introductions.

C.H.S. sports captains honored

This past fall, the Cohasset High School Athletic Department was led by a group of exceptional team captains. On Thursday, Oct. 25, these 13 student-athletes were honored at a breakfast hosted by Cohasset Athletic Director Ron Ford and Cohasset High Principal Dr. Michael Jones. The Cohasset High School administration and coaching staff would like to thank these student-athletes for their leadership, dedication and spirit exhibitedon the playing fields, as well as in the classrooms and hallways of our school.

The team captains honored were:

for girls soccer, Carlie Carter, Maggie O'Neil and Kate Grimm.

for boys soccer, Tim Baird, Matt Bilodeau and Peter Maitland for field hockey, Abbey Coakley and Heather Peraino for football, Jason Brown, Paul Previte, Will Prendergast and Liam Martin for golf, Will Moody.

Another converted baseball player, O'Grodnik played very consistently at the number 5 position.

"He might have been even stronger if this wasn't his first season," offered the coach, making note of the seasonal switch from spring to fall.

Moving to the fall season for the first time in school history, Cohasset lost its three top players. Ace Will Prendergast and Dave Bouchard fulfilled their obligations to the football team, while Jay Bertovich played soccer this fall.

This line-up would have featured Prendergast at the first position, Bertovich second and then Bouchard. Such a good line-up, in fact, that this year's ace, freshman DJ Silvia, would have played fourth.

"It was a tough year to switch," affirmed Sweeney, "but in time, we will attract some more baseball and lacrosse players."

Silvia had a terrific rookie season, earning his way to the top spot. He, Moody, and junior Greg O'Brien all competed at the All-League meet at Squirrel Run in Plymouth, all shooting in the low 70s. Silvia shot an 84 at the All-State competition, good for 24th place in the 60-player field.

Silvia was one of 11 freshmen on the team. Next year, though, there should be quite a battle for playing spots since the roster of 21 will be reduced to 14.

"I hope that is a good influence for the group that scored well to play some more in the off-season," said the head coach. "It will be interesting to see how it plays out."

Kahn wraps up solid soph campaign at Swarthmore

NOTES FROM THE NEXT LEVEL

Jackie Kahn, a 2000 graduate of Cohasset High, finished her sophomore season as a starting forward for the Swarthmore College women's soccer team with four goals and an assist. Her nine points tied her for second in scoring for the Garnet Tide, who play in the Division 3 Centennial Conference. Kahn, a two-sport standout at Swarthmore and former captain of the Lady Skippers lacrosse team, was named to the Conference's weekly athletics honor roll for her game-winning goal against Washington College, the first of her career. Swarthmore finished the season at 8-8, tying the school record for most victories in a season.

Davis sets up on the line

Former Cohasset High football captain Craig Davis, a 2001 graduate, had earned a starting job on the offensive line for Stonehill's varsity football team as a freshman until a sprained ankle last week put him on the shelf.

Interestingly, Davis, a 2000 Mariner All-Scholastic selection, is playing alongside former South Shore League rival Rob Scully, Hull's standout quarterback the last few season who also graduated this past spring. Scully has been receiving some playing time at wide receiver.

Davis has not yet declared a college major. According to his father, though, Craig is presently leaning towards teaching and football coaching.

Squirt C-2 team stymies Braintree

COASTAL STARS GAME OF THE WEEK

One of the more interesting characteristics of an athlete's life is their devotion to superstitions. We see this belief in superstitions in all sports, but nowhere are the superstitions as bizarre as in the game of hockey. Ask any parent whose child has adopted "the I won't wash my uniform until we lose" superstition and you'll certainly get a sense of just how truly bizarre these superstitions can be.

Well sports superstitions don't apply just to athletes. They also apply to fans. With these superstitions come a universal code of conduct that all fans are to honor, less they suffer the consequences. And so it was this past Sunday morning at Hobomock Arena in Pembroke that the wrath of the hockey gods almost fell on the Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 team as a near shutout and standout performance by goalie John Carrigg was almost put in jeopardy by an overzealous fan not honoring the long held superstition of not mentioning the possibility of a shutout until the clock has ticked its final second.

The drama of this game started Thursday evening when Coach Mike White got a call from two star players, brothers Kyle and Tyler Anderson, saying they couldn't play in the upcoming game. The call left Coach White in need of a talented forward and steady goaltender. White recruited another Star Squirt - C goalie, Carrigg to fill in. And fill in he did!

The Stars found themselves in a battle with an always competitive Braintree squad. The game was evenly played throughout and it wasn't until midway through the first period that Star center, Connor White, capitalized on his own aggressive forechecking to break in unassisted for the game's first goal.

With the Stars up 1-0 going into the second, the game became a defensive showcase. In spite of the outstanding play of defensemen Kevin Dougherty, Joe Dixon, and Sean Rullis, the Braintree forwards peppered Carrigg with a seemingly uninterrupted volley.

The defensive tone shifted early in the third when Star forward Willie Meech received the puck from linemate Joe Fitzimmons, and on an inspiring individual effort beat one forward, went by a first defenseman, and after being tripped by a second defenseman put the puck past the Braintree goalie for the Stars' second goal.

With the Stars up by two, White, and his wily veteran assistants Brian Daugherty and Mike Maher, instructed their troops to put the focus back on defense. Once again the Stars responded as the imposing forechecking of Phil Murphy coupled with the disciplined hustle of Mike Maher kept Braintree off the board. The Star's only notable offensive barrage came from the stick of Marshfield sniper Mike Payne who just missed putting the game out of reach as he hit a couple of goal posts.

Having completely thwarted the Braintree attack, and with five minutes left, the unspoken potential of a shutout began to creep into the minds of players and fans. The players remained silent, and all fans knowing the superstition that prohibited the mention of a shutout until the game ends, kept silent too. Then with less than two minutes left Braintree pulled their goalie and put on an extra skater. Just as the extra forward hit the ice the clamor from the fans became too loud to ignore as one fan boldly predicted a shutout. And sure enough, just as superstition would have it Braintree scored to come within one.

The Stars quickly regrouped and applied enough defensive intensity to shut down the Braintree onslaught for the final minute and a half.

A relieved and beleaguered Coach White said it was a thrilling game characterized by superlative team defense and another novice fan being indoctrinated into the wonderful world of hockey superstitions.

ELLMS MEADOW WELL FIELD
LEGAL NOTICE
TOWN OF COHASSET
BOARD OF WATER COMMISSIONERS

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS

ELLMS MEADOW WELL FIELD

Sealed bids for the "ELLMS MEADOW WELL FIELD" will be received at the Office of the Town Manager at Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, MA 02025, until November 28, 2001 prevailing time on 10:00 AM. The sealed bids will be publicly opened and read aloud at the office of the Town Manager at 10:00 AM prevailing time on November 28, 2001.

The work includes replacing the existing well field with six new wells and an above ground manifold pipe, in addition to miscellaneous appurtenances. The project also includes developing the new well field and testing.

This project is the first stage in the Town's effort to replace the existing Ellms Meadow Well Field water supply source. The second phase will replace the existing pumping facility and structure.

The CONTRACT DOCUMENTS may be examined at the following locations:

1) Office of the Engineer, Tutela Engineering Associates, Inc., 12 Bay Street, Wilmington, MA 01887

2) Dodge Reports

Copies of the CONTRACT DOCUMENTS may be obtained between the hours of 8:30 AM to 4:00 PM, weekdays at the Office of the Engineer, Tutela Engineering Associates, Inc., 12 Bay Street, Wilmington, MA 01887, upon payment of a refundable $50.00 company check (payable to the "Town of Cohasset") for each set.

Contract documents and plans will be mailed upon request and receipt of a separate non-refundable check made out to Tutela Engineering Associates, Inc. for $50.00 to cover handling and mailing costs.

Any BIDDER, upon returning the CONTRACT DOCUMENTS promptly and in good condition will be refunded his payment. Any non-bidder shall forfeit his deposit if he does not return the documents prior to the bid opening.

A certified check or satisfactory bid bond issued by a company authorized to do business in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, payable to the Town of Cohasset in an amount of not less than five percent (5%) of the Total Bid Price must be furnished by each bidder together with a letter of intent on the form provided. This proposal guarantee will be returned after the Contract has been executed.

Work is conditional upon receiving authorization of funding at the November Town Meeting. The project is scheduled to be completed during the coming winter season (2001-2002).

A performance bond and a labor-material payment bond issued by a company authorized to do business in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts will be required of the successful bidder. These bonds and the certificate of insurance on form ACORD 25-S (3/88) as amended MUST be delivered to the Town of Cohasset Town Manager within ten (10) days of award. The five percent (5%) bid bond will not be returned to the successful bidder until the one hundred percent (100%) performance bond has been established in satisfactory form. The performance bond is to be in effect for one year beyond completion of the project.

No bid may be withdrawn for a period of 60 days subsequent to the opening thereof without permission of the Town of Cohasset Town Manager.

The Town of Cohasset Town Manager reserves the right to reject any or all bids, waive any informalities in the bidding, or accept the bid deemed to be in the best interests of the Town of Cohasset.

The successful BIDDER shall be required to comply with the applicable State and Federal prevailing wage laws.

3A rush-hour traffic diverted

Cohasset police diverted rush-hour traffic off Route 3A last Friday evening for nearly half-an-hour following a two-car accident that sent two women to the hospital. Police said Lisa A. Wilson, 34, of Whitman was travelling north on Route 3A [King Street] in a 1993 Toyota, which collided at about 5:30 p.m. with a 1998 Saturn driven by Katherine Roth, 19, of 33 Riverview Drive, Cohasset. Roth had apparently tried to make a left onto 3A from a parking lot at 130 King St. [near Cohasset Food Mart]. Sgt. Robert Jackson said.

Jackson said there was heavy damage to both vehicles and ambulances from Scituate and Cohasset were used to transport the women to the hospital. Roth was issued a citation for failing to grant the right-of-way, he said.

Police diverted 3A southbound traffic down lower King Street. Northbound traffic was diverted down Sohier Street. Jackson said home football games at Scituate and Cohasset high schools added to the amount of traffic that evening.

Paint globally, show locally

Mary Callahan displays at SAA gallery through Dec. 2

By Alice Coyle
ACOYLE@CNC.COM

When it comes to finding real inspiration for her work, watercolor artist Mary Callahan gladly travels far and wide to seek it out.

Watercolor paintings based on a recent trip to China are included in Callahan's latest show "At Home and Abroad," opening at the Scituate Arts Association gallery this week. Images of Italy, which has over the last several years become a home away from home for the Marshfield resident, also figure prominently in the exhibit.

"I love the country," Callahan say of Italy, where rolling, tree-lined hills in Tuscany have inspired show pieces like "Chianto Countryside" in its rich hues of green and the whimsical "Gentle Breeze" with its swaying clothesline laden with colorful garments.

Venice, too, is captured in Callahan's "Venetian Lights," another painting in the show which features a familiar sight —a gondolier transporting his passengers over indigo waters between homes and buildings in soft beige tones. When it comes to Italy's famous architecture, Callahan said she finds it impressive, but she is more drawn to natural scenes, she says. For instance, she may paint a beautiful archway, but draws you through it immediately to the lush landscapes lying beyond it.

A friend in Rome, gives Callahan a ready reason to visit the country often, but she rarely goes alone. Callahan instead brings with her a group of painters — recently as many as 18 —who serve to inspire each other while enjoying the incredible views.

And while her travels abroad are well represented in the show's works, so too is the beauty closer to home. Scenes from Boston— where as a Copley Master she often shows her work— and local color including a piece on Fourth Cliff has also made it into the show. Variety sets this exhibition apart from some others, says Callahan, who has been showing her work nearly as long as she's been painting full-time — 22 years.

Married at a young age, Callahan has raised five daughters, several of whom inherited their mother's artistic nature, she says.

"A couple of them are artists," said Callahan. "One paints and the other teaches film at Mass Art."

Family life no doubt kept Callahan occupied, but since 1979, she's made watercolor painting her full-time job.

Watercolor is Callahan's favorite medium for several reasons, she says.

"I love the spontaneity of it. I have an idea and I just do it."

Her work sometimes begins as a small painting done at the scene which is then used as a sort of model for her larger final work. Photographs and her own memories of a place help fill in the canvas too, she said.

Artistic from an early age, Callahan said she had no formal art training when she got hooked on watercolor painting. Ten years ago she finished her art degree Bridgewater State College, something she said she had wanted to do for many years. But her schooling came after years as an accomplished artist and art teacher. A member of the North River Arts Society and the South Shore Art Center, Callahan has taught classes for both organizations. She has also taught at the Ellison Center for the Arts in Duxbury.

Showing her work locally, in Boston and in national exhibits also keeps Callahan busy. She earned a silver medal in the Allied Artists of America show in New York City three years ago and will take part in that show again this year. And she's looking forward to this month's show in Scituate. All of the work displayed can be purchased and over the years, Callahan has sold many paintings. "One thing I find is when someone buys one piece they often buy another from me, which is nice," she said.

"At Home and Abroad," will run through Dec. 2 and an artists reception will be held Sunday, Nov. 11 at the Scituate Arts Association's Front Street gallery. For more information on the show or the artist call (781) 545-6150.

Loony Tunes

Score one for Marshfield composer

By Gregory Mathis
GMATHIS@CNC.COM

At just 23, Marshfield native James Bernardinelli is putting his composing talent to work by providing the score to Boston-based dance theater group, Monkeyhouse Homecoming's new production.

James Bernardinelli takes his music seriously. But that doesn't mean the young composer's work is all that serious.

Unless of course you consider the score from Bugs Bunny to be on par with the "Schindler's List" soundtrack.

Bernardinelli, who describes his musical creations as "cartoonish-style — very silly and fun," draws his inspiration from Saturday morning cartoons.

It was the funny and intelligent style of the 23-year-old Marshfield native that caught the attention of a Boston-based dance theater group, which was searching for offbeat sounds to take on its North American tour.

"Two-and-a-half, three years ago, James did this cabaret act that caught my attention," said Karen Krolak, founder of Monkeyhouse Homecoming, Boston's only professional dance theater collective. "It was a funny and intelligent piece. I've been aware and in touch with him since."

When looking for music for Monkeyhouse's offbeat production, "Another Femme Fatale Freak Show," Krolak's path once again crossed with Bernardinelli.

"James had just finished burning a CD this spring when we were putting together the music for the show," said Krolak. "It was like it was made for us… how quirky."

Bernardinelli, who graduated from Marshfield High School in 1997, jumped at the chance of sharing his music with the touring group.

He was contacted by Amelia O'Dowd, a friend of his working for Monkeyhouse.

"She was interested in five or six of the pieces for the show," Bernardinelli. "I jumped at the chance and gave them whatever they wanted."

Bernardinelli will get his first opportunity this week to view the show and see how his music was incorporated

"I'm still waiting to see the show," he said. "I'm excited to see it. I've never had anything used by a group of artists on tour."

Now in the final leg of its tour of North America, Monkeyhouse Homecoming will be returning to Boston this week for its final three shows, Nov. 8-10 at Mobius, Inc., located on Congress Street in Boston. The quirky sounds of Bernardinelli match up nicely with the bizarre and offbeat nature of the "Freak Show," which features lots of glitz and glitter, and strongly encourages audiences to don eccentric attire for the performances.

The production also features the music of Combustible Edison, a Boston-based band with a "very jazzy sound," according to Krolak.

Krolak said the production has been met with an enthusiastic response in each of the cities they've visited across the United States and Canada, and one of the most talked about components of the show is the music.

"People in different cities come up and ask where the music comes from," said Krolak. "They can't believe it comes from a 23 year old."

Bernardinelli, a fifth year student at Mass. College of Art, is majoring in Studio for Interrelated Media (SIM) after studying film for two years at Mass. Art. The medium major incorporates many facets of art, including video, sound, performance and sculpture.

He has been working mainly with sound over the last couple of years as he continues to work toward his goal of creating film scores.

Bernardinelli's college work includes a musical score to accompany a video done by a fellow student at college, which he described as "very dramatic and surreal." He has also composed music for a live performance done by a friend and had done music for a stop-motion animated film.

"I'm always looking to explore different sounds," Bernardinelli said, who lists film music composer Danny Elfman and film director Tim Burton as major influences.

"And I grew up on John Williams," said Bernardinelli, who took part in the drama program at Marshfield High School. "I think "Return of the Jedi" was the first soundtrack I listened to."

Krolak said Bernardinelli's music covers a wide range, producing a complicated and intriguing sound.

He's an extraordinary talent."Krolak said. "

Monkeyhouse brings 'Freak Show' to Boston

Monkeyhouse Homecoming will present its Boston premiere of "Another Femme Fatale Freak Show" at Mobius, located at 354 Congress Avenue, Boston, on November 8 - 10.

Monkeyhouse founder Karen Krolak is joined by members Nicole Harris, Beth McGuire, and Amelia O'Dowd to form Boston's only professional dance theater collective.

"Another Femme Fatale Freak Show" is a sexy, satirical, sometimes silly and certainly surreal series of short dance theater vignettes. It investigates the role our expectations play in constructing our perceptions of ourselves and determining our relationship with others.

As the title implies, emphasis is placed on issues and cultural perceptions of Gen-X feminine identity. Each of the four female characters is a gloriously exaggerated stereotype: the radical intellectual, the earnest ingenue, the timid tomboy, and the essential siren. Some of the highlights include: a mischievous duet wherein one woman's hand is always attached to another's head; a sardonic prediction of the mail order bride business performed on stilts; a tap dancer tethered by a telephone cord to another performer; a coy solo about the awkwardness of infatuation.

Mobius presents Monkeyhouse in three outlandish Boston homecoming performances of "Another Femme Fatale Freak Show" Thursday, Nov. 8, Friday, Nov. 9 and Saturday, Nov.10, at 354 Congress Avenue, Boston. All performances are at 8 p.m. Tickets are available through Mobius at 617-542-7416 or click to www.mobius.org.

The Tick comes alive on Fox TV

Pembroke native behind big blue insect

By Valerie Kroon
CORRESPONDENT

Pembroke resident Richard Edlund Pembroke will be one proud viewer when he sits down to watch his son's first showing of "The Tick" on prime time this Thursday.

Created by cartoonist and SLRHS graduate Ben Edlund, the show's first segment will be aired over Fox, Channel 25, at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 8.

Nine episodes of "The Tick" have been filmed thus far, Richard Edlund said.

Ben Edlund created "The Tick" while still a student at Silver Lake Regional High School. He graduated in 1986 and saw his first comic book on "The Tick" published in the spring of 1987.

"The Tick" later was developed into a cartoon series, an animated show aired over the Fox children's network. The show ran "just shy of three years," Edlund said. The series of 39 episodes was then shown over Comedy Central.

"It got a pretty good airing between the two networks," Edlund said.

Now "The Tick" will come alive in the action thriller. The very large all-blue insect who searches out and attempts to destroy evil is being played by Patrick Warburton. Warburton is best remembered for his role as Puddy on "Seinfeld."

Edlund notes that, while his son's show will be airing opposite "Survivor: Africa," the ratings of the newest "Survivor" show are not up to what previous segments have garnered.

"It is showing in prime time, and we'll see where it goes from there," Edlund said of the show's initial time slot.

Edlund says he's been having fun, tuning into the World Series games and seeing Fox advertise "The Tick's" upcoming opening segment. The message is put on the screen electronically, announcing "'The Tick' is coming to Fox Thursday."

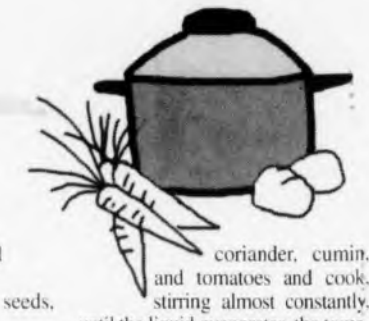
Ben, Karen and their daughter Ezra, born Aug. 16, were in Pembroke for a week in October. Ezra is Richard Edlund's first grandchild.

"It was busy here," he reports of the visit. "A lot of people stopped by and a lot of their friends keep late hours."

While Ben Edlund lived for awhile in New York in the early 1990s, he is now living and working in Los Angeles.

Edlund said his son first showed artistic talent when he started drawing around the age of two. And, artistic talent appears to be "in the genes."

Richard and Lucia Edlund met while both were students at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts. Lucia, the former head librarian of the Pembroke Library, was majoring in sculpture. She died in 1990.



Richard Edlund is now retired, having worked as a designer. He is known for having created the bee that sits on top of the cupola at the former Pembroke Center Library building, now the Senior Center. The couple's oldest son Nick works as a designer for Barnes and Noble.

"We were all into the arts," the senior Edlund said.

Ben Edlund created "The Tick" while still a student at Silver Lake Regional High School. He graduated in 1986 and saw his first comic book on "The Tick" published in the spring of 1987.

Indian-Style Lamb Stew

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

American beef stew is satisfying, dependable, and, unfortunately, a bit dull. With just a few flavoring additions, the use of lamb instead of beef, and a couple of changes in cooking method, I set out to transform an American classic into something special.

I started with a boned leg of lamb weighing in at 3 3/4 pounds. After trimming away the fat and silverskin I was left with 3 1/4 pounds of lamb which easily serves six. In order to reduce cooking time, I cut the lamb into 1-inch cubes, which allows it to cook to the point of being tender in just an hour. Although all stew recipes call for browning the meat, I knew that Indian curries do not include this step since Indian cooks prefer a brighter flavor, one in which the taste of the spices shine through. I tested both methods, however, and preferred the stew with browned lamb. It had a deeper, darker flavor and, in this particular recipe, this richer flavor married well with the spices.

Next, I investigated flavorings. I quickly eliminated cilantro and chiles, ingredients that are often found in restaurant versions of this dish. Sticking closer to an authentic Indian combination of spices, I settled on the foursome cinnamon, cloves, cumin, and coriander married to garlic and ginger. (I found that the cumin and coriander are best purchased whole, not ground, for maximum flavor. They are then ground at home in a coffee grinder.) Over the years, I have discovered that the essence of Indian curries is the method by which the flavors of the spices are released. To release their full flavors, spices need to be fried in oil for at least 5 minutes. This is where Americanized versions of Indian recipes often fall short – we simply sauté them briefly or add them to vast amounts of liquids. Neither method is effective in producing full flavors. After much testing, I finally settled on sautéing the onion, cinnamon, and cloves and then adding the remaining spices along with the ginger, garlic, and tomatoes. This mixture is then cooked for 5 top 6 minutes or until the oil starts to separate out and turn orange. (This separating of the oil is the key moment in preparing this dish – this ensures that the flavor of the spices have blossomed.)

Other ingredients included 2 cups of chopped tomatoes (canned work fine here) as well as 2 1/2 cups chicken stock (water tasted flat). A small food processor can be pressed into service for puréeing the garlic and ginger – just add one or two tablespoons of water. This will prevent the garlic from burning in the pan and also makes the puréeing process easier since the garlic is less likely to stick to the processor. You can also use a garlic press if you like.

INDIAN-STYLE LAMB STEW

This dish is great served over rice and accompanied with root vegetables, especially carrots and parsnips.

3 tablespoons vegetable oil

1 boneless leg of lamb, about 3 1/2-4 pounds trimmed of visible fat and silverskin and cut into 1-inch chunks

Salt and freshly ground pepper

1 1 1/2-inch piece of cinnamon stick

2 onions cut into 1/ 2-inch dice

6 medium garlic cloves, pressed or puréed

1 2-inch piece ginger, grated or puréed

1 tablespoon coriander seeds, ground

1 tablespoon cumin seeds, ground

4 medium ripe tomatoes cut into 1/2-inch dice, about 2 cups, or equal amount whole canned tomatoes chopped, Muir Glen preferred, or canned diced tomatoes, drained

2 1/2 cups chicken stock

1. Heat a large heavy duty Dutch oven or deep skillet or sauté pan over medium high heat. Liberally season the lamb cubes with salt and pepper. Brown the lamb in batches adding one additional tablespoon of oil as needed. Set browned meat aside. Lower the heat to medium-low and add one more tablespoon of oil. Add the cinnamon stick, cloves and onion and sauté for 5 to 6 minutes or until the onion is softened and just beginning color. Add the garlic, ginger, coriander, cumin, and tomatoes and cook, stirring almost constantly, until the liquid evaporates, the tomatoes soften, the oil separates and turns orange and the spices become very aromatic, about 5 to 6 additional minutes.

2. Add the meat and chicken stock to the pan and stir to combine with the other ingredients, scraping the browned bits from the bottom of the pan. Raise the heat to medium-high and bring liquid to a boil. Lower heat to maintain a gentle simmer and cook for about 1 hour (this time may vary) or until the lamb is very tender and the liquid has thickened. Adjust seasonings with salt and pepper. Serve immediately over rice, basmati preferred.

Astral week

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7

Conflicting planetary influences can make for a hectic day. The Cancer moon becomes inactive at 2:10 a.m. until 3:34 a.m., when a Leo moon takes over. The Leo moon opposes Neptune at 2:08 p.m. and Mars at 4:58 p.m., warning you to slow down. Stay alert and use common sense. The planet Mercury moves into Scorpio at 2:53 p.m., remaining there until November 26. You can initiate new projects, make long-range plans between 6:00-7:01 p.m., when the sun and Jupiter align.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8

The last quarter phase of the moon occurs at 7:21 a.m. The moon decreases in light until November 15, when the new moon culminates. Venus moves into Scorpio at 8:28 a.m., remaining there until December 2. Sidestep power struggles with others; be willing to make a concession or two. A lunar polarity to Uranus at 3:30 p.m. may disrupt the flow of the day. At this time the Leo moon becomes inactive. Kick back, relax and unwind this evening.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9

The moon enters Virgo at 6:49 a.m. This is a day to get things done. Make up a list of things to do and stick to it. Postpone launching new ventures or signing contracts until next week, however, when favorable influences occur. Instead, finish jobs already begun, review and redo, clean out and reorganize. Get back on track with diet, exercise and self-improvement programs.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 10

YesterdayÕs influences affect today as well. The Virgo moon continues active travel until 1:40 p.m. Stop worrying about situations you have no control over. Instead, make up a list of things to do and stay busy. Tackle jobs youÕve been putting off and get them out of the way. An applying alignment of Mercury/Neptune enhances imagination and creativity. On the other hand, this is not a time to make practical decisions or sign contracts. Be wary of business deals or financial ventures that sound too good to be true.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 11

Take a vacation from routine and responsibility; put career and domestic worries on the back burner. The moon enters Libra at 8:53 a.m., and Mercury forms a 90-degree alignment to Neptune at 1:59 p.m. This is a day to rest, sleep, dream, re-energize. Don't take anything or anyone too seriously.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 12

TodayÕs planetary influences are similar to yesterdayÕs. The moon continues to travel in Libra, active until 7:41 p.m. Venus, the planetary ruler of Libra, prepares to form a 90-degree alignment to Neptune. In addition, the sun will form a 90-degree alignment to unpredictable Uranus. This combination may force a choice between self-serving and altruistic options. It is a good time to work on projects that help others or for causes you believe in. Influences are also ideal for sharing musical or meditative time with friends.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 13

Allow extra time to get where you are going this morning. The Libra moon is inactive until 10:44 a.m., when a Scorpio moon takes over. This monthÕs new moon will culminate November 15, when the sun and moon align at 23-degrees of Scorpio. That means that today and tomorrow are prime for finishing projects already begun and tying up loose ends. Be sure to take extra time out for quiet reflection, meditation. You can gain deep penetrating insights and find new meanings in life.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 14

Wake up in a good mood. The dark side of a new moon is in full force and effect today. People may be temperamental and difficult to get along with. Choose your words carefully. The best way to channel todayÕs influences is to work. Tackle projects that need a finishing touch or repair or redoing. An applying alignment of Mars and Saturn aids jobs that require physical exertion and endurance. You can be most productive.

Brudnoy AT THE MOVIES

David Brudnoy
CNC Film Critic

Screamingly funny for all

Monsters, Inc. (A-)

A hint of the sophistication pervading Pixar's near-faultless new computerized magic show is nomenclature; e.g., something as simple as a name that'll sail right over moppets, this for an "in" sushi bar called Harryhausen's. You of course know of animation wizard and pioneer Ray Harryhausen, but wee Seth and Tiffany don't. That's as it should be. In recompense for the horror of actually having to tote children to the movies, parents deserve giggles reserved for them, jokes the rug rats don't get. Lacking maybe the thrill a conspiracy nut gets watching the unfolding of world events — you and I think things just happen; the local Bircher knows it's all done by guys hatching a grand cosmic plot while we eat our Wheaties — but still, an ancillary benefit: the kids see one flick, we see another, as our eyes are glued to the same object.

Speaking of eyes, or eye, we have here Mike Wazowski (voice of Billy Crystal), a short round green monocular thing with an unstoppable mouth, scrawny arms and legs, and a girlfriend (Jennifer Tilly) with snakes for hair. Mike's best bud is James P. Sullivan, aka Sully (John Goodman), an 8-foot-tall purple and blue fuzzy nice guy, for a long time now the top scream-inducer at the company that is to all intents the company town, Monstropolis, whose energy supply is created by harvesting the screams of kids who express their fright as monsters pop out of the closet. But kids are harder to scare nowadays: They've seen Tom Green kiss a mouse and Dennis Rodman throw a hissy fit: my examples, not the film's. After that, what could scare them? So there's a need at the company to up the quota of scream-collecting.

Get right down to it, that's what this gorgeously colorful movie is about: an economy in trouble — hmmm — and the intrusions of an invasive toxin — hmmm — and the efforts by Sully and Mike to root out this toxin and combat the bad guy (a lizard named Randall Boggs, voiced by Steve Buscemi, who's even scarier in live-action movies). The toxin is the presence of human children or their stuff. Monstropolisites believe that children contaminate, and a monster must never let one touch him or, Monster forbid!, allow one to cross over through the closet doors.

But one gets in: a tyke whom Sully names Boo (Mary Gibbs). Our guys try to get her back to where she belongs, but they're hampered first by Randall, who wants to be the #1 scarer, and then by their growing affection for the sweet little girl. A great adventure ensues, with first-rate scripting — these monsters say the darndest things — and visuals: There's not a duplicate monster anywhere. The critters would be loathsome if they weren't lusciously ghastly, they would be scary for kids if kids weren't already so casually knowing. This thing sails along in 88 minutes and you'll want it to see it all over again, to catch the in-jokes, to revel in the masterful totality of it all. Wagner would have been thrilled, had the technology existed, to have created such a gesamtkunstwerk. It's the best "family" movie we've had in ages. OK, Harry Potter's coming, so we'll withhold judgment, but meanwhile, this is monsterlicious.

Written by Andrew Stanton and Daniel Gerson. Directed by Pete Docter. Rated G.

The tables are turned when the monsters are frightened of the kids.

Plein Air and Otherwise. The South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell is pleased to announce an exhibition of watercolor paintings by Lee Parsons, Plein Air and Otherwise, Nov. 1 - 28 in the Vine Hall Gallery. Lee was formerly on the faculty of the Museum School at the Fuller Museum of Art in Brockton. Since childhood, painting has always been a favorite pastime of Lee's, but more than that, a sense of joy and adventure. Lee says that in more than twenty years of teaching others to paint, she was fortunate in being able to share that sense of joy and adventure intrinsic to the creative process. A Meet the Artist - demonstration of painting will be held in Vine Hall Gallery at the Center on Saturday, Nov. 10 from 2:00-4:00pm. The Center is located at 48 Jacobs Lane, Norwell, less than one mile from the Route 3 interchange. For directions or more information, please call the Center at (781) 659-2559.

Memorial dedicated to Gold Star Mothers

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Like so many others, the mothers raised sons here in town. They no doubt watched with pride as their boys grew up attending school, playing sandlot baseball in the spring and swimming at Sandy Beach in summertime. As their sons grew into young men – Lydia, Edith, Charlotte and Clara and 18 more like them – no doubt dreamed of their sons' future, one that would include careers, wives and grandchildren.

But war changed all that. And these Cohasset women and countless others like them across the United States endured incredible pain when their sons made the supreme sacrifice — dying for their country.

"I feel the dichotomy of war stronger than ever; the patriotism and love of our country – and the dread of sending our sons and daughters into harm's way."

— U.S. Navy Capt. Jane McCarthy

More than 600 local citizens, steeling themselves against a cold northeast wind, gathered under a cloudless sky Sunday to pay tribute to Cohasset's Gold Star Mothers during a dedication of a monument in their honor Sunday at Woodside Cemetery.

"As a mother and with the events of Sept. 11, I feel the Local home values soar

40 percent hike is the average

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset residents could suffer from "sticker shock" when they see how much their home is worth.

The Board of Assessors recently made public the results of a town-wide revaluation that increased the assessed value of homes in town an average of 41 percent over last year.

That means the "average" Cohasset house, which had an assessed value of $395,584 last year, is now valued at $560,700.

A sampling of values shows hefty increases at both ends of the spectrum and everywhere in between. Peter Roy's house at 49 Margin St., for example, has increased 48 percent from $3.794 million to $5.62 million.

Former selectman Rocco Laugelle's house at 40 Smith Place is up 21 percent from $154,500 to $187,200.

And Selectman Tom Callahan's house at 35 Hillside Drive jumped 38 percent from $282,800 to $391,000.

Deputy Assessor/Appraiser Cheryl Pooler said calendar year 2000 sales were used in determining fiscal year 2002 valuations, which take effect Jan. 1. Assessors are mandated by state law to value property within 10 percent, plus or minus, the real estate market, she said.

The assessments provide the basis for the third quarter property tax bills, which will be mailed next month. That "average" house will see its bill rise about 11 percent or some $700 from $5,757.61 to $6,436.84.

But revaluation of property does not result in added town spending, Town Manager Mark Haddad explained.

"The average tax bill would still be up $700 regardless," he said. That's because a 20-year-old state

Hagerty House fate in limbo

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

A center for marine education. Creating a Habitat for Humanity house.

Those are just some of the options selectmen considered for the Hagerty Property Tuesday night during their meeting.

Selectmen listened to public debate in an effort to make a decision on the fate of the Hagerty House at the end of Parker Avenue. The town bought the house and the 2.1 acre Hagerty property nine years ago.

Jack Buckley, a teacher at Cohasset Middle High-School and rowing enthusiast, began the meeting with a formal presentation outlining the Coastal Maritime Institute's interest in the building. CMI is an organization that provides summer classes to students curious about marine life. The organization also offers a rowing program to students at the high school.

Buckley emphasized he was merely the figurehead for a conglomerate of organizations he envisions eventually moving into the house.

Through a 15-minute Power Point presentation, Buckley outlined CMI's initiatives which are, making the Hagerty House into a coastal research center, creating a public research center, and having a water monitoring program for students. While Buckley's idea was not the only one considered, it did garner the most support.

Karen Oronte, of 2 Bound Brook Lane, said she felt a coastal education center would be the best fit for the property.

Art Center creates a 'moving' flag

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A huge American flag featuring hundreds of "palm prints" from area residents will soon be available for display in area communities.

"It's such a powerful image with all the hands."

— Diane Kennedy, South Shore Art Center

The South Shore Art Center, based in Cohasset, provided the canvas and plenty of waterproof red, white and blue paint for big and little hands – and all those in between – during its holiday marketplace and "Annual Small Works" exhibition by its gallery artists on Saturday.

Cell towers get mixed reception

Bylaw to limit locations considered

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Imagine looking out your back window and not gazing at ledge, trees, or the ocean, but a cell tower.

According to the Federal Communications Act of 1996, cities and towns have very little say about whether they can allow cell towers on their land. However, the municipalities do have some jurisdiction on where the tower can be placed and what it can look like.

Selectmen have asked the Planning Board to create a bylaw addressing the issue of cell tower construction. While there have been no recent requests for a permit to install a tower, selectmen see this as a preventative measure.

"We may as well zone cell towers before they become an issue so we're prepared," said Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed. "Lack of proper zoning is what allowed a pornography shop to be opened in Norwell, we would like to avoid a similar situation."

Town manager Mark Haddad said it was good practice to enact a bylaw to zone cell towers. "While we may not be able to stop the influx of towers we will be able to regulate them," he said.

There are currently four cell towers in Cohasset. There are two, 180-foot-tall lattice poles, at 168 Turkey Hill Lane near Hingham, one 120-foot monopole at 149 King St. near Koko Island, and one 120-foot monopole at 132 Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Mary Lou's News. Some

This week in COHASSET

For the record

In the special Town Meeting story last week regarding the funding for the new library, the Mariner should have said the Advisory Committee recommended the article in a majority vote. The story incorrectly stated the Advisory Committee did not recommend the article. Article 11, amended an article passed at the 2000 annual Town Meeting, by adding additional funding for the construction of a new library at the former Joseph Osgood School. Advisory Committee member Susan Kent presented the majority opinion at special Town Meeting and Dick Avery presented the minority opinion.

Upcoming meetings

The following meetings were posted at Town Hall as of Tuesday Nov. 13:

Conservation Commission, 7:30 p.m., Nov. 15

Harbor Committee, 7 p.m., Nov. 20

South Shore Regional School Committee, 7:30 p.m., Nov. 21 at the Brass Lantern Restaurant

School Committee, 7:30 p.m., Nov. 15 at Cohasset High School

Water Commission, 7:30 p.m., Nov. 15 at 339 King St.

Town History Committee, 7:30 p.m., Nov. 26 at the Lothrop House

Sewer Commission, 6 p.m., Nov. 19

Zoning Board, 7:30 p.m., Nov. 19

All meetings at Town Hall unless otherwise indicated.

Copier donated

Mr. and Mrs. Graham Sida, of 220 S. Main St., donated a copy machine to the Cohasset School Department. Supt. Edward Malvey said that the donation, which was out of the blue, was extremely generous. The school committee unanimously accepted the gift last week.

Safety action plan

The Cohasset Public Schools will draft a safety plan in the upcoming months. Supt. Edward Malvey said, "it's a shame in our society there is a need for a school safety plan" but said he realized the necessity for one. Health Director Mike Gill, who will draft the plan, said the schools have been operating on a crisis prevention plan that needs to be updated.

Gill said that last spring, Malvey asked him to revisit the school safety plan and make recommendations for improvement. Gill said that there will be many issues addressed that could be added to the plan including, bomb threats, hostage/armed intruders, students armed with a gun, discrimination, bullying, rest-room security, video surveillance, metal detectors, and many others.

After Thanksgiving, meetings will be conducted with school officials as well as parents, students, law enforcement and fire/rescue workers to decide what should be involved. Malvey said while most safety issues will be discussed in executive session, he encourages feedback from students, who best know the school climate.

Volunteers needed

There are three vacancies on the newly formed Community Preservation Committee that need to be filled with citizen volunteers, selectmen informed the public Tuesday night. The selectmen have asked that applications be submitted to the board as soon as possible.

Sidewalk update

Town Manager Mark Haddad asked the trustees of 520 Jerusalem Road to grant the town permission to construct a sidewalk on the corner of Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue. At the Nov. 5 special Town Meeting, citizens appropriated the necessary funds to construct a sidewalk on Forest Avenue. However, to properly and legally construct a sidewalk on the street, a small sidewalk easement, approximately 10 feet by 40 feet, will be needed to be built on the corner of Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue.

The request comes on the heels of a letter from Norfolk County Engineer Carlos Sanchez, who asked Haddad to obtain the necessary approval for the project. Sanchez said the result of the work should increase the property value of so he does not see any problems on the horizon.

Sanchez also asked Haddad to inform the residents at 284 Forest Ave. that their existing hedgerow is on Town property and will require partial relocation before construction can begin.

Hedlund office hours slated

Sen. Robert Hedlund's (R-Weymouth) office hours for Cohasset will be held in the Cohasset Town Hall Thursday, Nov. 15, from noon to 1 p.m. in the 2A Vestibule.

Hedlund also maintains a district office at 66 Sea St., North Weymouth, that is accessible Monday through Friday for constituents and appointments with the senator. The telephone number is 781-340-9866.

Local legislators' letter tries to throw train out at plate

Delegation split on Greenbush

By Rick Collins
STATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Two South Shore legislators are warning that regional transportation projects across the state may be sacrificed to pay for restoration of the Greenbush commuter rail line, a project they say could cost near $600 million to complete if it survives legal battles.

But their worries only reflect a split on the South Shore delegation. Four state representatives, including influential Transportation Committee Chairman Joseph Sullivan (D-Braintree), are backing the state's push for the project, saying it is desperately needed for area commuters. And the MBTA says that despite the recession, it has enough money to cover the project, any unplanned costs, and still follow through on other regional transportation initiatives such as the so-called Urban Ring and Silver Line bus routes.

Greenbush is the third and final branch of the Old Colony commuter rail line — its Middleboro and Plymouth sister lines began operation in 1997. As proposed, it would run from Boston to Braintree, where it would veer off and run 17 miles through Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset, and Scituate. But Greenbush, named after the area in Scituate where the line ends, has proven to be the most controversial of the three lines; so much so that it was separated out from the other two branches in the late 1980s due to environmental concerns and fierce local opposition.

And now that environmental approvals are in hand, Sen. Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) and Rep. Garrett Bradley (D-Hingham) are warning that the dour economy, and rising cost estimates, ought to be enough to kill the project. They sent a letter in mid-October to all House and Senate members saying "the MBTA is planning to spend over $600 million to build the Greenbush commuter rail line where it is not wanted." MBTA officials say they can build the line for $409 million. Hedlund and Bradley say that estimate doesn't include debt service and mitigation expenses, which are still not fully resolved. In a nutshell, they feel Greenbush is an extravagant expense.

The letter said the line, which has been dormant since 1959 and would take 1,300 cars off congested Route 3 South every day, will cost as much as $350,000 per rider to build. That number, according to Hedlund and Bradley, is "two to three times as expensive as other projects" like the Millis extension of the Needham line. In 1998, the Legislature postponed a $100 million project that would have extended the Needham line 10 miles to Millis, at a cost of about $113,000 per new rider attracted.

> "The project has turned third-base and is heading for home."
> — Rep. Joseph Sullivan, D-Braintree

Bradley and Hedlund argue that the $600 million price tag would be money better spent on more cost efficient transportation projects such as building a new Orange Line Assembly Square station in Somerville, or expanding regional commuter bus routes. On the South Shore, options include doubling the use of commuter boats by adding a parking deck at the Hingham Shipyard, subsidizing boat service from the Quincy Shipyard, and restoring express bus service for towns furthest away from Boston.

Boondoggle

"This letter is just a continuation on our efforts to educate our colleagues to this boondoggle," said Hedlund, who been unable to convince his colleagues to halt the project. "The point of the letter was to point out that the Urban Ring and Silver Line are the things that are going to be sacrificed for this project."

The Urban Ring is an ambitious attempt to enable 300,000 riders who live on the outskirts of Boston to travel the city's perimeter without heading into Boston, which has long been the hub of transit operations.

Bradley, a freshman representative who has constituents in two of the five towns along the line, said, "Given the bleak financial picture and aftermath of Sept. 11, we felt it was appropriate to let our colleagues know where the price tag stood, and where their money would be better spent."

But a follow-up letter signed by Sullivan, Insurance Committee co-chairman Rep. Ronald Mariano (D-Quincy), Rep. Frank Hynes (D-Marshfield) and Rep. James Murphy (D-Weymouth) says the line is worth the cost, and will be built without sacrificing other programs.

The letter calls the fight over Greenbush the "single most important, hard fought public policy initiative in the South Shore coastal communities" and suggests the services needed to provide residents with commuting options equal to those available in other Metro Boston areas.

Hynes, who also represents Scituate and drives into Boston regularly, called commuting options from the South Shore the "weakest link" in the state transportation system. South Shore residents can access the commuter rail at several stops along the Plymouth and Middleboro lines, the Red Line in Braintree, or take commuter boats into Boston from Hingham.

Sullivan said he appreciated Hedlund's and Bradley's efforts, but felt it important to get the other side out. "The project has turned third-base and is heading for home," he said. "The project is on track and deserves to be constructed and should remain as a priority project for the MBTA."

The project passed its final major environmental test this summer when Environmental Affairs Secretary Robert Durand approved its environmental impact report. MBTA officials are now going through the local permitting process. The MBTA plans to select a contractor by Nov. 15, and begin work next summer. The first trains are expected to roll in 2005.

However, a Hingham-based commuter organization called Advocates for Transportation Alternatives led by John Bewick, environmental affairs secretary under Gov. Edward King, has sued the state over the approval. Bewick has denounced the report, calling it an "advocate's brief" for commuter trains, and the worst report he has read in 30 years. Braintree Town Meeting voted two weeks ago to raise $50,000 to sue the state over the report.

The MBTA [illegible] confident [illegible] the environmental report will fail.

Supporters

The proponents' letter pointed out that the line has had the support of every governor since Michael Dukakis. U.S. Rep. William Delahunt (D-Quincy), all major local newspapers, and the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

John Chrystal, spokesman for Transportation Secretary Kevin Sullivan, added that the state is required under law to construct Greenbush. The Conservation Law Foundation successfully sued to have it included as part of the mitigation for the Central Artery project. "Even in absence of that agreement we would still be supportive of the project," he said.

The project will be the second public works project in the state done through the design/build method, with the first being the current Route 3 South widening project. Under design/build, the state hires one company for both design and construction rather than hiring separate engineers and contractors.

Litigious landfill chapter could be coming to a close

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

There were no uncorked bottles of champagne or cheers from the crowd. In fact, most of whom attended the recent special Town Meeting didn't even notice an item of business that could put to rest one of the most litigious matters in Cohasset history.

The future of Cohasset Heights Landfill was handled briefly at the beginning of the 4-1/2 hour marathon night — that also tackled such weighty issues as paying for a new town library and not going forward with design plans for a new police station.

Immediately after he banged the gavel to bring the meeting to order on Nov. 5, Town Moderator George Marlette asked voters to put a hold on any article – or item of business before Town Meeting — that they were interested in debating.

Cohasset Heights, along with about 10 other issues that included renaming a park, an easement for a new fire hydrant and some unpaid bills, were not "held" and therefore, were voted altogether in one motion, with nary a sound from the packed gymnasium other than a collective "aye."

In the case of CHL, what voters so easily approved was allowing selectmen to enter into a formal agreement with the private landfill off Route 3A to prohibit any landfill use at the site ever again including ruling out any transfer station at the property.

For CHL owner Paul Barry, it's time to move on.

"The settlement means I'm going to be able to cap the landfill and finalize it – something that should have been done three years ago," he said. CHL closed in 1998. Until recently Barry had hoped to open a transfer station at the site but changed his mind at the request of his family.

Barry, who owns Graham Waste Services, 110 CJC Highway and Cohasset Heights Landfill, had approached the town about operating a 299-ton per day transfer station for processing construction and demolition debris at the landfill site off Crocker Lane.

"My family said it wasn't worth the battle," he said about the proposal, which selectmen stated in a recent letter they couldn't support. Barry is currently going through the permitting process to move his Graham Waste Services business across the street to the CHL area. Barry's current business, which is at the site of the old skating rink, will be displaced when the train comes because the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority plans to build the Cohasset station there.

The CHL settlement being mixed out between five town boards and CHL will also put an end to all pending lawsuits on both sides. The text of the preliminary agreement, which also deals with closure and environmental issues, is on file at the Town Clerk's office.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said once all the addenda are worked out, there will be a public hearing with all the boards and committees to sign the settlement.

Barry says he's ready to close the CHL chapter.

"It's been very expensive for me and the town and I'm glad it's over," said Barry, who bought the landfill back in 1982. "I hope I can stay out of the news in Cohasset, it's been a long 20 years."

Final flu clinic

The final town-wide flu clinic will be held on Saturday Nov. 17 from 10 a.m. – noon (previous notice for time was incorrect) at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium. People 50 years and older and those high risk people with chronic conditions such as diabetes, asthma, lung or cardiac ailments will be given priority. All others will be immunized if vaccine is available.

THOUGHTS AND PRAYERS

Hello Cohasset. This past week has been quite an eventful and meaningful one for all of us. The memorials, dedications, parades and concerts were so touching in honor of all the veterans and the thoughts and prayers of those currently serving in the "War against Terror" were heard I am sure in communities all over.

The horrible, tragic crash that happened on Monday was terrifying to all of us for so many reasons. Once again, the thoughts, prayers and sentiments are being sent to those families who were affected in this terrible accident. My heart is so sad when I think about all the families involved. As a country, we are strong and will go on but as a community already hit so hard by the events of Sept. 11, I hope and pray that they can make it through.

Please once again take the time to hug and let all of your family and friends know how much they mean to you because as we have seen in a short period of time, it can change so quickly.

BIRTHDAY WISHES

Happy Birthdays are in order this week to two sweet, little ladies who happen to be sisters. Lindsay Martinez is celebrating her 7th birthday today, Nov. 15. Lindsay's little sister, Jillian, celebrated her birthday on Nov. 11. Happy birthday to both of you!

BUYING PINK

Pink is the color for two local families as they welcome their new daughters. Kevin and Tracy Thomas and their daughter Abby, all of Lantern Lane, are proud to announce the arrival of twin girls to their family. Regan Elise and Anna Christine were born on Friday, Oct.19, 2001. Regan weighed in at 5 lbs. 15 oz. and Anna tipped the scales at 4 lbs. 14 oz. Everyone is home and doing well and Mom and Dad are truly enjoying their three little girls.

Ronald and Patricia Massa of Cohasset are out buying pink as well for their brand new granddaughter, Laurel Mae Massa. Laurel arrived Oct 10, 2001 at 4:48 p.m., tipping the scales at 7 lbs., 8 oz. and measured 21 inches long. Laurel joins her brother Ryan Andrew at home. Her parents are Ronald and Jennifer Massa of Duxbury. Maternal grandparents are Mary and Robert Thompson of Duxbury and Jack Cadogan of Weymouth. Congratulations to both families on these wonderful additions to your families.

AT SYRACUSE

Evan McCaffrey, a Cohasset resident has enrolled in Syracuse University's College of Arts and Sciences.

NATIONAL DEAN'S LIST

Ryan L. Staszko, also a Cohasset resident, has been included in the 24th edition of The National Dean's List, 2000-2001, for his hard work at the University of Colorado at Boulder. Students listed are selected for the honor by their college deans, registrars or honor society advisors and must be in the upper 10 percent of their class or on their school's Dean's List. Great work, Ryan.

FUNDRAISER

The sixth-grade yearbook fundraiser is closing tomorrow, Nov. 16. If anyone out there has not had a chance to see the wonderful Tupperware products that are being offered, please call me at 781-383-0143 or send me an email at piepstupper@yahoo.com.

JINGLE BELLS!

The South Shore Community Center invites family and friends to join in the holiday spirit at the Jingle Bell Walk on Nov.23 at 2 p.m. This Cohasset tradition will begin at Cohasset Harbor where Santa and his elves will arrive by boat to greet everyone. After he hands out jingle bells to the children, he and his elves will board a hayride and continue on to the Community Center. At 2:30 p.m., the South Shore Community Center welcomes all to partake in cookies, a beverage and a holiday sing-a-long. Santa will be upstairs in the center for some wonderful photo opportunities. The Turkey Trot will be held on the Cohasset Common at 3 p.m. for children ages 3-10. All participants will receive a prize and you may pre-register for $2 or post register the day of the event for $3.

All proceeds will go to benefit the Nursery School. The bells of St. Stephens will be playing, hayrides will be offered from 3:00-4:00 and at 3:30, the Rusty Skippers will play around the Cohasst Common. This wonderful event will end at 4:15 on the Common with the lighting of the tree. This is a great way for families and friends to get together to start the holiday season in a fun and festive way.

A FAIR DAY

We have two Christmas Fairs to make mention of, both being held on Dec. 1. The Christmas Fair at Beechwood Congregational Church, on Church Street is being held from 9:30-2 p.m. The church will offer its famous chowder from 11:30-1 and also, beach glass candy, fancy work, food items and a white elephant sale will be offered. The annual Cohasset Village Fair is also taking place on this day from 10 a.m-3 p.m on and around Cohasset Common. Hosted by Cohasset's churches and the non-profit Appalachia Service Project(ASP), this year's fair promises to be more festive than ever. This fair has been a tradition for more than 40 years and features everything from homemade gifts, crafts, books and more. All proceeds support the churches, select charities and the Appalachia Service Project. Chowder and baked goods are being sold at The Second Congregational Church, a Secret Room will be at St. Stephen's for children to purchase gifts for their families and their is so much more! Make sure to put these great fairs on your things to do for Dec. 1.

GO BLUE!

A great big thanks goes out to all of the Cohasset Fans who went to Norwell last Friday to cheer on our football team. It was hard to tell but it looked like Cohasset may have had more fans than Norwell. Although the team played well, Norwell managed to capture the win. The team may no longer be undefeated but should be very proud of the work and effort that they have put in. Make sure to come and show your support on Thanksgiving Day in Hull where Blue and White will dominate in the teams last league game of the season. This game begins at 10 am and we hope to pack the stands with Cohasset Fans! Go Blue!

SCHOLARSHIP DRIVE

Make sure to look for team members next Sunday as they go around town to participate in the annual Gridiron Scholarship Fund Book Drive. The team members, dressed in their game shirts will go door-to-door to leave residents with a copy of their 2001 Season Program which was dedicated to teachers who contributed their energy, talent and time to the students of Cohasset High School: Ron Emmons, George Fortin and Dennis Walsh. Donations are welcome and will help the scholarship funds the Gridiron has been presenting since 1971.

YOUNG MILESTONE

A special congratulations is being sent to Miss Christina Dow from her mom and dad. Christina learned how to ride a two-wheeler this past week and everyone is so proud of you, cutie. Keep up the great riding and don't forget to wear a helmet!

HONORING VETERANS

The Sunday School at Beechwood Church honored Veterans on Sunday. Dominique Asnault and Mike Snowdale presented the flag. Fran and Ruth Mitchell's grandchildren, Amy and David Mitchell, along with Mike and David Snowdale read famous quotes honoring veterans. Bud Hollis, Norman Knight, Fran Mitchell, Lloyd Prescott and Alan Snowdale were presented flags by Sam Asnault and other children, and then given a standing ovation by the congregation for serving our country.

Helping local cancer patients on road to recovery

Cohasset woman lines up volunteers

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

After surviving breast cancer, Shelley Donze knows how hard it is to deal with the dreaded disease. That's why she decided to help.

"I just wanted to do something to help and comfort those who are in the same boat that I was," Donze said.

Anyone interested in volunteering should call the Road to Recovery hotline at, 781-749-2535

Donze, who lives at 9 Parker Ave., was recently named co-coordinator of the local chapter of the American Cancer Society's Road to Recovery program along with Laurie Berlinquet of Hingham. The program joins volunteer drivers with cancer patients who are in need of transportation to and from appointments. Donze is in charge of all the volunteers. Currently 10 people work at an office at the Hersey House on North Street in Hingham arranging trips, and there are 55 drivers.

Donze has been involved with the program for a couple years, and while she didn't need the service, she immediately saw its benefits. "So many people helped me with their kindness and support. I felt this was a way I could give back," she said.

Kate Langstrom, spokesman for the ACS, said she thinks the program is a wonderful idea. "There's most definitely a need for the program and it's fantastic that there are so many volunteers," she said.

The program was started in 1973 by cancer survivor Lillian Valorz and then public health nurse Pat Smith, both of Hingham. The "Hingham Hotline," as it was called, eventually became the model for the American Cancer Society's national Road to Recovery program.

The Road to Recovery program only offers to drive patients to appointments three days a week and it needs at least a week's notice to schedule appointments. Volunteer drivers request appointments at Boston area hospitals fall between the hours of 10 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. If the appointment lasts more than two hours, there are two drivers assigned to the patient.

Occasionally, drivers will establish a rapport with a patient and will end up driving them on a regular basis, Donze said. She added generally most people get involved because they have lost a loved one to cancer.

It is very important the patient is ambulatory, meaning they are able to walk, because the volunteers are not qualified medical personnel. They do not offer rides for assisted living or nursing home patients.

The program covers Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate, and Weymouth.

Donze said the Road to Recovery is always looking for new volunteers. Volunteers are asked to work the phones from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. however, whatever time can be donated is appreciated, she said.

While the ACS provides general liability and business auto liability, all drivers must have personal liability insurance on their automobiles.

Anyone interested in volunteering should call the Road to Recovery hotline at 781-749-2535

Hull Lifesaving Museum honors Cohasset volunteer

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Susan McVeigh has always been enamored with the history of lifesaving. So volunteering at the Hull Lifesaving Museum provided the perfect match for her time and effort.

McVeigh, who has lived at 55 Atlantic Ave. since 1972, has been volunteering at the Hull Lifesaving Museum for 12 years and was presented with the Staton Award for volunteer excellence on Sunday.

"I'm very honored to receive this award. It's wonderful to get recognized for doing something you enjoy so much," she said.

McVeigh describes the museum as a "fun, alive and exciting place to work" and said it was a perfect fit for her because she is so taken with the sea. Her home on Atlantic Avenue is littered with paraphernalia relating to anything that has to do with the ocean.

Lory Newmyer, executive director of the non-profit museum, said that whenever anyone needed help, McVeigh was always the first to volunteer her services. She added that while most years there is debate over who should receive the award, this year there was unanimous support for McVeigh.

"She's so consistent in giving her time, energy and enthusiasm," Newmyer said.

Corinne Leung, museum director, also heartily endorsed McVeigh's volunteer efforts.

"She has worked here for many years and has taken on any challenge we have asked of her," she said.

"She has such a great soul and has been such a good supporter of the museum, she really deserves the recognition," Leung added. She said from 60-100 people volunteer annually at the museum.

McVeigh tried to deflect the attention away from herself saying that there were many people at the museum who were just as deserving of the award.

The award is being given for its fourth consecutive year and is named after Patty and Skip Staton, who were the first recipients of the honor. Newmyer said that the Statons were instrumental in getting the museum off the ground.

McVeigh volunteers every Monday for a few hours in the curatorial department. Her duties include identifying new objects that have been donated to the museum, setting up and taking down displays, helping with mailings, and occasionally, a little light gardening.

McVeigh's favorite part of the museum is the photographs of the lifesavers in action. She said the photos along with the appropriate descriptions really make the lifesaving come alive. She also said the large rowing program, which includes rowing, boat building and repairs, is an excellent way to teach people to work together.

The Hull Lifesaving museum has been open since 1978 in an effort to educate the public about the history of lifesaving. McVeigh said that the people that live around the area should take an interest in the history because it has been so important to the community in the past. The Hull Lifesaving Museum at 1117 Nantasket Ave. in Hull was an actual lifesaving station and was heavily used in World War II before it became a museum.

For more information about the museum, call 781-925-0092, or log on at www.bostonharborheritage.org.

GUEST EDITORIAL

The highest price of freedom

By Capt. Jane McCarthy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

First, I want to thank you for having me back to speak as a veteran from Cohasset. What an honor it is for me to be here for this Dedication of the Cohasset Gold Star Mothers Memorial. This Gold Star tradition has been in our country for almost a century now as one way to remember our men and women who have sacrificed their lives for our country. The star tradition began in World War I when flags were displayed from homes, businesses, schools and churches to indicate by a blue star each active duty service person. A gold star was stitched over the blue star to show those who had given their lives for their country. In 1928 a group of 25 "Gold Star Mothers" in Washington, D.C. began the national organization of American Gold Star Mothers. In its original charter it listed many purposes including:

The general promotion of peace and good will

Perpetuating the memory of those whose lives were sacrificed

The Gold Star Mothers organization is composed of American Mothers who have lost a son or daughter during World War I, World War II, the Korean War, Vietnam War, Beirut, Grenada, Panama, the Persian Gulf, Somalia, Bosnia, Saudi Arabia and I supposed our most recent place will be Afghanistan.

It is so special to be here today to both honor this organization in the accomplishment of its goals, and to honor the Gold Star Mothers of Cohasset themselves.

Who would have thought last August when Glenn Pratt asked me to speak that the world would have changed so much on Sept. 11? I work for FDA just outside of D.C. On the morning of Sept. 11, someone in my office showed me on the Internet the picture of the World Trade Center being hit, then hit again, and then the Pentagon strike, so close to us, a building that most of us thought could not be touched. We were immediately evacuated. We live close to three major airports, BWI, National and Dulles, and we are in the flight path for Camp David, Andrew's Air Force Base and the White House. By noon the skies were empty except for military strike planes, Huey gunjets and F16s. And the skies remained that way for several days. Even now when I hear a plane I stop and look up and am thankful just to see a commercial plane. It was a dreadful time, friends and family calling, wondering what was the meaning of all this? Is it over? Will it continue? Are we safe?

These recent events somehow give even more weight and import to what we are here to do today, to remember our wars, not always for the victories or for the heroes who come home again, but also for the many sacrifices, our mothers' sons, which must be made for any war.

I remember in 1969 coming home from nursing school every few months for another funeral. I remember standing on the hill at Central Cemetery in Cohasset, at Allen Keating's funeral, saying to my friend and classmate Craig Muir, I have to do something. I signed up for the Army Nurse Corps. I was 20 years old. I thought that was the least I could do, to care for these friends of mine, these soldiers, who were going off and giving their lives for our country.

These strong feelings of patriotism that we feel today were not always present in our country or in our town of Cohasset. I remember in 1972 when I was home from the Army and my mother asked me to march in the Memorial Day Parade. She said it would mean so much to my father. I had marched in Memorial Day Parades every year as a young girl, a flower girl, a Brownie, a Girl Scout, in the American Legion Women's Auxiliary. To march in an Army uniform in 1972, at 20-something, was not a popular thing to do, but I felt it was the right thing to do, to remember our wars and the sacrifices that had been made and were being made, the loss of our sons, our brothers, our friends. So I marched, with Jet Jackson, John Morgan, in uniform, there were so few of us Vietnam-era veterans. We walked down Main Street, Cohasset feeling perhaps unpopular but knowing inside ourselves it was the right thing to do. In years following others joined us, Wayne Harrington, Donnie and Duncan McCormack, until in 1990, we had more than 100 veterans marching and this resurgence of interest. Veterans remembering their fellow veterans continues today, especially with this memorial.

Today, 30 years later, I am still a Vietnam veteran and also a mother, the mother of our 13-year-old son Maury, who is here with my husband Rodney today. As a mother and with the events of Sept. 11, I feel the dichotomy of war stronger than ever, the patriotism and love of our country and the dread of sending our sons and daughters into harm's way. This memorial is such a magnificent way to honor these Gold Star Cohasset Mothers who lost their sons, for they know best the high price of freedom that we have in this country. They have experienced perhaps the highest price of freedom of all.

We are here today to dedicate this Gold Star Mothers Memorial that was built by the families and friends of these Gold Star Mothers and their sons. This is a memorial for veterans of all the wars of the 20th century. And as part of our dedication here today we are going to hear about each of these wars and their impact on Cohasset, and the people of Cohasset. This dedication today is a symbol of the collective loss of the town of Cohasset, from George Mealy in World War I to Peter Albiani in Vietnam.

As Ed Allen expressed it so aptly in 1970 in his poem "Ladies of Gold":

I, for one, stand ready to do my part
And take each mother into my heart
And let her know, that it is a lie
For not in vain, did her son die

And these ladies
Be they young or old
Are truly worth
Their weight in gold

I'll take them in my arms, their tears on my chest
I'll take them, he was America's best
My hope, if I may be so bold
Is for light from their eyes to shine like gold

A Gold Star Mother
They'll always be
We owe them plenty
Everyone...you, you and me.

Capt. McCarthy made these remarks Sunday during the dedication of the monument to Gold Star Mothers at Woodside Cemetery.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

How to retire worn US flags

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing in regards to the editorial written on Oct. 25 about proper care of a flag. The article told the reader how to correctly display the flag and other customs having to do with or nation's symbol of what we stand for. But, what do you do when the flag has become worn, tattered, soiled or frayed? The custom in our nation is to retire the flag. There are many ways that this can be done.

The first is to fold the flag in its traditional manner, put it in a container of any kind, and bury it. It is also said that the flag isn't supposed to touch the ground, and no matter what kind of container the flag is in, it will eventually touch the ground. This way is then proven to not be the best way to go about retiring a flag.

The second way to retire a flag is to cut out the blue field, and the flag is no longer intact and is no longer an American flag. But isn't it said to be disrespectful to cut the flag? This way is also proven to not be a very proper way to treat the flag.

Another way to retire the flag is to place it in a fire, blue field first, and once the blue field is gone, the stripes may be placed in. This method may be considered incorrect because the flag is being burnt, but, if done correctly, this is the proper way to retire a flag.

Next time you walk past your flag that is displayed outside your house or drive down the road with your frayed flag on your car flapping in the wind, consider if your flag should be retired. If it should, follow the third method explained in this letter or call Kyle Ryan at (781) 741-8187 or Skip Hancock at (781) 749-6877 to have your flag retired by the Boy Scouts of Troop Four, Hingham. We will be collecting flags to be retired and will retire them as a troop service project.

Halloween Fair

TO THE EDITOR:

For over 25 years, the Halloween Fair on the Common has been both a fall tradition and the South Shore Community Center Nursery School's single largest fundraiser. Once again it was a delight to see the children in their costumes, their parents in tow, eager to anticipate in the activities and games. And, as in previous years, it was equally wonderful to sense the feeling of community that the fair creates as families and friends meet and mingle.

Although the prediction had been for cold, wintry weather, the day could not have been better with blue skies and sunshine on a beautiful autumn day. The excitement began the moment children stepped into line for the costume parade and continued until the last cupcake was decorated, the last donut on a string gobbled and the last ball was thrown.

On behalf of the staff of the South Shore Community Center Nursery School, I'd like to thank the small army of people who banded together to make our Halloween Fair a reality. With each year the fair grows and becomes more successful because of the efforts of these volunteers. I remain overwhelmed by the support and generosity of businesses, parents, students and friends. Many, many thanks are due to Dan Belz of Atlantic Bagel, Mike Feroli of the Village Butcher & Deli, Denise and Gary Bismore of the Silver Spoon, Colleen at Dunkin Donuts, Shaws, and Super Stop & Shop for their generous donations.

We also owe much to the students of the Deer Hill, Middle School and High School who, through their affiliation with community service, student council, churches, scouting and the pure goodness of their hearts, volunteered to staff the multitude of activities and games.

To the 50 or more of you thank you!

And finally, a thank you to our Nursery School parent volunteers...all of you...for your time and tireless energy on behalf of the school, and to the families who each year make the Halloween Fair on the Common a part of their Halloween celebration. The funds and fun raised through this effort do much to help raise our community's children.

Adopt a pet

TO THE EDITOR:

I am a volunteer at the Scituate Animal Shelter, and my job is to walk the dogs at 6 a.m., three mornings a week. Since the September tragedy, I have noticed that adoptions at our no-kill shelter have slowed somewhat, and I decided it was important to tell everyone why there couldn't be a better time to adopt some four-legged love! Studies have confirmed that the simple act of petting a dog or cat instantly lowers blood pressure, calming the person who is stroking the animal. We face lives that are more stressful in so many ways and nothing is better than coming home to the unconditional love of a pet.

Every morning when I arrive at the shelter and go to walk, "Kelsey-Belle," a really sweet female dog, she insists that I sit in the kennel with her for a few minutes—simply to cuddle. Halfway through our walk, we must stop, so she can nuzzle me, and I can hug her, and yes, kiss her! Kelsey has been in our shelter for weeks and deserves a home. She is wonderful with children and other pets. We have a warm and loving golden lab, a real "love bug" of a black lab mix, and countless other large and small dogs, all with wonderful dispositions. And, as someone

Reassessing priorities, perspective

By Allan MacDonald
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

As far as I'm concerned, and from what I have been observing, one thing Sept. 11 has done is to force us to reassess.

From heretofore seemingly automatic holidays like Halloween and Thanksgiving, to concepts of afterlife, almost everything has taken on more significance. The trick-or-treaters seemed especially enjoyable — and polite — this year. Thanksgiving, perhaps my favorite holiday, will be especially meaningful in every detail, with layer upon layer of gratitude. Sept. 11 compels us to rethink how we spend our precious time — and to rethink the meaning of death, including our own.

Even our perspective on Saudi Arabia needs re-examination. If the Saudis know the identities of the hijackers and much more, and are withholding this information, then we need to face up to why we're not doing anything about it. What's more important: lives or oil?

Since Sept. 11, I find myself especially offended by the visual violence that is TV, especially the commercials; one kind of bombardment is enough in the world without having it piped into our homes. Auditory violence — and inanity — scream at us on the radio. How obnoxious! Hype seems more disgusting than usual now, almost obscene, while souls are being crushed and we are trying to pick ourselves up. That part of America's image — that is the electronic clown — cheapens our lives and what I hope we truly stand for.

Why is it that litter seems especially despicable now? Why do slackers and others without principle — those heedless of the environment and our planet, those who don't care enough to recycle — now seem especially reprehensible? What kind of people are we? See you next time.

Allan MacDonald is the publicity chairman of the Cohasset Recycling Committee.

Keeping watch over our water supply

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Town water supply is undergoing its most important upgrade in years. The Water Department is accomplishing this improvement with relatively little fuss, and with no impact on our water rates or our taxes. The difficulties we have on our streets while the new pipes are going in are minor compared with disruptions caused by sewers, and other roadway improvements. The distribution system, when finished will add considerably to the reliability and safety of our water supply. Moreover, according to the State's Metropolitan Area Planning Council, the supply should be adequate for any growth the town will encounter in the foreseeable future.

Last Nov. 1, there was a meeting of the various Town boards and the Selectmen in which an agreement about the Cohasset Heights Landfill which will permit it to be capped and the pollution flowing from it will be vastly reduced. We can finally have an end to the landfill issue for the Town if the monitoring and remediation measures called for can be strengthened during the final negotiations to ensure that there is a high probability that pollution from the landfill will never reach our drinking water supply at Lily Pond, and if pollution does move in that direction, it will be detected sufficiently early that something can be done about it.

Protection of the western tributary to Lily Pond having now been provided for, there remain two other sources of water to Lily Pond to think about: the Aaron River, and Peppermint Brook.

There remain two other sources of water to Lily Pond to think about: the Aaron River, and Peppermint Brook.

The Aaron River runs from the Aaron River Reservoir through a heavily inhabited section of Beachwood to a sluiceway at Beechwood Street which is opened, when needed, to supply additional water to the Lily Pond water treatment plant. A recent assessment of the Aaron river reservoir by the Mass Water Resources Division has noted that the levels of mercury are rising in this reservoir and that they are near issuing a mercury advisory which would warn about consumption of fish from the reservoir. Such a warning would have no direct effect on use of the reservoir as a drinking water supply, and there is very little that can be done about mercury except to reach a solution to our solid waste problem which does not include burning it, since mercury in our water supply comes from the stacks of incinerators and power plants.

The other threat to the Aaron river is from the septic systems which border it. These systems are under a Board of Health regulation which will require improved wastewater processing when the properties are sold. The Board also believes that properties along the Aaron River should, in the future, be considered for sewering which would process waste into a local treatment plant. The Water Department keeps careful records and is aware of the vigilance and protection necessary to maintain the purity of the Aaron water bodies.

Peppermint Brook

A smaller but more troublesome contributor to Lily Pond is Peppermint Brook which flows along a wetland on the south side of Pond Street under King Street into the Pond. The origin of Peppermint Brook is the glacial drumlin on which the high school is built. It includes Clay Spring Road, parts of Bayberry and Tupelo Roads. The High School stands on land which was once a cemetery, according to Lot Bates, but it was too hard to dig, and the graves were subject to washout and flooding because of the impervious nature of the soil. The entire area from the North side of the High School to Cushing Highway are in the Peppermint Brook watershed.

The last fecal coliform reading the Board of Health took at Peppermint Brook several years ago was in the 500 range: about twice the permitted level for swimming. The construction at the High School site is adding perhaps an acre of additional impervious surface, the drainage from which will be to a holding pond on the property. During heavy storm events, overflow from this pond will go to several old catch basins on Pond Street which are probably, even now, inadequate. Every storm of any magnitude carries polluted surface water with high coliform counts from these catchbasins to Peppermint Brook and Lily Pond. The school drainage system will add to this already stressed watershed.

Fortunately, the solution for this threat to Lily Pond is a relatively inexpensive treatment wetland along the course of Peppermint Brook. If there were an oil spill on Cushing Highway near Pond Street, it would drain into Peppermint brook and reach Lily Pond almost instantly. This is one of the hundreds of details which the Town must address, albeit an important one. The time to act on Peppermint Brook is now. The Board hopes take up this problem at its next meeting, then meet with the Water Commission and plan a solution to this problem.

COMMON GROUND

AMY WHORF MCGUIGGAN

The moving moon went up the sky,
And nowhere did abide:
Softly she was going up,
And a star or two beside.
Samuel T. Coleridge

Pick up a travel magazine these days and the journeys you'll take are likely to be to places exotic and remote, excursions that push the limits of human endurance. Those of us who do more armchair travelling than the real thing certainly appreciate tagging along on these vicarious vacations, but I sometimes wonder if, in our sophistication and worldliness, our need to be awed by things new and unusual, we haven't lost the ability to be awed by encounters in our everyday lives.

I was at a local college observatory recently on a Friday night when rooftop telescopes are opened to the public and had the opportunity to view all sorts of exotic things - the Andromeda Galaxy, the Ring Nebula, an open star cluster - that my own little telescope would never have been able to find. I was awed by the mind-bending fact that the light we were seeing had left these celestial curiosities thousands, even tens of thousands of years ago, and that perhaps these objects no longer existed in deep space, though we won't know for certain for thousands more years. I was awed by the notion that if someone is out there looking at us through a telescope they'll be seeing our civilization as it was thousands of years ago.

Despite the visceral tingling from that deep space journey, I wished that our Moon had been out that night. Long a source of mystery and myth, our Moon has been so poked, probed, photographed, even trod upon that it seems as familiar to us as our own neighborhood. Most nights it is hanging up there, a shimmering bauble against infinity, though we hardly pay it any attention as we rush about our business.

Time was when the Moon, considered an object of heavenly perfection, was watched closely with both a sense of fear and reverence.

It wasn't always that way. Time was when the Moon, considered an object of heavenly perfection, was watched closely with both a sense of fear and reverence. In an attempt to explain the unexplainable, the ancients attributed divine powers to the Moon. To the Romans, the Moon was the goddess Diana, to the Greeks, Selene who rode through the sky in a silver chariot (the study of the moon is today known as selenology), and in its heavenly movements was the potential for cosmic catastrophe or, at the very least, mortal bad luck. Imagine what the ancients must have thought when the copper-colored shadow of an eclipse slipped across the Moon or when pale, ghostly earthshine appeared inside its crescent? Or when the Moon grew, nightly, into fullness, only to shrink to a sliver of crescent and disappear altogether from the sky. Only through prayers and ritual, believed the ancients, could the Moon be restored.

Stories and legends were told about the moon and its features. People saw the face of a man in the moon, a man said to have been imprisoned for stealing. Others thought they saw a rabbit. Still others believed the moon to be inhabited by demons or made of green cheese. One early astronomer was convinced that aliens had built the Moon's craters. Another thought he had seen a walled city on the Moon. A full moon was said to cause mayhem and madness, to turn otherwise sane folks into lunatics - from the Latin, luna, meaning moon - or to transform them into werewolves.

Galileo's telescope dispelled many of the myths, as well as the illusion of heavenly perfection, by showing the lunar surface to be pocked with mountains and valleys. But for those peoples with a deep connection to the natural world, the moon still could exert a strange power and influence. Many Native American tribes believed that the sun and moon were brother and sister divinities. Ceremonies and offerings celebrated lunar eclipses. Legends told that people would be reborn after death, just as the moon is reborn every month.

To keep track of the change in seasons, tribes of the northern and eastern United States gave names - Wolf, Flower, Buck and Beaver - to each of the Full Moons, names that corresponded to activity for a particular time of the year. Early settlers, too, used the Moon as a timepiece, marking the seasons, working late into the night to bring in the crops by the light of September's Full Harvest Moon, knowing that the harshness of winter would set in soon after that phase had passed.

The Moon, whose name is derived from the Anglo-Saxon word Mona, is Earth's only natural satellite, a lifeless outpost 2,160 miles wide, 240,000 miles from Earth with temperatures that range from 270 degrees during the daytime to - 250 at night. Some debate still surrounds the question of the Moon's origin, whether it was captured by the gravitational pull of the Earth, formed alongside the Earth, or was born from a chunk of debris released when the Earth collided with another object some 4.6 billion years ago. Early astronomers, who speculated that the dark, flat plains of the Moon were dried oceans, named the areas maria, Latin for seas. Now known to be solidified lava flows, maria cover nearly 30 percent of the Moon. The dramatic lunar surface also includes craters, highlands, splash patterns of debris called rays and riverlike rilles. Because the Moon has no water or air to cause erosion, the features we see on the surface have existed unchanged for billions of years, as will the imprints left by explorers.

This month, the Moon will do something that it doesn't do very often. It will be full twice, on Nov. 1 (Hunter's Moon) and again on Nov. 30 (Beaver Moon). The month's second Full Moon is popularly known as a "Blue Moon," hence the expression "Once in a blue moon," meaning a rare occurrence. For our Wiccan friends, the second New Moon in a month is called the "Black Moon," a time when magic is especially powerful.

The term "Blue Moon," said to date back to Shakespeare, was used as a colloquial expression to mean an obvious absurdity, long before its calendrical use. It is said to have first been used with respect to the Moon in 1883 when the eruption of Krakatoa released volcanic particles into the air that "colored" the Moon blue. Other such rare "Blue Moons" have been seen in the aftermath of forest fires and the eruptions of Mt. St. Helens and Mt. Pinatubo. These days, "Blue Moon" is popularly used to mean two Full Moons in a calendar month, an event that takes place approximately every 2.7 years (the next will occur in July 2004 and again in June, 2007), though by an older definition a "Blue Moon" is the third Full Moon in a season (Winter, Spring, Summer, Fall) that has four Full Moons. By that definition, the Nov. 30 Full Moon will not be a Blue Moon and the next Blue Moon will not occur until Nov. 2002. In 1999, a Double Blue Moon year - Blue Moons in January and March, by the popular definition, an event that won't repeat until 2018 - two interesting articles in Sky and Telescope magazine went to great lengths to sort through the folklore of "Blue Moons," concluding that the older interpretation is the correct one, but that there wouldn't be any harm in celebrating both interpretations.

I'll be looking skyward on Nov. 30, if for no other reason than to pay homage to the glittering bauble that has entranced mankind for millenia and inspired countless declarations of love and any number of idiomatic expressions. "Over the moon," "shoot for the moon," "moonlighting" and "mooning about" are just a few that come to mind.

My friend Jill, who practices the ancient art of astrology, tells me that this next Full Moon is viewed by astrologers as a very fortuitous moon, a lucky time for planting new seeds, beginning new projects. One will reap what one sows under the influence of this lunar event and one should be aware of the symbols and events that present themselves on that day. Because the Moon will be full in Gemini on Nov. 30, it will be an especially auspicious time for those of us born under the sign of the twins. I'll let you know how things work out.

Spoilers of the dream

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Well, I guess scholarship (if it can be called that) has punctured another one of my most cherished dreams.

A couple of college professors, no less, have confessed that it was they and their friends who carved the AVM Stone when they were students at the University of Minnesota 16 years ago and not some Norse runemaster lost in the wilds of Minnesota 637 years ago.

They did it as a lark, a college prank, said Professors Kari Ellen Gade of Indiana and Jana K. Schulman of Southeastern Louisiana University.

Some lark! Just when the AVM Stone was becoming accepted as further proof that a Viking named Sir Paul Knutson was the first explorer of America's heartland.

All of which calls for an explanation . . .

In 1354, King Magnus of Norway, Sweden and Skaane, concerned that the people of Greenland had fallen away from the Christian faith, dispatched an expedition under Knutson to bring them back to the cross and save them from eternal damnation.

It was no ragtag expedition, either. Knutson himself was a member of the Royal Council and a former Lawspeaker of the Thing. His men were selected from the king's own bodyguard, a mark of nobility in 14th century Scandanavia. Their ship was the Knorr, the royal trading vessel.

As far as written history goes, the Knutson expedition was never heard of again. But he and his men live on in the world of dreams and romance.

Move the clock forward to the year 1898. A Kensington, Minn., farmer named Olof Ohman was digging out tree stumps when he found, entangled in the roots of one of them, a stone containing curious carvings. They were identified as "runes," a type of writing best described as Old Norse hieroglyphics. The carving said:

"8 Goths (Swedes) and 12 Norwegians on exploration journey from Vinland round about the west. We had camp by 2 Skerries (islands) one day's journey north from this stone. We were . . . and fished one day. After we came home found ten of our men red with blood and dead. AVM (Ave Virgo Maria) save from evil."

On the edge of the stone was carved:

"Have ten men by the sea to look after our ships 14 days journey from this island. Year 1362."

In the years that have since passed, a romantic myth, similar but not as well-known as that of King Arthur, has been woven around the adventures of Sir Paul Knutson and his men as they wandered across the American continent, more than 100 years before Columbus, in search of the apostate settlers of Greenland.

Was the Kensington runemaster really describing the end of the Knutson expedition? The largely Scandinavian population of Minnesota was divided.

The romantic half said "yes, the Kensington Stone is real." The scholarly half said "no, it isn't." Needless to say, Gade and Schulman and their friends were part of the spoilsport scholars.

They carved the letters AVM on a stone, added the date 1363 and a few runic characters. Then they buried it not far from Kensington and sat back to see what would happen. That was in 1985. Nothing happened until last May when the AVM Stone was discovered and celebrated as proof of the authenticity of the Kensington Stone.

"Who would have thought it," said Schulman. "They can't believe it's real."

Train opponents plan party

The Advocates for Transportation Alternatives invite supporters and friends from Hingham, Weymouth, Braintree, Cohasset and Scituate to a Greenbush Railroad Resistance Party, at the Hingham Community Center, Sunday, Nov. 18, from 7:30-10:30 p.m.

A "Thanks for Giving Party," AfTA members will give special recognition to Sen. Robert Hedlund and Rep. Garrett Bradley for their work to bring the "transit alternatives option" to the attention of their colleagues on Beacon Hill. AfTA volunteers and contributors will also be thanked by John Bewick, president of AfTA.

Featured at the event will be Joe and Dean of "Rhythmic Motion on the Ocean" who will lead those attending in line dances, country western and good oldies. Joe Warren has promised to teach a new "end-of-the-line dance".

All are invited to bring the family, bring a favorite dessert, bring donations, wear cowboy hats, and to enjoy meeting friends, hearing the updates on what's happening, and thank those who are helping the cause! If you wish to attend, just call 781-740-1613.

Home values soar

law, dubbed Proposition 2-1/2, limits the annual increase in the local tax levy to 2-1/2 percent with an allowance for new construction. So when property values increase, the tax rate decreases.

Selectmen are expected to set the new tax rate of $11.48 per $1,000 of assessed valuation at a public hearing next week. The tax rate is an 11 percent drop from last year's rate of $14.59.

About 77 cents of the tax rate or $431.74 of the average tax bill is attributed to debt exclusions for projects — such as the middle high school renovations. Debt exclusions allow towns through a ballot vote to exempt the debt service for large projects from the tax cap limit.

New growth is also up substantially and totals an estimated $600,000 — up about $150,000 over last year — most of which was residential, Haddad said. Communities are allowed to increase their levy limits each year to reflect new growth in the tax base by multiplying the increase in the assessed valuation of qualifying property by the prior year's tax rate.

Pooler said much of the new growth was in expensive homes.

"There were a lot of high-end homes being built that added to growth dramatically," she said.

Assessors conduct interim valuations in "non-revaluation" years to adjust values by 10 percent to keep pace with the market. The owner of the average home could have seen a 60-70 percent jump this year in assessed value without the interim adjustments, Pooler said.

She explained assessors use much the same methods as real estate appraisers do to determine a home's value. They look at "arms' length" sales that don't involve relatives or a sale that was under duress. Size of home, neighborhood and location are all taken into consideration. The revaluation process is reviewed by the state. A representative from the Bureau of Local Assessments came to Cohasset about 12 times to review data and take a look for himself to make sure the process was being conducted correctly, Pooler said.

"Every area in town is desirable whether it's the waterfront or Beechwood. We've seen dramatic increases all over Cohasset."

— Cheryl Pooler, deputy assessor/appraiser

Although not every home increased 40 percent in value – what struck Pooler during this revaluation period was how the entire town is sought after.

"Every area in town is desirable whether it's the waterfront or Beechwood," she said. "We've seen dramatic increases all over Cohasset."

Pooler said in her eight years on the job, Fair Oaks Lane which is full of homogeneous colonial homes has provided a "barometer" for climbing values.

"When I started, they were priced in the $250,000 range," she said. "Now they are in the $600,000s."

Revaluations are available for public review at the library and in Town Hall. Homeowners who think their homes are overvalued can file for abatements when the bills go out in December until Feb. 1, the last day when the bills are due.

Cohasset homes value chart

The following is a list home valuations for the Town of Cohasset for the past five/fiscal years:

1998 — tax rate:15.05; average home value: $322,324; average tax bill: $4,850.97.

1999 — tax rate:14.95; average home value: $341,124; average tax bill: $5,099.80.

2000 — tax rate:15.09; average home value: $358,490; average tax bill: $5,409.61.

2001 — tax rate:14.59; average home value: $395,584; average tax bill: $5,767.61.

2002 — tax rate:11.48;average home value: $560,700; average tax bill: $6,436.94.

"The town has revolved around the ocean and prospered from the sea since its conception," she said. "The idea of a marine biology coastal ecology center is a worthy option to be considered."

John Seavey, director of the family selection committee for the South Shore Chapter of Habitat for Humanity, had another idea for the house. He asked selectmen to sell the house to Habitat for $1 so the organization could turn it into affordable housing. "There is no affordable housing in Cohasset. We want to solve this problem and we hope the board considers its obligation to young families in this community," he said. Ten years ago, the organization turned the former Bates house across from the police-fire station into a two-family Habitat home.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said that he didn't think a waterfront property was the most ideal spot for a Habitat house.

Another proposal was to sell the house as a private residence. This idea faces logistical problems because the house is zoned as open space. To rezone the land and turn it into residential would require the state Legislature to approve the change. Sullivan didn't think that this was the best avenue either.

"We bought this house as a community and it should be turned into something that the entire community can benefit from. To put a residence in there is just asking for trouble," he said.

Carol Rankin, of 74 Aaron River Road, agreed the house should serve as a resource to the entire community. "The property is one of the last places in Cohasset where the public has access to the water. To lose that would be a travesty," she said.

Russ Bonetti, chairman of the Hagerty Committee, said fundraising has posed a problem for those interested in remodeling the house. "After nine years with the town as the landlord and one failed project, the town should either sell the house or just tear it down," he said.

Some abutters to the property were less concerned with what the property would become, but how quickly an organization could turn the eyesore into something beneficial. Jim Ward, of 36 Parker Ave., said "the neighbors are concerned that the building is deteriorating rapidly. Whatever the town chooses to do with the house we ask that it be immediately rehabbed because we can't stand the shape it's in."

Another idea which was quickly dismissed was local developer Noel Collins' proposal to swap land with the town. He asked the selectmen to consider taking his property at 365 North Main St., known locally as the Edison Plant, in exchange for the Hagerty property.

Faced with such a number of proposals, Town Manager Mark Haddad said he would meet with Town Counsel to discuss the zoning regulations and bring those findings to selectmen at a later time. The board has not scheduled its next hearing for the Hagerty House but assured residents that there will be one.

residents are upset that the cell towers are ruining the landscape.

Jean and Randy Patterson, of 12 Ledgewood Farm Drive, are leading a lawsuit against Omni-point and the town of Scituate in an effort to tear down a cell tower that was constructed on the Scituate/Cohasset line at 1010 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

"If I sit in my office and look out the window, all I see is a cell tower, it's just ugly," Jean Patterson said.

In March of 1999, Omni-point approached the Scituate Planning Board in an attempt to gain a permit to build a tower. The abutters were furious and went to public meetings with petitions in hand to try and sway the Planning Board not allow the tower to be built. They succeeded, but Omni-point sued the town citing the Federal Communications Act. In an apparent move to avoid litigation, Scituate relented and allowed the tower to be built. The Pattersons aren't giving up.

"We plan to see this lawsuit through till the end. We're fighting because the site on which the tower was constructed is so visible and such a detriment to the beauty of the town," Jean Patterson said.

Adrian Paul, a spokesman for Sprint PCS, said the communication companies usually try to compromise with the towns in regard to tower placement. However, Paul said a town that resists the companies' requests will be inadequately prepared in the long run. "A town that doesn't keep up to speed in this age will suffer. If we were discussing this 80 years ago people would have complained about phone lines being put in, and look how dependent we are on them now. Cell phones are here to stay," Paul said.

Building inspector Bob Egan said usually the companies have been accommodating. "I guess the companies could dig in their heels and cite the Federal Communications Act and tells us to shove it, but they haven't," Egan said. Egan also said in order for a company to build a structure over 45 feet it must obtain a variance from the zoning board of appeals.

Woody Chittick, chairman of the zoning board, said while most residents are concerned with how the appearance of the tower is not pleasing to the eye, they fail to see the benefits, such as improved cellular service and possibly a financial gain.

Koed said an owner of land could stand to generate up to $100,000 a year if he agreed to have a tower placed on his property. For example, if there were to be towers placed on the water department's land, water rates could be reduced, obviously benefiting many in the town, he said.

Planning board chairman Al Moore said he believes the town could use a new tower. "The town needs a tower in the downtown area where there is horrible wireless coverage. It is so frustrating when you can't get the service you want," he said.

He emphasized that there are creative ways to put up a cell tower, such as putting an antenna on a church spire or town hall.

Paul said that this is the preferred method. "It's cheaper for us and less of a visual distraction to put the antennas in a high spot that has already been constructed," Paul said.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, has proposed a bill that will grant local governments more authority in regulating cell tower placement. According to the Hedlund aide Kate Putney, the bill is incorporated into this year's budget proposal so it could be some time before the issue is resolved. Last year, Hedlund proposed a similar bill which passed in the Senate but was vetoed by the Governor, she said.

PREP SCHOOL BOARDING FOR TODAY'S FAMILY

5-Day Boarding At Worcester Academy...

Thinking about secondary school options for next September? Like the idea of challenging academics in a supportive environment, smaller class sizes, individual attention, competitive athletics, extensive music and theater opportunities, and the chance to meet other students from around the world? But not sure you're ready for a full 7-day boarding program far away from home? Then read on.

The 5-Day Boarding Program at Worcester Academy offers the best of both worlds. Students get all the benefits of an independent school boarding experience - enriching college prep academics, development of talents, and personal growth in a caring community. Parents know that their child is competing at the highest academic, athletic and artistic levels, and are close enough to visit for games or performances. And families have the opportunity to spend quality time together on the weekends.

If you'd like to learn more about the 5-Day Boarding Program at Worcester Academy, call the Admission Office at (508) 754-5302 today.

...It's a Win-Win Situation.

Don't know much about history

Eighth-graders struggle in MCAS history section

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Who was the emperor of China in the late 17th century? Name 10 patriots who signed the Declaration of Independence? Can't do it, well neither could Cohasset eighth-graders.

While Cohasset students overall did admirably in the MCAS ranking, placing 15th in the state out of a possible 300-plus, history was one area where they didn't fare so well.

Cohasset eighth-graders ranked well over 100 in the state in the history/social science part of the test, but school officials say there is no reason for concern.

Ruth Fennessey, curriculum coordinator for the Cohasset School Department, said the problem is not with the students, it's with the test. She said that of all the eighth-grade students in the state who took the test, none fell into the advanced category; 10 percent were proficient, 48 percent needed improvement and 41 percent failed.

In Cohasset, none of the students were advanced in history/social science, 12 percent were proficient, 60 percent needed improvement and 27 percent failed. Fennessey said with 0 percent of the commonwealth falling into the advanced category, the state needs to lower its benchmark for achieving the highest standard.

For a frame of reference, in the English/Language Arts section, 8 percent of eighth-graders in the state were advanced and in the mathematics section, 11 percent fell into the advanced category.

Mark DeGiacomo, a member of the school committee, was particularly upset about the rankings.

"I'm a history major and I love history so to me, the results were striking," DeGiacomo said.

> "I'm a history major and I love history so to me, the results were striking."
> — Mark DeGiacomo, school committee

Fennessey said one of the difficulties of the test is that it covers such a large range of material. The test evaluates students' knowledge of world history, US history, geography, economics, and civics and government.

"The test covers too much of a wide range of history for students to excel in anyone one section. The state needs to rethink how much it tests," Fennessey said.

Cohasset eighth graders did especially poor on the U.S. and world history section and struggled on the open ended, or essay questions.

The results were presented to the School Committee last week by Fennessey, who stressed how difficult it is to interpret the scores. While most students did really well in one section, they struggled on another.

The purpose of the MCAS exam is to help school districts align curriculum with the state curriculum frameworks so that certain subject matter is covered at a particular grade level regardless of what town the student lives in.

Cohasset Middle-High School Principal Michael Jones said the exams' results are not a test of a students' intelligence and do not completely reflect what the students have learned. "A lot of success for the test is based on how well one is able to take a test, much like the SATs," Jones said.

Fennessey said changes to the curriculum will probably occur at the sixth-grade level which is now slotted as an elective year for the school department. She said the schools will now try to gear their curriculum toward the areas in which students did not do as well.

Supt. Edward Malvey said that if additional text books and work books are needed, they will probably come forward through a budget request. The new school budget is currently up in the air, but should be finished in about a month.

Hands across Old Glory

"It's such a powerful image with all the hands," says Diane Kennedy of the art center about the project, which is still a work in progress. She got the idea from a similar flag that was part of a video montage she saw on TV following the Sept. 11 tragedy in New York City.

"I wanted to come up with a community art project [with] both our mantra/space and I thought this was it.

"It's a great community project, a great art project and it's timely," Kennedy said. "It's a unifying concept."

Plans are to have the 8 ft. by 15 ft. flag, which is made of sailcloth, at the art center and then traveled to various area churches, schools and groups in Cohasset and beyond that could like to "borrow it" at no cost.

Marjorie Perlmutter, an art center volunteer, provided photo assistance for adults and helped with many wiggly, enthusiastic little hands Saturday as requested by the day. She had to entertain the over-prompt 10 year-olds at one point so they would keep their blue dabs off of each other's hands.

Although adding boys of hands to the flag looked easy Saturday when an array of individuals and families made the trek upstairs at the Ripley Road art center building to add their personal touch, the work to get the dimensions just right was painstakingly precise.

"Within the artistic creativity, there is a real flag," Kennedy explained.

Standard proportions of the American flag are important, as Kennedy took out her calculator to show the blue area, dubbed the "canton," and the 13 stripes all had to have specific measurements.

Kennedy thinks the flag, which will have grommets for mounting horizontally or vertically, would make a great backdrop for an elementary school production, for example. She pointed out Cohasset's Osgood School where the pupils are learning about the flag is currently decorated in red, white and blue.

She says the red, white and blue hands of all sizes and shapes show diversity and provide moving imagery for the project that crosses the generations. Some prints are so detailed that the lines of the palm show stories others made by little hands, look like birds or trees. The youngest pair of hands on the flag is from a six-month-old baby and the oldest belonged to a woman in her 80s.

"The hands speak volumes about what the flag stands for," Kennedy says. "They have so much personality."

Wallace and Nancy St. John of Eagle Flag of America Inc. in North Weymouth donated the sailcloth with finished edges and grommets for the project. The art center asked for a small donation from participants Saturday to offset the cost of the paint.

For information about borrowing the flag, call the art center at 781-383-ARTS.

Memorial to Cohasset's Gold Star Mothers dedicated dichotomy of war stronger than ever," said keynote speaker U.S. Navy Capt. Jane McCarthy, who is assigned to the United States Public Health Service. "The patriotism and love of our country – and the dread of sending our sons and daughters into harm's way."

McCarthy, who served as an Army nurse during Vietnam, explained the Gold Star tradition has its roots during World War I when flags were displayed from homes, businesses, schools and churches with a blue star for each person on active duty.

"A gold star was stitched over the blue star to show those who had given their lives for their country," she said.

The memorial, which was designed by Cohasset's David Hassan, consists of an eight-foot high white granite centerpiece flanked by 22 stones with the names of mother and son. The memorial was paid for as part of the cemetery expansion project, the cost of which will be recovered through the sale of graves, said Glenn Pratt of the Veterans Memorial Committee that organized Sunday's dedication.

At the start of the solemn ceremony, a parade of local veterans marched into the newly expanded cemetery off North Main Street. The Brockton-based Cosmo Legion Band provided an array of patriotic music and Cohasset's own Lily Sestito sang "Gold Bless America" at the close of the event.

During the benediction, the Rev. Gary Ritts offered a prayer for peace and a blessing for world leaders so that "we may continue to strive for a final Armistice Day."

[At 11 a.m., Nov. 11, 1918, the Armistice was signed to end World War I. Congress made the date a federal holiday in 1938 and after World War II, the day became known as Veterans Day.]

Following McCarthy's speech, a local representative spoke about each of the 20th century wars during which Cohasset soldiers lost their lives. Then a family member or friend walked up from the audience to place a single red rose at the base of one of the 22 individual monuments honoring a Gold Star Mother and her son.

Eleanor Bleakie, who lost an uncle in World War I and a brother in World War II, said 250 Cohasset men and women served during World War I and five made the ultimate sacrifice. Ralph Perroncello, a World War II veteran, said 350 Cohasset men and women answered their country's call in World War II and eight young men failed to return to their families. One hundred and fifty from Cohasset served during the Korean War and one lost his life, said veteran Cliff Jones. And Wayne Harrington, U.S. Marine Corps, said 300 from Cohasset served during the 14 years of the Vietnam War and eight "made the supreme sacrifice."

After all the individual monuments were dedicated, Gold Star mothers June Simeone and Elizabeth "Betty" Maree – whose sons Craig Simeone and Edward Maree lost their lives in Vietnam – placed a wreath at the base of the memorial's centerpiece that states:

"Dedicated to these Gold Star Mothers, who lost their sons. They know best the price of freedom. May the inspiration found here allow us to reflect on the lost dreams of a mother and son."

Black Rock Golf Community moves forward in Hingham

Facility will open in late summer

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Developer George McGoldrick's goal of creating a premier private country club on the South Shore offering panoramic views of rolling woodlands and open fields is taking shape right here in Hingham.

The ground was broken at Black Rock Golf Community — a luxury residential cluster development off Ward Street, which includes an 18-hole private championship golf course, family-oriented country club and 148 stone and shingle design townhouses — during the summer.

"Golf is a great multi-generational activity for people from age five to 100 as well as families," McGoldrick said.

The refundable $100,000 deposit required from members has not been a deterrent. Already, 225 of the 250 memberships available to the public have been sold, with 75 in reserve for interested residents.

The housing units will be marketed — first to members — at the end of this month.

The current membership list includes 130 Hingham and more than 30 Cohasset residents.

According to McGoldrick, the money from deposits is used as capital to construct the course.

Area residents have been quick to take advantage of the opportunity to join, in light of the long waiting lists at other private golf clubs.

That fact was the driving force behind the creation of Black Rock Golf Community, so-named for the veins of black rock that run through the granite outcroppings.

"Being interested in development, it was only natural for me to fill that need," McGoldrick, a Cohasset resident, said. "I wanted a low-density component, without housing lining each hole, like in some golf communities."

"Golf is a great multi-generational activity for people from age five to 100 as well as families."

— developer George McGoldrick of Cohasset

Members will also enjoy a full-service athletic center, tennis courts and Olympic-sized swimming pool once the facility opens late next summer.

The course provides a variety of wide-open links, ranging from the typical New England through-the-woods style to ones surrounded by unique rock formations, such as the amphitheater featured on the 10th green. A pond surrounds three of the holes.

While the country club itself is family-oriented, the housing is geared towards empty-nesters who want to downsize their dwellings.

"This kind of housing gets people out of their big houses and provides a wonderful golf facility close to Boston for those who are still working," McGoldrick said. "It also means retirees don't have to move to the Cape to access good golfing opportunities."

Much of the nearly 400-acre site — a former 100-year quarry operation which provided crushed gravel for the Big Dig — will remain as open space, including the golf course and wetlands.

Stone from the quarry, which historically provided rock used to build seawalls along the East Coast, is also being used in the development.

The project involves reclaiming what McGoldrick calls a "lunar-type landscape" due to damage to the property resulting from past uses, including hundreds of acres of wetlands.

Challenging projects don't deter McGoldrick a real estate developer for 17 years, in the least.

In fact, he spent six years transforming the Custom House in Boston from a deteriorating, vacant building into a vibrant center of activity.

Outcroppings

At Black Rock Golf Community, golfers will enjoy teeing off in a unique setting framed by huge ledge outcroppings within a 6,800-yard, par-71 layout. Eighth-five acres of wetlands have been integrated into the course to preserve the "natural" feel of the land.

Even in November, the newly planted grass on the course was still green due to this year's unusually mild weather, which has also allowed for an accelerated construction schedule.

The practice facility offers a 350-yard driving range, creative short-yard area and practice putting green.

The entire course blends into the natural setting, framed by stands of mature trees.

"It looks like the course has been there forever," McGoldrick said. "Each hole has a unique feature, from rock formations to old quarry holes."

Architect Brian Silva of Cornish, Silva and Mungeam of Uxbridge, who has won awards for his work, is known for his traditional-style courses.

"The best golf courses were built during the 1920s and 1930s, and the architect has taken the best features of those and incorporated them into the Black Rock golf course," McGoldrick said. "He had to decide how to make best use of the land, routing the course around it."

The site now includes a 29-acre parcel of former town conservation land located in the center of the development. In October, the legislature approved a bill allowing Hingham to swap the piece of land for 26 acres on Main Street, owned by McGoldrick.

The property, which was formerly Pushcart Farm, abuts conservation land.

The land swap allows the developer to move the amenities closer to the clubhouse and provides space for additional residential units.

Water for the Black Rock project will be provided by Massachusetts-American Water Company, but private wells located on the property will be used to irrigate the golf course.

During the long winter months, members and future members will likely be dreaming about the grand opening that will occur next summer.

Wompatuck enters final clean-up stage

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

There's good news for the thousands of bikers, walkers, hikers and naturalists who frequent Wompatuck State Park every year. Cleanup of the 125-acre ammunition depot – referred to as the Hingham Annex – will soon get underway, officials announced.

The parcel, which is currently controlled by the Army, is located at the end of Leavitt Street in Hingham.

The clean-up paves the way for the property to become part of the state park system under the Department of Environmental Management (DEM).

Adding the Annex property to the existing state park will provide a solid link between the watershed lands of both Hingham and Cohasset, Whitney Woods (maintained by the Trustees of Reservations) and Wompatuck State Park, creating a 5,000-acre contiguous area of quality recreational space.

Wompatuck State Park offers a variety of activities throughout the year, including camping, mountain biking, family excursions, jogging, picnicking and bird watching.

The addition of more than 100 acres of recreational space will be welcomed by residents and others who visit the park.

The United States Army Forces Command Base Realignment and Closure Office, located in Georgia, recently awarded a contract to Parsons Engineering Science of Canton, Mass., to perform the clean-up of the park. The work will be done under a Guaranteed Fixed Price Remediation, which enhances the Army's environmental remediation process by establishing a predetermined project cost and completion date.

The environmental work is being accomplished under the guidance of the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection.

Hingham Town Administrator Charles Cristello has worked with the United States Army Corps of Engineers, National Guard (which assisted with the demolition process), DEM, state environmental officials and Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, to bring about the clean-up of the sight and perform work related to safety issues.

The process has spanned nearly a decade, involving tearing down large, dilapidated transportation, vehicle maintenance, production and warehouse buildings still standing on the property and the removal of asbestos, underground storage tanks and contaminated soil.

Additional environmental remediation was requested by the state Department of Environmental Protection, according to Cristello, including further monitoring of the site with relation to the soil, drains and leeching fields.

"In terms of environmental work, this is the last thing that needs to be resolved," Cristello said. "This should be the final contract that once finished, will result in a clean site to be transferred to DEM and then incorporated into Wompatuck State Park."

The state still has work to perform with regard to some of the remaining buildings, which may be accomplished with further assistance from the National Guard, according to Cristello.

Last year, state DEM Commissioner Peter C. Webber committed an amount not to exceed $300,000 for demolition of remaining structures, which the department says need to be removed.

The site was used to manufacture and store ammunition during World War II. The property was also used as an Army training facility and to repair vehicles. There was also activity there during the Korean and Vietnam conflicts.

The Annex was part of a 3,700-acre, Navy-owned parcel of land which the federal government declared surplus and began turning over to the state in the early 1960s. Most of the property has become part of Wompatuck State Park.

Rob Carlezon and Dean Kennedy

These two provided most of the offense for the Youth Football StingRays in their 14-6 Super Bowl win over Duxbury last week. Carlezon, the team's fullback, got the Cohasset/Scituate Peewee team on the board first with a 25-yard run, after Kennedy, the team's quarterback, had directed them down the field. The two teamed on the other side of the ball for the backbreaking TD in the second half, when Carlezon pressured the Duxbury QB into throwing an interception and Kennedy made the pick and 70-yard return.

Jason Brown has been a workhorse all season for the 8-1 Skippers.

Perseverance

Hard work has carried Jason Brown to the top

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

For most high school students, the summer is a time to relax and not even think about school sports. Jason Brown is not like most high school athletes.

The senior tailback for Cohasset's 8-1 football team woke up at 4:30 in the morning six days a week this summer to hone his skills and prepare for the upcoming football season.

"Jason definitely trains harder than anyone I know," confirmed Brown's co-captain on the gridiron, Will Prendergast. "He loves to play. He gives it his all every time out."

For Brown, the work is not unnatural; it simply comes with the territory.

"I love to train," said the senior. "I really enjoy working hard. If you work hard, you will have success. It is a lot, but I like to do it."

Brown has trained with Joe Hayes— the personal fitness guru and owner of MaxSpeed in downtown Cohasset, and a former star halfback and trackster at Scituate High— since he was a sophomore. Over the summer, Brown and Hayes would power lift three days a week, and work on agility and speed the other three.

"Joe Hayes has been the inspiration of [Jason's] life," reported Brown's father, Richard.

Added Jason: "He has helped me not just with training, but with attitude and everything."

Because of his militant fitness regimen, Brown was able to accomplish the rare switch from quarterback (which he played his sophomore and junior years) to running back.

"I never doubted it for a second," said Skipper head coach Tony Rolfe on having Brown switch positions. "It was a no-brainer."

His combination of power (270 pound bench press and 320 pound squats) and speed (4.5 second 40) has allowed him to wear down defenses all season long. He has topped 100 yards rushing in all but three games this year, while leading the team in touchdowns.

Brown humbly credits his rushing success to the offensive line, consisting of seniors Prendergast, Brendan Goff, Jari Martin, junior Cosimo Cambi and sophomore Steve Davis.

"Any back will tell you, they are totally dependent on the offensive line," reported Rolfe.

Possibly Brown's best game of the year was the most important, a 20-16 win over Abington. He rushed for 103 yards and two second half touchdowns against arguably the best defense on the South Shore.

Brown had tried his luck as a tailback in Pop Warner and in Middle School. When he reached the high school level, becoming a mobile quarterback rather than a pure running threat seemed to fit better.

In addition to his offensive skills, he is also among the team leaders in tackles as a defensive back.

"He's got a lot of options now," noted Richard Brown. "He is pretty well rounded."

The fact that he has experience at a few different positions could well make him attractive to many Div. 2 and 3 collegiate scouts. Brown has already received offers from several coaches, but the serious discussions

Gridders now face 'must win'

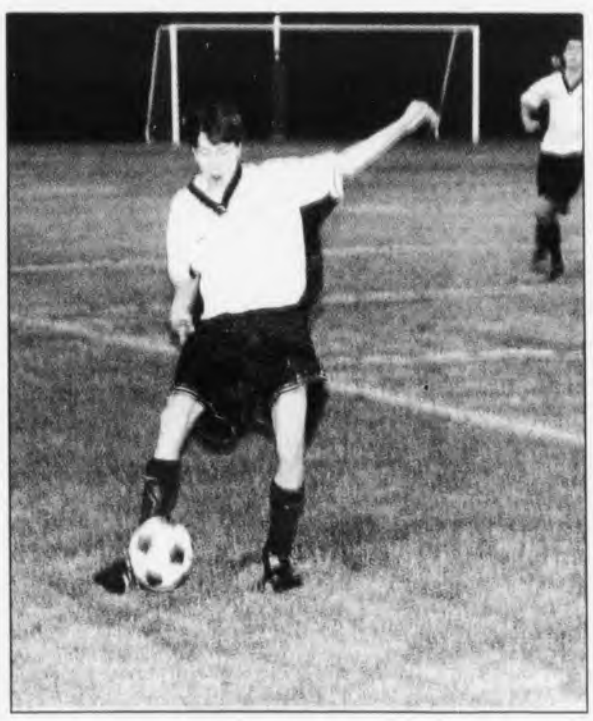
Cohasset must beat Hull to stay in Super Bowl hunt

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Cohasset could have sewn up its first Super Bowl berth in 21 years with a win over Norwell on Friday night. If possible, however, the game meant even more to the Clippers, and it certainly showed in their play—as they walked off with a 13-6 upset win over Cohasset.

"This was our Super Bowl," said Norwell coach Jim Sullivan after his team handed Cohasset it's first loss of the season against eight wins, and improved his own team's record to 7-2-1. "Our kids sure played like that. We still have a mathematical shot at the Super Bowl, and we were going to do everything in our power to keep that alive."

Unfortunately, at approximately the same time Sullivan was speaking these words, Abington (8-1) was, as expected, putting the finishing touches on its 24-7 win over Mashpee (0-9), thus extinguishing the Clippers long shot hopes of a return to the post-season.



This leaves Cohasset and Abington in contention for the South Shore League title and a shot at the Super Bowl. Despite Friday's loss, Cohasset still holds the upper hand by virtue of a thrilling 20-16 win over Abington two weeks ago. A win on Thanksgiving over Hull will place the Skippers among the four teams in the Eastern Mass Div. 5 playoffs.

This advantage served as scant solace to Cohasset coach Tony Rolfe Friday night, however.

"[Norwell] just outplayed us physically," noted the fourth year coach somberly. "And then when we had a

Cohasset High soccer program eyes even bigger things in 2002

If boys soccer coach Dave Nigro tells you nothing else about next year's team, he will say that the bar will be set even higher.

Nigro has made it his practice to set very high goals for his very capable soccer team. He has led his team to the state semi-finals and quarterfinals in his two years as head coach.

And in 2002, he has his sights set on bringing home a State Championship.

"I don't see the state championship as an unrealistic goal," confirmed the Hull native. "If it was, then I wouldn't set it."

In 2000, the team nearly captured the state Div. 3 title by completing three consecutive seeding upsets.

Cohasset's Pozniak inducted to Brown University Hall of Fame

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Like so many young athletes, Frank Pozniak didn't dwell much on the big picture when he was actually playing sports. Years removed from that time, however, the Cohasset resident can now look back with pride on his athletic career and the things he accomplished both as an individual and a member of a celebrated team.

Pozniak, now 46, was presented with a golden opportunity to do just that this weekend when he and all of his teammates from the 1976 Brown University football team were inducted into that school's Hall of Fame.

Pozniak was a starting safety with this team that went 8-1 in his senior year to capture the Ivy League championship — something that's been done by Brown only once since then (1999).

"It was great just to get together with those guys again," said Pozniak. "The more I think back about that time, the more I appreciate what we did.

"I know it sounds like a cliché, but I think the key for us is that we were a true team. As a group, we just got along very well, and that helped us play well together on the field. We had a lot of heart and there was a lot of camaraderie."

A testament to this sense of togetherness, Pozniak asserts, is how well-attended class reunions have been since that time. He figures close to ninety percent of his '76 team was there for the 10- and 20-year reunions, as was the case at this year's very special 25th anniversary.

Presiding over this weekend's festivities was ESPN icon Chris Berman, one of Pozniak's fellow class of '77 alums. "Boomer" was the radio voice of the Bears during their championship run.

"He was quite a character even then," notes Pozniak of Mr. "way-backwayback."

Sadly, one member of the team could not be there this year. Charlie Margiotta. After graduating two years behind Pozniak, Margiotta went on to become a firefighter in New York City. He rose to the rank of Lieutenant, and fearlessly led his men into the burning World Trade Center on Sept. 11. He was one of the many that never made it out.

Saturday's induction ceremony at the Westin Hotel in Providence was attended by Margiotta's widow and children, as well as other family members.

"That tragedy obviously changed the way a lot of us looked at the weekend, but it was nice that his wife and kids were there to represent him," said Pozniak. "Charlie was definitely there in

Cohasset's Motley helps lead the way to D1 sectional crown

By Julie Ann Nevero

In last season's Div. 1 post-season tourney the Notre Dame Academy soccer team didn't make it past the first round. Riddled with injuries, the team was not its usual self.

This year, however, things are much different.

"In the backfield, senior Sarah Motley, of Cohasset, has been solid"

The Aces entered the Div. 1 South Sectional totally healthy and were boasting an undefeated 15-0-3 record, drawing the No. 2 seed. And yet despite the loss of junior Nicole Dunn – who sprained her ankle in the quarterfinals of this year's tourney – NDA has made it very clear that this year, it's their turn.

Thanks to outstanding defense and a second half hat trick by junior Niki Cross, of Pembroke, the Aces defeated No. 1 seed Oliver Ames, 3-0, to win the Div. 1 South Sectional title.

Going into the game, NDA coach Jose Arana said he knew the game would be tough.

"They play a tough schedule and have a lot of experience. They'll be tough to beat," he said. "We're not going to make any changes. We're just going to continue to play our

Squirt-B team 'Cruz-es' to first win

COASTAL STARS 'GAME OF THE WEEK'

What a week for newly appointed Plymouth County District Attorney, Tim Cruz. On Thursday morning at the State House in Boston, Cruz was surrounded by family, friends, supporters, and political luminaries as he was being sworn in as the new D.A. by acting Governor Jane Swift. On Saturday morning at 9:45 a.m., Cruz stood in an unheated locker room at Rockland Arena surrounded by 10-year-old hockey players and their victory starved parents.

Cruz thought he faced pressure in front of those political heavyweights on Thursday at his swearing in, but nothing was as daunting as facing his heretofore winless Coastal Stars Squirt B team as they prepared for their match up with an impressive South Shore Eagle team.

Cruz, trying to capture the momentum that his gubernatorial appointment provided, harkened back to his old trial lawyer days in his pre-game remarks as he tried to convince a jury of 10 yr. olds that they could in fact win the game.

The Stars hit the ice full of vigor and conviction and jumped out to an early 1-0 lead as Cohasset forward Andy McKenna registered his first of three goals. Once McKenna put the Stars in the lead they fell back into a defensive posture, relying heavily on the goaltending of Marshfield goalie Chris Harrington as well as the superlative defensive play of Star's defensemen Alex Cruz, Mike Horan, Nick Smith, and Luke Donovan. Horan, in addition to his solid defensive play, also demonstrated a knack for offense with several well timed rushes up ice to help jump start some offensive pressure. Coach Cruz remarked that Luke Donovan was particularly impressive in playing his best game of the year. The tenacity and aggressive fore checking of defensemen of Alex Cruz and Nick Smith neutralized the Eagle's offensive attack and kept the Eagle's off the board until late in the second period.

With seven minutes left in the second the Eagles scored two quick goals taking the lead and shocking an otherwise confident Stars team. The Eagles lead did not last long as McKenna scored his second goal of the game off a blistering wrist shot.

The third period began with the score tied 2-2 and both teams playing well defensively. It was the Eagles who broke the defensive stalemate as they went up 3-2 early in the third. Midway through the third the persevering Stars pulled even as Stars sniper McKenna went into his off wing corner, dug free the puck, then dished it out to line mate Maggie Burke who one timed it past the Eagle goalie for the game's tying goal.

The synergy of the first line centered by Chad McLean, with Burke and McKenna as his wingers, was evident throughout the whole game. McLean was a force all over the ice as he back-checked, fore-checked, and created offensive opportunities. Burke's selfless consistent play was a key factor in McKenna's four point day.

With five minutes left in the game and the score tied it looked it might be another 'moral' victory for the hard fighting Stars. The Eagles had several opportunities thwarted by the stalwart play of Stars forwards Brian Meehan and Matt Kerens to keep the game close. And finally with less than four minutes left McKenna released a rocket of a shot beating the goalie glove side to put the Stars up by one, enabling them to secure their first victory.

Cruz's assistant coach and league president, Ed Burke, was ecstatic with the team's effort and applauded every member of the team. As for newly appointed Plymouth County D.A. Cruz his week of good fortune was topped off by his team's first win. An exhausted Coach Cruz said after the game that if that game was a trial McKenna was his star witness. Verdict in- victory Cruz and company. Case closed.

game and we'll see what happens."

What happened is now history.

The OA shutout was the second in as many tourney games for NDA sophomore goalie Holly Sands, of Hanover, and the Aces' defense. Sands was outstanding in the team's 3-0 win over No. 3 seed Bridgewater-Raynham in last Thursday night's semifinals, making many key saves in what was once a close game. In four tourney games, Sands has allowed just one goal, while NDA has scored 12.

Both the OA and B-R games started out similarly for the Aces. In both games there was no score after the first half and in both games NDA powered to score three goals in the second.

Against Oliver Ames, it was all Cross. The junior first struck 15 minutes into the second half, first beating an OA defender and firing from 37 yards out, sending the ball over the head of Tiger goalie Jessica Briody and into the upper left corner. It was the first goal scored against OA in three tourney games as they recorded 3-0 shutouts against New Bedford and Whitman/Hanson, and a 1-0 win over Newton South in the semifinals.

While the Cross' first goal would prove to be all the Aces would need, the junior was not done yet. With just under 19 minutes left to play, Cross struck from almost the same spot, taking a pass from senior co-captain and midfielder Anne Reed, of Abington, and booting a left-footed shot from 30-yards out.

Cross completed her hat trick with less than three minutes remaining, beating a rushing Briody to the ball and chipping it over the goalie's head to give NDA the 3-0 win and its second Sectional championship in three years.

The Aces were scheduled to face Div. 1 North champ Andover in the Eastern Mass. final yesterday. A win would send NDA to the Div. 1 State Championship. Andover, the No. 7 seed in the North, defeated Medford (4-0), Chelmsford (3-1), Lincoln-Sudbury (4-3) and Newton North (1-0 OT) in the tourney.

Cross wasn't the only NDA player to record a hat trick in the tourney this year. In the Aces' 3-0 quarterfinal win over Dennis-Yarmouth, Reed led the way, scoring all three NDA goals.

While the Aces' offense has certainly been on fire as of late, so too has the team's defense. In addition to Sands' terrific play in the net, a number of NDA players have been leading the defense in front of her. In the backfield, senior Sarah Motley, of Cohasset, and sophomore Stephanie Towle, of Hingham, have been solid, while senior co-captain Michaela McDonnell, of Marshfield, junior Staci Wieneko, of Pembroke, and freshman Jess Haeffner – who has started the last two games since Dunn's injury – have all delivered solid defense on the wings.

Haeffner had a great game in the semifinal win over B-R, notching a goal and an assist in her first start of the year.

"She's earned her place before, but she really played great tonight," Arana said of Haeffner last Thursday night. "We lost a good player in Nicole (Dunn), but now it's Jess' turn to start."

Cross assisted on what proved to be the winning goal against B-R, which was scored by junior Jen White, of Plymouth. White also scored the second goal of the game, which was assisted by Haeffner, who scored the third goal on an assist from Towle.

spirit.

Fortunately, there was still time for happier recollections over the weekend.

Teammates reminded Pozniak of the big interception he made to seal a late-season win over URI in '76.

"It's nice to remember that rather than all of the near-interceptions I dropped," joked Pozniak, who had four INTs for his career. "I think I probably led the country in that category."

Pozniak was certainly a lot more sure-handed than he gives himself credit for. If his three-year stint as a starter in the defensive backfield isn't proof enough of this, then his three years as a starting middle infielder for the Brown baseball team should cinch it.

Pozniak is, in fact, one of only a handful of three-year, dual varsity sport participants in Brown history.

"Not much of a hitter, pretty good glove," assessed Pozniak of his collegiate baseball career, continuing his bent toward humility.

Nowadays, Pozniak — who hails originally from Amsterdam, New York — limits his athletic activities to coaching his own children. Frank and wife Paula have settled in Cohasset and have three children: Paul, 10, Claire, 8, and Grace, 6. This spring, Paul played baseball and dad was only too happy to join him in the dugout.

"Sports have provided a lot of nice memories for me," he said. "So it's nice being there with my kids, seeing them create some nice memories for themselves."

Skippers really belonged in the top tier of the teams. Collecting 13 regular season wins, Cohasset drew the seventh seed in the tournament.

Cohasset dominated its first round game en route to a shut out over West Bridgewater, but was eliminated by SSL foe Norton in game number 2.

"I think we got pushed around a bit," assessed Nigro of the physical 3-0 loss at Wheaton College.

The Skippers had tied and lost to the Lancers in their two regular season meetings. A tournament loss to a league opponent is always more than disheartening.

"I am disappointed in the way it ended, and I am sure [the players] are too," admitted Nigro. "But you have to aspire to do better than the previous year."

Cohasset had excellent senior leadership across the board this year.

Matt Bilodeau, a national-level club soccer player who made the All-Star team, possessed the rare ability to dominate a game using finesse over power. Nigro conceded, though, that Bilodeau's skill in the middle of the field sometimes rendered teammates less effective, as they tended to wind up "just watching him play instead."

Bilodeau's fellow captain, Pete Maitland, was also elected to the league all-star team after serving as the team's solid rock at sweeper/stopper. A very fast and physical defender, Maitland kept opponents' shots on net to a very low total.

"He was very steady for us back there," said the coach, making note of Pete's abilities to perform at several defensive positions. "He did whatever I asked him to do."

A tri-captain with Bilodeau and Maitland, Tim Baird completed his fourth year as a varsity starter with an excellent season at left forward.

"Tim played really well all year," lauded the coach. "With his speed, we were able to utilize him very well."

Baird was instrumental in what Nigro considered the highlight of the season: a 1-0 win over Norwell. Baird scored late in the second half to give Cohasset the win. The victory was extra sweet for Baird, as he became the first one in his family (Tim's three older brothers all played for the Skippers) to take down the Clippers.

Seniors Jay Bertovich, Dan Kinchla and Steve Laney were three of the most physical players on the team, stepping up for games against teams like Norton.

"They were all quiet," started Nigro of his six seniors, "but they did a very good job leading the team."

Next year, the team will be led by four returning seniors, All-Star forward/sweeper Greg O'Connell, attacking playmaker forward/goalie Curt Kahn, speedy midfielder Robert Hickey and a very nice new addition, forward Evan Pestone.

The foursome will team up with a core of now experienced underclassmen for what should be another successful season.

At least, that's what Coach Nigro will be expecting.

couple of chances to finally do something in the second half, we turned it over. You just can't let a team like Norwell off the hook like that and expect to win."

After the first half ended in a 6-6 tie, the Skippers coughed up their first two possessions of the second half in Norwell territory.

Norwell's Mike Mohan picked off a short pass from Cohasset quarterback Mike Snowdale inside the 15-yard line. His return set the Clippers up at their own 23-yard line. It took the hosts 10 plays to cover 77-yards and take the lead in the game.

Norwell captain and star halfback John Coleman did the bulk of the damage on what turned out to be the game winning push, carrying seven times for 56 yards, including the final 12 on a quick-hitter over right guard that popped him through untouched into the end zone. The PAT boot by Ryan Murphy made it 13-6 with 9:54 remaining in the game.

The Skippers responded by marching right back into Norwell territory, a big 27-yard pass from Snowdale (8-for-15 passing, 122 yards, one TD) to Tom Anderson putting them in business first-and-10 at the Clippers' 21 yard line. Two plays later, however, Cohasset back Jason Brown was stripped by Murphy as he attempted to cut around him. Murphy fell on the ball at the 15-yard line with 7:10 showing on the clock.

Cohasset would not get the ball back. The Clippers proceeded to eat up all of that time, along with all of the Skippers timeouts, with as impressive a display of power football as you're likely to witness at the high school level.

The Clippers ran off 14 plays and chewed up 62 yards to ice the game, quarterback Steve Sullivan running the clock out by taking a couple of knees after Norwell converted on its fourth 3rd down run of the drive, this final one a 6-yard run by Coleman on third-and-three.

"That final drive told the story of the game," offered Sullivan. "It came down to our offensive line. John Chappell, Tom Hannon, Tim Hunt, Sam Freed, Ryan Murphy and Brent Smith—that's my offensive line. They made the difference in the game tonight with their consistent push."

The main beneficiary of that push was Coleman, who finished with 30 carries for 193 yards—his seventh consecutive 100-plus yard rushing performance. The senior suffered a hyper-extended knee at some point in the first half. Amazingly, though, he did the bulk of his work in the second half (20 carries for 114-yards).

"I think that answers any questions about John's toughness," noted Sullivan with a grin.

Fullback Joe Doyle contributed 76 yards on 13 carries, many of those going for big first downs. Sophomore quarterback Jon Mohan chipped in with 21 yards on three runs and two-of-two passing for 13 yards, and sophomore Andrew Faranick, returning to action after missing the last three weeks with mononucleosis, chipped in with two runs for 11 yards.

In terms of statistics, the only numbers that indicated relative parity in this showdown were on the scoreboard.

The Skippers had possession for a grand total of 12:34 in the 40 minute game, and the Clippers also nearly doubled the overall offensive output, totaling 301 yards on 55 plays to Cohasset's 155 yards on 32 plays.

Unable to mount much of a running attack against the larger Norwell front (16 carries for 44 yards on the night), Rolfe decided early to put his team's offensive fortunes in the hands of Snowdale.

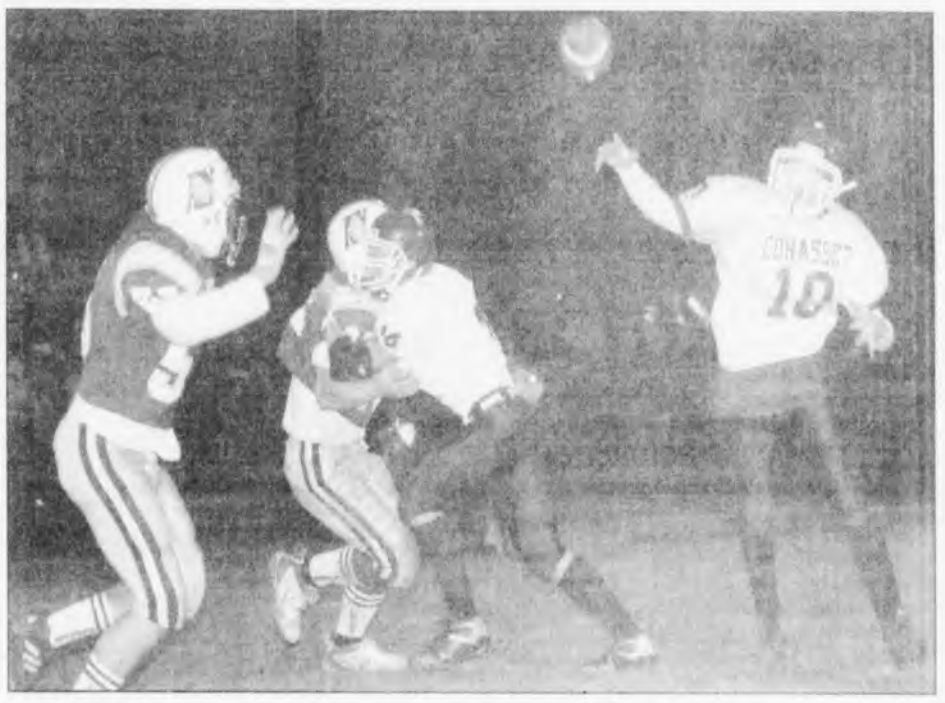
That appeared a wise decision early, as the talented Cohasset signal-caller carried the load on a 13-play, 68-yard scoring drive to open the game. Snowdale showed a great deal of composure in completing first down passes on third-and-10, fourth-and-eight and fourth-and-10 on the drive that ate up the game's initial 4:52. He found favorite target Chris Bilodeau (5 receptions for 54 yards) on this final hookup, on a designed roll out left, in the front corner of the end zone for the 13-yard TD pass. The PAT sailed wide left, however, leaving it a 6-0 game.

Sullivan responded to this drive by shooting a strong side linebacker at Snowdale every time he rolled out for the remainder of the game. This clearly disrupted the Cohasset QB's rhythm, as he was forced repeatedly to eat the ball or throw quickly.

Norwell, which didn't punt all night on six possessions, answered Cohasset's opening salvo by marching 49 yards, but that push died on downs.

After forcing Cohasset to a three and punt possession, however, it took the Clippers just nine plays to cover 75 yards and tie the game. Coleman (big surprise) lugged the lion's share of the load with four carries for 49 yards. A bruising 11-yard run by Doyle up the middle got the ball down to the 1-yard line, setting up the point-producing dive over center by Sullivan.

The Clippers final possessions of the half died on downs at their own 35-yard line when the Skippers held on fourth-and-a foot with 17 seconds remaining. A quick 17-yard hookup from Snowdale to Bilodeau moved the ball to the 19-yard line, and set up a last second field goal attempt. Anderson's 36-yard attempt flew wide, however, leaving the game knotted at 6.



Norwell finishes up its season with their 36th Thanksgiving showdown against Hanover, seeking to add another positive chapter to the story of one of the state's fiercest rivalries.

Cohasset has their must win game out on the Hull peninsula, a truly miserable venue any time the weather is disagreeable. Even if the weather is cooperative, however, Rolfe knows his troops will have their hands full with this Pirates team that played Norwell to a 0-0 tie earlier this season.

"We could have a hurricane out there; you just don't know what you're going to get in Hull," said Rolfe. "This is going to be a miserable week and a half for us, getting ready for this game we have to win. But we put ourselves in this position. At least we're in a position to control our own destiny."

Snowdale (#10) receives instruction from Coach Rolfe.

Cohasset's Mike Snowdale (#10) gets off a pass under heavy pressure, with Jason Brown (#14) doing his best to protect his back.

Cohasset offensive lineman Brendan Goff does his best from the sidelines to rally the defensive troops.

CHS' Tony Rolfe named Coach of the Week

Cohasset High School Head Coach Tony Rolfe has been named the New England Patriots High School Coach of the Week in recognition of his team's 20-16 victory over Abington High School Nov. 2. With last week's victory, Cohasset remained undefeated this season, improving its record to 8-0.

This season marks the sixth year in which the Patriots have joined the National Football League in conducting the High School Coach of the Week program, which recognizes outstanding high school coaches and promotes youth football. Each week during the high school football season, the Patriots will honor a coach from the Greater Boston area as the coach of the week.

The New England Patriots Charitable Foundation will donate $500 to the Cohasset High School football program in Rolfe's name in recognition of his selection as a coach of the week.

With two games remaining, Cohasset has the opportunity to record its first undefeated season since 1959. This season is Rolfe's fourth as head coach at Cohasset and his 30th coaching high school football. He began his coaching career in Virginia and has served as assistant head coach at New Bedford High School and head coach at Hingham High School. In addition to coaching, Rolfe teaches seventh grade at the Cohasset Middle School.

The Patriots High School Coach of the Week is selected by a panel including representatives of the Patriots and WCVB Channel 5, which airs the team's weekly magazine show, "Patriots All Access," on Saturday at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Channel 5 sports anchor Mike Lynch is host of the show.

will commence once the season is over.

"In college, you have to be willing to play anything," he explained, noting also the possibility of running track post-CHS. "You have to be versatile."

With a win on Thanksgiving against the bitter rival Hull Pirates, Cohasset will go to the Div. 5 Super Bowl for the first time in decades.

The 2001 Football Season will certainly go down in the books as one of the truly special accomplishments in CHS history thanks in large part to the one known as Downtown J-Brown.

Cohasset High blanket

These attractive navy colored blankets with white trim include a Skippers logo in the middle.

The cost for one blanket is $50, and $45 each for two or more. All monies go to the C.H.S. Athletic Dept. Interested parties should call Cohasset High Athletic Director Ron Ford at 781-383-6103.

Spring Travel Soccer Registration

Cohasset Soccer Club is now accepting registrations for the Spring Travel Soccer Season. Those players who did not register in the fall must do so by December 21, 2001. Registration forms may be obtained at the Recreation Office in Town Hall. Payment of $70.00 is due at the time of registration. No late registrations are being accepted. Contact Brad or Melinda Murray at 781-383-7017 with any questions.

Own a tape of the instant Classic Abington-Cohasset Game

Seeking to raise money for a new Athletic Trainer at Cohasset High, the C.H.S. Athletic Dept. is making available tapes of this past Friday's huge Skippers victory on the gridiron over league rival Abington. In addition to the game in its entirety, the tape will include the Channel 5 report and highlight reel from the game, as well as snipets from the C.H.S. pre-game rally and Senior Night ceremonies. Also included in the package will be a copy of the game rosters and the game report from the Cohasset Mariner.

The cost of this entire package is $15, with all monies going to the C.H.S. Athletic Dept. Interested parties should call Cohasset High Athletic Director Ron Ford at 781-383-6103.

Youth basketball evaluation sessions

Grades 1-3

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club/Recreation Department request all boys and girls in grades one through three, who registered for youth basketball this season, attend a 45-minute evaluation session so that balanced teams can be drafted. The schedule is as follows:

Saturday, Dec. 1

Grade one, boys and girls, 9 a.m., Deer Hill School

Grade two, boys and girls, 10:30 a.m., Deer Hill School

Grade three, boys and girls, noon, Deer Hill School

For questions or comments, call Jack Worley at 781-383-4109.

Grades 4-6

On Saturday, Dec. 1, the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club will hold evaluations and team selection by all coaches for boys and girls in grades four to eight. The season will begin Saturday, Dec. 9. The evaluation schedule for each grade is listed below. The first 40 minutes will be spent evaluating the boys and girls. The final 20 minutes will be a coach's conference to select the teams. The teams must be selected on that day since the actual games begin the following week.

Boosters basketball registration

The Recreation Department/ Booster's basketball registrations will be held for boys and girls in grades one through eight, at the Town Hall, Saturday, Nov. 17, from 9 to 11 a.m. The fee for the program is $55. Checks should be made payable to: Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club (CBBC), shirt charge is included in the fee. Details on the basketball program will be available at registration. Games are played on Saturdays, but not during any vacation periods in order to avoid any conflicts. The Recreational Basketball Program is made available via the joint efforts of the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club and the Recreation Department, providing youngsters with a teaching and recreation opportunity.

Evaluations will be Saturday, Dec. 1. The CBBC will also register parents who wish to coach and sponsor at the Nov. 17 registration.

This year, two levels of sponsorship are available, Team Sponsor, $75, and Program Book Sponsor, $100.

CHS Fitness Center hours

The Fitness Center at Cohasset High School will be open to the public for use and/or registration during the following days/hours, until 125 members are attained: Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.; and Saturdays, 8:30 to 10:30 a.m.

These hours/days will remain in effect until 125 individuals are registered; at which time the center will be open expanded hours, Monday through Saturday. The fee is $30 per month, per person, and registration is at the Fitness Center, Cohasset High School, 143 Pond St. Please enter the school via the front door located to the right side of the main entrance to CHS.

Icebreaker rowing championships set

Icebreaker: New England Youth Rowing Championships will be held Saturday, Nov. 17, at Windmill Point Boathouse, Hull or Pier 2, Charlestown Navy Yard, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Come watch the best youth open-water rowers in New England — from New York City, New Haven, New Bedford, Boston Harbor, Lake Champlain, and Maine's North Haven and Vinalhaven — compete for the coveted "Key to the Harbor." To put the exploits of these courageous youth crews in perspective, the young people in the Icebreaker race greater distances during this one day of round-robin-style sprint heats than a collegiate crew races in an entire season.

For the past decade, the Icebreaker has been held at the museum's city boathouse, the Navy Yard Rowing Center, located in Boston National Historical Park in the Charlestown Navy Yard.

The day will offer great opportunities to view the intense excitement of the races up close. See more than 200 young people give everything they've got during a day of inspirational athletics and sportsmanship. To confirm the location of the event, or for more information, contact Lory Newmyer.

Youth football trophy night

Sandell earns All-NESCAC honors

Trinity junior co-captain forward Morgan Sandell of Cohasset was selected to the 2001 All-New England Small College Athletic Conference (NESCAC) Men's Soccer First Team.

The Trinity men's soccer squad, coached by Ed Mighten (12th season), posted a 6-8 overall record and a 3-6 league mark but did not qualify for the NESCAC Championship Tournament.

Sandell started all 10 games he played on, before missing the last four contests with a knee injury. Despite the missed games, he finished first on the team and sixth in the NESCAC in scoring with seven goals and five assists for 19 points. A First Team All-NESCAC selection in 2000 as well, Sandell has notched 21 goals and 10 assists for 52 points, including five game-winning goals, in his first three seasons. He is a graduate of the Noble & Greenough School.

Police arrested five last month

October was a relatively slow month for the Cohasset Police Department. There were five arrests, one for operating a motor vehicle without a license, one for operating under the influence of liquor, one for assault and battery, one for disorderly person and finally one for an outstanding warrant, Police Chief Brian Noonan said.

During the month of October the Police Department investigated 14 motor vehicle accidents, none of which resulted in personal injury. There were 179 motor vehicle citations issued totaling $3,965 in fines. Additionally there were 72 parking tickets issued totaling $1,925 in fines.

Also in October the Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 719 calls for police services, of those 93 were Emergency 911 calls.

Finally in the month of October 15 criminal complaints were issued, Noonan said.

OBITUARIES

William H. Catlin

William Catlin

William Hammond Catlin of Wayland and Cohasset, and Delray Beach, Fla. died Saturday, Nov. 10, 2001 at U. Mass Medical Center. He was 63 years old.

Born in Boston, Mr. Catlin was raised in Brookline and graduated from the Dublin School in Dublin, N.H., from Menlo College in California, and from The Rhode Island School of Design in Providence. He spent two years completing graduate work in graphic design in Stuttgart, Germany.

Mr. Catlin worked many years as a graphic designer until his retirement in 1989. He also owned the venerable Haley and Steele Art Gallery on Newbury Street in Boston for a number of years.

He lived at Duck Puddle Farm in Wayland for 34 years where he enjoyed working on his farm. He was a member of The Country Club, and especially enjoyed duck hunting, croquet, travel, attending auctions, and raising and selling Christmas trees. He also owned and took pleasure in several antique cars.

He leaves his beloved wife Julia Jordan Catlin; his devoted children, Blythe Catlin Robinson of Hartford, Conn., and Tristam Catlin Tredgett of Great Bardfield, England; his son, William H. Catlin, Jr. of Duck Puddle Farm in Wayland; his sister Dianne Catlin Gardiner of Palo Alto, Calif.; his brothers Robert Catlin III of Spring Island, S.C. and Anthony Catlin of Weston. He also leaves his two grandsons, Cameron Wesley Tredgett and Oliver William Tredgett.

A memorial service will be held on Friday, Nov. 16 at the First Parish Church in Wayland at 11 a.m. Burial will be private. Funeral arrangements are through the Duckett Funeral Home of Sudbury (division of J.S. Waterman & Sons).

In lieu of flowers, donations may be sent in Mr. Catlin's memory to the Sudbury Valley Trustees, P.O. Box 7, Wayland, MA 01778.

Robert A. Manter

Robert A. Manter, 65, of Hanover, died Sunday, Veterans' Day, Nov. 11, 2001, at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth after a long illness.

Mr. Manter was born in Brockton, the son of the late Henry and Rose (Badeau) Manter. He was raised and educated in Brockton and lived in Hanson before moving to Hanover in 1982.

He trained as a radio broadcaster and was employed as a route salesman for the H.P. Hood Milk Company and later worked as a food broker. After his retirement, he had been employed by the Compass Medical Group in Whitman as a lab courier.

He served in the U.S. Air Force during the Korean War and was a member of the Hanover American Legion Post.

He was an active member of St. Mary's Church in Hanover, where he served as an usher and a greeter.

He was an avid sports fan and enjoyed the company of his 25 much-loved grandchildren.

Mr. Manter leaves his wife, Paula E. (Cowen) Manter; his two sons, Michael of Bridgewater and Tracey of Marshfield; his daughter, Michelle Grondlund of Whitman; and his other children, Tricia Fortin of Cohasset, Kathleen Annis of Weymouth, Joan Kehoe of North Reading, William Eagles of Quincy, Pamela Keenan of Quincy, Robert Eagles of Carver, Debra DiGiusto of Hingham and Cheryl Psaros of Braintree; and his 25 grandchildren.

The funeral Mass will be Wednesday at 11 a.m. in St. Mary of the Sacred Heart Church, 392 Hanover St. (Route 139) in Hanover. Interment will be in Knollwood Memorial Park in Canton. The Sullivan Funeral Home on Route 53 in Hanover has made the arrangements.

Contributions may be made in Mr. Manter's memory to the American Heart Association, 20 Speen St., Framingham 01701-4680.

Kathryn F. Bilodeau

Kathryn Frances (O'Brien) Bilodeau of Cohasset died Nov. 11, 2001, at her adopted daughter's home in Hull.

Mrs. Bilodeau was a member of the Third Order of the Society of St. Francis and the Legion of Mary.

Born, raised and educated in Boston, she was a graduate of Roslindale High School and studied music at the New England Conservatory. She lived in Cohasset for the past 46 years.

Wife of the late Arthur Bilodeau, she leaves two sons, Arthur Bilodeau of Jacksonville, Fla. and Paul Bilodeau of Cohasset; four daughters, Deborah Fuller of Kingston, Gayle Cannon of Hull, Nancy V. Roach of Cohasset and Kathy Jenkins of Cincinnati, Ohio; her adopted daughter, Ellen Sylvester; four brothers, Frank O'Brien of Atlanta, Ga., James O'Brien of Charlotte, N.C., George O'Brien of Roslindale and Edward O'Brien of Hull; two sisters, Evelyn Webster of Jersey City, N.J. and Mildred White of Needham; 22 grandchildren; eight great-grandchildren; a cousin; many nieces and nephews; and a longtime friend, Jean Cyr.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Interment was in St. Paul's Cemetery, Hingham.

Arrangements were by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Contributions in memory of Mrs. Bilodeau may be made to Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Drive, Braintree, 02185 or St. Anthony's Parish Building Fund, 10 Summer St., Cohasset, 02025.

WORSHIP NEWS

Clothing drive at St. Anthony's

A men's clothing drive to benefit the St. Francis House Shelter in Boston will be held this Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 17 and 18 at St. Anthony Parish. Good, used fall and winter clothing, new underwear and socks, and small toiletry items are needed. Men's clothing and items may be dropped off at the parish center on Saturday from 4-7 p.m. and on Sunday from 7:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

St. Francis House is a non-profit, non-sectarian shelter for the poor and homeless of Boston and is based on the compassion and outreach ethics and standards of Francis of Assisi. It offers "life skills training," computer classes, housing assistance, internships, employment/new career guidance, and resume assistance in helping them re-enter life-in-the-mainstream again.

For information, call Paul Rooney at 781-383-6363.

The rite of Christian Initiation for Adults continues each Monday evening in the parish center from 7-8:30 p.m. The RCIA is an ongoing process for adults seeking to learn more about the Catholic faith.

For information, call Ginny McLeod at 781-383-0630, Ext. 20.

'Lessons and Carols' at St. Stephen's

An Advent Service of Lessons and Carols will be presented at St. Stephen's Church at 3 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 2, the first Sunday of Advent. The service will consist of readings from Sacred Scripture foretelling the birth of Christ, as well as choral anthems and congregational hymns and carols that celebrate the season. The St. Stephen Choir and the parish's St. Gregory's Children's Choir will also sing anthems, such as "O Light Divine," "People, Look East," and the "Ave Maria."

The service of Lessons and Carols is an English tradition, exemplified by the service of King's College, Cambridge, England, and St. John's College. Clergy, congregation and choristers alike, gather to celebrate Christ's coming. Word and song lead all into the area of peace and contemplation to meditate on the sacred texts.

The church is at 16 Highland Ave., is handicap accessible, and there is plenty of parking at the village car park.

For information, call 781-383-1083.

Citizens for life

New members are welcome to the next meeting of the Massachusetts cCtizens for Life (South Shore Branch) on Tuesday, Nov. 20 from 7:30-9 p.m. at St. Paul Parish Hall, Fearing Street in Hingham, behind St. Paul School Hall.

The group meets the third Tuesday of each month.

Community Thanksgiving

The Cohasset Community Thanksgiving Eve service including all seven of the town congregations will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 21 at 8 p.m. at Saint Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave. The music will include the 3,000 pipe St. Stephen's organ along with trumpet and trombone and a town-wide choir. The anthem will be Irving Berlin's "God Bless America."

Congregation and choir will join in the hymn, "Rejoice, O Pilgrim Throng." Those who would like to be in the choir should be at the church at 6:30 p.m.

The town-wide Thanksgiving Eve service this year is taking place at a time of world apprehension and conflict, and also heroism and faith. It reminds us that we are to give thanks always for the compassion and strength of the Almighty who is very near to us.

The church altar will be arrayed with harvest fruits and vegetables that afterwards will be donated to the Mary Martha Learning Center in Hingham. The offering at the service will go in part to Oxfam America and its efforts to combat world hunger. In addition, locally, the offering will support Wellspring in Hull which provides a variety of needed social services. Small loaves of bread will be blessed and given to each person who comes. All are invited to attend this Cohasset Thanksgiving Eve celebration at St. Stephen's, Wednesday, Nov. 21 at 8 p.m.

Monday evenings with the Rabbi

At Congregation Sha-aray Shalom, 1112 Main St. in Hingham, Rabbi Stephen Karol will teach a course on Monday evenings in November and December, entitled, "What Judaism Can Teach You and the People You Love About God." The course will be based on Neil Gillman's new book, "The Way into Encountering God in Judaism." This class will be from 8-9:15 p.m. on Nov. 19, 26, Dec. 3 and 10.

Whether your knowledge of Jewish theology and liturgy is advanced or elementary, you are welcome to participate and learn from the Rabbi and your classmates. The book is available in most bookstores. There is no fee for the class itself.

Non-members are always welcome, and the Temple is wheelchair accessible. To get more information, to sign up for this course, or to get directions, please call 781-749-8103.

Abbey series

Benedictine Monks in Hingham announce second speaker in third annual interreligious series, Listening to Other Voices: Spirituality in Everyday Life.

On Thursday, Nov. 15, Maya Tiwari (Maya Ma) will speak on "Spirituality and Healing: Health and Healing in the Vedic Tradition" from 7:15 to 9 p.m. at Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center.

Maya Ma is a female Vedic monk who lives a reclusive life at the Wise Earth Monastery in the Pisgah Mountains of North Carolina. She is a healer in the Ayurvedic medicine and Vedanta tradition and the founder of Mother Om Mission (MOM), a charitable organization with the goal of eliminating violence and poverty by providing health care education to at-risk communities throughout the world. She offers her teaching to community advocates, social workers, inner city youth and their mentors and all artists and citizens who work for the betterment of life. (Future speakers in the 2001-2002 series include Charles Clough Jr., a CEO and deacon on Wall Street; Victor Kazanjian, dean of religious and spiritual life at Wellesley; Allan Palmer, teacher of Chanoyu, the Japanese Art of Tea; and, Tom Beaudoin, author of "Virtual Faith: The Irreverent Spiritual Quest of Generation X.")

Bird walk

The Straits Pond Watershed Association will sponsor a free bird walk from 8 to 10 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 19. Participants should meet on Atlantic Avenue in Hull (at the foot of Summit Avenue). The walk will be led by Sally Avery and all are welcome.

For more information, call Lawry Reid at 781-925-8659 or email: viaspeech@mediaone.net.

Beechwood fair

The Christmas Fair at Beechwood Congregational Church on Church Street will be held Saturday, Dec. 1 from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. The church's famous chowder will be served from 11:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. The sought-after beach glass candy will be for sale as well as fancy work, food items and white elephant articles.

For information, call Linda at 781-383-9131.

T-Day breakfast

The Sons of the American Legion are hosting the annual Thanksgiving Day breakfast from 7-9:30 a.m. at the George H. Mealy Post on Summer Street. Everyone is invited. Adults are $4 and children, $2. All you can eat.

Turkey raffle

Holiday show starts Nov. 23

The Herdmans were the worst kids in the history of the world. They lie, steal and smoke cigars, even the girls. They talk dirty, hit little kids, cuss their teachers and take the name of the lord in vain. So what happens when the meanest, nastiest kids ever meet up with the Christmas Story? You get the Best Christmas Pageant Ever.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present this heart warming holiday show at the Cohasset Town Hall weekends from Nov. 23-Dec. 9.

Director Amy Wilder of Scituate has taken more than 50 children (and a handful of adults) ranging in ages from 4 to 15, haling from Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham, Hull and Rockland and put together a heart-warming and funny show.

Deborah Carlton of Scituate is the music director and Jean DiGiacomandrea of Scituate, who appeared in the show 4 years ago, is producing this holiday show.

The Best Christmas Pageant will open on the day after Thanksgiving and run Friday and Saturday nights at 730 and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. with an extra matinee on Saturday Dec. 8. The show will close on Dec. 9. Tickets are just $10 and can be bought at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset, Front Street Books in Scituate, at the door or by phone at 383-1718. If you are a Girl Scout you can get reduced priced tickets by calling 545-1655. Escorted groups and senior groups are also welcome You may have your tickets reserved by calling Jean at 617-750-8987.

Deck Your Halls!

Fresh balsam Christmas trees and wreaths, tabletop boxwood trees, and sleigh-loads of handcrafted ornaments and gifts will be available at Cohasset's Annual Village Fair, on and around Cohasset Common, on Saturday, Dec. 1, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. A Cohasset tradition for more than 40 years, the Village Fair is a great way to begin your holiday season!

Come greet friends and get a head start on your holiday decorating and shopping. Stop by Town Hall, the Second Congregational Church, St. Stephen's and the First Parish House on Main Street to see all of the beautiful Christmas greens and decorations for sale. All proceeds support Cohasset' churches, regional charities and the Appalachia Service Project.

Christmas trees

First Parish Church in Cohasset is again offering fresh cut balsam Christmas trees and handmade ornaments at the Parish House on Main Street during the Village Fair. Stop by early for your choice of trees ranging from 4- 9 feet tall. All trees are $35. Call (781) 383 -9767 to reserve your tree early, and you'll be automatically entered into a "Your Tree Free" drawing.

Holiday sparkle is meeting topic

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its monthly meeting at the Second Congregational Church Bates Hall Tuesday, Nov. 20, at 9 a.m.

Both Elaine DiGiovanni and Linda Ladd are flower show judges, top award winners at the New England Spring Flower Show and owners of floral design businesses: The Cutting Garden and Petals and Posies — They will demonstrate how to put "razzle- dazzle" into your homes throughout the holiday season..

The Jingle Bell Walk, a Cohasset tradition offered by the SSCC, begins at 2 p.m. on Nov. 23, when Santa Claus arrives by boat with his elves at Cohasset Harbor (Border Street).

After Santa distributes jingle bells to the children, he and his elves will board a hayride and the walk continues along the sidewalks of Elm to Main St. in Cohasset. At 2:30 p.m. the South Shore Community Center welcomes you to partake in cookies, a beverage, and a holiday-sing-along. Holiday music and carols will also be sung by all.

Santa will be upstairs in the center to pose for pictures with you and your children. Please stroll through the village to share in the local shops' holiday ambiance.

At 3 p.m. on Cohasset Common there will be a "Turkey Tot Trot" for ages 3 to 10. You may pre-register for this event for $2 or post register the day of the event for $3 per participant. Proceeds will go to benefit the Nursery School. All participants will receive a prize!

Listen to the bells of St. Stephen's playing from 2:30 to 4 p.m., while enjoying a hayride around the Common. Hayrides will be available from 3 to 4 p.m. At 3:30 p.m., gather around the Cohasset Common to listen to the Rusty Skippers Marching Band. The festivities culminate on Cohasset Common at 4:15 p.m. with the fighting of the tree.

In the event of rain, all outdoor activities will be cancelled and Santa will arrive in the Community Center Gym at 2 p.m.

Exploring movement

The Cohasset Recreation and Cohasset High School come together during a project for community service.

Three high school juniors, Shawna Sullivan, Sarah Dennis and Bryan Bilton, will run a Movement Exploration for ages 4 and 5. These volunteered services will help the children develop their motor skills and basic social skills. It will also provide an opportunity for parents to drop their youngsters off and run a few errands without having to entertain the children.

The program will run on a rotating schedule as follows: 10:50 to 11:40 a.m. Nov. 29, Dec. 6, Dec. 13, and Dec. 20.

Radio host chronicles travels to India

By Michael Marotta
MMAROTTA@CNC.COM

Ilana Marks, who has hosted her live radio and TV show "On the Mark" for the past five years across the South Shore, recently returned from a three-month lecture tour which took her through Hawaii, Australia, New Zealand, India, and England.

After returning home to the South Shore, Marks wrote her first book about the experience. The book is set against the backdrop of India where she visited Sai Baba's Ashram.

The book "The G-String Theory" is an hilarious journey through the paradoxical sensuality of India. It also reveals some spiritual messages of our times.

"It turned out to be a combination of extraordinary and the ordinary. It's every single aspect of life all rolled up."
— author Ilana Marks

Marks will conduct book signings for "The G-String Theory" on Sunday, Dec. 2 at Buttonwoods in Cohasset. There will be a short author-talk, reception and book signing from 2-4 p.m.

The following Sunday afternoon there will be a book signing on Route 228 in Hingham — (the exact address and times will be available on www.ilanamarks.com).

Within the chaos of the street merchants and poverty-stricken children in India, Marks found tranquil moments and a place to access a higher act of consciousness. While she found herself looking for a big experience, she learned to revel in the sometimes mundane instances that made up her surroundings.

This subject is nothing new to Marks, who hosts the radio show, "On the Mark," on Marshfield radio station WATD 1959 FM Sunday nights from 7-8:30 p.m. Her show has been going strong since 1997 and it was the response from listeners, through the radio and Internet, that led to her world lecture tour.

"It turned out to be a combination of extraordinary and the ordinary," Marks said of her book, which she said took merely three weeks to write. "It's every single aspect of life all rolled up."

Spent against the backdrop of India, Marks uses the streets of Bombay to convey her meaning, in an often humorous way.

"When looking for the big experience, we miss (what we are looking for) because it's in the ordinary moment," she said. "And that's all written in the hilarious incidents on the streets of India. It's this juxtaposition of what life is."

The seemingly racy title of the book deals not in scant undergarments, but an analogy of music. With the G string on a guitar, Marks said, if you pluck one g string on a guitar in a room full of guitars, they will all resonate or vibrate at the same frequency.

"After completing the book, the events of Sept. 11 forced her to add an epilogue that deals with coping with such a horrible event.

"I had to write about that was happening in the world from a higher perspective," Marks said. "When I see what's happening, I don't see the apocalypse, but a transitional time that will bring us into an incredible time. I wanted to express this as part of a higher perspective. When you get that perspective, it's all very freeing."

"The G-String Theory" is available at local bookstores or at www.ilanamarks.com

HOW TO BUY A NEW $2,370 FURNACE FOR JUST $598.00!!!

YES! It's absolutely true, you can actually replace your old (and probably very inefficient) furnace and air conditioning for less than you would have to pay at any other time. Hurry this is a limited time offer exclusively from Excel Mechanical!!

WHY WOULD EXCEL MECHANICAL, INC. MAKE THIS INCREDIBLE OFFER?

HERE IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY
Every year the big manufacturers of air conditioners have to guess how many to build to meet the demand. Of course they're never exactly right. So they always have some inventory they must hold over until the next summer season. I went to the manufacturer (York) and contracted for the purchase of 32 premium air conditioners and furnaces in the four most popular sizes used in the Boston area. And, because of the quantity and time of year, I was able to buy them at drastically reduced, below wholesale out-of-season prices.

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN GET A FURNACE FREE
By putting this furnace and air conditioner package together and committing to a do-or-die purchase agreement of 32 systems, I was able to buy both the furnace and the air conditioner for less than you would normally pay for the air conditioner alone! So, if you buy one of these 32 new premium air conditioners, I'll give you the furnace FREE. All I ask for is the $598 in labor it costs to have your furnace installed.

HERE'S HOW
Just call Katie at (617) 628-1144 and set up an appointment for your FREE survey. A design engineer will come and measure your home (and determine the availability of the proper size). He will show you the real world price on the air conditioner that fits your home. Then he will show you the substantial savings now. And it will include all labor and installation materials. Nothing is left out.

Drawing on experience

Marshfield charcoal artist now showing at Borders in Braintree

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Mary Felton can rightfully be described as an artist of the new, contemporary school, not so much for style and genre as for overall approach.

So while the Marshfield-based artist/illustrator works fully in traditional styles and media, she has sought new and resourceful means and methods of producing her work and giving it a public forum. A frequent exhibitor in recent years at galleries, festivals and libraries in the South Shore area, Felton's current show, a collection of 13 charcoal drawings on display through November at Borders Books Café, 255 Grossman Drive, Braintree, successfully presents classic formats and subject matter in an unconventional setting.

"My current body of work consists of drawings using black compressed charcoal on white paper," said Felton in her statement on the recently opened exhibit, which is untitled. "As an art school graduate, my drawing skills were developed from drawing extensively from life, which gave me a classic and solid foundation for my present way of working. Now, I primarily draw from photographs but use them only as reference, manipulating the elements to improve the final design."

"My intent is for the end result to appear as if it were drawn from life. Although actually drawing from life would be ideal, time restraints on me and my models make that approach extremely inefficient. Who has time to spend hours sitting for a portrait? Most professional portrait artists today work this way for this exact reason," Felton said.

Among the portraits, perhaps most noted by observers is the broad-canvas piece "The Boxer," which conveying its stark black-and-white detail of figure and background, may conjure images of Robert De Niro as a young Jake Lamotta in "Raging Bull."

Felton, 29, is a New Hampshire native who began her career as a freelance commercial artist and graphic

Company Theatre unveils 2002 season

Tickets on for all shows on sale Nov. 19

The award-winning Company Theatre in Norwell, has announced its 2002 season offering the best in theatre, music, drama and comedy, featuring five theatrical productions and an eight-show Celebrity Showcase.

The theatrical portion of the 2002 season kicks off in grand style with the national touring company of "Forbidden Hollywood."(Feb. 6 - Feb. 10). On stage for seven performances only, this talented troupe has toured the United States doing their musical lampoons of some of Hollywood's biggest hits and brightest stars, including "Forrest Gump," "Titanic," The Sound of Music," Mel Gibson, Tom Hanks and many others.

With music of Kander and Ebb, "Cabaret," (Mar. 15 - Apr. 7) invites you to enter the divinely decadent Kit Kat Club, where you'll hear classic songs such as "Maybe This Time," "Money" and the rousing title song. First a movie, then a smash Broadway hit, "Footloose," (Aug. 2 - Aug. 25) uses a great pop score, including the rousing title song, to tell the story of a teenage boy who brings the power of dance to a small Midwest town Along with the title song, the show also features top hits like "Let's Hear It For The Boy" and "I Need A Hero."

Forbidden Hollywood

Known as the touching 1989 film that starred Julia Roberts, Sally Field and Dolly Parton, "Steel Magnolias" (Oct. 11 - Oct. 27) is the poignant and funny tale of six southern women facing their greatest fears and highest hopes, while trying to get their hair perfect. And the 2002 season caps off with The Company Theatre's spirited and uplifting holiday offering, "A Christmas Carol," (Nov. 29- Dec. 21), the fabled story about the miserly Scrooge and his second-chance at a happy life.

The Company Theatre's 2002 Celebrity Showcase will be highlighted by a host of great concerts, touching upon just about all musical tastes.

The Company Theatre is proud to welcome back "Beatlemania-Live!" (Jan. 25-26), the country's ultimate tribute to The Fab Four, and a show that has sold out at The Company Theatre 14 times. Thirty five years after they wowed the crowd at The Monterey Pop Festival with Janis Joplin, Big Brother & The Holding Company (Feb. 2) is still going strong with songs like "Piece of My Heart" and "Down On Me." And Gunner & Matthew Nelson (Feb. 17), twin offspring of pop legend Rick Nelson, will present a live concert dedicated to the music of their Dad, as well as their own Top-40 hits.

The Company Theatre's 6th annual " Gospel Music Celebration" (April 19-20) raises the roof while featuring the area's best gospel groups and choirs. In May, legendary country-rock stars The Marshall Tucker Band (May 5) take the stage and belt out such hits as "Can't You See" and "Heard It In a Love Song." Bellevue Cadillac (May 11), the hardest-working swing band in New England, bring their red-hot zoot-suited sound The Company Theatre, also in May, while Byrds' guitarist and singer Roger McGuinn (June 15) uses his brilliant 12-string electric guitar to recreate such classic songs as "Turn, Turn, Turn" and "Mr. Tambourine Man." And the concert season wraps with an original music review "Songs for a New World" (Sept. 20-21), featuring some of the best vocal talent The Company Theatre has to offer.

Tickets for all shows go on sale Monday, Nov. 19 at 11 a.m.

Tickets can be purchased by calling The Company Theatre box-office at (781)871-2787. You can also visit us on the web at www.companytheatre.com. The Theatre is located at 30 Accord Park Drive in Norwell, MA, off Rte 228, Exit 14 from Route 3 South. Visa/MC Accepted. www.companytheatre.com.

Record crowd expected at CD expo

CORRESPONDENT

The New England Compact Disc & Record Exposition is billed as the original, ongoing collectors' show of its kind. Holding continuous events in the Boston area since 1977, the expo also adds longest-running CD and record collectors' show in the United States to its credits.

Last fall, the expo expanded its schedule of annual events to a South Shore location for the first time, adding to its current agenda of spring and fall shows at Boston's Radisson Hotel. The collectors show's debut at Lombardo's in Randolph finally gave it a local venue to match its South Shore-based sponsorship at Randolph Music & Video Center, located just a few miles up the road on North Main Street. The expo returns to Lombardo's this Sunday, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"Our show now consists of upwards of 50 music dealers, selling music related items and merchandise from the 1940s to the present."

Burt Barack, owner of Randolph Music & Video Center

"Our show now consists of upwards of 50 music dealers, selling music related items and merchandise from the 1940s to the present," said Burt Barack, owner of Randolph Music & Video Center, the store he has run from Randolph's downtown area since the mid 1970s. "The items on display and for sale include everything from soup to nuts — CDs, vinyl 45s & LPs, vintage vinyl, cassettes, videos, posters and numerous other memorabilia."

Barack added that as it approaches 25 years in business, the current expo includes music recording and memorabilia dealers from across the U.S. and internationally, and that over the years many tens and perhaps hundreds of thousands of music collectors have visited the show from the U.S. and abroad. The Randolph shopkeeper mentions that much the same holds true for his Music & Video retail outlet as well, not only as the organizing homebase of the expo events but also as an international collectible merchandise reference source.

"Everybody knows who we are," said Barack. "We do business out of our Randolph location locally, nationally and internationally. And we're recognized by most of the oldies and classic rock radio stations in the Boston and New England areas and many of the record collectors magazines nationwide. Last year's first expo show at Lombardo's did much better than we expected for a local show, and we're confident we can do as well or better this time around."

Sunday's Expo will be enlivened by guest DJ/emcee Jim McCarty, but Barack noted there's always the added possibility of a surprise guest appearance by someone of fame or renown among both the entertainment guests or browsing visitors. Past shows at the Boston location, the shopkeeper said, have featured impromptu drop-ins from ex-J. Geils Band frontman Peter Wolf, Boston area doowop/R&B legend Little Joe Cook (who had a national hit single, "Peanuts," with his band the Thrillers in 1957), Lost 45s DJ host Barry Scott and "Time Machine" oldies radio personality Little Walter among others. One event of recent years even drew among its visitors future Arizona Diamondbacks pitcher and World Series hero Randy Johnson, who is an avid Heavy Metal collector.

The Metal collecting crowd in general is one of many demographics who has frequented the expo more and more in recent years. Originally an oldies-based collectors event, the expo has steadily expanded since its inception to now include CDs, vinyl and memorabilia covering the spectrum of all eras of music, including classic rock, contemporary pop, jazz, new wave, alternative, big bands, country, R&B, soul, disco, rap/hip-hop, soundtracks, vocalists and classical, and collectible items from new, used and out-of-print CDs/vinyl and CD and 12" vinyl singles to radio shows, imports and even 8-track tapes.

The expo has for a number of years promoted itself with various taglines generally regarding a place to "find that record, CD or cassette you've been searching for." But the show's current size and diversity has inevitably expanded it into something more than that, an eye-and-ear-feasting and elaborate showcase of musical and pop culture of the last sixty years. Expo organizers take note of offering this type of atmosphere to collectors and showgoers.

Admission to this Sunday's Compact Disc & Record Expo is $4. The expo also plans to expand to two Lombardo's events per year beginning in 2002, with its next Randolph show scheduled for Feb. 17.

Lentils and Greens

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Lentils and greens is an ancient culinary duo yet many recipes for this classic pairing are lackluster – watery, underseasoned, or diluted with unnecessary ingredients. I wanted simplicity itself, a dish that perfectly highlights the marriage of earthy lentils to fresh greens.

There are two types of lentils generally available: green lentils (light brown in color and found in all grocery stores) and the smaller, dark green French, or indigo, lentils (usually available in more upscale markets). A taste test discovered that the French lentils were more intensely flavored and a bit sweeter than the more earthy, duller, "green" lentils found in grocery stores. The prices are similar — $1.19 per for French lentils and green lentils are $0.99 per pound – so purchase the French lentils if you can find them.

Next I wanted to determine if soaking the lentils overnight was truly necessary. Testing both varieties, I found that soaking made a difference but not enough to warrant advance planning. Although the soaked beans were plumper than the unsoaked (and took just 15 minutes to cook versus 25 minutes), the difference in taste and mouth-feel of the lentils was negligible. My next question was whether or not to salt the cooking water. I found that cooking one cup of lentils in 4 cups of water with 1/2 teaspoon salt resulted in superior flavor to lentils cooked in unsalted water. I also tried adding a bay leaf, garlic cloves, or a clove-studded onion and found that the lentils didn't need any of them since their stronger, earthier taste is much less delicate than many other types of beans. Finally I tried cooking the lentils in stock instead of water and found no improvement.

Many authentic recipes call for borage (a green that is generally unavailable in the United States) so I tested escarole, beet, kale, mustard and even rabe and found the taste of spinach to be my favorite, and Swiss chard a close runner-up. In particular, I thought the iron rich taste and tender leaf of spinach was a great match with the lentils. The stems need to be removed and they should be chopped into about 1-inch pieces. Next, I tried several additional ingredients that might enhance the flavor to the dish. Sautéed onion was a winner as was minced garlic. Italian recipes in particular often pair lentils with sausage or pancetta. I tried crumbled sausage as well as browned bacon in the recipe. Truthfully, the texture and flavor were overpowering and I preferred the dish in its simplest form.

My last test was to determine exactly how to put the greens and lentils together. I found that sauteing the greens and then adding the lentils was preferable to adding the greens to the pot of lentils. Salt and freshly ground pepper are crucial to the dish - both the beans and greens are crying out for plenty of both.

LENTILS AND GREENS

This dish is good as a side dish to a roast or chop but is great as a simple supper served over rice with an optional squeeze of lemon which is a nice counterpoint to the deep earthy flavor.

1 cup lentils, French indigo preferred
1/2 teaspoon salt, plus additional salt to finish the dish
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 medium onion, halved and thinly sliced
1 medium clove garlic, minced or pressed
1 ounces fresh spinach or Swiss chard, thoroughly washed, stems removed and cut into 1 inch slices
Freshly ground black pepper
Lemon juice, optional

1. Rinse and pick over lentils. Place in a medium saucepan with 3 cups water and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Bring to a boil and lower heat to maintain simmer. Cook until tender and the lentils absorb most of the liquid, about 25 minutes.

2. Heat a large heavy-duty skillet over medium heat. Add the butter and olive oil. When the butter stops foaming add the onion and sauté until the edges of the onion are light golden brown, about 7 minutes. Add the garlic and cook for an additional 2 minutes. Add the spinach and sauté until completely wilted and tender, about 2 to 3 minutes. Add the lentils and fold the ingredients together with a spatula or wooden spoon. If there is too much liquid raise the heat to high for 1 to 2 minutes. Adjust the seasoning with additional salt and freshly ground pepper. Serve over rice or as a side dish with or without a squeeze of fresh lemon juice.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 14

Wake up in a good mood. The dark side of a new moon is in full force and effect today. People may be temperamental and difficult to get along with. Choose your words carefully. The best way to channel todayÕs influences is to work. Tackle projects that need a finishing touch or repair or redoing. An applying alignment of Mars and Saturn aids jobs that require physical exertion and endurance. You can be most productive.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 15

At 1:40 a.m. the new moon culminates, 23-degrees Scorpio, and the moon becomes inactive. Sidestep morning hassles or the blues. Count your blessings. Stay busy with work projects. At 1:51 p.m. influences turn around completely, when the moon enters ebullient Sagittarius. At this time the green light for new starts goes on.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 16

Although the moon travels in upbeat Sagittarius, there are a couple of rough spots in the day. A 90-degree alignment of Mercury to Mars may spark arguments, irritability. DonÕt take risks. The moon forms challenging alignments to Saturn at 12:27 p.m. and Pluto at 3:09 p.m. Be constructive; tackle a big work project and stick to it. An applying alignment of Mars and Pluto continues to place the emphasis on work that requires physical labor. Get back in the swing of favorite sports or exercise programs. The stage is set for a fun evening; forget your troubles and go for the good times.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 17

A harmonious alignment of Mercury and Jupiter generates an optimistic mood this morning. The Sagittarius moon becomes inactive at 3:14 a.m. until 7:40 p.m. That means that this is a great day for fun and games. Enjoy favorite pastimes, spend quality time with friends and family; follow your bliss. A practical Capricorn moon arrives at 7:40 p.m., making for a quiet evening.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 18

The moon travels in industrious Capricorn today and tomorrow, generating a serious mood. Zero in on promises you have made to others and follow through; repay debts, fulfill commitments. If you have work projects to accomplish, you can get them out of the way in short time. Influences lighten up this evening, when the moon forms a harmonious contact to social Venus.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 19

This is the best day of the week for getting things done. Take on a full agenda. A Capricorn moon all day continues to place the spotlight on hard work, responsibility and career focus. This a great evening to work or study late or take on a major project at home, especially if it is something you have put off for a while.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 20

The Capricorn moon becomes inactive at 12:57 a.m. Influences turn around completely at 4:55 a.m., when the moon enters outgoing Aquarius. A harmonious alignment of Venus and Jupiter makes this morning prime for all social activities. You can make gains developing projects that need help, input, support from others. On the other hand, a 90-degree alignment of Mercury and Uranus warns against signing important contracts or making snap decisions. This is a day to brainstorm, network and dream, but get a reality check before making a major commitment.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 21

Gear up for an Oexciting, anything can happenO kind of day. Avoid rigid time schedules; things may not go as planned. On the other hand, spur of the moment ideas can be the most successful. Follow your intuition; go with the flow of things. The moon continues to travel in freedom-loving Aquarius all day.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 22

The stage is set for a relaxing, social holiday. Put business or personal concerns aside; kick back and enjoy life to its fullest. The sun enters Sagittarius at 1:01 a.m., remaining there until December 21. The Aquarius moon becomes inactive at 2:37 a.m. until 4:52 p.m., when it enters laidback Pisces. The first quarter phase of the moon occurs at 6:21 p.m., serving as a reminder that this moon is growing in light. A full moon will culminate November 30.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 23

The combination of a Pisces moon and Venus-Mars alignment prompts you to channel your energy into creative or romantic outlets. Go with your first impression; you can be most productive developing arts and crafts projects. On the other hand, this is not the best day for making major purchases and practical decisions. A lunar alignment to Saturn at 5:41 p.m. may bring a full period, when energy is deflated. Get extra rest tonight.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24

YesterdayÕs advice pertains to today as well. The moon continues to travel in adaptable Pisces. Relax and enjoy favorite hobbies, friends. An applying alignment of Venus to Uranus urges you to be open to new experiences; go with your adventurous side. Unplug from your daily routines and responsibilities; try something new and different.

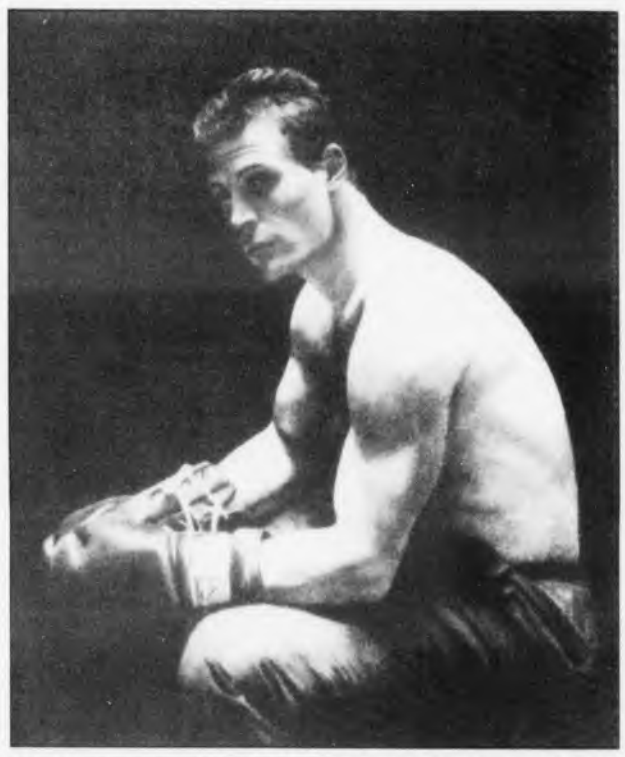
designer before changing her focus to picture framing and, finally, to fine art. The artist's medium of choice is charcoal illustration, which she is most comfortable working in to apply her interest in bold and striking images, cultivated by her years spent in illustration and graphic design.

The Borders Books & Café exhibit reflects Felton's favorite subjects for work, both primary and secondary. The artist seems most inspired by portraits and figures, but also draws spark from animals and landscapes, many of the latter embraced spontaneously through her travels to various areas and many of those scenes from the South Shore. As the show's gathering of works demonstrates, the common thread of Felton's vision is the bold contrast and interplay of shadows and light, creating an overall dramatic effect.



Among the portraits, perhaps most noted by observers is the broad-canvas piece "The Boxer," which conveying its stark black-and-white detail of figure and background, may conjure images of Robert De Niro as a young Jake Lamotta in "Raging Bull." This work, of which Felton said the model is a recent New England cruiserweight champion and brother of the owner of a Pembroke gym where the artist is a member, is one of Felton's self-described Sports Series, with other works featured in the current show and, she promises, more to come. Other subjects touched upon in the series are swimming, bodybuilding, basketball and horseback riding.

The theme of blending light and dark, along with the overall high quality, continues through the animal and landscape pieces. These include the sensitive equine renderings of "Study of a Horse's Head" and "A Stallion Named Skip" and the quaint scenes depicted in "The View From Route 3A," "Hingham Sunset" and "Shaker Village, Kentucky."

"If the lighting is good when I'm shooting my subjects, I know I'll get a good shot. I work from photos, but the charcoal pieces feel like they're drawn from life," she said. "It's very realistic stuff, with not a lot of concept involved."

"The Boxer" has also received some national recognition. The piece is a finalist in the portrait category of The Artist Magazine's 2001 annual art competition and will be featured in the publication's December issue.

Mary Felton's work can be seen at Borders Books & Café in Braintree through the end of November. For more information call (781) 356-5111.

Felton's work is as close to life as it gets, but the artist said time constraints force her to draw from photographs.

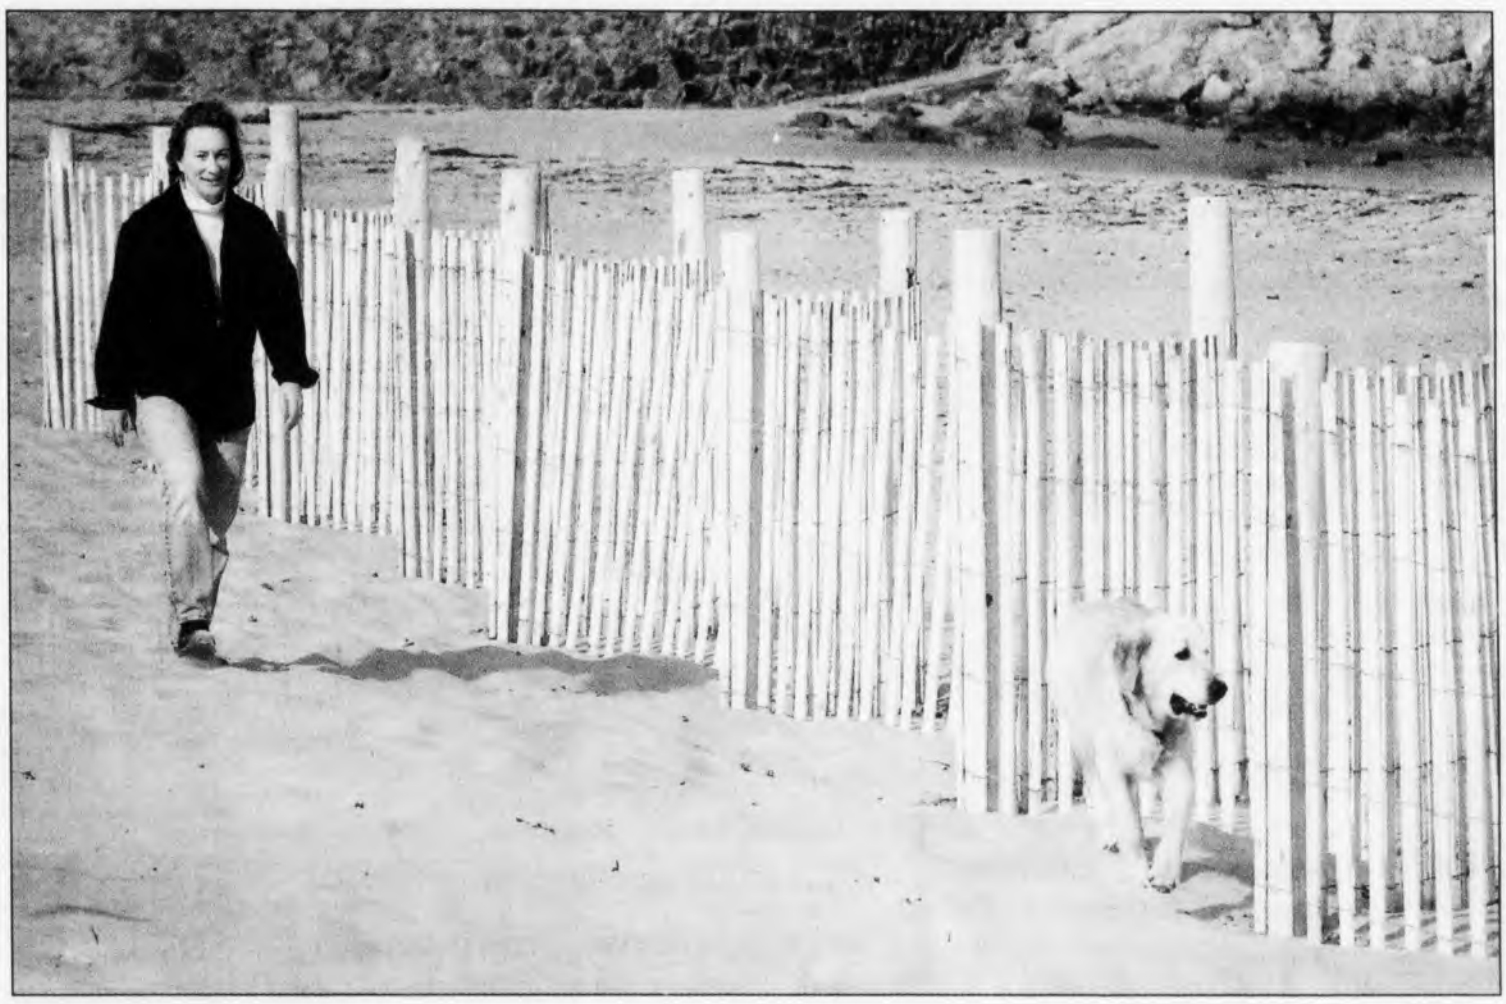
Crowd applies for chief

Town Manager names screening committee

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

If the number of applications is a gauge then a lot of people would like to be chief of police in Cohasset.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he received a total of 54 applications for the post and has appointed a committee of seven to review the résumés and come up with a list of finalists.



"The committee will probably meet the week after Thanksgiving to figure out whom to interview," he said.

The new chief will replace Brian Noonan, who will retire after 28 years in the police department, nine as chief.

"This is the most important appointment I make as Town Manager," Haddad said last week. In his four-plus years on the job, Haddad has also appointed the treasurer/tax collector and the library director.

The screening committee consists Library building put out to bid

$700K is needed

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The citizens of Cohasset have long appreciated and marveled at the murals in the rotunda of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. You may want to go there soon to get a last look.

Town Manager Mark Haddad is proceeding with the sale of the building by starting the bidding process.

The building was constructed in 1903 with private funds from the Paul Pratt family and cost the town nothing.

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library building will be sold to help offset the cost of the new library at the old Joseph Osgood School.

Town buildings are subject to state laws that govern disposal of public property and therefore, the library is being sold through the bidding process. Otherwise, Haddad said the town could potentially be able to get more money for the venerable old building from a real estate company.

Haddad has set a minimum bid of $700,000. This is the amount of money that the town is counting on to finance the new library. A projected cost of $3.9 million to turn the old Osgood School into a new library includes the anticipated $700,000 from the sale of the old building. If the building is sold for more money, it will reduce the amount the town needs to borrow. The town will not sell the building for less than $700,000, Haddad said.

The property's assessed value for fiscal year 2002 is $928,500, that includes the library and little over half of an acre of land. The building is approximately 24,630 square feet and is zoned as residential. This means the new occupants of library will most likely be making it their home. The building was able to be constructed as a library because it was built before there were zoning regulations.

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library has a storied history. The building was constructed in 1903 with private funds from the Paul Pratt family and cost the town nothing. The site of the library was donated land by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Smith, and Charles Welch supplied the money for the ledge blasting.

While the architecture of the building has a certain appeal, most who are upset with the selling of the library are worried about the fate of the murals.

The four murals in the rotunda of the library were created by McIvor Reddie, a Cohasset resident and respected artist of his time. The murals were presented to the library in 1946 and have become one of the hallmarks of the town.

Michelle Glick, of 7 Spring St., who lives across the street from the library, said she is very concerned with what is going to become of the library. "It's so beautiful I'd like to see it remain a public building so everyone can enjoy the murals," Glick said. "It would be a real loss to see the library turned into a private home and a tragedy to remove the murals."

Sheila Evans, a member of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Board of Trustees, said the trustees were upset when they learned they could not move the murals to the new library. They are set in plaster so any attempt to remove them would destroy the walls. However, Evans said the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library will take pictures of the murals and will try to reproduce them in the new building.

Evans added that she was

CPR training for coaches

State may require all to be certified

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

It's troubling to think of a child playing school sports being in need of medical assistance. But soon, those fears may be eased.

Last week on Beacon Hill, Democrats in the House advanced a bill to the Senate requiring all school sports coaches be certified in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). The bill would protect children on school sports teams but critics say asking schools to foot the bill for the training would be unfair.

Ron Ford, athletic director in the Cohasset School Department, said he has no problem with the bill. "We don't ever want to be in a catastrophic situation where we do not know what to do. It's scary to think what could happen," he said. Ford said the school department has been

For the record

The story in last week's Mariner about a settlement between the town and Cohasset Heights Landfill off Route 3A warrants some clarification. The story should have said voters at the Nov. 5 Special Town Meeting by passing Article 24 agreed to allow selectmen to enter into a covenant with CHL that would prohibit any future landfill or transfer station use at the site, if and when there was a settlement agreement with CHL. The story incorrectly stated voters approved allowing selectmen to enter into a formal agreement with CHL. Town Meeting did not endorse or approve the agreement. Town Manager Mark Haddad said the five town boards involved in the settlement have the authority to sign the agreement, which does not require Town Meeting approval.

Police station resuscitated

In an effort to keep the prospect of a new police station alive, selectmen asked the Advisory Board to authorize a transfer of $10,000 from the reserve fund to be used toward the project. George McGoldrick, chairman of the Police/Fire Study Committee, said the money would be used for architects and cost-budgeting work.

Selectman Merle Brown said the town should not let this project slip through the cracks. "I'd like to see the momentum kept up for the police station. It seems ridiculous to let the project fade away," he said.

At the Nov. 5 special Town Meeting, citizens voted down appropriating $240,000 to develop construction and bid documents for the project.

McGoldrick said the Advisory Committee, Board of Selectmen, and Capital Budget Committee, agreed something needs to be done about the cramped police station, the only issue was with the timing. He said the study committee will likely bring a proposal for the station before annual Town Meeting in the spring.

Advisory Committee chairman Maureen Jerz said the board has tentatively planned to hear the request on Nov. 29.

School restraint policy is drafted

The Cohasset School Department has drafted a student restraint policy in accordance with a state mandate. The state requires selected staff to be properly trained in restraint techniques. The restraint of a student would only occur when non-physical interventions were not effective, officials said. The policy states "physical restraint should be limited to the use of such reasonable force as necessary to protect a student or another member of the school community from assault or imminent, serious, physical harm."

Stephen Kaplan, Director of Student Services, said there will be four staff members trained in the school department who will also be available to those teachers who are interested in being taught restraint techniques. All teachers will be provided an overview of the policy.

"It's unfortunate that the state requires a restraint policy but they want to make sure there are qualified personnel in the schools in case a situation gets out of hand," Kaplan said.

The principal will submit written reports of any physical restraint lasting longer than five minutes or resulting in physical injury to the Director of Student Services the next working day. The principal or Director of Student Services will inform the parent as soon as possible and follow up with a written report within five working days. Complaints regarding restraint procedures will be investigated, the policy states.

CVS caught in tobacco sting

During a recent tobacco sting, a clerk at CVS in Tedeschi Plaza sold tobacco to a minor, Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said. The South Shore Boards of Health Tobacco Control Program conducted the sting on Oct. 23. The health board will fine CVS $100 and will require that the employees attend a program designed to prevent the selling of tobacco to minors. CVS was the only store in Cohasset which was in violation.

The sting was part of an effort to enforce the state's tobacco sale, vending and distribution laws. No person under the age of 18 is allowed to purchase any type of tobacco product. However, there are no laws prohibiting those under 18 from using tobacco. State law requires vendors to check the identification of any person who looks to be under the age of 27.

During the sting, which is conducted twice a year on the entire town, an underage person goes into a store and asks for cigarettes. If he or she is turned away, the store is ruled in compliance and nothing further happens. If the store does sell tobacco to the minor, the minor and an adult health educator from the collaborative file a report and submit it to the local board of health.

During the year, compliance checks were conducted in all 14 communities by the South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative Tobacco Control Program that includes Cohasset. A total of 349 permitted tobacco merchants are checked each quarter, the collaborative said. Out of a total 1396 merchants checked last year across the 14-member towns in the collaborative, there were 111 violations – a rate of 15 percent.

Upcoming meetings

The following meetings were posted at Town Hall as of Friday, Nov. 16:

Water Commission, 7:30 p.m., Nov. 29, at the water plant on King Street.

Committee on Town History, 7:30 p.m., Nov. 26 at the Lothrop House.

Sewer Commission, 6 p.m., Nov. 26 at Town Hall.

St. Stephen's sidewalk news

Town Manager Mark Haddad reported to selectmen the design of the proposed St. Stephen's walkway on South Main Street is almost at 100 percent and would be ready in a week or two. Once selectmen approve the plans, they will be submitted to MassHighway and construction could start as early as the spring. The sidewalk will be paid for through a grant and is part of the Cohasset Village Revitalization Project.

We'll make you smile.

The grassy island in front of the Cohasset Sailing Club where the anchor and foundation will be installed.

Anchor for Government Island

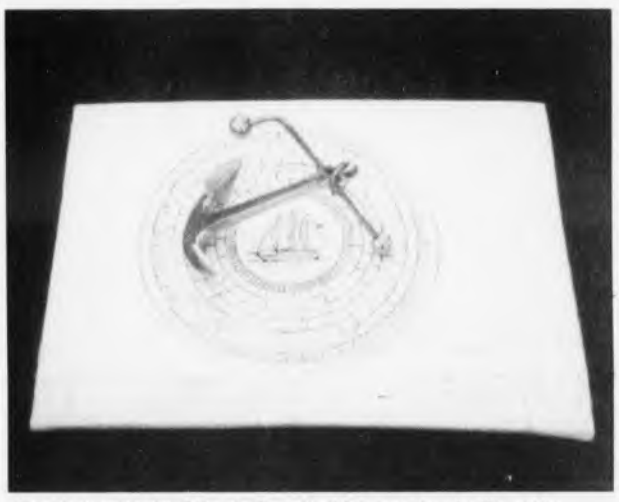
By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Revitalization efforts whether it's the harbor, village or Hagerty house are all the news these days.

Add Cohasset's Herbert Jason and John Small to that list — although the grandfather and grandson aren't an "official" committee, the duo seems to get things done without a lot of hullabaloo.

First they worked on the Minot Light Replica — one of the town's gems — then the memorial to the assistant lightkeepers Joseph Antoine and Joseph Wilson, who lost their lives when the first Minot Ledge Light toppled, and now the two men plan to add another monument to Government Island, a ship's anchor.

As with the prior projects, the new addition to Government Island, which is a National Register Historic District, will be first class.



Small said plans are to install the anchor on a circular granite and cobblestone base in the grassy island in front of the Cohasset Sailing Club. The granite centerpiece of the circle will be inscribed with a picture of a schooner or harbor pilot boat, which used to guide ships through the treacherous ledge because they didn't know where the rocks were, he said.

At first, Small and Jason considered installing a bell buoy on the grassy island but bell buoys are hard to find.

Small obtained the five-ton anchor from a ship salvage company in Kingston and talked the owner down some $2,000 off the $6,500 price tag when he showed him pictures of the Wilson and Antoine memorial and Minot replica. The anchor has been paid for with private funds. But the masonry for the foundation for the anchor, and if there is any extra money, granite curbing around the grassy island, could cost upwards of $10,000.

Small said tax-deductible donations for the project are welcome and should be sent to Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave. Checks should be made out to the Town of Cohasset, but mark the check for the anchor fund, he said. The Cohasset Police Association recently donated $500 for the project.

Selectmen recently approved the plan and there was no objection from the Government Island Study Committee.

Unique house takes shape on Gold Coast

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Has Frank Lloyd Wright come to town? Not exactly, although a house being built on Cohasset's Gold Coast might make you think of the late American architect known for his distinctive style based on natural forms.

The structure at 396 Jerusalem Road, which is evolving into a contemporary-style home, has caught the eye of many walkers, bikers and motorists who slow down to wonder about the unique design.

So many curious citizens have walked into the Building Commissioner's office at Town Hall, that Bob Egan has left the design plans on the counter so he doesn't have to keep getting them out.

Is it condos surrounding a central courtyard? Or are the six box-like structures around the perimeter have some special purpose or meaning?

The latter is closer to the truth, according to architect Douglas Dolezal, whose firm Douglas Dolezal Architecture in Boston designed the home with its clean, modern lines for a Framingham couple.

The six outer buildings that encircle the taller central structure are pavilions and will house a garage and living areas such as a kitchen and bedrooms. The pavilions surround the centerpiece of the house — the entry hall and grand living room that will have a cathedral ceiling.

The exterior of the house will be a mix of shiplap wood siding and cast stone. The pavilions will have copper roofs.

Dolezal said the design was challenging on several levels. A 50-year-old deed covenant restricts the height of the house to 1-1/2 stories to protect the ocean view of the neighbors, who recently signed off on the plans. Dolezal said the topography of the lot did not include a lot of ledge or trees but still, the architects wanted the house to be a natural part of the surroundings.

To that end the tan and brown color of the stonework on the pavilions will evoke the spectacular ledge on Moors Rocks just across the road and other natural stone in the area. There will also be a number of terraces and planters in the same stone as the pavilions that will help "marry" the house to the surrounding landscape, he said.

Dolezal said what makes Jerusalem Road so unique is the homes along the roadway are very eclectic.

"There is a range of style from Mediterranean homes to New England saltboxes," he said. "They are all custom-designed and unique and this house is very much in that spirit."

The owners tore down the existing 40-year-old, white stucco contemporary at the site to build the new home, which should be ready in the spring.

Egan, the building commissioner, said like so many other homes along the water in town — it's likely to attract attention.

"It will be a real eye-catcher when it's done," he said.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PILLA SHIRNE

HAPPY THANKSGIVING

Hello Cohasset. I want to send to all of you a very, special Thanksgiving Day wish. The wish is for all of us to take the time to really think about all that we have to be thankful for. This is a year in which so much has happened all around us and for so many people, the life that they have known for so long is so drastically changed. Please make sure to look around you and really be thankful for what you do have and let people know your thoughts. I am so thankful for my family, friends and living in such a wonderful town. I am thankful for the men and women who have given so much to fight and defend our country day in and day out. I am thankful that I am a mom to three wonderful children and that they have such a fantastic extended family on both sides who care for them as much as they do. I am really thankful for the readers out there who send me the news and information for this column. Clearly, I have so much to be thankful for. Happy Thanksgiving Cohasset.

JINGLE BELL WALK

The South Shore Community Center is gearing up for the seventh Jingle Bell Walk being held on Friday, Nov. 23 from 2:00-4:15 p.m. This wonderful event begins at the Harbor with Santa arriving on a boat with Mrs. Claus and all the merry elves. They will proceed on a hayride to the Community Center for songs, pictures, cookies and beverages. After that, hay rides will be available on the Common with a Turkey Trot for children, lighting of the Luminaria and the fantastic music of The Rusty Skippers and The Deer Hill Band. This will all end with the lighting of the Tree at 4:15. Bundle up, bring your cameras and your Fa-Laa-Laas and come on down.

ON THE MEND

I have a special message from Diane Hindley to the staff and students of the Deer Hill School. Diane's daughter Kelsea, recently broke not one but both of her wrists in a scooter accident at her cousin's house.

Kelsea has both arms in casts for the next several weeks and the kindness and help from the her friends and teachers at school has truly helped her do even the most basic of things without a problem. I know that both Kelsea and Diane are thankful for all of you and Diane has a message to all of us as parents and scooter users. Make sure to wear wrist guards in addition to the other safety equipment when using scooters, roller blades and bikes.

WREATH SALE

It is definitely time for the holidays and so many of us love fresh, quality balsam wreaths to decorate our homes with or to give as gifts. The Holiday Wreath and Candle Sale is here and you will not be disappointed when you pick up your wreaths. They are a beautiful quality and along with Ivory unscented candles and boxed Hanukkah candles, are all available right now through the Cohasset PSO METCO program. The wreaths cost $9, candles measuring 3x6 inches are $8 and the boxed Hanukkah candles are $7 per box. For anyone who would like to purchase any of these, please call Lisa Dunne at 781-383-1596 to place your order. You may also go to the Osgood office, Deer Hill office or the METCO Office at the Middle/High School to order. All checks are made payable to Cohasset PSO/METCO and you do not pay sales tax. The METCO program thanks you in advance for these purchases.

NEWS, PHOTOS

Please remember that next week, I would love to have your Thanksgiving news and photos of current and former Cohasset residents who surrounded you and your families. Also, the Schools In page will be coming out next Thursday, please make sure to get in all your news, stories and photos by Monday morning.

RACE SCHOOL

Let's hear it for Mike Bunstein (13), Peter Bunstein (14) and Robert Silvia (12) all of whom graduated from the Junior Race School at F1 Boston, the region's only indoor track. The boys are no eligible to take part in the race school's junior leagues and practice sessions.

THANKS, TED

A great big thank you is being sent out to the town for the overwhelming generosity in the donations that were sent for the Lakota Indians. It was amazing to see the huge amount of clothing, linens, baby/children items, bicycles etc. Thank you to Ted Holland for bringing this program to our town and allowing us to be able to share what we are so fortunate to have with others in our country who have nothing. It was a wonderful experience for the children as well to see and learn about other people's lifestyles and conditions.

COMMENDED SCHOLAR

Christopher J. Carr of Cohasset, a senior at Boston College High School, has been named a Commended Scholar in the 2002 National Merit Scholarship program. Commended students place among the top 5 percent of more than 1.2 million students who entered the 2002 Merit Program by taking the 2000 preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test.

Congratulations, Christopher!

That is all for this week. Please enjoy a safe and thankful holiday. All items for the Around Town should be to me no later than Monday mornings by 9 am. Schools In items need to reach me by this Friday at noon. Please drop all photos off at Cohasset News, attention Around Town/Schools In and Mary Ford will pick these up.

Mark Your Calendar for Holiday House Tour

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset gladly presents "Christmas Reflection," a tour of five unique homes reflecting a wide variety of styles and sizes and a holiday tea on Thursday, Dec. 6 from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. Some of the featured homes include:

• A grand summer cottage built in 1916 that has been converted by its present owner to a magnificent year-round residence. Large windows throughout the house allow one to embrace the ever-changing views of Little Harbor and the Atlantic Ocean.

• A charming 1929 home at the end of a winding drive welcomes visitors with a covered entry. From the great room with its impressive stone fireplace, a double staircase leads up to the recently added "tower." The deck from the first landing offers stunning views of the property and seasonal views of the lily pond.

• A sea captain's home dating back to 1806 which was maintained for many years as a working farm. Of particular interest is the dining room with its original hand-carved molding and matchstick birch floors. The present owners have skillfully blended the past and present in this unique property.

• A charming Victorian, originally built in 1874 with sophisticated decor utilizing a contemporary palate reflecting a bygone era in modern times. A round conservatory with views of the Atlantic Ocean is warm and inviting on a cold winter's day.

• An elegant, light and airy home, sporting stunning views of Little Harbor and the Atlantic Ocean from almost every room is included in the tour. The living room opens onto a sunny deck where the panorama of grounds, water, and a direct view of Minot Light can be enjoyed.

Tickets are $20 advance and $23 on tour day, available at the South Shore Community Center at 3 No. Main St.; or send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to C.G.C.C., 217 Jerusalem Rd., Cohasset 02025.

For more information and tickets, call 781-383-9348 or 781-383-9442.

Refreshments will be served at Bates Hall, Second Congregational Church, Highland Avenue. Proceeds from the House Tour will be used to support the numerous projects of the garden club, which include historic restoration and preservation, civic beautification, scholarship grant, and community education programs. The club also contributes time and money to various environmental and conservation agencies.

Newcomers' Club welcomes residents

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The Newcomers' Club of Scituate and Cohasset wants to let residents know that the club is not just for new citizens of the towns, it is open to everyone.

The club, which has been in existence since the 60s, runs a variety of programs and charitable events designed to introduce residents to one another and promote a sense of community.

"There are no limits on membership," said publicity co-coordinator Mary Beth O'Malley. "The club is there, so anyone can learn about the town and meet new people."

The club runs a variety of events including men's basketball, a book club, the bon appetit dinner club, ladies' night out, men's poker, ladies' coffee and playgroups for children. Events are attended by both Scituate and Cohasset residents.

"It's like we are all one community," said co-president Kathleen Knight.

Knight said the Newcomers' Club has a diversity of events to appeal to everyone in the community. Along with the monthly events, the club sponsors charity affairs and has special get-togethers, such as a wine and cheese parties quite often.

This year, the club will continue its tradition of giving with the Charity Guild Christmas Sharing Program. The program lets residents of the two towns "adopt" a child for the season. Once a member becomes involved with the program, they are matched up with a child and told the child's name and gender.

"The club is there, so anyone can learn about the town and meet new people."

— Mary Beth O'Malley, Newcomers' Club

In turn, the family or individual purchases gifts for the child with the goal of every child receiving two toys and two items of clothing. Last year, the program handed out more than 50 gifts and distributed them to seven families in the South Shore area.

Ellen Nesbitt, publicity co-coordinator, said women who have just given birth to a child can benefit greatly from the club. "When women first have babies they can be shell shocked," Nesbitt said. "The club provides them instant networking and communication with others who are in the same boat. It can be really beneficial to their psyche." Nesbitt went on to say that the mothers could benefit by either participating in events or by having their children spend a couple of hours at a playgroup.

O'Malley said the Newcomers' Club playgroup program is unique. "We are one of the few clubs in the area that organizes the playgroups by a child's age. This allows one-year-old children to play with other children their age rather than a five-year-old," she said.

The next big event for the club is the Holiday Open House schedule for Saturday, Dec. 1 from 6-9 p.m. at the home of Scott and Carrie Peters at 27 Beach Plum Lane, Scituate. There will be a $5 charge at the door and all guests are asked to bring an appetizer. To RSVP for the event call the Carrie Peters at 781-545-2824.

If you are interested in any of the other programs and would like more information, call either Ellen Nesbitt at 781-383-2389, or Mary Beth O'Malley at 781-545-3540.

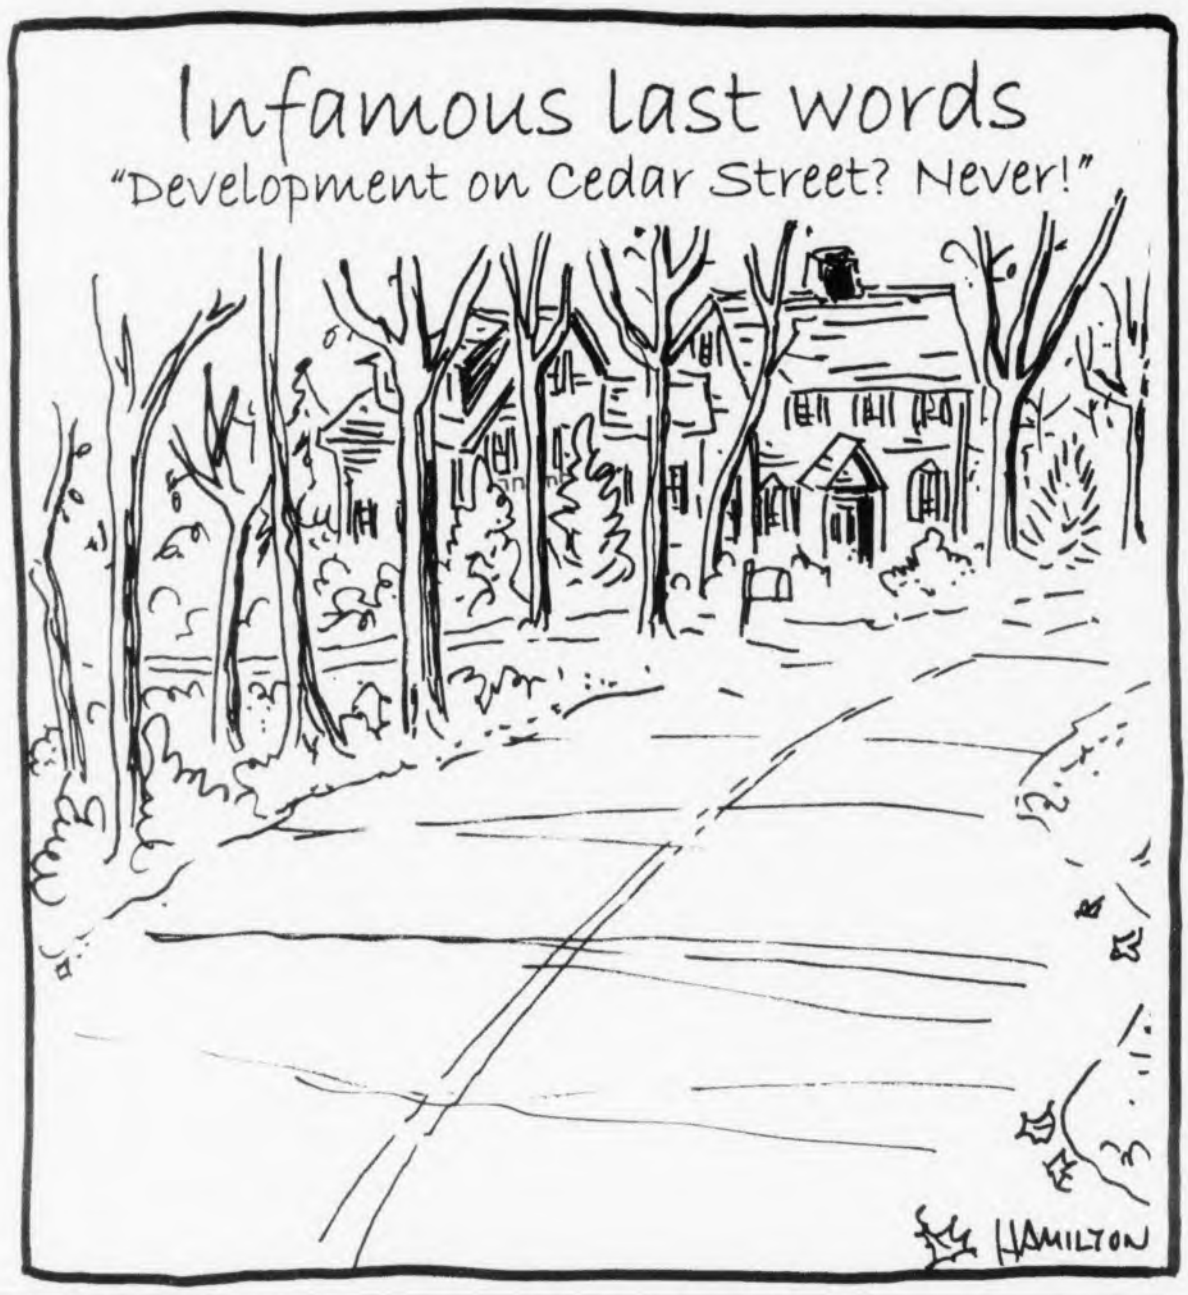
Thanksgiving 2001

Thanksgiving 2001 finds America on edge. We are engaged in a new kind of war, one that aims commercial airliners at skyscrapers and germ-infested letters at senators and news anchors. In this land of plenty, we are suddenly aware that money cannot purchase security.

America has been humbled by the attacks of Sept. 11, but also ennobled. A new found generosity has been extended not only to the victims of terrorism but, we hope, to charities closer to home. News reports indicate volunteerism is on the rise. We've seen a run on marriage licenses and engagement rings. The pleas from some officials to help the economy by getting out and spending haven't worked with the families who find themselves less interested in material things since Sept. 11, and more focused on the things that money can't buy.



A smorgasbord of emotions faces the nation this Thanksgiving Day. As we work to kindle our tears into gratitude, it may help to remember that Abraham Lincoln first proclaimed Thanksgiving at a moment of even greater national peril. It was at the darkest moment of the Civil War when President Lincoln summoned the nation to look upward.

Here are some excerpts from his proclamation, dated Oct. 3, 1863:

We have been the recipients of the choicest bounties of heaven; we have been preserved these many years in peace and prosperity; we have grown in numbers, wealth and power as no other nation has ever grown.

But we have forgotten God. We have forgotten the gracious hand which preserved us in peace and multiplied and enriched and strengthened us, and we have vainly imagined, in the deceitfulness of our hearts, that all these blessings were produced by some superior wisdom and virtue of our own. Intoxicated with unbroken success, we have become too self-sufficient to feel the necessity of redeeming and preserving grace, too proud to pray to the God that made us.

It has seemed to me fit and proper that God should be solemnly, reverently and gratefully acknowledged, as with one heart and one voice, by the whole American people. I do therefore invite my fellow citizens in every part of the United States, and also those who are at sea and those who are sojourning in foreign lands, to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November as a day of Thanksgiving and praise to our beneficent Father who dwelleth in the heavens.

Beloved owl bids adieu

Clack, a barred owl and one of the most beloved animals at the New England Wildlife Center, died early on Monday, Nov. 5. Clack came to the wildlife center in 1986 as an adult after being hit by a car. Despite all the best efforts of the veterinary staff, Clack's badly damaged wing healed, but he could not fly well or quietly, a skill necessary for hunting and his survival in the wild. The wildlife center became his home and he quickly became a part of the center's educational programs, traveling to dozens of classrooms and helping more than 130,000 children and adults learn about wildlife.

Clack, a barred owl, was a familiar figure at the New England Wildlife Center and was loved by young and old alike.

He was always the perfect gentleman and one of his most touching moments came at a nursing home where patients welcomed him and watched him in awe. As a fund-raiser, he was a willing "beggar" and many donors enjoyed holding him. Contrary to the rules of falconry, Clack loved having his head scratched and would eagerly turn his head downward for this sign of affection.

Clack truly embodied the spirit of The New England Wildlife Center. Through Clack's eyes, New Englanders were able to increase their understanding and appreciation of the natural world around them. A memorial fund in his name will be established to further the wildlife center's educational efforts.

Clack, the Barred Owl, who got his name from the sound he made, will be sadly missed.

Parents' feedback necessary

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Public Schools Department of Student Services has received the Department of Education's (DOE) Coordinated Program Review Final Report. The district is required to respond to the DOE with a Corrective Action Plan (CAP) by Dec. 10, 2001. The DOE highly recommends an opportunity for parent comment at this stage of the CAP development process.

On Thursday, Nov. 15, Steve Kaplan discussed the DOE Final Review during the School Committee meeting. Very few parents attended the meeting or had seen a copy of the Final Review. The Cohasset Public School district welcomes parents to read the final review and make comments, written or oral, before Nov. 30. Please take this opportunity to read a copy available at the Paul Pratt Library, the Osgood School Library or the SPED Department and make your comments to Steve Kaplan at 781-383-6104 or Dr. Ted Malvey at 781-383-6110.

Hagerty property

TO THE EDITOR:

Selectmen:

As commodore of the Cohasset Sailing Club, I wanted to convey sentiments expressed by many of our club members. Please put these sentiments in context that the sailing club's full Board of Trustees has not voted on the proposal made by Jack Buckley of CMI. We intend to discuss the concept in detail at our February meeting.

However, I have polled several of our members and here are the major points:

To use the property for maritime educational purposes makes sense. It fits the geographic setting next to the rowing center and close to the sailing club. The project remains consistent with the critical importance of making the Government Island area accessible to all residents.

The Cohasset Sailing Club, at this point, does not have the funds to financially support capital or operational expenses associated with rehabilitation of the building.

In the future, the sailing club may wish to utilize the building for off-season classes in topics like boat design and half-boat modeling, navigation and boat safety. However, any participation would depend upon membership interest, financial support and sailing club trustee approval.

During the summer, children could conceivably attend sailing classes at the sailing club, rowing classes at CMI and marine environmental classes at the Hagerty property on either a sequential or isolated basis.

The success of the CMI proposal would rest upon CMI or its designee's ability to raise necessary funds from multiple beneficiaries and to find a strong leader in the community to shepherd the process on a full or nearly-full-time basis.

The Board of Selectmen has shown great patience with the evolution of the property. Ultimately, the Board of Selectmen must decide the future of the building within a town-wide planning context.

Whatever the outcome, the residents of Parker Avenue should have significant input into the planning process.

Since parking for building activities remains at a premium, thought must be given to the scheduling of the building's activities so other Government Island functions do not suffer.

The Cohasset citizens who restored the Lightkeeper's property serve as a shining example of how to restore a dilapidated building to revitalized usage. Hopefully, through multiple benefactors and strong leadership, the Hagerty property can follow the same course.

Robert J. Deutsch, Commodore

Mr. Deutsch provided the Mariner with a copy of his letter.

Water work

TO THE EDITOR:

Sure there were glitches, and I don't know how the Water Department feels about the main scouring/relining project, but I want to commend the workmen of Biszko Contracting for their behavior on the job.

This seemed to me to be an infinitely difficult and frustrating assignment with hundreds of temporary connections to many different individual services, with uncertainty always as to what they would find underground or in someone's basement, and endless returns to many sites. What is more, these fellows were coming many miles daily from the Fall River area to be on the job often by 7 a.m.

From a number of contacts with a number of workmen and supervisors, I found them unfailingly polite and cooperative, even though sometimes they couldn't immediately solve a problem. Sometimes I wished that the Water Department had provided them with more local assistants.

Anyway, I think the work crews have done a tough job with grace and that someone should say so.

HEALTH NOTES

Health agent gets top award

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Nov. 7, The Mass Health Officer's Association awarded Joe Godzik, our Town Health Officer, the Michael Saraco Award. This award goes to health officers who have demonstrated: "vast knowledge in the field of public health and dedication, loyalty, enthusiasm, and leadership."

Joe has managed the health interests of the town for about 18 years, now. It has been a time of considerable challenge for the town, and because of his steady and effective leadership, the town has safely developed a public health system which can be envied by any town no matter what its size. Our grateful thanks and best wishes go to Joe.

More Lily Pond

John McNabb, chairman of the Water Commission, has made some comments to the Board of Health in several emails with which the board agrees. We should all take comfort from how fiercely the town's water supply is being defended from pollution as well as from well meaning detractors.

"I wish Steve would check with me before speculating about water supply protection issues," McNabb wrote. "The Water Commission is actively working on all such issues and is planning on how our consultant could develop a storm-water protection plan that will include the Peppermint Brook watershed as well as all other storm-water issues in the Lily Pond watershed; we are developing a comprehensive, long range plan to deal with all such issues in the next few years.

Joe has managed the health interests of the town for about 18 years.

"Finally, Steve, your reference to the CHL settlement as providing 'protection' for the Brass Kettle watershed is incorrect, because the capping and the CHL agreement do not stop the discharge of leachate, and there are in fact other sources of contaminants in that watershed we continue to investigate. Your entire article calls for a response from the Water Commission to correct all of your incorrect impressions. I know the Board of Health has a role in water quality issues, but you should really leave that to the Water Commission, since we have that issue covered pretty well — before you write anything about it again to tell the public you should ask me first what we are doing."

With respect to the discussion of mercury in the Aaron River reservoir, John states:

"You have to concede that there is no evidence that the level of mercury, if any, in the Reservoir, is 'rising' since to show a trend you need at least two data points and so far we have none for the Reservoir. Basically, you should just state that there is no evidence of the level of mercury in the Reservoir and there is no evidence that it is rising or falling."

There were other errors in fact in the article which should not have appeared without more revision. Rest assured that the Board will continue these useful discussions with the Water Commission.

For the board's part, the discussion about Peppermint Brook and the added burden of surface water coming from high school construction is an issue which is best overseen jointly by the board and the Water Commission, since storm-water is a more comprehensive issue for the Town. In the future, we will not overlook the Water Commission in our efforts to deal with storm-water in the town.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Board of Health.

LIBRARY CORNER

Artist of the Month

"Winter" all new work by award winning photographer Jack Foley, is on display at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library through Nov. 30. The black and white snow and ice landscapes were shot last winter in Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham and Marshfield. Foley, a Hanover studio photographer, has won numerous awards in art shows throughout the South Shore and is recognized as a Master of Photography by the Professional Photographers of America.

This month's artist display is sponsored by the South Shore Art Center, Cohasset. The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is open Mon., Tues., Thurs. 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Fri. and Sat., 2 to 5 p.m.

Friends news

Thank you to all who have responded to the annual Friends of the Cohasset Library town-wide mailing. Your generous tax-deductible contributions continue to support the many programs, projects and events that enrich our library and community.

"For more information about the Friends of the Cohasset Library or if you would like to become a Friend, call the library at 781-383-1348.

New system

The new library catalog, Bistro, for Cohasset and 25 other libraries in the Old Colony Library Network is up and running.

Library Director, Janet Husband, said, a little coaching may be necessary for first-time users who are not familiar with the use of a "mouse," at the Public Access Catalog. The "tab" key may not be utilized to move around the screen then press "Return" or "Enter" to select what they want.

To access the new catalog from home, users should go to the Web site at www.cohassetlibrary.org and click on "Library Catalog". When prompted for a User ID, type in your library card number. For a PIN number, type in OCLN. You may change the PIN later to anything you want.

While you're at our Web site, check out its other features. Reference Desk is especially useful to search for magazine articles and reviews.

Deer Hill students give back

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

South Dakota and Cohasset have more in common than you think.

Students at the Deer Hill School donated anything they could including, bikes, pillows, blankets, clothes and books, to the Lakota Sioux reservation in South Dakota.

The program was initiated by school custodian Ted Holland, whose friend John Sullivan, sponsors a family at the reservation. Holland learned of the poverty of the Sioux and decided that something needed to be done.

"The children on the reservation don't have anything," Holland said. "It is a good thing for these students to help them realize that outside Cohasset, everything is not always hunky-dory."

The children donated enough items to fill a 30-foot trailer that Sullivan drove out to South Dakota Monday.

Principal Paul Callahan said the children have been collecting items for over three weeks. The school ran the same program last year to limited success however, this year Callahan said the response was wonderful.

"I think the kids are starting to understand there are less fortunate people in the world and they would like to help," he said.

Sullivan gave a slide-show presentation at the school to demonstrate what life was like on an Indian reservation. Callahan said the students were stunned. "The pictures they saw were far from what Cohasset looks like. It was a dose of the real world," he said.

Holland said Sullivan will return before Christmas, only to fill up a U-Haul and make the journey again. This will be Sullivan's tenth trip.

Sullivan became involved with the Lakota Sioux when he visited an Indian crafts store in Quincy. He talked with the owner of the store about the dilapidated conditions of the Indian reservations, and felt he needed to do something to help.

Holland said getting the students involved has proved to be a wonderful decision.

T-Day blues

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

At the rate things are going, I think we'll be having peanut butter sandwiches with our cranberry sauce for Thanksgiving dinner at our house.

The holiday just ain't what it used to be before the Indians — oops, I mean the Native Americans — discovered they could get rich by drawing to an inside straight without even leaving the reservation.

For one thing, America's Hometown had to cancel for lack of funding its annual Thanksgiving parade, which used to draw upwards of 100,000 spectators who would buy the Pilgrim souvenirs that were made in Taiwan.

For one thing, America's Hometown had to cancel for lack of funding its annual Thanksgiving parade.

The Visitors Service Board, which is charged with enticing those spectators to Plymouth, slashed parade funding from $10,000 to $2,800, a drop in the bucket compared to the entire budget of $200,000 but a significant action nevertheless.

"It wasn't just the money, but the message that the town sent us by cutting off the funds," said Parade Chairman Olavo DeMacedo.

Thanksgiving has been going downhill in Plymouth, where it all began, ever since the Ind . . . er, Native Americans began touting it as a day of mourning a few years ago and staged a confrontation with the descendants of Captain Standish in 1997 that would have made Massasoit and Metacom proud.

Scholars have been delving into the details of what has come to be called the first Thanksgiving and discovered that most of them were myths concocted in the late 19th Century when the holiday was offered as a national festival to help heal the North-South breach created by the Civil War.

In fact, the whole Thanksgiving story is based on a single paragraph written by Pilgrim Edward Winslow in a letter to England describing how Pilgrims and Native Americans did in "a more special manner rejoice together after we had gathered the fruits of our labors."

They may have had turkey for Winslow tells of four men who went "fowling" and killed enough to last a week, and the Native Americans "went out and killed five deer." They had corn and peas. But no cranberry sauce or pumpkin pie — or high school football games — all the accoutrements that we hold so dear.

It wasn't much of a holiday, either, even though the feasting lasted three days, for the Pilgrims frowned on such frivolity as Christmas and Easter. It was more like a state dinner for "their greatest king, Massasoit," who brought along 90 of his Wampanoag braves, twice as many as there were Pilgrims.

At the same time, Dr. James Deetz and his wife, Patricia, of the University of Virginia, were skewering the Pilgrims reputation as a particularly saintly bunch in their book "The Time of Their Lives, Life, Love and Death in Plymouth Colony."

Seems like every year another state comes up with the claim that one of its town, not Plymouth, held the first Thanksgiving. First, it was Jamestown, Virginia. Then it was St. Augustine, Florida. This year it was Texas, where the U. S. Postal Service unveiled a Thanksgiving stamp in Dallas.

What say this time we let them have their way.

Wrens - easy to hear, but harder to see

A BIRDER'S-EYE VIEW

Carolina Wrens at feeder.

Wrens are small brown songbirds with loud voices and a secretive nature. They flit quickly in and out of the underbrush and often stick their tails straight up in the air. There are 76 species worldwide and nine species in North America, according to David Sibley. Seven of these are seen in Massachusetts, but only four with any regularity. The three uncommon wrens include the Rock Wren (two records), the Bewick's Wren (three records), and the Sedge Wren, which is rare and irregular.

Wrens belong to the troglodytidae family. The mythical Troglodytes lived in caves in Ethiopia. The Greek word "troglodytes" comes from "trogle", meaning hole or cave and "dytes", meaning inhabitant. Most wrens nest in cavities and are found in thick brushy thickets. The Old English words, "wraenna" and "wraene" evolved into "wren". These old words mean "lascivious" and perhaps were used because many male wrens are polygamous.

The best-known, but least distinctive looking wren is probably the House Wren, a common nester throughout the state. The Latin species name for the House Wren is "aedon", from the Greek word meaning "songstress". In mythology, Aedon was the Queen of Thebes who was turned into a nightingale by Zeus. The French ornithologist Louis Jean Pierre Viellot who named the House Wren in 1807 may have thought its lively bubbly song was as beautiful as that of the nightingale.

Male House Wrens, like some other wrens, build multiple nests from which the female can choose the best for laying her eggs. House Sparrows, House Wrens and Eastern Bluebirds compete with each other for nesting cavities. The House Wren, however, is more eclectic in its selection, having been known to nest in anything from old hats and shoes to empty cow skulls and paper hornet nests. They often puncture eggs of other birds, including those of neighboring House Wrens.

The Carolina Wren has been expanding its range northward. More and more they stay here all winter, and it is the only wren to sing all year. Living as pairs year-round, both the male and female sing and will sometimes even sing duets. They have a wide variety of songs, but the one most often heard resembles "tea ket'tle, tea ket'tle, tea ket'tle".

Carolina wrens are a rich brown color and have a very distinctive white eye stripe. Like other wrens, they feed on insects, but will also come to feeders for peanuts, sunflower seeds and suet. They love backyard brush piles and their loud song announces their presence. We had a pair nest on a shelf in our tool shed last year.

The Winter Wren is our smallest wren. Its tail is so short that when it sticks up in the air, it looks as if someone had chopped it off. When it is scampering around in leaf litter, it has been said to look more like a mouse than a bird. It is the only wren found in the Old World, where it is simply called "the Wren".

Winter Wrens are most likely to be found in wooded areas near a stream or other wet places. They eat insects and sometimes dunk their whole head under water in order to catch aquatic insects. They nest in holes, but usually choose ones that are no more than a few feet off the ground, frequently in the tangled roots of downed trees or in dead logs or stumps. Most migrate south for the winter, although Dennis Peacock reports in the "Bird Observer" that they have been seen in every month of the year in Wompatuck State Park. They certainly breed there, and their song delights even when it is difficult to see them in the dark underbrush. Listen for a long collection of trills and warbles. Their call note is a quite distinctive loud double "chimp-chimp" and is given all winter.

Marsh Wrens, as their name suggests, are found in marshes. They attach their globe-shaped nests to cattails or other reeds with the entrance hole on the side. The males build many dummy nests, which may help to confuse predators. Their diet consists mostly of insects, but they also will eat snails. The Marsh Wren's song is somewhat gurgling in nature with lots of trills and rattles. It was formerly known as the Long-billed Marsh Wren. The Short-billed Marsh Wren's name has been changed to Sedge Wren.

Marsh Wrens can usually be found at the Daniel Webster Wildlife Sanctuary in Marshfield in the spring. House Wrens nest in the bluebird boxes on Turkey Hill and are also regularly found on World's End. Many of you probably have them in your yards, although they will have headed toward more southern states by now. This winter keep a lookout for the Carolina Wren, which may announce its presence with its voice before you see it. If you are lucky, you might be able to find a Winter Wren in Wompatuck during the next few months. In any case, be sure to visit in the spring when they will almost certainly be singing along the Aaron River road.

of selectmen Michael Sullivan and Ronnie McMorris; citizens Robert Spofford, 14 Heather Dr.; Michael Coyne, 237 Forest Ave.; Lisa Burnstead, 111 Nichols Road; Duxbury Town Manager Rocco Longo and Norwell Police Chief Bob Galvin. Haddad will sit in on the committee meetings.

Noonan has agreed to stay on through the search process, Haddad said. The salary could depend on the range the candidates are seeking and next year's budget might have to be adjusted accordingly, he said. Noonan's salary last year was about $70,000.

Under Cohasset's Town Manager Act, Haddad will make the final decision on the chief appointment although selectmen can veto his choice.

Noonan, who took over from former chief Joseph Kealey, was selected from a field of six finalists for the job back in 1993. Other in-house candidates at the time included Sgt. Robert Jackson, who is the current police prosecutor, and former Sgt. Richard Abbadessa, who retired several years ago.

Haddad said there are also in-house candidates this time around but declined to release their names. Haddad said the timetable for the search process is flexible.

Library building put out to bid

"extremely reluctant to leave the old building but realized the library needed more space." She said that she is excited about the new library.

Patience Towle, library trustee chairman, agreed with Evans. "We are sad to leave because it is a beloved building that the town has such warm memories of, but the service we will be able to provide at the new library will dramatically increase," she said.

Martha Gjestby of the Cohasset Historical Society said she hopes the library remains a public building. She said the historical society does not have the funds to purchase the building but, "hopes whoever buys the building keeps the murals."

Al Moore, chairman of the planning board, said his personal preference is to turn the library into a private residence. He added whatever is done with the old library should be done quickly so the town, "doesn't lease the building to some cause for $1 a year." He said a covenant, or restrictive policy, could be enacted so that the murals could be kept intact. While the murals have drawn the most attention, the design of the building is interesting as well.

The library was constructed in an Andrew Carnegie motif. His design places the librarian at the entrance of the building, in front of the stacks of books, "guarding" the literature and on either side of the librarian there are two reading rooms. Carnegie donated large amounts of money in America at the turn of the century and his design became the prototype for building libraries.

The building was renovated in 1978 to create a larger work area for the staff and improved access to book collections.

CPR training for coaches

proactive, and started to certify its coaches in CPR even before the bill came forward.

"Knock on wood, we never want to be in the situation of trying to save a child's life but if we are, we will be prepared," Ford said.

Currently, there is either an athletic trainer, Emergency Medical Technician, or physician on hand at every game played by a Cohasset team. Also, every coach is provided with cell phone if he or she does not have one to call emergency personnel immediately. Ford said that in the fall, the teams are fortunate because a majority of the coaches are EMTs however, that is not the case in the winter.

"Our kids are very well protected against any emergency problems. I take a lot of steps to ensure their safety," Ford said.

> "Knock on wood, we never want to be in the situation of trying to save a child's life but if we are, we will be prepared."
> — Athletic Director Ron Ford

Jim Levenson, Cohasset's athletic trainer, is expected to work with the coaches to certify them in CPR. Levenson is also certified as a basic lifesaving instructor by the American Heart Association, and tries to attend as many games as he can. Ford said if Levenson is unable to attend a match there is always a substitute athletic trainer on hand.

If approved, the state program would be an unfunded mandate which means the CPR training would be paid for by the school. State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, said while he is usually consistent on opposing unfunded mandates in this case it's reasonable.

"With the amount of state aid floated toward the schools, this is not that big of a deal and should not put a hole in any school's budget," Hedlund said.

He added he thinks the bill is a safeguard against potential tragedies.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, also backs the bill.

Committee updates

Selectmen recently appointed Ed Mulvey of Pond Street to the Senior Housing Committee, which is charged with exploring opportunities for affordable housing for the town's senior citizens.

Selectman Tom Callahan will serve as the representative from the Board of Selectmen on the Community Preservation Committee that will be made up of town officials and citizens at large. The CPC will study community preservation and make recommendations to Town Meeting for acquisition and preservation of historic resources, open space, land for recreation and affordable housing. Then Town Meeting may make appropriations for those purposes from the community preservation funds acquired through a property tax surcharge approved last spring when the town adopted the Community Preservation Act.

School department releases results of audit

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The Cohasset School Department released the results from its first audit since 1987 last week.

The state Department of Education gave the Cohasset School Department until Dec. 10 to respond to its audit that was conducted last May.

The audit was concerned with four areas: special education, civil rights requirements, Title I, and nutrition. However, special education and civil rights requirements received the most attention. There were 58 areas reviewed in the special education department and there were 55 items evaluated pertaining to civil rights requirements compared with 26 items in Title I and six areas in nutrition.

The report evaluates different aspects of each program and categorizes them into commendable, partially implemented, not implemented, and issues requiring response.

It is now up to the school department to create a Corrective Action Plan and submit it to the DOE. The plan must include the school department's strategy for correcting the programs the DOE said were either partially implemented or required a response.

Stephen Kaplan, Director of Student Services, gave a presentation of the results at last week's School Committee meeting. Kaplan said special education drew most of the attention because the state was reprimanded at the federal level and now "was taking it out on the local school departments."

Kaplan stressed that many of the issues will be corrected with paperwork and are not concerned with how the program runs. "For every eight problems, there is only one that relates to a service a student receives. Special education is becoming a paper pushing business," he said.

Kaplan said times have changed and, "in the past, the spirit of the law had driven special education now, it's the letter of law."

One of the more interesting areas, the DOE cited the special education department for, was having too many students in its program. In four or five cases the DOE found no evidence that the student needed any special services. Kaplan said he will review those files.

Another area that was found to be partially implemented was the procedure for recording suspensions. According to state law, the district needs to have a procedure to record the number and duration of suspensions. The DOE found suspension notices were not automatically communicated to the special education office.

Of the 55 areas looked at for the civil rights requirements, only four were not implemented. An example of one of the elements that is not implemented, is that the school department does not have a written policy regarding the availability of in-school programs for pregnant students. This will require Kaplan to write a policy.

Another are that was not implemented is concerning staff training regarding civil rights responsibilities. State law requires a, "school district provide in-service training for all school personnel at least annually, regarding civil rights responsibilities." The DOE found that this training was not done.

While there is some work to be done, overall Kaplan said this was a positive review of how the school department functions. "The Cohasset schools look quite well in the big picture," he said.

The Final Report is available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, all of the school libraries, and town hall. Supt. Edward Malvey said he also gave copies of the report to the PSO, the Parent Advisory Council, and the School Improvement Council, in an effort to garner comments from the public.

Supt. Edward Malvey said that the department will be forming a team of administrators and staff to draft the Corrective Action Plan. He encouraged parents to review the report and submit their suggestions no later then Nov. 30.

Comments sought on Corrective Action Plan

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The Cohasset School Department asked all who are concerned with the recent results of the Department of Education's audit, to read the report and send their comments and suggestions to the school department no later than Nov. 30.

In its cover letter to the local school department, the DOE highly recommended that parent comment be considered in the Corrective Action Plan, but this leaves room for interpretation.

The school committee decided to not hold formal meetings to write the plan with parents. But some wonder if the parents of Cohasset's students should have more of a say in the drafting of a Corrective Action Plan.

Maureen Jerz, 133 N. Main St., feels that parents should have more say in the writing of the school's CAP. At the School Committee meeting last week, Jerz asked the committee how it felt about parent participation. She said that some of the programs that the DOE found as partially implemented were spearheaded by parents, and they should have more of a say in how the department aims to correct those problems.

The response from the committee was mixed. Stephanie Noble, chairman of the School Committee, said she had no objection with parents participating in the writing process. "This process would greatly benefit from the input of parents," she said.

However, some on the committee felt that this was not the best course of action to pursue.

Mark DeGiacomo, a member of the school committee, said that there is just too short of a time frame to write the CAP to involve everyone who wants to participate. "The writing of the CAP is going to be an informal process," he said. "I don't know how we could get organized with the parents in such a short time."

Stephen Kaplan, Director of Special Education, agreed with DeGiacomo. "There are not a lot of items that could benefit from joint contribution," Kaplan said. Kaplan added that most of the areas that the DOE said the school department needs to address, concerns policy writing or other paperwork that needs to be done by administrative staff.

Chartis Tebbetts, a member of the school committee, said that the CAP is not going to dictate school policy for years. "I think we are over-blowing what the CAP is. All the school department is going to do, is to say in broad strokes that we are going to be in compliance with all the areas we need to be," she said.

Parents are urged to send their comments to either Supt. Edward Malvey or Stephen Kaplan by Nov. 30.

The all-night parking ban continues until April 1.

Graves sale

Selectmen recently approved the sale of four graves back to the town for $900. Town Manager Mark Haddad told the board he received a letter from William and Wanda Murphy, who now live in Texas and have no use for the graves.

Gravel pit

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he contacted BSC Engineering to draft a contract so the firm can begin work on the design for the Little League Fields at the former gravel pit off North Main Street. Voters at the Nov. 5 Special Town Meeting appropriated $27,000 to design two baseball fields at the site. In a related matter, money was set aside from the Department of Public Works budget for the removal of more trees in the gravel pit to provide more space for fill, Haddad said.

Birds flock to Strait's Pond

Thirty species of birds were sighted on the Strait's Pond Watershed Association (SPWA) two-hour bird walk on Saturday, Nov. 10 led by Sally Avery of Cohasset.

Most were spotted in or around Straits Pond and some in the ocean off Black Rock, Green Hill, and Gunrock beaches. Identified birds were: Red-throated Loons, Double-crested Cormorants, Great Blue Heron, Great Egret, Canada Geese, Brant, Mute Swans, American Black Duck, Mallard, Common Eider, Surf Scoter, White-winged Scoter, Bufflehead, Hooded Merganser, Red-breasted Merganser, Ruddy Duck, Bonaparte's Gull, Ring-billed Gull, Herring Gull, Great Black-backed Gull, Rock Dove, Mourning Dove, Belted Kingfisher, Black-capped Chickadee, Tufted Titmouse, Northern Mockingbird, European Starling, Dark-eyed Junco, American Goldfinch, House Sparrow.

The SPWA Tree Swallow bird house project appears to be a success. The organization decided to place several Tree Swallow Houses (nesting boxes) last spring on poles in the pond after reading Nancy Kramer's (1991) copies of letters to editors as a partial solution to the Midge problem here and at Scituate's Musquashicut Pond, and after consulting with Mass. Audubon and Avery. Tree Swallows, flying constantly, eat hundreds of flying insects each day.

Each nesting box had a pair nesting there and several young. Pete Curtis, Hull and Ohio resident, donated materials and constructed 27 nesting boxes. John Loupos, Hull resident, placed 10 poles and birdhouses in the pond. Several more birdhouses will be placed in March of 2002 with a projected goal of 100 in and around the pond.

If you would like to sponsor a Tree Swallow birdhouse for Strait's Pond please send $10, a partial cost of supplies, (pay to SPWA) to Lawry Reid, 31 Richards Road, Hull 02045.

IT'S HAPPENING

Deck Your Halls!

Fresh balsam Christmas trees and wreaths, tabletop boxwood trees, and sleigh-loads of handcrafted ornaments and gifts will be available at Cohasset's Annual Village Fair, on and around Cohasset Common, on Saturday, Dec. 1, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. A Cohasset tradition for more than 40 years, the Village Fair is a great way to begin your holiday season!

Come greet friends and get a head start on your holiday decorating and shopping. Stop by Town Hall, the Second Congregational Church, St. Stephen's and the First Parish House on Main Street to see all of the beautiful Christmas greens and decorations for sale. All proceeds support Cohasset' churches, regional charities and the Appalachia Service Project.

Christmas trees

First Parish Church in Cohasset is again offering fresh cut balsam Christmas trees and handmade ornaments at the Parish House on Main Street during the Village Fair. Stop by early for your choice of trees ranging from 4-9 feet tall. All trees are $35. Call (781) 383-9767 to reserve your tree early, and you'll be automatically entered into a "Your Tree Free" drawing.

The Jingle Bell Walk, a Cohasset tradition offered by the SSCC, begins at 2 p.m. on Nov. 23, when Santa Claus arrives by boat with his elves at Cohasset Harbor (Border Street).

After Santa distributes jingle bells to the children, he and his elves will board a hayride and the walk continues along the sidewalks of Elm to Main St. in Cohasset. At 2:30 p.m. the South Shore Community Center welcomes you to partake in cookies, a beverage, and a holiday sing-along. Holiday music and carols will also be sung by all.

Santa will be upstairs in the center to pose for pictures with you and your children. Please stroll through the village to share in the local shops' holiday ambiance.

At 3 p.m. on Cohasset Common there will be a "Turkey Tot Trot" for ages 3 to 10. You may pre-register for this event for $2 or post register the day of the event for $3 per participant. Proceeds will go to benefit the Nursery School. All participants will receive a prize!

Listen to the bells of St. Stephen's playing from 2:30 to 4 p.m., while enjoying a hayride around the Common. Hayrides will be available from 3 to 4 p.m. At 3:30 p.m., gather around the Cohasset Common to listen to the Rusty Skippers Marching Band. The festivities culminate on Cohasset Common at 4:15 p.m. with the lighting of the tree.

There is something for everyone this year at the Jingle Bell Walk. It's a great way to appreciate our picturesque surroundings, while involving the whole family in a Cohasset tradition.

In the event of rain, all outdoor activities will be cancelled and Santa will arrive in the Community Center Gym at 2 p.m.

Exploring movement

The Cohasset Recreation and Cohasset High School come together during a project for community service.

Three high school juniors, Shawna Sullivan, Sarah Dennis and Bryan Bilton, will run a Movement Exploration for ages 4 and 5. These volunteered services will help the children develop their motor skills and basic social skills. It will also provide an opportunity for parents to drop their youngsters off and run a few errands without having to entertain the children.

The program will run on a rotating schedule as follows: 10:50 to 11:40 a.m. Nov. 29, Dec. 6, Dec. 13, and Dec. 20.

For more information, call 781-383-4109. Limited space available. Registration will be at the Town Hall.

Buttonwood book angels

In the spirit of holiday sharing, Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset and Buttonwood For Kids in Hingham invite all to participate in our Book Angel program. The Book Angel Program that will run through Sunday Dec. 16, is a program to help put books into the hands of disadvantaged children. The Book Angel takes an angel from the tree and purchases a book for that child that is close to the interest highlighted on the angel. Buttonwood will then discount that book 15 percent and deliver the book to that child's sponsoring group. Together, Buttonwood Books &Toy and Buttonwood For Kids support Wellspring in Hull, The Friends of the Homeless in Weymouth, The Hingham Interfaith Food Pantry, the Mary Martha Learning Center, the Blue Hills Healthy Families Program and the South Shore Educational Collaborative Teen Parent Program.

This is the eighth year Buttonwood has sponsored the Book Angel program. For more information call 781-383-2665 (Cohasset) and 781-749-2665 (Hingham).

Train foes host hoe-down

AfTA supporters kick up their heels

By Mary Ford

Affectionately dubbed "The Odd Couple", state Rep. Garrett Bradley and state Sen. Robert Hedlund accept plaques from AfTA for their work opposing Greenbush on Beacon Hill.

John Bewick may not be Gary Cooper but as far as he's concerned it's "High Noon" for Greenbush.

And while the Hingham transplant, who moved to his wife's hometown, tried to honor the contributions of others at a special event this week — he ended up being the champion for those who share his passion for derailing the train.

Wild West metaphors were not in short supply Sunday night at a hoe-down at the Hingham Community Center hosted by AfTA (Advocates for Transportation Alternatives), which provided the opportunity for the group's supporters to kick up their heels and have a little fun. AfTA members hail from the towns along the Greenbush line: Hingham, Scituate, Cohasset, Weymouth and Braintree.

"He was like a hero riding into town on his white steed when he married Martha (Reardon) and moved to Hingham," said state Sen. Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth, about Bewick, a former state Secretary of Environmental Affairs.

AfTA honored Hedlund and his "sidekick," state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham — whom Bewick affectionately referred to as the "odd couple" — for their efforts and courage on the anti-train front. Bewick presented the two legislators with inscribed plaques.

"It's not easy to go up against the establishment — the MBTA and (Beacon Hill) leadership," he said. The controversial, 17-mile Greenbush line is the third and final leg of the Old Colony Railroad Restoration Project. The project's two sister trains, the Middleboro and Plymouth lines resumed service in 1997.

Hedlund, clad in jeans and T-shirt, quipped he planned to hang his plaque right where state Transportation Secretary Kevin Sullivan would see it when he visited his office. Sullivan insists Greenbush is going ahead despite its cost and local opposition.

Bradley, who was impeccably dressed in a dark suit, white shirt and tie, took the odd-couple reference in stride, while joking, "I won't let you know which one he is" referring to Hedlund.

The normally conservative Bewick and dozens of other AfTA members donned Stetsons, cowboy boots and bandannas and got out on the dance floor for a few do-si-dos to a range of square dance numbers that led up to the grand finale "The End of the Line Dance."

During a break, Bewick told supporters not to believe what they read about Greenbush, which the MBTA says is on the fast track, with the groundbreaking planned for late next year.

In an interview a few minutes later, he stopped short of challenging the state agency to a shootout at the OK corral.

"Any one bullet might not work," Bewick said about killing Greenbush. "But we have so many."

AfTA has launched three lawsuits so far against the train and has more ammunition.

The current lawsuits include seeking all Greenbush public documents from the state, disputing results of the Environmental Impact Report (a state environmental feasibility study on the project), and challenging Cohasset's transfer of the abandoned right-of-way to the MBTA.

Bewick said future legal action could involve a range of challenges to engineering and conservation permits, and seeking an injunction to stop the project.

"There's a rich field of opportunity," he said. "We're like a military camp.

"Some bullets hit the target and some stray but if you have enough fire power, you're going to prevail and I think we'll prevail."

About 70 AfTA supporters attended Sunday's event that also featured a raffle.

Marilyn Yorke who lives on the tracks at 223 South St. in Hingham won the grand prize, a flag that says, "Don't Give Up the Ship." The MBTA must move Yorke's antique house at Torrent Crossing a short distance, which will cost upwards of $100,000 and will also install $90,000 in insulation and windows to mitigate the train's effects, she said.

Needless to say, Yorke wants her house to stay right where it is on its old granite foundation and hopes Greenbush will just go away.

"I have the American flag on one side and I'll put the 'Don't Give Up The Ship' flag on the other," she said about her raffle prize. "I'll have to get another flag pole."

A Hull-ish day on tap

Showdown to determine post-season dreams for gridders

By David Ingber

Quarterback Mike Snowdale (#10) and fullback Braun Goodson (#33) are just two of the Skippers who'll be looked to for big things in Thursday's showdown with Hull.

Every Thanksgiving, rivals Cohasset and Hull lock horns in their most anticipated sports event of the year. But this year, more is at stake than simply community pride.

The reason for the game's heightened importance is clear. With a win, the 8-1 Cohasset Skippers would head to the Div. 5 Super Bowl for the first time since 1980.

The Skippers had a perfect season lined up after beating Abington (9-1) in week 8. With a golden opportunity to clinch the South Shore League last week, Cohassset was taken down by a powerful Norwell squad, 13-6, leaving them in a must-win situation heading into Thanksgiving.

Fourth year coach Tony Rolfe admits that all the pre-game hype gets the town enthused, but it does not mean that his team can change their game plan.

"We are treating this like any other game," he affirmed.

Cohasset comes into this game planning to do what has given them so much success this year: stopping the run. Hull has a fearsome running game behind the solid blocking of a large offensive line and the power rushing of senior fullback Jim Foley.

According to Rolfe, stopping Foley is the key to success against the Pirates.

"He is their go-to guy," asserted the Skipper coach. "He is just a big kid who runs hard. That is much of our game plan: stopping him."

Cohasset's front defensive line had been very strong at stopping the run until last week, when Norwell picked up 301 yards on the ground. However, Rolfe feels that everything is back in order.

"They blocked better than we tackled— it is as simple as that," explained Rolfe. "But we have addressed those problems. I know it wasn't our best game."

Even though the Pirates' ground game warrants extreme caution, their air attack will not be taken lightly. Cohasset cornerbacks Eric Libby, a senior, and sophomore Chris Bilodeau have been excellent at stopping the pass. The Skipper secondary has given up only one passing touchdown all year.

The passing game for the Skippers has been also outstanding. Junior Mike Snowdale has led all Eastern Mass. Div. 5 quarterbacks this year with 14 touchdown passes. He has broken 100 yards passing in six games this year—generally a rarity in high school football.

Senior tailback Jason Brown will keep the Skippers moving on ground, with the help of Braun Goodson, a tough junior fullback, who has been a terrific lead blocker for Brown.

Rolfe has spent his off-week trying to analyze every aspect of the Hull offense, defense and special teams. But what he cannot prepare his team for is actually playing in Hull.

Fond 'off week' Recollections

COVERING ALL BASES
LOU MOLINARI

Once again, that week is here: the open week, when we all wait around for the big Thanksgiving Day football games.

There was a time, like more than 35 years ago, this was a big football week, for football coaches, their assistants and a certain group of sportswriters.

Back then, I worked for a daily newspaper in the area that had a sports editor who really knew how to get the most bang for his buck out of the high school football season.

This was the week when a certain night was set aside for the football coaches and writers of the area daily to get together at the Lord Fox in Foxboro and select a football all-scholastic team. Schools were represented from Foxboro, to Plymouth, to Quincy to Pembroke. The towns numbered from 30 to 40, depending on the area the newspaper was moving into.

It was party time with a great dinner, refreshments and night club acts brought in from the Latin Quarter in Boston.

With all this going on, I often wondered how we got an all-scholastic team picked, but we did. It was a time for the writers to meet the coaches in an atmosphere other than a football field. It was also a time for the football coaches to use their lobbying skills for their favorite players.

It was a night engineered by Pres Hobson, who was sports editor of the paper at the time, and who is no longer with us, and the world is a lot less entertaining as a result of his loss.

Back then, the football coaches were giants. There names were practically household words. There was Harry Gerrish of Hanover, Jackie Fisher of Weymouth, Hank Conroy of Quincy, Carl Leone of North Quincy, Evie Dorr of Scituate, Dan Bennett of Natick, Art Gulla of Holbrook, Tony Quintiliani of Braintree, and so many more whose names escape me right now.

It was a night the coaches and writers looked forward to year after year. It was a night that filled a void in the open football week.

Like so many good things, that special night that came around once a year came to an end much too soon. As the newspaper grew and kept expanding, the expense of such a night became prohibitive. That special night finally came to an end. The coaches missed it. The writers missed it and the all-scholastic team was missing a little something.

That special week is here once again. There is no party, but there are memories. Hopefully, a number of the party participants are still around and will be out watching their favorite teams play next Thursday.

If any of you guys from the old days are still around and care to remember who I was: I was the "husky" kid with the crew cut.

There was another exceptional man around in those days. Bob Cady was the assistant sports editor, who would eventually become sports editor of the newspaper. Bob wrote a weekly sports column and ended every column with three words that were very appropriate back then and for the times we now live in — Peace attend thee.

Motley's crew

Cohasset senior played key role in NDA's state title run

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

During Notre Dame's recent charge through the Division 1 soccer tournament, the offense received the lion's share of the accolades. And, as is so often the case, outstanding defensive work was overshadowed.

Among those defensive stalwarts who went about their vital job quietly and efficiently was Cohasset senior Sarah Motley.

True, the offense did put up some pretty impressive numbers in their opponents' ends, but the defense was the key to the Aces' biggest wins.

Motley, a second year starter, had a terrific regular and post-season at stopper. She played an important role in the Aces backfield, which surrendered only one goal in five playoff games before Wachusett scored two in the State Finals.

With the help of their lone Cohasset team member, the Aces marched right through the South Sectionals, dismantling Oliver Ames 3-0 in the Sectional Finals.

Motley and the defensive crew came up huge in stopping Andover, 1-0, in the East Regionals. A late goal by junior standout Nicole Dunn, of Plymouth, was the difference maker.

Winning the East Regionals was a chance for retribution for the Aces. All season long, they had quested to make it that far to avenge their early exit from the playoffs a year ago.

"We got knocked out on a game that we should have won," asserted Motley.

Although the team felt disappointed about not being able to complete their conquest of a State title, Motley could not help feeling a tremendous sense of accomplishment.

"We had a really good season," reported Motley, who played for the Skippers as a freshman before transferring to NDA. "We made it further than any other team in Notre Dame history."

Notre Dame finished the season with a record of 20-1-3 (playoffs included) with the one loss a 2-1 heartbreaker to Wachusett.

Notre Dame finished the season with a record of 20-1-3 (playoffs included) with the one loss a 2-1 heartbreaker to Wachusett.

Earning her way to the starting spot as a junior, Motley played for the Aces all through high school. She credits much of the success of the defense to their controlled way of playing.

"A lot of teams just play kick and run," she noted. "We like to pass it around more."

Motley will continue to talk to recruiters about the possibility of playing in college. She is presently looking into opportunities at Villanova, LaFayette, St. Joseph's, Bentley and Babson.

With a bright college future ahead, Motley had a great final season to give her a push start.

All-Scholastic field hockey team

Cohasset's Peraino and Coakley named among area's elite

The 14 individuals you see honored here are the ones we determined through research and personal observation to be the top field hockey players in Marinerland (i.e. Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland and Scituate).

Heather Peraino

As you might imagine, this was no easy task. Several of the girls you see recognized here as Honorable Mentions received serious consideration for All-Scholastic honors.

Having committed to a team of only 14 players, however, difficult choices had to be made. The omission of Cohasset senior sweeper Jackie Goines, a South Shore League All-Star, was one of the more difficult ones.

After missing all of her sophomore year following knee surgery and still slowed somewhat last fall as a junior, Jackie came out of nowhere to emerge as the central figure in the Lady Skippers defensive core this season, and was rewarded for her efforts with a "Best Defensive Player Award" at last week's post-season dinner.

"We had a lot of pressure on our defense this year, and Jackie played a big part in keeping it all together," said Cohasset coach Deb Bostwick. "She had a great attitude. She helped keep the girls from ever getting too uptight. She kept things loose and played on the same high level all the time."

Heather Peraino - Junior (Capt.)
Midfielder - Cohasset

This second year starter was the heart and soul of the Lady Skippers team that missed the post-season by just one game a year after graduating nine starters from the program...led the team in scoring with five goals and four assists and was voted team Most Valuable Player...South Shore League All-Star...also a member of the varsity basketball team...looks forward to pitching for the softball team this spring, with the program slated for reinstatement...also plays indoor field hockey in the winter with many of her Cohasset High teammates at the Bridgewater Sports Dome...would like to play field hockey in college, and is leaning towards attending a medical school and studying dental hygiene...Cohasset coach Deb Bostwick: "Heather was the focal point of so much of what we did this season. Everything on offense went through her. She had a great sophomore year on a very good team and then really emerged as a leader and a force this season."

Cohasset's Heather Peraino (#13) was a no-brainer for this team. The junior captain was the heart and soul of the surprising Lady Skippers this season, who came within one win of qualifying for the state tourne

SPORTS NOTES

CHS winter Sports practices start Monday

Practices for all Cohasset High School winter sports programs start on Monday. Athletes should see Athletic Director Ron Ford for specific information.

All athletes wishing to participate must have passed a Physical within the past 365 days, and have a form stating this on file with the Athletic Department. Athletes also need to pay a User Fee of $75.

Interscholastic sports programs offered this winter are ice hockey, gymnastics, wrestling and boys and girls basketball.

For more information, call Cohasset High Athletic Director Ron Ford (781-383-6103).

Cohasset High blanket

These attractive navy colored blankets with white trim include a Skippers logo in the middle.

The cost for one blanket is $50, and $45 each for two or more. All monies go to the C.H.S. Athletic Dept. Interested parties should call Cohasset High Athletic Director Ron Ford at 781-383-6103.

Youth basketball evaluation sessions

Grades 1-3

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club/Recreation Department request all boys and girls in grades one through three, who registered for youth basketball this season, attend a 45-minute evaluation session so that balanced teams can be drafted. The schedule is as follows:

Saturday, Dec. 1

Grade one, boys and girls, 9 a.m., Deer Hill School

Grade two, boys and girls, 10:30 a.m., Deer Hill School

Grade three, boys and girls, noon, Deer Hill School

For questions or comments, call Jack Worley at 781-383-4109.

Grades 4-6

On Saturday, Dec. 1, the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club will hold evaluations and team selection by all coaches for boys and girls in grades four to eight. The season will begin Saturday, Dec. 9. The evaluation schedule for each grade is listed below. The first 40 minutes will be spent evaluating the boys and girls. The final 20 minutes will be a coach's conference to select the teams. The teams must be selected on that day since the actual games begin the following week.

SATURDAY, DEC. 1

Classic Abington-Cohasset Game tape available

Seeking to raise money for a new Athletic Trainer at Cohasset High, the C.H.S. Athletic Dept. is making available tapes of this past Friday's huge Skippers victory on the gridiron over league rival Abington. In addition to the game in its entirety, the tape will include the Channel 5 report and highlight reel from the game, as well as snipets from the C.H.S. pre-game rally and Senior Night ceremonies. Also included in the package will be a copy of the game rosters and the game report from the Cohasset Mariner.

The cost of this entire package is $15, with all monies going to the C.H.S. Athletic Dept. Interested parties should call Cohasset High Athletic Director Ron Ford at 781-383-6103.

Spring travel soccer Registration

Cohasset Soccer Club is now accepting registrations for the Spring Travel Soccer Season. Those players who did not register in the fall must do so by December 21, 2001. Registration forms may be obtained at the Recreation Office in Town Hall. Payment of $70.00 is due at the time of registration. No late registrations are being accepted. Contact Brad or Melinda Murray at 781-383-7017 with any questions.

Abbey Coakley - Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Cohasset

Abbey Coakley

Finished second on the Lady Skippers in scoring behind Peraino with three goals and three assists and won the "Coaches Award" in deference to what coach Bostwick deemed was "outstanding leadership capabilities" made a smooth transition from bench player to full-timer this season. South Shore League All-Star also plays indoor field hockey in the winter with many of her Cohasset High teammates at the Bridgewater Sports Dome, presently leaning towards attending a Boston art school, but would like to play collegiate field hockey at another Boston School through an available collaborative athletic program...Cohasset coach Deb Bostwick: "Abbie was the player I'd be most at ease leaving in charge if I wasn't there. She was a great leader and she was just really into the game. She was always paying attention whether she was on the field or not. She was also a very strong offensive player for us. She really made a lot of nice drives and created a lot of corner opportunities."

Carolyn King - Junior Center Forward - Hanover

Carolyn King

A second-year varsity player, King led Hanover in scoring with 19 points on 12 goals, 7 assists. Her 12 goals were the most scored by any other Patriot League player...King's solid play on the front line powered the Lady Indians to a second place finish in their first season in the Patriot League with a 6-2-2 record, which tied rival Hingham, and helped Hanover qualify for the Div. 2 South Sectional for the 18th time in 19 seasons...A Patriot League All-star, King has been a member of the MSSFHA Summer League for two years and has participated in Harvard's Indoor tournament and has been chosen to captain next year's field hockey team...King is also a forward on the HHS basketball team. Hanover coach Judy Schneider: "Carolyn's stick skills are excellent. She knows where the ball is inside our offensive circle and gets to it. She sees the entire field and has good anticipation."

Rachel Mezzetti - Senior

Rachel Mezzetti

A first-year starter, Mezzetti had a great offensive year for the Harborwomen...The senior was Hingham's leading scorer with 12 goals, despite playing on the left side...Mezzetti's tough play and great stick skills inside the circle and on corner penalties heavily aided the Harborwomen, who tied rival Hanover for second place in the Patriot League with a 6-2-2 record...Also contributed some of the best offensive chances for Hingham in the team's tough 1-0 Div. 2 Sectional loss to West Bridgewater and came up big in two scoreless ties with Hanover...Mezzetti—who also enjoys playing the violin – is considering attending college and continuing her field hockey career. Hingham coach Meredith Gordon: "She's a snipper. She was always on the post and had her best performances against Hanover. Judy (Schneider, Hanover coach) was very impressed with her. She's small, but she's fearless."

Keri Gerrish - Sophomore Midfielder - Hanover

Keri Gerrish

In just her first varsity year, Gerrish made some noise for the Patriot League runners up...Solid on both defense and offense, Gerrish recorded nine points on one goal and eight assists...A Patriot League All-star, Gerrish "pretty honored" to be the only sophomore to start in this year's PL All-star game...Has played center, left and right midfield positions...Her performance in the midfield helped the Lady Indians finish in second place in the PL with a 6-2-2 record, which tied Hingham, and in securing the team's 18th consecutive Div. 2 tourney berth in 19 seasons...In addition to field hockey, Gerrish is also a member of the HHS gymnastics and softball teams...Gerrish also competes for Ellis Gymnastics in Braintree and plays indoor softball as a pitcher and third baseman. Hanover coach Judy Schneider: "Keri has outstanding quickness and great endurance. She's a good one-on-one player and has hard, flat hits. She has good anticipation and good transition. She is an intense competitor and loves the game."

Katie Fallon - Senior (Capt.)
Midfielder - Hingham

There's more to field hockey than just statistics and Fallon is the epitome of this ideal...As Hingham's most reliable midfielder, this two-year starter and first-time Patriot League All-star was a defensive stalwart for the Harborwomen...Her performance in the midfield contributed heavily to Hingham's second-place finish in the Patriot League (6-2-2, which tied rival Hanover) and Div. 2 tourney berth...Fallon is secretary of SADD and is also active in the drama club...The senior is considering attending college and continuing her field hockey career. Hingham coach Meredith Gordon: "She's a real subtle player and isn't flamboyant, but she was relied on heavily. She knows how to read her opponents extremely well and is very patient as far as her defensive tactics are concerned. She's in every play. She's just there. She's the heart of the team."

Amy Martino - Junior Center Midfielder - Hanover

Amy Martino

Was a force for the Lady Indians in the midfield this season...A second-year starter, Martino contributed heavily both on offense and defense...Tallied nine points this year on three goals and six assists for Hanover, which tied Hingham for second in the Patriot League with a 6-2-2 record...Was voted a Patriot League All-star in Hanover's first season in the new league...Has said that what she enjoys most about field hockey is "playing with her teammates and having fun"...Martino has already been chosen as one of the captains for next season...The junior has participated in the MSSFHA Summer League for two years and has competed in the Winter Indoor League in Bridgewater for two years...The junior also competes on Hanover's track and field team and also enjoys horseback riding and competes for Herring Brook in Pembroke. Hanover coach Judy Schneider: "She controls the middle of the field and is always in position to intercept a cross pass. Her hard drive is valuable in distributing play and changing fields. She always seems to come up with the ball near our defensive circle and is able to make quick, strong clears."

Tara Hostnick - Junior
Midfielder – Silver Lake

Tara Hostnick

Old Colony League All-Star and selected as team Most Valuable Player for the Lady Lakers...was focal point of offense, with most attacks flowing through her, and was also a top defensive player...played through painful ankle sprain for much of the early part of the season...also a standout singles tennis player, as acknowledged by the Mariner this past spring with an All-Scholastic Honorable Mention...Silver Lake field hockey coach Marlene Lopes says she wouldn't even be surprised to see Tara play field hockey at the Div. 1 college level if she sticks to it...Coach Lopes: "Tara did it all for us. She was strong on the drive, and has amazing stick work, and she's a great passer too. She also has great instincts for the game."

Melanie Duval - Senior (Capt.)
Center Defense - Scituate

Came back much stronger than anyone could have anticipated after missing most of the first month of the season with mononucleosis, emerging almost instantly as the top defensive presence for the Sailors...a strong team leader...started playing field hockey as a sophomore...after one year of JV play, made the jump to varsity starter at center-defense as a junior...a Patriot League All-Star...top collegiate choice is Middlebury College (Vermont), though she's applied to seven other New England schools...Commonwealth College (the Honors program at UMass-Amherst) has offered her free tuition...leaning towards majoring in Business...also an avid trained dancer, something she has been pursuing since she was two years old. She's studied jazz, ballet, pointe and modern...will continue dancing in college, but says she's leaning towards playing field hockey at an intramural level only... Scituate coach Marcia McKeever: "Melanie is a very smart and steady player. She's also very aggressive. She doesn't let herself get pushed off the ball, and that's one of the things that helps make her an outstanding defensive player. She's also extremely coachable."

Melanie Duval

Nicole Vella - Senior

Nicole Vella

Very good at creating her own offense...finished the season with a team high four goals and two assists... a four year field hockey team member, including the last two on the varsity squad...Patriot League All-Star...Vella started playing field hockey as an eighth grader through a program at the Scituate Youth Center...plays indoor field hockey at the Bridgewater Sports Dome during the winter...has participated in two field hockey camps at Deerfield Academy...played with Scituate teams in each of the past two Bay State Games, including this past summer's team that made it to the semifinals...participated in spring track as a freshman and sophomore, running as a member of the 4x800 relay team that made it to the All-State meet as a sophomore, but played lacrosse last spring as it became a full fledged varsity sport for the first time at S.H.S....has twin sister Nadine, who also played on the field hockey team...National Honors Society member...applying to Providence, Fairfield, UConn, UMass-Amherst and Loyola....she'd like to continue playing field hockey in college, though she concedes it may be at the club level if she winds up at one of these Div. 1 schools...Scituate coach Marcia McKeever: "Nicole is one of those player who does her job so well she goes almost unnoticed. She's very good at carrying the ball, and she does all the little things. She's just an overall extremely dependable player."

Sarah Taylor - Senior Defense - Norwell

Sarah Taylor

This South Shore League All-Star was the anchor of a very strong Lady Clippers defense...succeeded repeatedly with her task of shutting down several gifted opposing scorers this season...has played field hockey all four years at Norwell High, the last three as a varsity starter...would like to play field hockey in college and is planning to attend a few upcoming showcase tourneys...leaning towards studying Veterinary Medicine...is considering applying to several colleges, including URI, UNH, Guilford, Iowa State and Colorado State...Norwell field hockey coach Kathy O'Donnell: "Sarah has great timing and feel for the game. She's also a great leader on defense, helping girls know where to go. You could see other teams trying to avoid her side of the field in games, because she was so good at coming up with steals and then sending the ball back the other way real quickly."

Kara Shaughnessy - Senior (Capt.)
Goalie - Hanover

Kara Shaughnessy

After seeing limited time last season behind All-Scholastic goalie Lisa Bellantoni, Shaughnessy had a tremendous year in the cage for Hanover...Ranked among the top three goalies in the Patriot League, Shaughnessy allowed just 13 goals in 18 games for the Lady Indians for an impressive 0.72 goals against average...Of the 144 shots she saw, Shaughnessy stopped 131 of them...Also recorded 10 shutouts...Came up big in two scoreless ties against rival Hingham, whom the Lady Indians tied for second place in the Patriot League with a 6-2-2 record...A Patriot League All-star, Shaughnessy had a stellar performance in Hanover's first-round Div. 2 South Sectional game against West Bridgewater, holding them to just one goal in a 1-0 loss...Shaughnessy is considering attending UMass Amherst where she may continue her field hockey career. Hanover coach Judy Schneider: "Kara is an outstanding athlete. Agile, strong, flexible with good speed and quickness. She comes off the goal line to cut down angles and intercept cross passes. She has strong, hard clears with either foot. She directs her defense with confidence. She is hard working, dedicated athlete with great work ethics."

Abbe Ciulla - Senior
Goalie - Hingham

After being thrust into the starting goalie position last season, Ciulla proved she deserved the spot this year in an amazing performance...Ranked among the Patriot League's top three goalies, Ciulla was almost impenetrable this season, allowing just 13 goals in 19 games for an impressive 0.66 goals against average...Also recorded nine shutouts and 129 saves...Ciulla's impressive reaction to second-shot attempts constantly came up big in important games, such as in two scoreless ties with rival Hanover, whom the Harborwomen tied for second place in the Patriot League with a 6-2-2 record (11-5-2 overall)...Also recorded an outstanding performance in Hingham's 1-0 loss to Bishop Stang in the first round of the Div. 2 South Sectional...Ciulla is also a full-time art student, working with a local tutor and is also a member of the HHS snowboard club...A two-time Patriot League All-star, Ciulla is considering attending UMass Dartmouth and plans to continue playing field hockey. Hingham coach Meredith Gordon: "Abbe's so aggressive. She has great clears on both the right and left leg. She's quick to recover and is extremely passionate. She's all over the place. I can't say enough about her."

Abbe Ciulla

Meredith Gillespie - Senior
(Capt.)
Goalie - Marshfield

Was a leader both by example and by word for the Lady Rams this season, according to coach Carol Anderson...After starting half of the games last season, Gillespie started every game but three this season for Marshfield (6-9-2), after a concussion sustained late in the season kept her out of her final three high school games...Gillespie was impressive in the cage this season in which the Lady Rams moved up to the Old Colony League, which includes field hockey powerhouses like Falmouth, Barnstable, and Bridgewater-Raynham...The OCL All-star recorded four shutouts for Marshfield this season and saved 157 shots...Also served as the starting goalie for Marshfield's six-on-six Bay State Games team and has attended many field hockey clinics, including the nationally run Future's Program...The senior is also active in the MHS drama club, scoring the lead in last year's production of "Guys and Dolls", and in community theatre...Gillespie is considering attending Cornell University or Umass Amherst next fall. Marshfield coach Carol Anderson: "She's just such a hard worker. She goes out to play. She really took charge this year. She's a great leader on the field. She can see everything and was always talking to her teammates. She's a great kid."

With a field built right at the end of the Hull peninsula, literally surrounded on three sides by the Atlantic Ocean, Hull is a notorious Thanksgiving football venue with its wintry, windy and wet conditions.

"We are taking into consideration that it might be a bad weather day," said Rolfe, making note of how much the wind can affect a teams chances of mustering its passing game.

In his three Thanksgivings as a Cohasset coach, Rolfe has won, tied and lost (a 43-6 bruising last year). A victory would place Cohasset in the playoffs against Tyngsboro, which has already finished its season.

But as is his practice during the season, Rolfe refuses even to even glance past Hull. The Pirates may have a 3-3-3 record, but they did shutout Norwell in their second scoreless tie of the year.

Concluded Rolfe: "We can't look ahead. We have got our hands full with Hull."

Field hockey team breaks up on high note

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset field hockey team held its annual breakup banquet last Tuesday night to bring a positive end to what coach Deb Bostwick felt was an "encouraging building year."

After a slow start to the season, the Lady Skippers rallied to go 5-3-2 in their final five games to finish with a record of 6-7-5, thus missing post-season qualification by a single win. Bostwick said she believes this flourish is something that can be carried over into next season.

"I think the girls showed themselves at the end of the year what they can accomplish if they work hard," said the veteran coach. "The girls coming back will remember that."

The Cohasset girls lose five seniors to graduation: co-captain Abbey Coakley, Allison Scott, Suzanne Lynner, Jackie Goines and Katie Silva.

"We got good leadership and strong play from those seniors, but we'll be getting one of our captains back and I think there are others who are ready to step up and take a bigger leadership role," continued the coach."

The returning captain is junior Heather Peraino, who was named the team's Most Valuable Player at the banquet. She was also one of three Cohasset players named to the South Shore League All-Star team.

Coakley, another of the Lady Skippers league All-Star selectees, was honored for her leadership qualities with the bestowment of the team's "Coaches Award."

Defenders Kimmy Ulmer and Sarah Dennis were rewarded for their respective efforts with the "Unsung Hero" and "Most Improved Player" awards.

Dennis shared the "Most Improved Player" award with Goines, the third Cohasset player named to the South SSL All-Star team.

Second-graders share Thanksgiving thoughts

By Mitchell McNary
Thank you
for all my hands can hold a ball that I can thrown and catch a book to hold a play station that I can play shoes to put on to hug my Mom and Dad.

Thank you
for all my eyes can see a pitch that's coming to you and to see where I am going and so I can play with my friends and to eat my food and to see the words in a book and to see my Mom and Dad

Thank you
for all my ears can hear a plane in the air
a car driving on the road a motor cycle driving on the road and someone drilling something wind crashing on the ocean people cheering for a team to win and to hear my Mom and Dad say they love me.

By Whitney Jaffe
Thank you
for all my hands can hold sweet cats purring
red delicious apples that I like to eat holding hands with another person goggles when I go swimming turkey on Thanksgiving

Thank you
for all my eyes can see friends playing together seeing other people's eyes looking at me friends holding hands my cat, Gracie, sitting behind the TV my sister and me getting along

Thank you
for all my ears can hear the sound of running water friends laughing
buses going back to school for the fall kids yelling good things in excitement the sound of the bus leaving to go home my cat learning to meow

By Olivia Franklin
Thank you
for all my hands can hold bows and clips red and orange apples green for eating rakes for raking leaves a fork, a spoon, a knife, a plate, a cup for a feast cold chains on a swing pencils to write on paper tan railings on stairs soft dogs, puffy cats, all pets to play with pots and pans for cooking food books for reading stuff to eat with your fingers
Markers, crayons for drawing with

Thank you
for all my eyes can see ladybugs for good luck
seeing tennis and baseball games seeing tennis rackets hitting tennis balls people playing games all insects flying and crawling sky blue and clouds white leaves falling from trees in the fall pictures of me at all ages
American flag and lots more

Thank you
for all my ears can hear rain drops falling on the ground kids playing everywhere dogs barking, cats meowing footsteps on the ground snow crunching echoes bouncing off the wall food crunching in your mouth

By Sarah Evans
Thank you
for all my hands can hold my baby cousin playing with his ball holding my backpack at the bus stop building cars with my legos cups that hold water waving flags for fun pencils writing a card hugging my mom

Thank you
for all my eyes can see friends playing with me
my dad reading stories flowers growing in my mom's garden trees whose leaves are falling playing with animals

Thank you
for all my ears can hear singing songs
my teacher talking to me my friends laughing my dogs barking
my mom helping me with my math
my dad talking to me

By Christina Secatore
Thank you
for all my hands can hold cute hamsters and cute little mice white as snow lovely little, puppy dogs so furry and warm and don't forget those kittens of course don't forget to hold hands before crossing the street

Thank you
for all my eyes can see
I can see my loving family
I can see the children playing
I can see the morning sky and I can see the dark misty sky

Thank you
for all my ears can hear people talking through the day lovely barks and wolves howling scary meows from cats in the night

By Isabel Robinson
Thank you
for all my hands can hold slippery soap, delicious dishes filled with pasta soda cans of all sizes bright white snowballs that I throw red, blue and green paint brushes leaves of red and brown your new baby sister and your baby puppy.

Thank you
for all my eyes can see every sign, poem, picture, every bright star, pencil and person every brown turkey coming out of the oven all your grandparents that you love tall and puffy clouds your desk filled with pencils and crayons all your friends, the whizzing tennis ball and each tall oak tree.

Thank you
for all my ears can hear story readers reading fairy tales rushing cars zooming past me cool wind blowing threw the trees flashing lightening in wild storms kids playing ball questions being asked in school huge splashes in cold water long branches cracking in windy days and cats meowing for food.

By Alex Evans
Thank you
for all my hands can hold catching footballs in the park feeling cold snow touching good foods like carrots feeling soft fur on a dog putting on my soft sweatshirt carving pumpkins on Halloween

Thank you
for all my eyes can see kids having fun playing soccer the nice ocean blowing the waving of the American flag buttery popcorn after school black bats soaring in my woods

Thank you
for all my ears can hear the bells ringing at the church near my street the waves crashing at the beach the wind whistling in the sky people moving fast on bikes noise of a car horn people saying "Happy Thanksgiving!"

By Christopher Brash
Thank you
for all my hands can hold food like chicken that I eat gorgeous flowers in my yard wood that I stack in the woods cowboy hats that I play with pencils I use for drawing

Thank you
for all my eyes can see people walking to a park kids playing at the park library books water passing by playing computers
my teacher when I go to school

Thank you
for all my ears can hear birds chirping bats flying in caves rabbits hopping home kids running home people talking about the news people always saying "Thank You"

By Zoe Whilton
Thank you
for all my hands can hold cats cuddled so comfortable teddy bears so soft in my room books that are so "class" fruit so healthy and clean ball so big that I can bounce my grandma's cats

Thank you
for all my eyes can see lovely sunsets pink and orange lovely flowers long and short in my Grandma's garden puppies so cute sleeping seeing wild turkeys in my driveway only on Thanksgiving morning

Thank you
for all my ears can hear lovely songs that birds sing drums banging in songs kids laughing when they play cats purring when they're happy dogs barking when they're mad turkeys saying, "Gobble! Gobble!"

By Jake Durkin
Thank you
for all my hands can hold race car toys that I race outside drinking cups filled with soda bringing backpacks to school throwing baseballs at the wall books to read flags to hold and salute footballs to play catch

Thank you
for all my eyes can see time on the clock you playing at my friend's house words in a book animals in the forest stars in the sky
apples that are ripe

Thank you
for all my ears can hear birds tweeting cars driving on the highway pencils getting sharpened mice squeaking brooms sweeping in the hallway pigs snorting at the farm people talking

By Amanda Farren
Thank you
for all my hands can hold nutritious fruits so good and sweet and feel the warmth from the fire light heat and those green apples so good and tart and rocks so hard I can't break them apart
So you can see there are a lot of things you can hold.
I like to hold that stuff but not mold.

Thank you
for all my eyes can see the trees and the flowers and meadows and seas they are so beautiful to look at and fascinating too some are like that and some are gooey too.

Thank you
for all my ears can hear
The bumbling bees and tumbling leaves children playing and laughing too and I don't like when I hear boo boo
And I hear footsteps creeping around
Oh what good things I can hear for a sound.

HOW TO BUY A NEW $2,370 FURNACE FOR JUST $598.00!!!

YES! It's absolutely true, you can actually replace your old (and probably very inefficient) furnace and air conditioning for less than you would have to pay at any other time. Hurry this is a limited time offer exclusively from Excel Mechanical!!

WHY WOULD EXCEL MECHANICAL, INC. MAKE THIS INCREDIBLE OFFER?

HERE IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY
Every year the big manufacturers of air conditioners have to guess how many to build to meet the demand. Of course they're never exactly right. So they always have some inventory they must hold over until the next summer season. I went to the manufacturer (York) and contracted for the purchase of 33 premium air conditioners and furnaces in the four most popular sizes used in the Boston area. And, because of the quantity and time of year, I was able to buy them at drastically reduced, below wholesale cost-of-production prices.

HERE S HOW YOU CAN GET A FURNACE FREE
By putting this furnace and air conditioner package together and committing to a group purchase agreement of 33 systems, I was able to buy both the furnace and the air conditioner for less than you would normally pay for the air conditioner alone! So, if you buy one of these 33 new premium air conditioners, I'll give you the furnace FREE. All I ask for is the $598 in labor it costs to have your furnace installed.

HERE S HOW
Just call Katie at (617) 628-1144 and set up an appointment for your FREE survey. A design engineer will come and measure your home (and determine the availability of the proper size). He will show you the real world price on the air conditioner that fits your home. Then he will show you the substantial savings now. And it will include all labor and installation materials. Nothing is left out.

Drug arrest on Pleasant Street

Police allege a Cohasset man distributed cocaine from his residence at 100 Pleasant St.

Cohasset police working with the Norfolk County Task Force, the South Shore Drug Task Force and the Massachusetts State Police K-9 Unit executed at search warrant at the home of David E. Boyajian, 53, at 12:03 a.m., Saturday. Also arrested was Jacqueline R. Dinardo, 40, of 1122 Bedford St., Abington.

Seized during the search were several bags of marijuana, packaging materials and related drug paraphernalia, and more than one-quarter ounce of cocaine, police said.

Boyajian, who was arrested at the scene, was charged with possession of cocaine (second or subsequent offense); possession with intent to distribute cocaine (second or subsequent offense); possession of cocaine with intent to distribute within 1,000 feet of a school zone; possession of marijuana; and conspiracy to violate drug laws. The Pleasant Street house is within 1,000 feet of the three town schools: Osgood, Deer Hill and the middle-high school.

Dinardo, who was also arrested at the scene, was charged with possession of cocaine and conspiracy to violate drug laws.

Boyajian's arrest follows a year-long investigation on alleged cocaine distribution from 100 Pleasant St.

Police Chief Brian Noonan said Det. Greg Lennon's involvement with regional drug task forces was an enormous help in the investigation.

"Being able to draw from the manpower and resources they have enable us to follow through on these cases," Noonan said.

Boyajian and Dinardo were arraigned on their respective charges Monday in Quincy District Court. They return for a pre-trial conference on Jan. 22, Sgt. Robert Jackson said.

While it may not always be easy to trace the origins of the holidays we celebrate year after year, we do know how the Thanksgiving holiday, first celebrated in 1621 as a "Harvest Feast" in Plymouth, began.

So it seems appropriate that Plymouth, known as "America's Hometown," pulls out all the stops for the Thanksgiving holiday.

"Plymouth is a wonderful place to be at Thanksgiving time," said Paul Cripps of Destination Plymouth, a tourism resource agency.

"There's so much history here. What this region has can be traced to right here. And there are so many people dedicated to preserving the history we have here," he said.

A pre- or post-Thanksgiving dinner stroll is popular with residents near and far, Cripps said.

"It's a festive town, but a lot slower paced than a big city. It's wonderful to stroll the waterfront, see the "Rock" and other historical places, and remember where the holiday comes from," he said.

A costumed interpreter prepares a meal in a 17th century dwelling reconstructed at Plimoth Plantation. Both the plantation and the Mayflower II are open to the public during the Thanksgiving holiday.

Most of the town's historical points of interest, such as Plymouth Rock, the Mayflower II — a replica of the ship the Pilgrims took to the new world — and the National Monument to the Forefathers on Allerton Street are all within a short stroll of each other.

"Coming here on or around Thanksgiving really adds another dimension, beyond just the turkey dinner, to the holiday," said Cripps.

The Mayflower II is a popular tourist stop in America's hometown.

The Pilgrim Hall Museum, located at 75 Court Street, is open from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. seven days a week, including Thanksgiving Day. The museum is the oldest continuously operating museum in the country and contains artifacts, exhibits and other information about the Pilgrims and their life here in the 17th century. Admission is $5 for adults, discounts available for children, seniors and families.

The Plymouth National Wax Museum at 16 Carver Street tells the story of the Pilgrims from the time they leave England to their arrival in Plymouth Harbor in 26 scenes. Visitors take the self-guided tour over three floors of the museum and learn about the Pilgrims trials and tribulations, their celebrations and losses. Admission is $6 for adults and $2.75 for children 5 to 12 years old.

One local tradition that brings participants back in time is the Colonial Lantern Tour, guided walking tours of the city during the evening hours. Walkers carry punched tin lanterns, much like those used during the early part of the 17th century, and walk through the original settlement site of the Pilgrims, including the waterfront and the Town Brook, all the while listening to stories about how the early settlers lived. The 90-minute tour starts at the Governor Bradford Inn at 98 Water Street and costs $10 for adults and $8 for children. The Thanksgiving tour runs through Nov. 25. Call 508-747-4161 for more information.

A couple of miles away from downtown Plymouth is Plimoth Plantation, where visitors can travel back to 1627 and see how the Pilgrims lived and worked.

"We don't do a real Thanksgiving celebration in the village, because in 1627 there was no Thanksgiving. But visitors can still come here and learn about the origins of the holiday," said Plimoth Plantation spokeswoman Carol City. Costumed interpreters portray the men and women who lived in the small village after the Mayflower landing and perform the daily duties their namesakes would have done. At the Plimoth Plantation Visitors' Center, families can come and have a traditional Thanksgiving dinner or a Victorian-era meal, a nod to the official beginnings of the national holiday during Abraham Lincoln's time.

The Mayflower II will also be open and passes to admit visitors to both Plimoth Plantation and the Mayflower II are available. For more information on hours and rates, call 508-746-1622.

Potter is no Muggle

The J.K. Rowling book makes a near perfect screen adaptation

Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone (A-)

Swirling about the release of this most awaited film of the year is the already tiresome controversy over Coca Cola's tie-in, which assumes that without it no kid would ever guzzle a Coke, and the just as expected fretting about how many gimcracks and clothing items hard-pressed parents will be forced to buy (as if the word "no" has not been invented and found useful) owing to their children's cajoling and throwing of temper-tantrums. FYI, the most desired colors of the Yuletide gimme-gimme season will be red and gold, the hues at Gryffindor, Harry Potter's house at Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry. Dashing scarves in Gryffindor colors, Harry's round glasses, and (unless you can forestall it) tattoos in his forehead scar shape: These augur the holiday crazes. And since we're urged by our leaders to spend to bolster the economy, maybe Harry, between saving the sorcerer's stone from evil hands and gearing up for his second year at school, might rescue the economy too. Good show, Harry!

Daniel Radcliffe doesn't put quite enough life into the film's title role.

The movie's a jolly good show as well, certain to triumph financially and to enchant audiences, especially kids who've devoured the book (none others are to be found in the civilized world), for whom the movie's fidelity to it will be a huge selling point, its minor deviations and excisions sure to keep them arguing about authenticity and the (un)needed alterations for the screen, long after the threads of their red and gold scarves have unraveled.

For the nine people in America who don't know the book, harken: It is the outwardly simple but deeply touching tale of a boy Cinderella, kept in squalor by his disgusting relatives, the Dursleys, who inherited him as a baby when his parents died; this loathsome family is appropriately portrayed. He is scooped up on his 11th birthday by a Hogwarts school custodian, Hagrid (Robbie Coltrane, in full hairy oaf mode), appropriately bankrolled and outfitted and set upon a train at

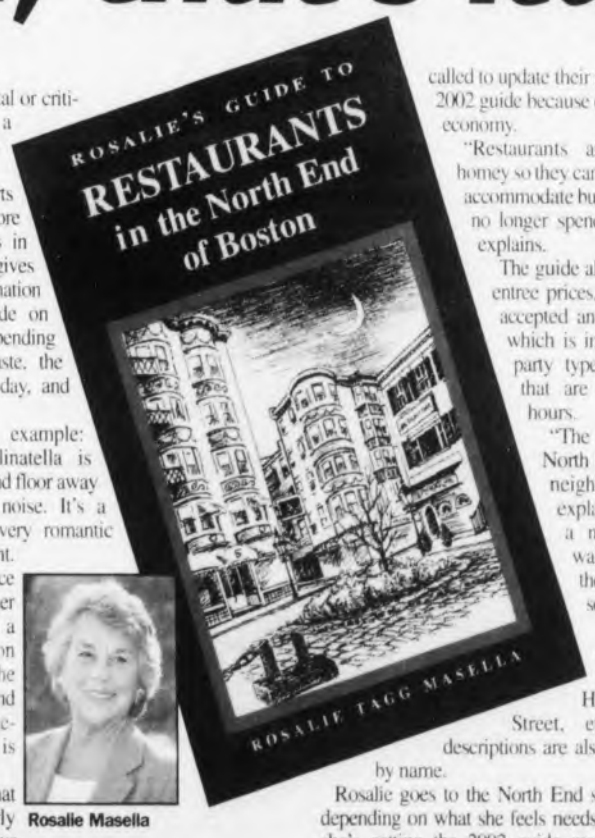
Now, that's Italian!

Hingham woman pens guide to North End eateries

By Jerry Elsden
CORRESPONDENT

Hingham's Rosalie Masella has an Italian-sounding name and even looks a bit Italian. She's also the writer/editor of the popular Rosalie's Guide to Restaurants in the North End of Boston. But Rosalie is not Italian (her husband, Jim, is). But when she walks along the North End's narrow streets Rosalie is warmly greeted by café and restaurant owners who appreciate what her pocket guide has done for their business in the last six years.



Rosalie started the guide in 1995 soon after she began volunteering in the Education Department of the New England Aquarium.

"Jim would meet me for lunch and we would go to the North End and try different places to eat," she recalls. "Meanwhile, visitors to the Aquarium, including lots of foreigners, would always ask me about where to have lunch or dinner. I would tell them about restaurants we had tried, then they would ask for directions, if reservations were needed, that sort of thing."

This happened so frequently that the Masellas decided that a guide to North End eateries was long overdue, and started doing research.

They decided on a descriptive, no-nonsense format with plenty of information, such as types of foods offered, places to park, and a street map of the North End. There's also a complete listing of Italian bakeries and delicatessens.

"It's not judgmental or critical," she adds. "It's a formula that everyone likes."

The guide reports on each of the more than 80 restaurants in "Little Italy" and gives the kind of information you need to decide on where to dine depending on your mood, taste, the occasion, time of day, and budget.

Here's one example: "Trattoria A Scalinatella is located on the second floor away from street level noise. It's a small, rustic and very romantic dining establishment. A working fireplace warms every winter evening, and it's a favorite destination for celebrities. The staff is from Italy and is very knowledgeable…The pasta is homemade."

Rosalie Masella

Rosalie notes that some formerly upscale eateries have called to update their menu offerings for the 2002 guide because of the downturn in the economy.

"Restaurants are becoming more homey so they can attract families and to accommodate business people who can no longer spend $50 on lunch," she explains.

The guide also includes minimum entree prices, types of credit cards accepted and hours of operation, which is important to late-going party types who frequent bars that are open until the wee hours.

"The nice thing about the North End is that it's a safe neighborhood," Rosalie explains. "People will go to a nice restaurant, then walk to a café for dessert, then stop for espresso somewhere."

The guide includes restaurants listed by street name; such as Hanover Street, Prince Street, etc., and restaurant descriptions are also listed alphabetically by name.

Rosalie goes to the North End several times a month depending on what she feels needs updating. Right now, she's getting the 2002 guide ready for the printer in Norwell, and keeping up with orders from large bookstores such as Borders and Barnes and Nobles. She only has to walk down the street in Hingham to replenish the supply at Main Street's Bookport, whose owner Fran Aronovici was an early supporter of the guide.

Rosalie's husband Jim, who has recently retired, handles sales of the guide north and west of Boston. Rosalie handles South Boston and the South Shore.

Writing and editing come easily to Rosalie, who majored in journalism in college, and found her first job after graduation at the Blue Bell, Penn.-based UNIVAC. The company was the first inventor of computers and is now called UNISYS.

"The assistant editor had just walked out of the job and I walked in and got it," she recalls. "I worked on the monthly newsletter — the house organ — for about three years, at the beginning of the computer era. I interviewed the Chinese computer engineers who came over here to work at UNIVAC, and wrote about what they were working on. It was a very exciting time."

After she and Jim were married, started their family and moved to Hingham, Rosalie again turned to writing and editing. She founded Derby Academy's first monthly newsletter. Their two sons attended Derby. In fact, the cover illustration was drawn by Derby art teacher Mary Ellen Olson, who also helped with the map.

The guide has been a labor of love for both Masellas.

"The restaurant owners are wonderful people to work with, and the North End is so historic and compact," she says. "It's a little like the suburbs of Rome."

A word of caution when reading Rosalie's Guide to Restaurants in the North End of Boston: you get very hungry, and want to taste every dish. Buon appetito!

Mashed Sweet Potatoes

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Sometimes the simplest recipe holds the most secrets. This is certainly true with regular mashed potatoes the difference between great mashed spuds and lousy ones hinges on keen attention to detail. Since few of us even use a recipe for mashing sweet potatoes, I wondered if technique also matters here as well, whether one could make a Thanksgiving favorite into something extraordinary. I would have to start my investigations with the potatoes themselves.

The first rule of buying sweet potatoes is to realize that virtually everything labeled as a "yam" is, in fact, a sweet potato. A yam is a large, tubular, white-fleshed root vegetables which comes from Asia. They aren't orange- or yellow-colored and do not have a potato shape. As for sweet potatoes, the sweetest, most flavorful, and most common are the dark orange-brown varieties with bright orange flesh. Other varieties, such as "garnet yams" are drier and not quite as sweet.

My first cooking test was whether to bake or boil the potatoes before mashing. I tasted sweet potatoes that were baked with skin on as well as those that were boiled with the skin on and also with the skin removed. The differences were remarkable. The boiled potatoes were wet and mushy compared to the baked sweet potato which produced flesh that was also moist and intensely flavored. (Skin-on boiled potatoes are more flavorful than those without the skin but baked was clearly superior.) It occurred to me that perhaps boiled potatoes absorb water as they cook.

To test this theory, I boiled and baked potatoes with the skin on and weighed them before and after cooking. The boiled potato weighed 8 ounces before it was cooked and 8 ounces after it was cooked. The baked potato weighed 8.5 ounces before it was cooked and 7.5 ounces after. The mystery of the texture was solved - baking removes moisture and intensifies flavor. I also tested baking potatoes that had been already peeled and cubed and found that both the texture and flavor suffered. So the winning technique was to bake sweet potatoes in a 400-degree oven for about 40 minutes.

Once allowed to cool for about 5 minutes, the baked potatoes can be held with a double layer of paper towels and the peel can be removed with a paring knife. (An air pocket between the potato and the skin facilitates peeling.) In terms of mashing technique, I prefer to use a potato masher rather than any electric appliance such as a food processor or mixer. Machines quickly turn potatoes into gelatinous muck. Once mashed any woody fibers should be removed.

Sweet potatoes are moister and more flavorful than white potatoes and don't need as much butter and cream. For three pounds of potatoes I only needed 6 tablespoons of butter and 1/2-cup half-and-half to achieve the flavor and texture I wanted. I tried using milk and light or heavy cream and preferred half and half. At the Cook's Illustrated test kitchen, we found that melted butter was best since it coated the starch granules in the potato with fat, producing a fluffier product. I also found this be true with sweet potatoes and melting the butter, rather than having to wait until it warms to room temperature, is certainly more convenient.

I also experimented with a mixture of white and sweet potatoes and found the combination less successful than either variety on their own. Other pairings included carrots (too similar to sweet potatoes) and parsnips (too fibrous and hard to mash). I also tested grated ginger (too overbearing), grated cheese (neither cheddar, Gruyere, nor Parmesan married well to sweet potatoes), and toasted pecans (just plain weird – who wants crunch in their potatoes?). To punch up the flavor, I tested and liked maple syrup as well as brown sugar - molasses was overpowering and white sugar was flat tasting

Finally, I wanted to see if the potatoes would reheat well. With all holiday cooks I know timing can be an issue, especially if you have just one oven available. I found these potatoes reheat extremely well over low heat in a saucepan (or a skillet for extra fast results) but they do require frequent stirring. Unlike white potatoes that require more butter and cream if reheated, sweet potatoes require no additives.

MASHED SWEET POTATOES WITH MAPLE SYRUP

The best sweet potatoes for mashing have dark brown skin and bright orange flesh. They may be labeled "yams" but virtually all yams in the supermarket are in fact sweet potatoes. Real yams are large, white, and tubular.

3 pounds sweet potatoes
6 tablespoons melted butter
1/2 cup half and half, hot
3/4 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons maple syrup or 1 1/2 tablespoons brown sugar

1. Heat oven to 400 degrees and adjust rack to center position. Place potatoes in a baking pan and cook until tender, about 40 minutes, testing them for doneness with a toothpick or skewer.

2. Using a paring knife, remove the skin from the potatoes and place in large bowl. (If the potatoes are too hot to handle, fold a double layer of paper towels into quarters and use to hold potato.) Add melted butter and mash thoroughly with a potato masher. Remove any woody fibers. Add remaining ingredients and mix well with a wooden spoon or spatula. Adjust seasoning with salt if necessary. Serve immediately or reheat over low heat stirring frequently until heated through.

Serves 6 to 8 as a side dish.

Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone

track 9 3/4 meeting his soon to be life-long buddy Ron Weasley (Rupert Grint, a sassy little redhead with a cockeyed grin and much staying power). Later he meets the lass who becomes the third in their troika, Hermione Granger (Emma Watson); his nemesis, the appropriately named Draco Malfoy — malfoy is a close rendering of "bad faith" (Tom Felton, well incarnating the perfect blond we all knew in school and both envied and despised); and the august teachers who mentor these child wizards and prepare them for their destinies.

It's superlatively cast with John Cleese as a ghost of some notoriety, Zoe Wanamaker as instructress in, among other things, broomstick aeronautics, Richard Harris as headmaster Albus Dumbledore, Maggie Smith, majestic, perfect, as disciplinarian Professor McGonagall, Ian Hart as stuttering Professor Quirrell, Alan Rickman as insidious-appearing Professor Snape, sporting Laurence Olivier's page-boy haircut out of "Richard III," and many others. It is technologically masterful, its great centerpiece in the book, the flying ball game of Quidditch, rendered as well as, if not better than, the nifty kung-fooey stuff in those "Hidden Whoozits, Crouching Whatzahoozy" films enchanting us recently. And it zips along, scary in enough spots to keep moppets on the alert, although nary a youthful wail of terror was heard at the preview screening. It's inventive in every scene, none lagging, none superfluous; it's tender in its central if understated subtext, that for the orphan Harry, deprived of his parents by the One Not To Be Named (Voldemort, who appears in a truly terrifying scene), Hogwarts becomes the milieu for his maturation and for learning what matters. What matters, as Dumbledore tells him, has much to do with love, and as Hermione says, with friendship and loyalty. When the term ends and the wizard trainees board the Hogwarts Express back to whence they came, Harry sums it up: He is not returning to his "family." We know he knows where his family is.

The film's sole difficulty, other than its sometimes intrusive John Williams score, which leaves no audience reaction unprompted, is its central performance. Daniel Radcliffe, a handsome, cheery lad, with a few TV roles and one film part (the son to Jamie Lee Curtis and Geoffrey Rush in "The Tailor of Panama") behind him, has as yet just one expression: valiant, plucky alertness. It's pish-tush that you can't tell intelligence by looking at a person's face, and this boy has brains stamped upon him in spades. But he hasn't developed a range of expressions. In the book Harry takes hold; in the movie, it's Rupert Grint's Ron Weasley who captures our attention, with his older-than-his-years forehead furrowing, his determined set of the jaw, his face evolving before us into a full retinue of feelings and responses. One should warmly give a newby lots of slack; premature judgments are not only unfair but more often than not simply wrong. Maybe Daniel will emerge by the second film with a panoply of emotions unlayering themselves persuasively before our eyes, instead of just the single one he has pleasantly mastered now. For now, however, he is not the movie's great strength; "Harry Potter" triumphs despite Daniel Radcliffe, not because of him.

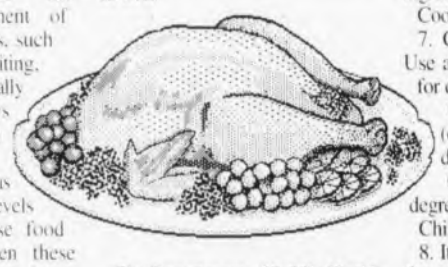
Ten turkey tips for safe holiday meals



Will your holiday meal be remembered as a great gastronomic delight or as the source of dreaded gastrointestinal distress? The turkey that you serve can be risky if you are not careful selecting and preparing it.

Poultry products such as turkey and chicken are primary sources of the bacteria Salmonella and Campylobacter. These organisms are the two most commonly reported causes of these food-borne illnesses according to the Massachusetts Department of Public Health. Symptoms, such as stomach cramps, vomiting, diarrhea and fever, usually occur one-to-five days after eating foods with high levels of bacteria.

Usually bacteria such as these are not harmful at levels typically found in these food sources. However, when these microorganisms are given favorable conditions, they can grow to harmful levels and make people sick. The moist high protein content of turkey provides needed nutrients for bacteria to multiply. With warm temperatures (from 40-to-140-degrees Fahrenheit) and enough time (usually two-to-four hours), bacteria can multiply rapidly from hundreds to thousands per bite.

Therefore, it is vital to keep foods out of the danger zone, the temperature range of 400-to-1,400-degrees Fahrenheit.

While turkey may be the original source of bacteria, these organisms can spread to other foods. Cross-contamination may occur when you stuff the turkey and do not properly wash your hands or cutting utensils before slicing vegetables for a snack or appetizer. The cutting board and/or knife are contaminated with bacteria and, without thoroughly cleaning, can spread the harmful bacteria to the uncooked vegetables. Your hands may be the source of other bacteria as well.

The Department of Public Health recommends that you protect yourself, your family and friends by following these 10 safe turkey tips.

TOP 10 SAFE TURKEY TIPS

Separate foods — Don't cross-contaminate

1. When you shop, keep the turkey away from other foods in your shopping cart.

2. Place the turkey below other foods in your refrigerator in order to prevent other foods from becoming contaminated with juices from the turkey.

3. Use a separate cutting board for cooked foods and raw foods.

4. Never put the cooked turkey on the unwashed plate that previously held the uncooked turkey.

Clean your hands and food surfaces often.

5. Wash your hands with hot soapy water before you touch the turkey and after you use the bathroom, change diapers, and play with pets.

6. Wash all cutting boards, dishes, kitchen tools and counter tops with hot soapy water after you finish fixing the turkey.

Cook foods to safe temperatures.

7. Cook the turkey thoroughly. Use a food thermometer to check for doneness.

Cook whole turkey unstuffed (or dark meat only) to 180-degrees Fahrenheit.

Cook a turkey breast to 170-degrees Fahrenheit.

Chill foods promptly.

8. It is best to thaw the turkey in the refrigerator, not at room temperature.

Thaw a whole turkey in the refrigerator, 8-to-12 pounds, one-to-two days; 12-to-16 pounds, two-to-three days; 16-to-20 pounds, three-to-four days; and 20-to-24 pounds, four-to-five days.

In a pinch you can also thaw the turkey in cold water. Cook the thawed turkey immediately.

• Put prepared foods and leftover turkey in the refrigerator within two hours.

• Split large amounts of leftovers into small bowls and cool them in the refrigerator.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 20

The Capricorn moon becomes inactive at 12:57 a.m. Influences turn around completely at 4:55 a.m., when the moon enters outgoing Aquarius. A harmonious alignment of Venus and Jupiter makes this morning prime for all social activities. You can make gains developing projects that need help, input, support from others. On the other hand, a 90-degree alignment of Mercury and Uranus warns against signing important contracts or making snap decisions. This is a day to brainstorm, network and dream, but get a reality check before making a major commitment.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 21

Gear up for an "exciting, anything can happen" kind of day. Avoid rigid time schedules; things may not go as planned. On the other hand, spur of the moment ideas can be the most successful. Follow your intuition; go with the flow of things. The moon continues to travel in freedom-loving Aquarius all day.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 22

The stage is set for a relaxing, social holiday. Put business or personal concerns aside; kick back and enjoy life to its fullest. The sun enters Sagittarius at 1:01 a.m., remaining there until December 21. The Aquarius moon becomes inactive at 2:37 a.m. until 4:52 p.m., when it enters laidback Pisces. The first quarter phase of the moon occurs at 6:21 p.m., serving as a reminder that this moon is growing in light. A full moon will culminate November 30.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 23

The combination of a Pisces moon and Venus-Mars alignment prompts you to channel your energy into creative or romantic outlets. Go with your first impression; you can be most productive developing arts and crafts projects. On the other hand, this is not the best day for making major purchases and practical decisions. A lunar alignment to Saturn at 5:41 p.m. may bring a lull period, when energy is deflated. Get extra rest tonight.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24

YesterdayÕs advice pertains to today as well. The moon continues to travel in adaptable Pisces. Relax and enjoy favorite hobbies, friends. An applying alignment of Venus to Uranus urges you to be open to new experiences; go with your adventurous side. Unplug from your daily routines and responsibilities; try something new and different.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 25

The Pisces moon becomes inactive at 12:29 a.m. until 5:21 a.m., when it enters energetic Aries. Planetary influences today and tomorrow are prime for physical activities and productivity. Channel high energy constructively. Get back in the swing of favorite sports, exercise regimens. If you have work projects to accomplish, you can get them out of the way in short time.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 26

Gear up for an action-packed day. The moon continues to travel in fiery Aries. Mercury moves into Sagittarius at 1:24 p.m., remaining there until December 15. Mars, the planetary ruler of Aries, aligns with unpredictable Uranus at 2:07 p.m., 21-degrees of Aquarius. In addition, the moon interacts with Mars and Uranus this evening. That means that this can be a very exciting time, when you cut through obstacles and break new ground in your business or personal life. New is in; old is out. At 11:43 p.m. the moon becomes inactive.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 27

After the intensity of the last couple of days, an inactive Aries moon offers an opportunity to get your life in order. Finish projects already begun, handle routine chores, errands. The moon enters Taurus at 4:06 p.m. Applying alignments of the sun and moon to Neptune make this a great evening to relax and mellow out completely.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28

Take advantage of a harmonious sun-Neptune alignment this morning; rest, reflect, refocus. Do something that brings beauty into your life or the life of another. It is okay to start new activities before 7:35 p.m., when the Taurus moon forms a flowing 60-degree contact to expansive Jupiter.

GIFTS of HOPE

A child's smile brings hope to all.

What will make your children happy this holiday? For some, new toys under the tree. For others maybe a week off from school. But for many children in the Greater Boston area, it is something as simple as food. This holiday season, there will be over 200,000 hungry people in Eastern Massachusetts. In fact, one in five children under the age of 12 lives in a household that struggles to put food on the table.

Many people are looking for a way to help, but don't know how. Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program can help you reach those in need in your area. For the past 10 years, readers' Gifts of Hope donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children in the Greater Boston community. Another season is upon us. And more people need your help.

Please join the Cohasset Mariner and Community Newspaper Company in giving the greatest gift of all – the gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way toward helping those in need.

Here is some helpful information to plan your gift:

- $15 provides 30 people at a homeless shelter with a bowl of hot soup and a sandwich.
- $30 provides two families with a week's supply of groceries from a food pantry.
- $50 provides one neighborhood food program with 75 meals.
- $250 provides a food pantry or soup kitchen with more than 1,500 pounds of food.

PLEASE MAKE YOUR TAX DEDUCTIBLE CHECK OR MONEY ORDER PAYABLE TO: (Choose from one of the local charities) Father Bill's Place, Carolina Hill or South Shore Friends of the Homeless and mail to: Gifts of Hope, c/o Anne Rodwell, 16 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050. (Please do not make your check payable to this newspaper or to Gifts of Hope as that will only delay disbursement efforts. Thank you.)

State budget cuts could mean higher taxes

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Get out your checkbooks Cohasset — the construction projects on the Deer Hill School and the middle-high school may be costing you more than you think.

The current budget tossed around Beacon Hill reduces funding the School Building Assistance Bureau program by almost 50 percent. This means towns lower on the list for reimbursement, like Cohasset, will have to wait longer for compensation from the state. Cohasset originally expected to receive 60 percent of the $40 million loan that the town will use to build the schools by 2005. But with the current budgetary setbacks, Cohasset may not see the funds until 2010.

For those five years, taxpayers would be expected to cover the state's portion of the loan payments, at an average rate of $875 per year (based on a house valued at $550,000) until state reimbursement kicks in.

The SBA was started in the 30s in an effort to help towns finance school building projects. The program has traditionally funded more than $50 million to Massachusetts municipalities but this year, will only be able to provide $19.2 million to the towns.

"The state gave the cities and towns an implied promise that they would receive reimbursement within five years," said Michael Buckley, town director of finance.

The middle-high school is 130 on the list and the Deer Hill School is 98. At a rate of $50 million a year from the SBA the town

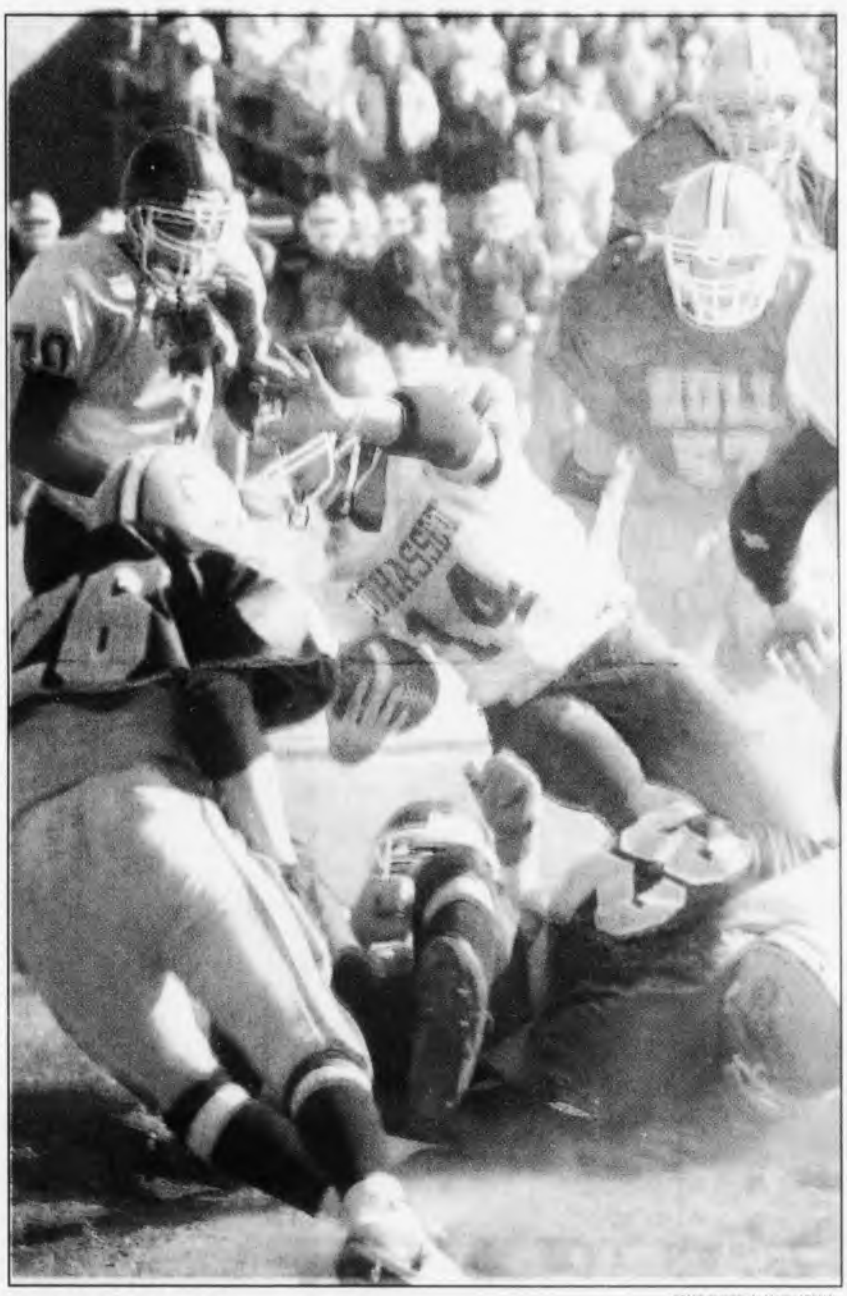
In keeping with an eight-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.



Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored Mary Jeanette Murray as Citizen of the Year for a lifetime of service to her hometown, first as den mother and Little League mother and Girl Scout leader and then as selectman and state representative.

The deadline for nominations for the 2001 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 4. Please see the nomination form on page 12. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2001 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2002.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an

GRIDIRON GLORY

It's a cloud of dust and a big gainer for Cohasset captain Jason Brown (14) in Thursday's 13-3 Thanksgiving Day win over Hull. This victory clinched the South Shore League title and advanced Cohasset High's football team into post-season play for the first time in 21 years. Unfortunately, this excitement was short lived, as the Skippers fell on Tuesday night to Tyngsboro, 21-7. For all of the game details, see sports.

Sewer plant to get facelift

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset is synonymous with beauty from its rocky ledges and ocean vistas to the notable architecture on its public buildings and private homes.

So it should come as no surprise a metal, corrugated building would be an eyesore anywhere in town, even one that's sheltering a service not often discussed in polite company: wastewater treatment.

But thanks to a group of neighbors who spoke up and pressured the Sewer Commission, this small town of some 7,000 could also be known for having one of the most attractive sewer treatment plants around.

Sewer commissioners got a peek at the architectural features of the plant's new "skin" at their meeting Monday.

"Instead of vertical relief lines the building will have a more conventional building cover," said Daniel J. Coughlin of Tutela Engineering Associates Inc., the town's consulting engineers on the sewer project.

The sewer plant that has been upgraded to handle additional capacity is part of the Central Cohasset Sewer Project, which is adding some 600 homes to the town sewer system. The estimated $150,000 cost for the plant's "new clothes" will come out of the cost of the general sewer project and was appropriated at the special Town Meeting a year ago, Coughlin said.

Sidewalk is a step closer

Selectmen to see plans on Tuesday

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Revitalization Corporation intends to take final plans for the St. Stephen's sidewalk improvements before selectmen Tuesday night.

After selectmen review the plans, they will be sent to the Massachusetts Highway Department for final approval. MassHighway awarded the town $169,000 to reconstruct the sidewalk two years ago through a Transportation Enhancement Grant.

The sidewalk will measure four to five feet wide and will extend from the bus station near the town common to the Lilac House, an antique shop on S. Main Street.

Dean Rizzo, executive director of the CRC, a private corporation working in conjunction with the village revitalization task force, said there will be a public hearing around February to decide the type of material that will be used for the sidewalk and the kind of light fixtures to be installed.

"The goal is to make an adequate sidewalk that addresses the issues of all involved," Rizzo said.

Rizzo said some residents are

Homeless for the holidays

Problem getting worse because of economy, high rents

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

Every year during the holiday season, people all over the South Shore warm up to many different kinds of celebrations, but for some folks, the holiday season is nothing but a reminder of being homeless.

This year, the homelessness problem on the South Shore has grown worse, as it has for the last two years. Dorothy Newell, the director of the Weymouth-based coalition South Shore Friends of the Homeless, said the problem is due to the struggling economy with its lack of affordable housing and high rent prices.

"There were 344 families put up in motels last week across the state," Newell said, noting there are currently about 12 homeless families staying at the Seashore Motel in Hull, among other places. "These people keep getting moved around between shelters and motels. A family I know from Hingham actually had to go to a motel in Peabody."

Newell added one of the biggest problems right now is that all the local shelters are full.

"People are not leaving the shelters quickly because they cannot find reasonable rental rates," she said. "But the towns on the South Shore do seem to be getting more serious about the issue of affordable housing. We definitely need more of it. Either that, or the rental market needs to loosen up."

CPC appointments

Selectmen approved the appointments of six members to the Community Preservation Committee last week. Al Moore from the Planning Board; Jim Dedes from the Conservation Commission; Debbie Cook from the Open Space Committee; Selectman Thomas Callahan; Ann Barrett from the Housing Authority, and David Wadsworth from the Historical Commission were all selected to serve on the committee.

Selectmen will hear from the four citizen volunteers who are vying for three spots at their meeting on Tuesday.

In a letter to selectmen, Stuart Ivimey, 7 Sankey Road, stated he will be dedicated to promoting the preservation of the town's present character. Ivimey has lived in the town for three years and said, "as a relatively new member of this community, my judgment and opinions are not influenced by the strong personal acrimony that appears to exist between the citizens and groups which support or oppose future changes."

In his letter, David McMorris, 89 Doane St., said he has a vested interest in the goals that the preservation committee seeks to uphold.

"The greatest asset I can bring to this group is my love of Cohasset and my dedication to preserving those features which make our town unique," he said.

Paula Kozol, 426 Atlantic Ave., stated in a letter her role as co-president of the Cohasset Historical Society would serve the committee well.

"I would draw on the strength of our Board in reviewing proposals for acquisition, creation, and preservation of land and open space for the town's recreational use and community housing," she said.

Jeffrey Waal, 36 Old Pasture Road, is a former chairman of the Conservation Commission and is also seeking a spot on the new committee.

Many Cohasset residents bought their homes when this small seaside town was still "affordable" and now face paying higher and higher taxes on a house with a soaring property value.

This is likely the case for a good number of the town's hundreds of senior citizens who may struggle to come up with the money for a tax bill up that will jump an average of 11 percent next year.

The state Department of Revenue lists Cohasset as having the ninth highest property taxes in the state.

But for qualifying residents, there is some tax relief available though real estate tax exemptions and a new state law. More details on the programs are available at the Assessors Office at Town Hall, but here's a synopsis:

•Renters or homeowners 65 and older with income of no more than $40,000 for a single filer, $50,000 for a head of household filer or $60,000 for taxpayers filing jointly may be eligible for a tax credit of up to $375 for 2001 ($750 for 2002) on their state income tax through the Senior Circuit Breaker Tax Credit. The assessed value of the real estate for the homeowner cannot exceed $400,000.

• Deferred tax payment for those 65 or older with a maximum income of $40,000 is another option. There is no asset maximum. All or part of the real estate taxes can be deferred. Deferred taxes accumulate simple interest as an 8 percent lien on the property until it is sold or the owner dies. The total deferred taxes, plus interest cannot exceed 50 percent of the property's value.

• Elderly exemptions for age 70 or older: with no income maximum and $40,000 in assets is $262.50; single, maximum income $13,000 with $28,000 in assets is $750; married, maximum income $15,000 with $30,000 in assets is $750. The value of an elderly person's home is not a criteria for these exemptions.

The assessors office also has information for a range of exemptions for veterans and the disabled. To reach the assessors, call 781-383-4114.

Single tax rate approved

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

It was no surprise when selectmen unanimously voted to not split the tax rate last week.

Cohasset has traditionally had a single tax rate that puts the burden on the residential taxpayer. Splitting the tax rate would have shifted more of the burden to commercial and industrial taxpayers.

Deputy Assessor/Appraiser Cheryl Pooler said Cohasset does not lend itself to having a split tax rate. Because Cohasset is 93 percent residential and 7 percent commercial, splitting the rate would only decrease the tax rate for residential taxpayers a small amount while it would send the commercial and industrial tax payers' rate soaring.

For example, if the tax burden was shifted the maximum 150 percent, it would jump the tax rate for commercial and industrial tax payers up $5.74 to $17.22. It would only lower the residential tax payers rate 42 cents to $11.06 per $1,000 of assessed valuation.

Pooler said normally 20 to 25 percent of the town needs to be zoned commercial and industrial to necessitate splitting the tax rate. If the town had voted to shift the burden onto the backs of Cohasset businesses, selectmen said it would essentially drive business away.

> "Cohasset is an ancient sea-coast town and it is not meant to be a Mecca of industry."
> — Al Moore, Planning Board

Because of the large disparity between the two rates selectmen did not take much time in their decision. Before Pooler even sat down, Selectman Michael Sullivan proposed a motion to approve the single tax rate.

Al Moore, chairman of the Planning Board, said there should not be any concern over the lack of commercial and industrial zones in Cohasset.

"It is what it is," he said. "Cohasset is an ancient sea-coast town and it is not meant to be a Mecca of industry."

Moore went on to explain that close to 50 percent of Cohasset is open space and to allow commercial or industrial businesses there would destroy the character of the town. He added the town does have two large supermarkets so it is not as if the town does not support businesses.

As well as advising the selectmen to approve a single tax rate, the Board of Assessors set the tax rate at $11.48 per $1,000 of assessed valuation. The tax rate is an 11 percent drop from last year's rate of $14.59.

The rate dropped because of the jump in the assessed values of the houses in town. The Board of Assessors recently made public its revaluation that increased the assessed value of homes in town an average of 41 percent.

That means the "average" Cohasset house, which had an assessed value of $395,584 last year, is now valued at $560,700.

The assessments provide the basis for the third quarter property tax bills, which will be mailed next month. That "average" house will see its annual bill rise about 11 percent or some $700 from $5,757.61 to $6,436.84.

Budget cuts could mean higher taxes would start to be reimbursed for both schools by 2005. But with the money trickling in from the state at $19.2 million a year, the town could have to wait up to 10 years.

"I am very concerned with the state reimbursement program," Town Manager Mark Haddad said. "Every budget decision we've made has been with the assumption that we will be getting reimbursed in 2005."

The town has been borrowing money since the projects started. For example, if it receives a bill from a contractor for $500,000 it would borrow that amount. However, the town is slated to borrow the full $40 million in 2005, which would be paid off in 20 years, whether the town has the state's money or not. Once the state starts to reimburse the town it will send a check annually for 20 years, so some checks could arrive after the loan is paid off. But that thought provides little solace for Haddad, who says the town needs the money sooner rather than later.

"Who cares about money 20 years from now?" he said.

Maureen Jerz, chairman of the Advisory Committee, said she is not surprised about the cutbacks. "In the course of our discussions one of the biggest concerns was what was happening at the state level," she said.

Heidi Perlman, director of media relations at the Massachusetts Department of Education, said the state is facing a huge budget crisis and the cuts have to come from somewhere.

"This does not mean that projects on the list will not be funded, there is just not enough money to go around right now," she said.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley said the budget cuts may be only for a couple years and therefore should not affect taxpayers that much. "This is something that should be temporary but something that Cohasset should be aware of," he said.

Bradley added if the cuts were to continue for the foreseeable future, "there would be a serious situation throughout the state."

Sate Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, said Cohasset is fortunate because it is already on the waiting list for reimbursement. He said it will be harder for towns to gain approval for school building projects with the current cut backs.

"Politically, this is a very popular program and it is not going away. I don't think the towns on the list will be impacted for more than a year," he said.

Haddad said he will meet with both Hedlund and Bradley to discuss what could be done at the legislative level.

Buckley, the town finance director, hopes the legislature will change its mind looking ahead.

"Every budget is its own animal, and just because this budget cut the spending does not mean future ones will," Buckley said.

ATM warrant

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he tentatively plans to open the annual Town Meeting warrant just before Christmas and will close it two weeks into January. Interested citizens are encouraged to start composing articles and obtain the required amount of signatures, if necessary, to place the article on the warrant.

Grant denied

The Massachusetts Historical Commission denied Cohasset's application for a grant last week. The town applied for a $16,000 grant to come up with a preservation plan for the town common. Two months ago, the Department of Environmental Management granted the town $16,200 for similar purposes. The town needs $30,000 for the project and has pledged $6,900, the Cohasset Revitalization Corporation has donated the other $6,900.

Dean Rizzo, the executive director of the CRC, said the town only expected to receive one of the two grants it applied for. The money will be used to look at the existing space on the town common and how best to preserve its beauty. The Cohasset Common Historic District Commission will oversee the project.

Bids are due back on Dec. 11.

POLICE PROGRAM

Cohasset police Sgt. John Conte receives a certificate of graduation from Gerald F. Burke, right, director of the New England Institute of Law Enforcement Management in Brockton. Conte was among 26 law enforcement officials to complete the three-week Command Training Program that included problem solving, team building, ethical and strategic decision-making and other management subjects.

HELPING OTHERS

Hello Cohasset. I hope that all of you had a wonderful Thanksgiving and you were able to surround yourself with family and friends. Although the weather is certainly not the kind we are accustomed to at this time of year, it has been very nice to be dealing with. As the holiday season begins to pick up in earnest, please remember to look around at your neighbors to see who might need some extra help for the holidays whether they are elderly, sick or just a little down in the dumps. It can do us all some good when we share all that we can.

AWESOME SKIPPERS

What do you think about the Thanksgiving Day win for the Cohasset Skippers? From all accounts, it was a win that was very well deserved. Congratulations to the team from everyone in Cohasset, we are all very proud of each one of you. The Gridiron Club received many generous contributions from Cohasset residents during its Annual Scholarship Fundraising Drive held recently. The club wants to send out a big thank you to all who pledged.

If the football players missed your home and you would like to receive a 2001 Cohasset Football Program, please call 781-383-9131.

You may have noticed all the signs, streamers and balloons lining some of the streets in Cohasset on Thanksgiving Day. Make sure to give Diane Dooley a pat on the back the next time you see her. She wanted to be sure the football team had a proper send off for their big game in Hull and it worked. The players went in with the right frame of mind as they prepared for a super bowl playoff game against Tyngsboro!

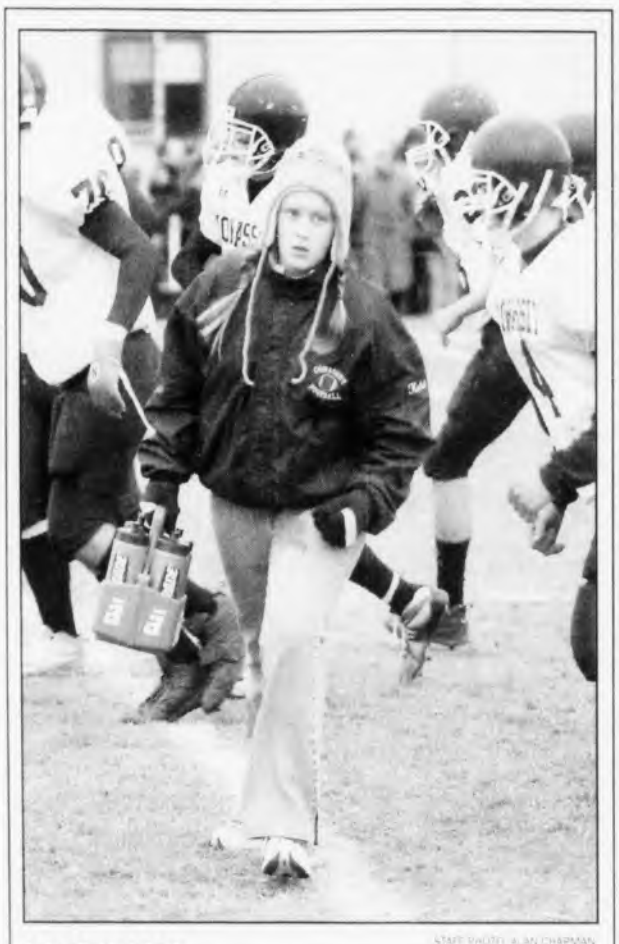
BIRTHDAY WISHES

Two very special girls are celebrating birthdays this week. Miss Cassidy Connolly, daughter of Frank and Cheryl (Winn) Connolly turned FIVE years old on Wednesday, Nov. 28. Cassidy is a real cutie and everyone joins in as we all wish you a very, happy birthday!

Miss Abbey Johnson, daughter of Jeff and Debbie Johnson and little sister of Jake, is turning one-year-old today, Nov. 29. This little girl is the apple of so many eyes and I cannot believe a whole year has gone by! She is standing, cruising, taking itty-bitty steps and is ready to move forward in her life by leaps and bounds. Happy Birthday Abbadoo, we all love you a bunch!

NEW ARRIVAL!

A new little fellow has come to town, born on Oct. 30, 2001. John "Jack" Richard Kimball was born to his very happy parents, John and Heidi, weighing in at 7 lbs. and was 19 ins. long. Little Jack's maternal grandparents are CeCe and Dick Schoenberger of West Simsbury, Conn. and his paternal grandmother is Janet Leonard of Nashua, N.H. Congratulations to all of you on this wonderful addition to your family!



IN THE NAVY

Navy Reserve Lt. Cmdr. Patrick O. Broderick, a 1983 graduate of CHS, recently reported to duty at Naval Station, Rota, Spain. We wish you all the best and to stay safe as you carry out your duties, Patrick. I know that we all send the same message to you and the Town of Cohasset is very proud.

COLLEGE FIELD HOCKEY

Elizabeth Pierson, daughter of Wigmore Pierson and Janet Pierson, is a member of the women's field hockey team at Vassar College. Elizabeth was a top scorer for the team this past fall with 6 goals and 2 assists and her contributions were awesome. Vassar went to post-season play as the team qualified for the New York State Women's Collegiate Athletic Association Championship. Congratulations to you Elizabeth and your entire team on a fantastic season of play.

Another Cohasset sports' note, this time in reference to Neely Wakeman, a junior back in the sport of field hockey. Neely is a junior at Hobart and William Smith College and was part of the Upstate Collegiate Athletic Association Champion team the season. Neeley was sixth on the team in points and scored four goals for eight points in 18 games. Great job, Neeley!

WATER GIRL

Kelsie Litchfield delivers water to the Skippers during a break in the action during the Thanksgiving Day game. Kelsie's grandfather, the late Clark Chatterton, was the long-time athletic director at CMHS.

TOASTMASTER PREZ

Michael Myers, president of Boston Yacht Sales in Weymouth, was recently elected president of the Quannapowitt Toastmaster Club in Quincy. Michael, who grew up on the South Shore, lives in Cohasset with his wife and two children. The mission of Toastmasters International is to provide a mutually supportive and positive learning environment in which every member has the opportunity to develop communication and leadership skills. Meetings are held every Monday evening from 7-9 p.m. at the Shuster Building, 11 Hayward St. in North Quincy. For more information, call Ruth Levitsky at 617-472-9576.

HATS OFF TO COLIN

I want to send out a recognition to a very fine student at the Deer Hill School. Colin Dignam, a sixth-grader was able to raise more than $500 with the help of his peers for the Afghanistan Children's Relief Fund. Colin spearheaded this project and encouraged children to bring in at least $1 that they earned on their own and then was responsible for the collection of the money. Thank you to all the students who contributed to this and thank you to you, Colin for all the hard work and effort that you put in.

DESIGN HONORS

Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute School of Architecture has awarded Robert A. Stansell III honorable mention for the Final Year Competition Design of Queens Plaza, Queens, N.Y. Robert is a fifth-year student at RPI's School of Architecture and is the son of Robert and Moira Stansell.

VILLAGE FAIR

This Saturday is the Village Fair on the Common and you definitely won't want to miss it. You can shop for holiday crafts and gifts, grab a piping hot bowl of chowder, buy some yummy baked goods and pick up some wreaths and a Christmas Tree! It is running from 10 am-3 p.m.

Don't forget to then travel over to the Beechwood Church Fair and check out the wonderful buys that they have. It is going to be a great day for local, home-town shopping and plenty of opportunities to visit and see all of your friends and neighbors.

HOUSE TOUR

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset presents "Christmas Reflections, House Tour and Holiday Tea" on Thursday, Dec. 6 from 10 am-4 p.m. This festive and beautiful tour will take you through homes in Cohasset that are decorated for the holiday season. The cost for this tour is $20 and tickets can be obtained at the South Shore Community Center. Make sure to get your tickets as they are going fast.

WREATHS, CANDLES

If anyone out there is looking for wreaths and/or candles, the Cohasset METCO program has the answer. The Holiday Wreath and Candle Sale is going on right now and pick up is scheduled for Saturday, December 1st at the the High School. Wreaths are $9.00 each, a box of unscented, Ivory pillar candles are $8 and boxed Hanukkah candles are $7 per box. If you want to place a last minute order, you can go to the main offices of the Osgood and Deer Hill or go to the METCO office at the Middle/High School. All checks should be made payable to "PSO METCO." If you have any questions, call Lisa Dunne at 781-383-1596.

Here is a quote that I found very helpful to me for you to read and think about.

"Value what you have (and) have in your life only those things that you value. Value doing what is right over what is easy. Value tomorrow along with today." Suze Orman

That is all for this week. Please make sure to send all your news and information to me no later than Monday mornings at 9 am. All photos should be dropped off at Cohasset News in an envelope marked, "Cohasset Around Town."

'Tis the season for the Village Fair

By Judy Tedeschi
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

'Tis the season for the Annual Cohasset Village Fair, Saturday, Dec. 1 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on and around Cohasset Common. Hosted by Cohasset's churches and the non-profit Appalachia Service Project (ASP), this year's fair promises to be more festive than ever!

A Cohasset tradition for more than 40 years, the Village Fair is a great way to begin your holiday season. Come and greet friends, and get a head start on your holiday shopping. Sleighloads of Christmas greens and handcrafted ornaments, gift baskets, books and more will be available at the various churches and halls around the common. All proceeds support the churches, select charities and the Appalachia Service Project.

Santa Claus will again be the guest of honor on the Common from 11 am to 2 p.m. (He'll be at the Second Congregational Church, next to Town Hall, if it's raining.) Stop by and say hi, and have your photo taken with Santa. All proceeds support ASP's home repair program.

Santa's helpers will also be on hand at St. Stephen's Church to host the popular "Secret Room" where children, escorted by ASP teen-volunteers, can pick out a special something for Mom or Dad, a sibling, even a pet! (All gifts range from just 50 cents to $2.50 each.). ASP volunteers help each child carefully select, wrap and label their surprises, so they're ready to go under the tree!

And children won't be the only ones to find that special something at the Village Fair. The Second Congregational Church on Highland Avenue will again be full of beautiful handmade Christmas crafts and decorations made by parishioners and ASP volunteer alike! Enjoy a cup of their famous clam chowder as you shop, and pick up a treat (or two!) at their bake table. The church will also be raffling off five surf and turf dinners hourly, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The Panagia Greek Church will sell its popular tabletop boxwood trees and wreaths at Town Hall. Stop by the boutique tables to check out their handcrafted decorations and gift baskets. Look for treasures in Grandma's Attic, and stop for a bite at the popular Greek café and dessert extravaganza. The church will also sell gift tins that you can fill for your favorite teachers, mailmen, firemen, police and friends.

And don't forget to stop by St. Stephen's second floor parish hall to peruse its vast collection of books, cassettes and CDs for all ages at the popular book and bake sale.

First Parish Church in Cohasset is again offering fresh cut balsam Christmas trees and handmade ornaments at the Parish House on Main Street during the Fair. Stop by early for your choice of trees ranging from 4 ft. to 9 ft. tall. All trees are $35. Call (781) 383 –9767 to reserve your tree early, and you'll be automatically entered into a "Your Tree Free" drawing.

Members of the Cohasset Drama Club will be strolling Cohasset Common in costume during the Fair, singing carols from "The Best Christmas Pageant Ever." The Rusty Skippers, Cohasset's own adult marching band, will also be playing a selection of Christmas music at noon, inside the First Parish Meeting House on the Common. The concert is free. All are welcome!

Santa Claus

Santa Claus will be the guest of honor at the Annual Cohasset Village Fair on Saturday, Dec. 1, from 10 am to 3 p.m. on and around Cohasset Common. Hosted by Cohasset's Churches and the non-profit Appalachia Service Project (ASP), this year's Village Fair promises to be more festive than ever!

Stop by and visit Santa on the common anytime between 11 am to 2 p.m. (He'll be at the Second Congregational Church, next to Town Hall, if it's raining.) Share your "wish list", and have your photo taken with Santa. All proceeds support the ASP's home repair program.

Santa's helpers will also be on hand at St. Stephen's Church to host the popular "Secret Room" where children, escorted by ASP teen-volunteers, can pick out a special something for Mom or Dad, a sibling, even a pet! (All gifts range from just 50 cents to $2.50 each.). ASP volunteers help each child carefully select, wrap and label their surprises, so they're ready to go under the tree!

ASP will also be sponsoring a Holiday Donation's Tree, where individuals, making a donation in memory or in honor of a loved one, may select a special handmade origami "Peace Crane" ornament. For each ornament purchased, the honoree's name will be written on a ribbon and placed on the tree. The tree will be located near ASP's craft table in the Second Congregational Church during the Village Fair. Then, during the season of Advent, it will make its rounds through various local churches.

Look for Cohasset's Anne Czerkawski, front, and her father, John Linscott, at Atlantica Dec. 1 & 8.

Father-daughter duo strikes a chord

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Anne Czerkawski has been singing along to her father's music for as long as she can remember. Now, everyone can listen.

Czerkawski, 57 Old Coach Road, and her father, John Linscott, recorded a classical jazz-style compact disc titled "Manhattan Lady" and will perform selections from the CD on Dec. 1 and Dec. 8 at Atlantica restaurant.

Czerkawski said the duo had been contemplating creating a CD for some time. Why now?

"We figured if we were really going to make a CD then we better do it soon," she said. The two live close to each other and they felt that this was their best opportunity. The father and daughter tandem had lived far apart from one another for some time but now reside closer with Czerkawski in Cohasset and Linscott in Portland, Maine.

Czerkawski describes the CD as a combination of ballads and uptempo tunes set under a classical /jazz umbrella. Linscott composed all of the songs on the album and plays several instruments on it including the piano, clarinet and saxophone.

Czerkawski, who has studied voice since she was 14, said she is thankful to be able to interpret her father's lyrics. "I feel very fortunate that I am able to sing his music, there is such an energy to the words," she said.

Czerkawski, currently a law student at New England School of Law, has worked on getting the word out to the public about the CD. The CD took four days to produce and was recorded at The Studio in Portland. She said while the work has been hard, "it's been really fun. The process has been all about us and our chemistry."

She added she feels very fortunate to be able to perform with her father and said the feeling she got when she finished the album was, "a high like no other." Her favorite songs on the album are "Voodoo", "Manhattan Lady" and "Song in My Heart".

The pair's goal is to have an established artist, such as Tony Bennett or Diane Krall, record their tunes. The twosome will play a live concert on Maine Public Radio in April and will continue to "have fun and promote the music".

Czerkawski was born in Needham and raised in Hingham. She said even as a child growing up on the South Shore, she always hoped that she would one day perform with her father.

"My childhood dream was to perform and sing for a living and all of the sudden I got sidetracked with the practical aspects of life," she said.

After graduating from Boston University in 1981, Czerkawski worked for Avis rent-a-car and eventually became director of sales for the east coast. In 1993 she moved abroad with her husband and all but gave up her musical aspirations.

However, when she moved back to the U.S. and into Cohasset in 1997 she felt she finally had an opportunity to realize her passion. "My Dad lives in Portland so when I moved to Cohasset we were so close that we started to play together again," she said.

Czerkawski said her husband Chuck and two sons, Danny and Charlie, have been very supportive of her efforts.

The CD is available at Cards and Shards, cdfreedom.com, and in a few weeks at amazon.com.

We Salute Broker of the Month
Jane Crocker

Coldwell Banker Hunneman in Cohasset is pleased to announce Jane Crocker as our Salesperson of the Month for October. "Jane will always go the extra mile when it comes to servicing her customers. This incredible service creates satisfied customers who loyally continue to refer her new business. Jane's business is almost entirely by referral only, and that business helped her reach Coldwell Banker's President's Club earlier this year. This is a remarkable achievement. We are very lucky to have Jane as part of our excellent Cohasset team," said Erica Ford, Office Manager.

The plant, which is in the marsh off Elm Street, can be seen from St. Anthony's Church, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and dozens of private homes.

Sewer commissioners got a peek at the architectural features of the plant's new "skin" at their meeting Monday.

An architect's rendering of the new exterior of the sewer treatment plant and outbuildings at the site.

It was late 1999, when the plant's neighbors first became alarmed after steel girders went up and the siding went on, giving the new building shape, form and size. Before then, the old plant consisted of some outside tanks and smaller structures, which were lower and therefore less visible. The new state-of-the-art sewer treatment system needed to be enclosed to protect the equipment, which has been able to increase four-fold the amount of wastewater treated and provide better treatment than the old plant, Coughlin said.

Upwards of 20 residents of surrounding streets flocked to the Sewer Commission meeting in January 2000 to register their complaints about how the building looked. They also came armed with suggestions to enhance the plant's appearance. At the time, the Sewer Commission was receptive to their concerns but worried about the cost.

Some of the neighbors' ideas have been incorporated into the new design by Keith Moskow Architects, Inc. The design includes an asphalt shingle roof, shingle-type vinyl siding, false windows over the doors, and windows at the eaves instead of light panels.

The residents recommended Moskow, who was then retained by the town to work with the neighbors and sewer commission.

"Our goal was to take a metal shed and make it more barn-like, with overhanging roof, softer details, new windows and new window locations and new siding," said Moskow, who lives on Gammons Road.

Coughlin points out neighbors were consulted about the metal-sided building as a "shell" for the upgraded plant. Tutela Engineering sought their input on color and planned landscaping to help screen the building. But when the building went up and the plantings were in, the neighbors were not happy.

As the structure went up it was a lot more visible and therefore, "a lot more important to them," he said.

"It's human nature," Couglin said. "It's not really important until it's there."

JoAnne Chittick, 98 S. Main St., whose home abuts the marsh, said more thought should have gone into the original plans.

"Design was not considered when the metal shed that was erected was built," she said. "And there was no regard for its particular site.

"We look forward to some minimal but effective changes that will create a building whose exterior is more compatible with the salt marsh — one of Cohasset's beautiful, natural treasures."

Howie Altholtz of Summer Street, who has acted as the de facto head of the citizens group, said concern over the building's exterior went beyond the neighborhood.

"It's in one of the most beautiful natural resources in the community," he said. "The (citizens committee) is made up of people from all over town that love the view." He said while the technology inside the plant is important, the intention was always to have the exterior of the facility be "site appropriate."

Couglin said the neighbors also have a "wish list" that would put the remaining structures in more attractive facilities. "They'd like to dress up the existing pumping station that has always been there," Couglin said. Also the neighbors would like the blower building to have a soft, wood look.

Moskow, the architect, said his firm looked at re-cladding "the whole family of buildings" for the citizens group. He said the improvements could be phased in.

Couglin said the exterior improvements to the treatment building will go out to bid in January or February. Tutela Engineering hopes due to the size of the project, the bidding process would be competitive among smaller contractors and come in under budget. He said the Sewer Commission "would take a look at" exterior improvements to the other structures down the line.

The main building was always supposed to resemble a barn – but the new look will make it more upscale.

"It's already the best working plant," Couglin said. "And now it's going to be the best looking."

GIFTS of HOPE

A child's smile brings hope to all.

What will make your children happy this holiday? For some, new toys under the tree. For others maybe a week off from school. But for many children in the Greater Boston area, it is something as simple as food. This holiday season, there will be over 200,000 hungry people in Eastern Massachusetts. In fact, one in five children under the age of 12 lives in a household that struggles to put food on the table.

Many people are looking for a way to help, but don't know how. Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program can help you reach those in need in your area. For the past 10 years, readers' Gifts of Hope donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children in the Greater Boston community. Another season is upon us. And more people need your help.

Please join the Cohasset Mariner and Community Newspaper Company in giving the greatest gift of all – the gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way toward helping those in need.

Here is some helpful information to plan your gift:
- $15 provides 30 people at a homeless shelter with a bowl of hot soup and a sandwich.
- $30 provides two families with a week's supply of groceries from a food pantry.
- $50 provides one neighborhood food program with 75 meals.
- $250 provides a food pantry or soup kitchen with more than 1,500 pounds of food.

PLEASE MAKE YOUR TAX DEDUCTIBLE CHECK OR MONEY ORDER PAYABLE TO: (Choose from one of the local charities) Father Bill's Place, Carolina Hill or South Shore Friends of the Homeless and mail to: Gifts of Hope, c/o Anne Rodwell, 16 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050 (Please do not make your check payable to this newspaper or to Gifts of Hope as that will only delay disbursement efforts. Thank you.)

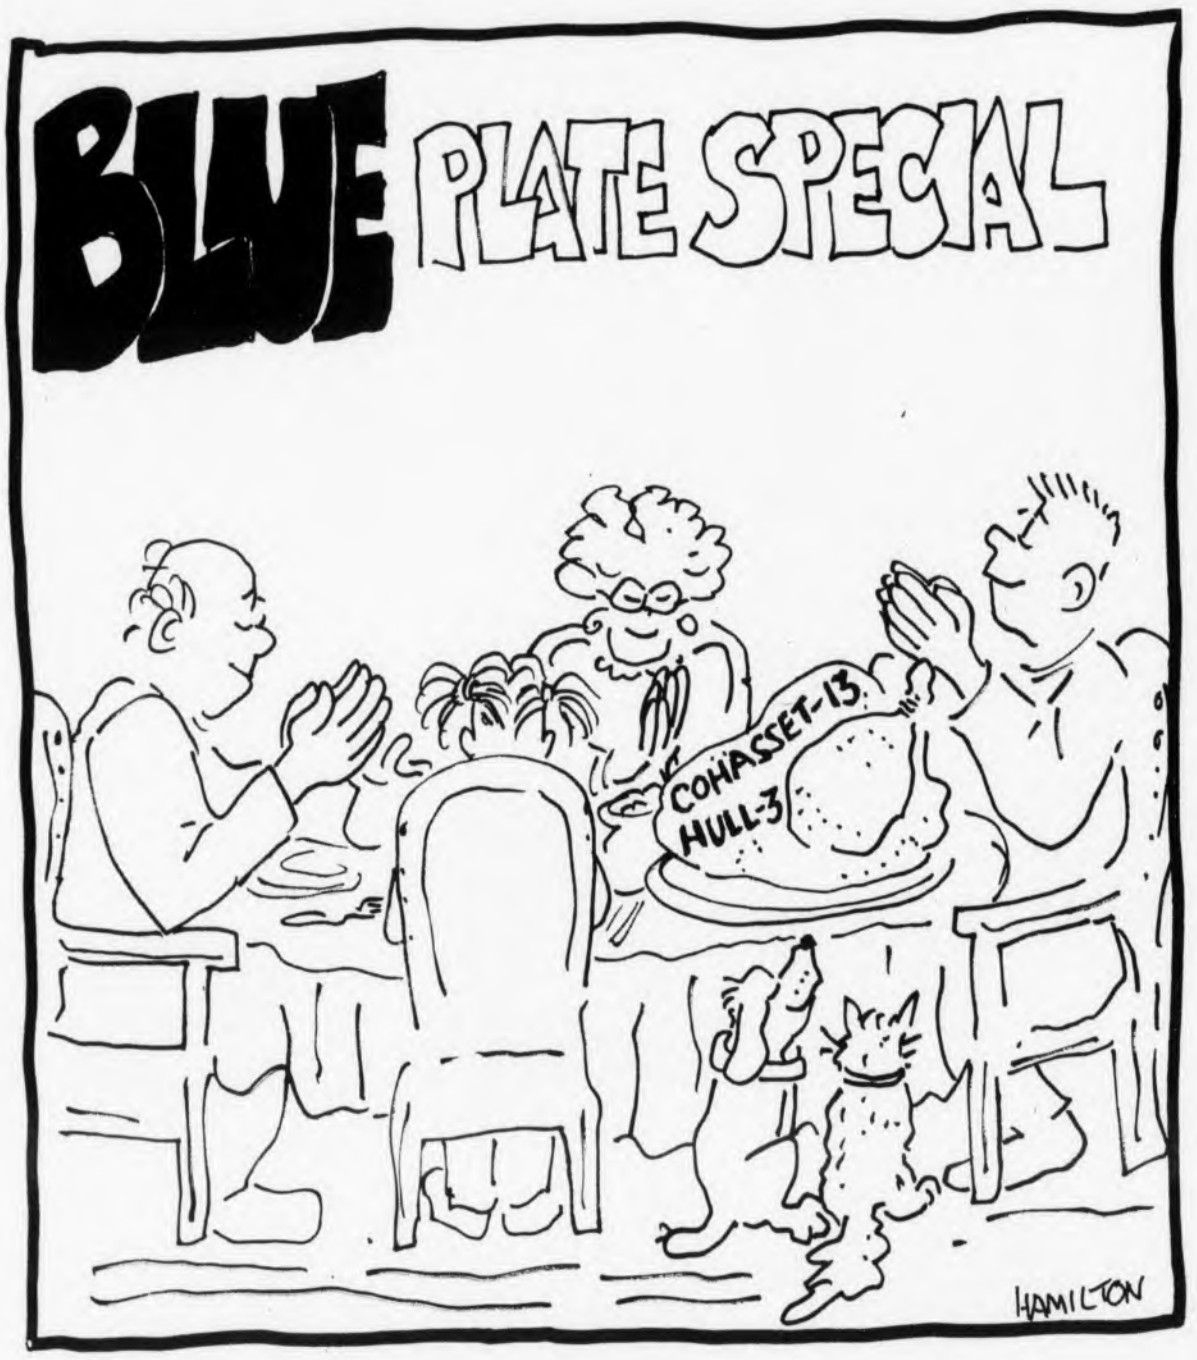
Spirit of giving

This is the season for giving thanks — and for giving, as well. After the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11, countless residents opened their hearts and wallets to donate to charities set up to aid the victims and survivors of the attacks on New York, the Pentagon and the airliner that crashed in Pennsylvania.

While so much attention has been focused on Sept. 11, local charities feared the worst. They worried their own causes of helping the homeless, providing food for the needy and the like would take a back seat to this national momentum. But here on the South Shore, that has not been the case. Indeed some organizations have seen a decline in giving, but most report the generous residents of the South Shore have opened up their hearts and wallets to their neighbors and friends.

Now we ask you, our readers, to help us in our efforts to assist those working with the homeless on the South Shore, all of whom are beneficiaries of Community Newspaper Company's annual Gifts of Hope campaign.



This is the third year in a row our campaign has targeted homelessness on the South Shore. Last year, our generous readers donated nearly $9,000 to our charities — Carolina Hill in Marshfield, the Weymouth-based South Shore Friends of the Homeless and Father Bill's Place in Quincy.

In the coming weeks we will report on some of the people and groups who benefit from our readers' generosity each year. We'll tell you about some of the success stories and certainly the challenges faced by these local groups struggling to help the homeless at a time when the economy enters a recession and rentals in the area are at an all-time high.

As a company comprised of community weekly newspapers, we know we are in a unique position to tell the local stories and encourage our readers to support the organizations that benefit from that spirit of giving. The checks we collect are made out to the individual charities, so you know that your donation goes straight to help people in need. As the Gifts of Hope campaign progresses, we'll report on the growth of the fund and we have asked the charities to acknowledge your contributions directly.

We know this fall was marked with tragedy, followed by the need for all of us to reach out to the victims of the Sept. 11 attacks. As Hanukkah and Christmas approach, we ask that you continue your generosity by supporting the Gifts of Hope campaign.

Thank you, from all of us.

Master Plan surveys due

The Town has now sent a survey to every registered voter to gather information on the future of Cohasset in preparation for the Master Plan. It is important that residents respond as soon as possible by returning the survey in the self-addressed envelope provided by Dec. 15.

POLITICAL NOTES

Cantwell party

A holiday party for friends and supporters of Democratic State Committee Member Jim Cantwell will be held on Thursday, Dec. 6 from 6-11 p.m. at the Marshfield Elks Ballroom at 1321 Ocean Street / Rte 139 in Marshfield. Following a cocktail hour and light dinner from 6-7:45 p.m. guests will kick up their heels to the music of "The Infractions," a South Shore favorite that have recently been featured on a Universal Records recording with Bonnie Raitt, Bruce Hornsby, Hootie and the Blowfish, and others. Suggested donation for the dinner/dance is $25 for a guest, $100 for an event sponsor. For more information please contact Linda Broadford 781-331-1381 or Jack Cantwell 781-837-3115.

Hedlund party

State Sen. Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) will be feted by state officials and friends of Cohasset, Hingham and Norwell at a reception Thursday, Nov. 29, at Tosca of Hingham Harbor, from 6 to 9 p.m., GOP Cohasset Town Chairman Janet Fogarty announced.

Open to the public, reservations may be made with Polly Logan of Cohasset, Ann Collins (781-749-0817) and Jim Claypoole (749-9404) of Hingham or Kim Reynolds (781-826-7977) and Shawnie Littlehale (781-659-4191) of Norwell.

Conservation Trust elects new officers

Gary Vanderweil has been elected president of the Cohasset Conservation Trust Inc. The private non-profit corporation, established in 1967, acquires areas of special ecological importance, such as marshes, woodlands and seashores, for preservation and public benefit. It currently holds some 80 acres of lands, including such well-known properties as Great Brewster Woods and Bassing Beach. All directors are Cohasset residents.

The trust currently holds some 80 acres of lands, including such well-known properties as Great Brewster Woods and Bassing Beach.

Vanderweil's election is effective Jan. 1. He will replace John Hartshorne, who has been president of the trust since 1997. Hartshorne will remain a member of the trust's board of directors.

Others elected at the trust's annual meeting Nov. 18, are Dick Avery, treasurer, and Mark DeGiacomo, secretary-clerk. Avery has been a director since 1997 and treasurer since 1998. Mr. DeGiacomo became a member of the trust's board this year.

At the same meeting, Edward B. Long, who has been a director since the trust was founded, submitted his resignation, which the board voted to accept with regret and with deep appreciation for Long's long service to the Conservation Trust. It also voted to establish the new position of director-emeritus and to continue Long's connection with the trust in this honorary role.

In addition to the elected officers named above, members of the Cohasset Conservation Trust's Board of Directors are Ellen Freda, Dick Leggat, Deborah Shadd and Jeff Waal.

Buttonwood book angels

In the spirit of holiday sharing, Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset and Buttonwood For Kids in Hingham invite all to participate in our Book Angel program. The Book Angel Program that will run through Sunday Dec. 16, is a program to help put books into the hands of disadvantaged children. The Book Angel takes an angel from the tree and purchases a book for that child that is close to the interest highlighted on the angel. Buttonwood will then discount that book 15 percent and deliver the book to that child's sponsoring group. Together, Buttonwood Books &Toy and Buttonwood For Kids support Wellspring in Hull, The Friends of the Homeless in Weymouth, The Hingham Interfaith Food Pantry, the Mary Martha Learning Center, the Blue Hills Healthy Families Program and the South Shore Educational Collaborative Teen Parent Program.

This is the eighth year Buttonwood has sponsored the Book Angel program. For more information call 781-383-2665 (Cohasset) and 781-749-2665 (Hingham).

New book is about to make history

Chronicles the last 50 years

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The writing is done, the price is set, and the orders are starting to roll in.

Jacqueline Dormitzer of 334 S. Main St. and the author of the "Narrative History of Cohasset, Volume III," informed the Town History Committee Monday night that the writing of the book is finished.

The 416-page book aims to cover the events, happenings and changes in Cohasset from 1950 to 2000. It will now be edited and final artistic decisions, such as captions and photograph selections, still need to be made before the book hits stores in the late spring or early summer.

Wigmore Pierson of 123 Atlantic Ave. and chairman of the lively committee, said that he is thrilled to have completed the book on time. "We promised the town we would finish writing the book by Dec. 1, 2001 and we have," he said.

Dormitzer said the book is looking great. "It's in very good shape," she said. "The photographs are wonderful and people are going to find the book very nice to both look at and read."

"The photographs are wonderful and people are going to find the book very nice to both look at and read."
— Jacqueline Dormitzer, author

One of the additions to the book is color maps that show the development of Cohasset. Harold Coughlin, 25 Reservoir Road, said the maps will add a whole other dimension to the book. One of the maps will show the streets of Cohasset that have been created from 1950 on, so one can see how much the town has grown. Another will compare a map of the village from 1950, to one from today.

"We started with an aerial map and zeroed in on the areas we wanted. It was a really exciting process," Coughlin said.

Coughlin added he has been contacting book stores about selling the latest volume of the town's history. He said Borders, Cards and Shards and Buttonwood have all agreed to have the book in stock.

A motion raised by Lou Harvey, 465 King St., set the price of the book once and for all. The price of the book will be $32 and will be sold at a 40 percent discount to book stores with a buy-back option. The committee also decided that it will have a press run of 3,000 books.

The book will be heavily publicized by the town. According to Jim Hamilton, 298 King St., a tentative plan is to insert a two-page spread in the town warrant, including an envelope for residents to mail back with their orders.

"Instead of sending out a conventional envelope that people would throw away, we wanted to insert the mailings into something that everyone in the town would open," Hamilton said.

Margot Cheel, 14 Margin Court, felt this was the best option. "It is very rare to have graphics in the warrant," she said. "This will really knock them dead."

Three separate Town Meeting votes allocated a total of $65,000 for the book, but the committee said the money will eventually be repaid through sales.

"The book will pay for itself," Dormitzer said.

Anyone interested in pre-ordering the "Narrative History of Cohasset, Volume III" for $27.50 must do so before Jan. 1. Make a check payable to the Town of Cohasset and mail it to Wigmore Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave.

Greenbush math doesn't add up

TRAIN VIEW

MIKE WEYMOUTH

South Shore residents opposed to the restoration of surface diesel rail have long contended that Greenbush is too high an environmental price to pay to serve only 1,708 new riders during rush hour. As taxpayers, they should be equally concerned with the $440 million price tag, which includes the latest bids, cost of trains and anticipated mitigation.

One has to wonder if there is any limit to what the state will spend on the project.

With these numbers in hand, Sen. Bob Hedlund and Rep. Garrett Bradley are trying to convince their colleagues of the fiscal irresponsibility of Greenbush (Nov. 15 Hingham Journal article, "Delegation Split on Greenbush"). Hopefully their efforts will help turn the tide against what quite possibly is the least cost-effective transportation project the MBTA has ever conceived. Or, in keeping with the Journal article, throw Greenbush supporters out at the plate, which is what comes of trying to steal home.

Per New Rider Cost is $258,000

Public transportation models emphasize "new riders" above all else and the Greenbush cost-per-new-rider is so far off the chart it is hard to imagine how any fiscally responsible legislator can support the project. To put the excessive Greenbush cost into perspective, if you do the math, it comes out to approximately $258,000 per new rider.

In an attempt to divert attention away from this figure, the MBTA has long touted higher ridership numbers for Greenbush that actually include riders taken from existing systems, such as the commuter boats, as well as non-peak hour riders who generally do not contribute to traffic congestion. However, "new riders" remains the critical yardstick for measuring the effectiveness of a project such as Greenbush and, in this respect, Greenbush is a very bad public transportation buy. In particular, our state legislators should consider the cost of Greenbush in the context of the projects the T has consistently rejected elsewhere in the public transportation network because of the high cost per new rider. The Millis extension of Needham rail at $94,523 per rider; the Newburyport extension at $93,055 per rider and the Worcester expansion at $64,000 per rider, are but a few examples of rejected projects.

The Alternatives and the Private Sector

Waiting in the wings of the Hedlund/Bradley initiative is AfTA's proposal for transportation alternatives that are far more affordable than Greenbush. At $140 million the alternatives consist of an enhanced commuter boat service, a Route 3 connector to the South Weymouth T station through the South Weymouth Naval Air Station and enhanced Red Line and express bus service. Properly configured, they would take many more new riders off the roads than Greenbush, which is restricted in the number of trains it can run during peak hours by the so-called Braintree bottleneck. With the alternatives, new riders would total 4,189 vs. 1,708 for Greenbush. That translates into $33,400 per new rider vs. Greenbush's $258,000.

It should not be lost on a state that is entering an economic downturn that the alternatives also take advantage of the investment dollars from the private sector, which means the cost to the state would be $140 million in "state-only" funds, $300 million less than Greenbush.

Since its inception, AfTA has been honing its case for this package of common sense solutions that would creatively utilize existing South Shore transportation modes. One of the most visible solutions occurs on Route 3 every morning when signs indicate that the Braintree and Quincy Adams Red Line parking lots are already full at 7:30 am. By spending a relatively modest amount of money to expand parking capacity the MBTA could take another 2,400 rush hour riders off the roads. Along these same lines, AfTA has been pushing for a decked parking facility at the Hingham Shipyard.

Rather than relieving highway congestion by enhancing what already exists, the T seems content to keep on pushing an inefficient Greenbush, no matter what the cost.

The Alternatives and MEPA

MBTA spokesman John Carlisle's contention that the state is mandated to build Greenbush as a result of mitigation stemming from a CLF/Central Artery lawsuit leaves out one important point. The MEPA (Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act) clearly states that "alternatives" must be considered and if the project is deemed to be too environmentally problematic, mitigation measures have to be taken. Greenbush is clearly an environmentally problematic project, so much so that the federal government wouldn't provide the funding for the original Old Colony Line, of which Greenbush was a part, unless the Greenbush environmental issues were dealt with. In total disregard for this conclusion, state transportation authorities nevertheless segmented the project and pushed ahead. In the process, it forfeited 80 percent federal financing and has wasted millions of dollars of taxpayer money pursuing a project already deemed environmentally unacceptable by the federal government. With horse blinders still firmly in place, they continue to pour good money after bad.

If you do the math, it comes out to approximately $258,000 per new rider.

Unfortunately the MBTA PR machine has been quite successful at aligning many legislators on its side, claiming that resistance to the project on the South Shore is confined to the usual minority NIMBY element. In fact, if you simply count those who have signed petitions against Greenbush, Hedlund and Bradley represent the views of more than 8,000 South Shore residents, which is a far cry from the "vocal minority" the T claims opposes Greenbush. In addition, they also represent the many residents who have unanimously rejected Greenbush in town meeting votes and referendums in Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate and who are fighting tooth and nail to avoid the environmental impacts in Weymouth and Braintree.

Alternatives Create More Jobs

The Greenbush project has the added dimension of new jobs, to which politicians are understandably sensitive: while Greenbush might cost a lot, much of that money would go into the pockets of construction workers. During hard times and with an upcoming election, this will be a difficult call for many of our elected officials.

For this reason, AfTA proposes that the state spend the $300 million it would save if it adopted the alternatives elsewhere in the transportation system.

And, when you consider the high likelihood that many of these projects would be eligible for matching federal transportation dollars, the total amount of money would actually be greater than with a Greenbush scenario. And this would mean even more jobs.

Spend It Where Its Needed

In fact, there are a plethora of projects the T says it cannot afford, which would serve many more riders than Greenbush. For example, $300 million would enable the T to:

—Add the much-needed Assembly Square station to the Orange Line —Improve the Maverick and Orient heights T stations

—Expand the Green Line to Medford Hillside

—Build the long-promised Light Rail Rapid Transit Silver Line

—Build the South Boston Transit way

These are just a few of the many projects that could be funded, all or in part, with the money saved if the state embraced AfTA's proposal.

Build Commuter Rail Where the Growth Is

The aforementioned Braintree Bottleneck is one of the T's best-kept secrets.

Essentially Greenbush trains would become part of the combined Old Colony traffic on the mostly single-track system into Boston. The problem is that only so much traffic can run on this section of track during rush hour, which would limit Greenbush to only three trains during the peak hours from 6:30-9 am. By public transportation standards, and considering the high cost of Greenbush, this is a very low number of trips.

But the real problem occurs on the existing Old Colony line where no more trips can be added to that portion of the system if Greenbush is built.

The question the Conservation Law Foundation should be asking itself is, "Where is the real growth?" Surely not on the "coastal" South Shore, which, according to recent media reports is pretty well saturated. The growth is in the "inland" South Shore communities served by the Plymouth and Middleboro branches of the Old Colony line, where the new trains have already had a significant impact on real estate expansion. Given the living space dynamics of this area and its distance from Boston, the lines are understandably very popular. If you don't believe it just read the T's PR about standing-room-only-trains and crowded parking lots.

But how forthcoming have state transportation authorities been about the fact that no new trains can be added to accommodate additional riders on these two lines, whose numbers, according to transportation models, will most assuredly increase? The models also indicate that many commuters, faced with a no-new-capacity scenario on the commuter rail lines, will take to the roads and Route 3 will become even more crowded as the inland population grows.

The solution is to build the alternatives, which are designed to take commuters off the roads from the coastal communities thus allowing the Greenbush capacity to be shifted to the inland South Shore. This would enable three more trips to be added either to the Plymouth and Middleboro lines, where the real growth will take place, or to the Route 3 connector, which would serve mid-area commuters and further reduce congestion on Route 3.

Hopefully, through the efforts of Hedlund and Bradley, this information will get the attention of our legislators who will in turn conclude that the alternatives will:

—Cost the state less

—Take more cars off the road, thus fulfilling the CLF/Central Artery goal of lessening rush hour traffic

—Provide an incentive for private sector investment

—Be far less environmentally invasive and quicker to implement than Greenbush

One is reminded in these times of the late Tip O'Neill, who believed the first step in a public works project was to consult with the communities "first," before plunging ahead. To my knowledge, state transportation authorities never took this important first step, no doubt because they knew what the answer would be. Had we been asked, better ideas, more compatible with our coastal community culture, would have surfaced and today we would be looking at a far different public transportation scenario than Greenbush. The end result would have been much more user friendly, it would have been in place long ago and it definitely would not have had the astronomical price tag of $440 million.

Season for pricey toys

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I've got good news and bad news for parents as they prepare to descend into the depths of debt for the first Christmas of the new millennium.

The good news is that, for the second year in a row, there apparently is no "hot toy" that the little rug rat "has to have" for the current holiday season so you won't have to spend hours in line waiting to tickle Elmo or for the Kid to come out of the cabbage patch.

The bad news is that the warmest toys on the shelf for the next month will probably be the electronic games, Nintendo's GameCube, which costs $199, and Microsoft's Xbox, which will set you back $299.

I've bought cars for less than that.

I am reliably informed of the price of toys this Christmas by a friend who qualifies as a expert because she is the mother of an 11-year-old boy. She was hurrying to the nearest branch of the Fleet Bank to negotiate a loan at the time. If all else failed, I swear she was ready to put her house up for collateral.

"He just has to have one," she said, which is the same thing that she said last year when she dipped into her IRA for $299.99 to win a Sony's Play Station 2. I say "win" because she had to outbid several challengers to land the prize.

Xbox wasn't out on the toy shelves in North America until Nov. 15 and GameCube wasn't available in the States until Nov. 18 but by mid-October John Sullivan, general manager of the Website Toysrus.com, said several presells had sold out in the matter of minutes.

And that's only the beginning.

Once you've got a GameCube under the Christmas tree — or safely tucked away in a safe deposit box at a local bank — you still need the accessories that make the whole thing work, like a controller ($29.99) and a game disc ($49.99) — and a bottle of Tylenol ($5.95) for dad when the bill arrives from Visa.

I can remember Christmases when a Davy Crockett coonskin cap satisfied the greediest preteenager, or a Barbie Doll with more changes of clothing than Imelda Marcos had shoes, or a G. I. Joe with little more than a rifle and some hand grenades, caught the imaginations of small girls and boys everywhere.

It will no doubt be a comfort for you to learn that Barbie is still around and as popular as ever with the pre-pubescent set, this time dressed as a pediatrician and accompanied by a Web site (Barbie.com) explaining the role of a pediatrician in the post-Women's Lib world.

And pretty soon, if not already, you can expect G. I. Joe to re-up for another hitch, armed with more firepower than Rambo and drawing a patriotic bead on Osama bin Laden in the name of truth, justice and the American way.

Hopefully, just in time to rescue Mom and Dad from the expensive clutches of Xbox and GameCube.

Friends, co-workers remember Wally Arcand

'57 CHS grad loses battle with cancer

By Alice Coyle
ACOYLE@CNC.COM

First impressions may be lasting, but they're not always accurate. Brian Sullivan found this to be true in the case of C. Wallace Arcand.

Sullivan's first meeting with Wally Arcand wasn't a pleasant experience. It was 1997 and Sullivan was representing a client with an application before the Scituate Zoning Board of Appeals with chairman Arcand, — also known as the "zoning czar" at the helm.

Arcand was a 26-year resident of Scituate, but he grew up in Cohasset, graduating from Cohasset High School in 1957.

"I found his manner abrasive," said Sullivan who was admonished for being unprepared and went away without the approvals his client sought. It was a temporary setback for Sullivan who said his second meeting with Arcand went much better.

"I came back at the next hearing over-prepared," he said. "I did my homework" Arcand had made an impression on the Scituate attorney and was so impressed by him that when an opening came up on the ZBA he recommended Sullivan for the position. Thus began Sullivan's zoning board service and friendship with Arcand.

Wally Arcand

"A relationship that began as adversarial, turned into a very close friendship," recalls Sullivan, who is this week mourning the loss of his friend and fellow board member. Arcand died Sunday following a two-year battle with cancer. He was 61.

Arcand was a 26-year resident of Scituate, but he grew up in Cohasset, graduating from Cohasset High School in 1957. He earned a degree in Liberal Arts & History from Boston University in 1961 and followed that up with his law degree from Georgetown University in 1964. After working for both the U.S. Department of Commerce and the Dupont Chemical Company in Delaware, he returned to Boston and a job at United Food Company's Prudential Offices. Arcand went into business for himself opening his Hingham law office in 1980.

His town government service began in 1987 when he joined the Zoning Board of Appeals, which he would serve for 13 years — seven of them as chairman. During his tenure on the zoning board, Arcand ruffled some feathers and grilled more than a few developers with his gruff, "tell-it-like-it-is" manner. But those that worked closely with Arcand say below that "tough as nails" exterior was a deeply dedicated man with exceptionally high standards to which held everyone to equally, always keeping the best interest of Scituate and its residents in mind.

"He expected the best from himself and nothing less from everyone else," Sullivan said.

"He appeared very tough, but to those who knew him, Wally was a very likable individual," said veteran Scituate Selectman Joseph Norton.

Arcand's wife of 32 years Francisca knew him best and she said there was a real "teddy bear" below the all the gruffness people saw at ZBA hearings. The two met in Delaware while Arcand was working for Dupont and Francisca described the young Arcand as "extremely romantic."

"He showered me with long stemmed roses with little cards which I've kept. He was crazy with all these flowers," she recalled.

It must have been love at first sight for Arcand who proposed marriage just weeks after the two met.

"We clicked right away," said Francisca, but I wasn't sure I was ready to get married that quickly."

In addition to the successful Hingham law practice he ran for more than 20 years, Arcand enjoyed gardening and playing with the family pets, Francisca said.

Arcand is perhaps best remembered for his thorough knowledge of the law. "Some may have been put off by his demeanor, but he always acted in a manner consistent with the law. He did everything he could to maintain the integrity of the Scituate zoning bylaws," Sullivan said.

He leaves his beloved wife of 32 years, Francisca (Ohm) Arcand; and his loving mother Mary E. (D'Abre) Arcand of Scituate; his step-mother, Phyllis Arcand of Weymouth; his brother Thomas Arcand of Amherst, N.H. and his sister, Michelle Vancura of Katy, Texas. He also leaves his nieces and nephews and many close and dear friends. Mr. Arcand was also the brother of the late Gary Arcand.

At the request of the family, calling hours have been omitted and burial will be private.

A memorial service will be held at a time and place to be announced by the Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home of Scituate.

Friends may remember Wally Arcand through memorial donations to The Friends of the Scituate Animal Shelter, P.O. Box 823, Scituate 02066.

Herb Jason stands by the anchor that will soon find a home on Government Island.

Support Anchor Fund

Plans are to install a five-ton ship's anchor on a circular granite and cobblestone base in the grassy island in front of the Cohasset Sailing Club. The granite centerpiece of the circle will be inscribed with a picture of a schooner or harbor pilot boat. The anchor has been paid for with private funds. But the masonry for the foundation for the anchor, and if there is any extra money, granite curbing around the grassy island, could cost upwards of $10,000.

Tax-deductible donations for the project are welcome and should be sent to Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave. Checks should be made out to the Town of Cohasset, but mark the check for the anchor fund. The Cohasset Police Association recently donated $500 for the project.

Selectmen recently approved the plan and there was no objection from the Government Island Study Committee.

appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the eighth person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

1993: the late Gerard T. Keating, "Mr. Cohasset"; for his more than half-century of contributions to the community, including serving as chairman of the Council on Aging, chairman of the school committee, president of the hockey boosters club, vice president of the Cohasset Historical Society, director of veterans services, and lector, eucharistic minister and usher at St. Anthony's Church.

1994: Joseph D. Buckley, for his work behind the scenes helping seniors understand the complexities of the healthcare system and to access health benefits through SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders), his service on the Council on Aging, and volunteer work over the years with the Boy Scouts, Little league, Sunday School and more.

1995: Dr. Robert T. Sceery, for his more than 40 years of dedicated service as a pediatrician in town and school doctor. He also served on the board of health and led the fight back in the 1970s to sewer the town. He is also a familiar figure at town meetings where he speaks his mind on important issues.

1996: The Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, for being a positive force for good through his work with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP), an ecumenical volunteer effort involving Cohasset teenagers. ASP is a home building ministry in central Appalachia.

1997: Anna Abbruzzese, for all her volunteer work including preparing and delivering meals for the Pine Street Inn, driving the senior shuttle and coordinating the Gourmet Cooking Club at the Council on Elder Affairs; and her many efforts to help revitalize Cohasset Village through the Farmers' Market and much more.

1998: Katherine Stanton, for her tireless service to the town and its citizens over the years. She also volunteers as a case reviewer for the state Dept. of Social Services, served on the school committee and recreation committee, and along with her family was involved with the creation of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

1999: the late Clark Chatterton, for his generosity of spirit and deep caring for his fellow man, his years of work as a teacher and athletic director at the high school, including innumerable efforts helping others behind the scenes. He also helped raise money for many causes including Alumni Field and the American Cancer Society.

2000: former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for her many years of dedicated public service and undying loyalty to her constituents.

John Garvey is the director and founder of a South Shore-based Web site SharingWeb.org. It was two years ago that he decided to implement the website because he and his wife were concerned about the problem of homelessness. The Web site offers information about local shelters, food pantries and clothing and furniture banks.

"This year, I'm hearing the homelessness problem is more acute," he said. "There were a lot of layoffs in Massachusetts recently and the economy is not that good. I heard 8,300 jobs were lost in the state last month alone. The unemployment rate jumped from 3.4 percent to 4.3 percent."

With that in mind, Community Newspaper Company is once again making organizations that help homeless people the beneficiary of its Gifts of Hope campaign. This is the third year in a row the holiday campaign has targeted homelessness. Last year, the campaign raised nearly $9,000 for such organizations at the South Shore Friends of the Homeless, Father Bill's Place in Quincy and Carolina Hill shelter in Marshfield.

"Thanks to the generous support of our readers, we were able to make great strides with last year's campaign," said Mark Skala, editor in chief of CNC/South. "The campaign nearly doubled from the previous year. It was because of all kinds of contributions, large and small."

Tara Jesse, volunteer coordinator at Pilgrim's Hope Shelter in Kingston, said the shelter has been very busy lately. On Thanksgiving, it served food to 103 families and 286 individuals. Jesse said Pilgrim's Hope is completely full, but applications keep rolling in despite that. She said most shelters have very long waiting lists right now.

"We just keep getting busier," she said. "The more people that find out about us, the more we get. Space fills up as fast as it empties out. I think we need more shelters, especially on the South Shore." She added one of the problems with having so many full shelters is that the local families who need a place to go have to travel as far as New Bedford, Fall River or Taunton. For someone who's lived their whole life on the South Shore, that's a tough request.

One thing that Newell, Jesse and Garvey say is that Sept. 11 has not affected local charity efforts as much as it could have. Some shelter and food pantry directors were concerned about the fact that so much money was donated to Sept. 11 charities. They were concerned people would not be able to support local charities who also need a vast amount of support.

"I have found people have been making donations to both causes," Newell said. "It's amazing to me. Everyone is moved to the core that people care so much."

"People are actually reaching out to their communities more than ever," Jesse added. "Donations here have been pouring in, and our food pantry has been full. I think people are more giving than they have ever been. Sept. 11 gave everyone something to think about."

But even with the spirit of giving the way it is, the onset of winter always means it's going to get tougher for those who are homeless. Jesse said in the winter, something like finding apartments becomes an even harder task than it already is. But the staff at Pilgrim's Hope is taking measures to help the problem a bit. The shelter is now selling tickets for a house raffle, with 5,000 being sold. The home will be given away in the summer.

In addition, Jesse said Pilgrim's Hope will be opening a new shelter for single people. During the holiday season, the shelter will also be running its adopt-a-family program where donors are asked to buy presents for children in homeless families.

YOUR COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER CARES

Newell said homeless people should not be treated as outsiders but rather, as neighbors. She said it is important to make available to these people activities like church suppers, concerts and other community-based events. But most of all, she said these people need to be treated with compassion, and they need to be able to find reasonable housing rates.

"You can't live your life out of a motel," Garvey said. "I think the main thing for people is to be aware of the homelessness problem and how it affects their communities. "I don't think the problem can ever be fully solved, but I think if there is a solution, it's having enough awareness to help those who are homeless."

"Make these folks your neighbors," Newell added. "The homelessness problem really didn't start until the early 1980s, and it just doesn't seem reasonable that we all can't find some way to deal with it without warehousing people. I think it will eventually get better, but I'm stunned at how bad it's gotten."

To donate to the Gifts of Hope campaign — to benefit Carolina Hill in Marshfield, South Shore Friends of the Homeless in Weymouth and Father Bill's Place in Quincy — send your check made out to one of the three charities to Community Newspaper Company, c/o Anne Rodwell, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, Ma., 02050. All donors will be acknowledged in the newspaper, unless your donation is accompanied by a note asking that it remain anonymous. All checks will be immediately forwarded to the charities.

For those who would like to donate to Pilgrim's Hope, send donations to 149 Bishop's Highway, Kingston, MA., 02364.

concerned that construction of the sidewalk would destroy the ledge below the church, a hallmark of the town. Up to 2-1/2 feet of ledge must be removed in certain parts to accommodate the sidewalk and some fear the effects of blasting the ledge. However, chipping the ledge or drilling the ledge are two options that would be less destructive to the area than blasting, Rizzo said. No decision has been made as to what type of ledge removal system will be used.

"I've talked to different masonry contractors and there are various techniques to maintain the natural integrity of the ledge. The exposed ledge will look out of place at first, but overtime it will weather and age," he said.

CRC's plans for the sidewalk show it extending in toward the church at some points so the road will actually become wider, enabling easier passing for vehicles and pedestrians. There will also be a granite curb on the edge of the sidewalk so there would be a clear indication of the separation between the road and the pathway. The parking spaces across the street will not be affected.

> "The goal is to make an adequate sidewalk that addresses the issues of all involved."
> — Dean Rizzo, CRC

The St. Stephen's sidewalk could be the first part of the village revitalization project to see construction. Rizzo said the plans for the sidewalk are the most ready to go and are the most complete of any village area. He said if everything goes according to plan construction could begin by the summer.

"It would be nice to start construction of the St. Stephen's sidewalk early so the (village) improvements could be done in stages. We are not looking to rip up the whole village at the same time," he said.

The estimated $2-1/4 million village revitalization project could be paid for with no direct cost to Cohasset taxpayers. This does not include putting the utility lines underground. The $1.5 million Public Works Economic Development Grant the town was awarded this fall will pick up most of the tab. The MBTA will pay to reconstruct the town parking lot and the Ripley Road intersection by the South Shore Art Center in the village as part of the Greenbush train restoration project.

That brings the total to approximately $2.2 million for various village improvements. Rizzo estimated that to complete all construction could range from $1.7 million (all concrete sidewalks) to $2.4 million (all brick sidewalks). It will be up to the town to decide on the sidewalk design.

Hingham Lumber plans move to Cohasset next fall

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Hingham Lumber will have a new home in neighboring Cohasset next fall.

In the meantime, it's business as usual at the Summer Street location in Hingham.

Its home base is changing, but the name will not, to carry on the company's legacy of fine customer service, the owners said.

From the time it was first started in 1947, the family-owned and operated business has been known for delivering not only lumber, but also personalized service with a smile.

Brothers Thomas and John McNulty, who run the company, intend to continue that tradition in Cohasset. Their brother-in-law David O'Connor of Hingham also works for Hingham Lumber.

"This will allow us to enhance our level of customer service and provide additional offerings," Thomas McNulty said.

"This will allow us to enhance our level of customer service and provide additional offerings."

— Thomas McNulty, Hingham Lumber

At the new, much roomier location — a 13-acre parcel off Route 3A where a golf driving range was once located and adjacent to Cohasset Collision — customers will have the added convenience of a drive-through, where they can pick up their orders in all kinds of weather without getting out of their vehicles.

An expanded product line is another plus related to the move. A wide variety will be offered, from nails and screws to Palladian windows and full kitchens. Power tool rentals is another added feature.

"While the new facility will help us compete against big 'box' stores and independent lumberyards, we will continue to offer quality products and service, service, service," McNulty said.

While the McNulty family is looking forward to its new, expanded facility, they are sad to be leaving Hingham after all these years.

"We have many faithful customers," McNulty said, who hopefully will continue to frequent the business at its new location. "We appreciate their loyalty through some difficult times. Our neighbors and customers have been great."

The bottom line is that the company had no choice other than to close up shop or go out of business.

That's because the MBTA is taking the Hingham property by eminent domain as part of the Greenbush rail restoration project.

"Before that time, it never crossed our minds to move somewhere else," McNulty said. "The MBTA wanted the land regardless."

The transit authority is required to pay "fair market value" for the Hingham property, but at this time McNulty is not sure what that figure will be.

Hingham Lumber is currently assessed at $761,000, and the company paid $10,467 in property taxes for Fiscal Year 2000.

Discussions between the MBTA and the McNultys are expected to begin early next year.

"The MBTA has confirmed it wants the property," he said.

While stopping short of stating the price tag for the new facility, McNulty said it's "in the millions."

"It would be nice if the MBTA would foot that bill," he said.

Over the past several years, the MBTA has been eyeing the current Hingham Lumber site for the Nantasket Junction station, including some 400 parking spaces.

The company was preparing to expand the Summer Street operation several years ago until the MBTA's intentions to take the property became more clear-cut, halting expansion plans.

The good news is that the Cohasset location is ideal, because it's located only one mile from the Hingham operation.

"It's important to maintain our proximity to our loyal customer base as well as attract new ones," McNulty said. "This is definitely a more visible location."

Once completed, the new Hingham Lumber will be a Colonial-style, state-of-the-art facility, with a 60,000-square-foot drive-through warehouse for easier pick-ups of building supplies and a 24,000-square-foot main showroom and retail store. There will be 210 parking spaces.

The McNultys not only take good care of their customers, but also their employees.

"We're very supportive of our personnel and provide an excellent working environment," McNulty said.

In the past, Hingham selectmen expressed regret about the potential loss of what Selectmen Chairman Katharine Reardon called a "very unique" business.

At its Hingham location, the company grew from a "no frills" business offering basic framing components to customers on the South Shore into a full-fledged operation serving an expanded area from the islands off Cape Cod to communities north of Boston, although many customers come from Hingham.

At one time, most of the lumber was delivered by freight train via a line whose tracks ran by the Hingham Lumber property from 1947-1982.

"Everything used to be shipped by rail. That's why lumberyards sprang up around railroad tracks," McNulty notes. "Deliveries were also made by schooners at one time, and now by truck."

The business was started in 1947 by William R. McNulty Jr., who also owned and operated the Hingham Grain Mill — established in 1642 — for 15 years until sales began to drop.

A hardware store was added to the business during the Blizzard of 1978.

Getting the new operation up and running is a Herculean task, but the McNultys are up to the challenge.

"Right now the focus is getting the buildings built, stocking them and moving in," McNulty said. "Our goal is to continue to provide personal but expeditious service and increase our efficiency at the new location."

Boston Symphony oboist in Amahl

South Shore Conservatory presents "Amahl and the Night Visitors" on Saturday, Dec. 8, at 4 p.m. and 7 p.m., in Sanborn Auditorium, Hingham Town Hall, 210 Central St.. One of the most popular American operas, "Amahl and the Night Visitors" is performed by Opera by the Bay, South Shore Conservatory's resident opera troupe of talented singers from throughout the South Shore.

Gian Carlo Menotti's Amahl and the Night Visitors tells the story of the young peasant Amahl, who joins the legendary three kings on their journey to Bethlehem. A special feature of this production is the appearance of Wayne Rapier, oboist for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and one of the premier oboists in the world. The oboe portrays the ancient sound of Amahl's recorder, which keeps him company when he is herding his sheep and gazing at the stars. The sound of Rapier's oboe announces the appearance and departure of Amahl at the beginning and end of the opera, and accompanies the dancers who entertain the three kings.

A special feature of this production is the appearance of Wayne Rapier, oboist for the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Amahl features a cast of six principal singers and a chorus. The roles of Amahl and his Mother are played by Christopher Maher and Elizabeth Milch at 4 p.m. and by Douglas Kanner and Maura Finn at 7 p.m.. Christopher is a student at Derby Academy in Hingham.

Tickets at $10 per person, $7 for seniors and students, are on sale at South Shore Conservatory, Buttonwood For Kids and Nobles Camera Shop in Hingham Square, and Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset. Additional performances will be presented on Dec. 9 in Duxbury.

For more information or to order tickets by phone, call Laura Carleton, 781-934-2731, ext. 14.

Derby student Christopher Maher performs the role of Amahl, with Elizabeth Milch in the role of his mother, in the 4 p.m. performance of the South Shore Conservatory's "Amahl and the Night Visitors," Dec. 8 at Hingham Town Hall.

PSO provides community link

By Evan Schiff

There is a way for parents to become involved with the Cohasset school department.

The Parent School Organization is an independent group of parents that works in conjunction with Cohasset schools to enrich the quality of education.

The PSO is a relatively new organization, prior to 1961 there were "communication councils" that worked with school administrators to try to improve the children's education. However, parents realized they would not be able to accomplish them unless if they were unified.

"We felt we could get more support with a school-wide organization that allowed parents to know what was going on throughout the entire system," said Nancy Sandell, the first chairman of the Cohasset PSO and former School Committee member.

Sandell said the organization is a strong lobbying group for educational and curriculum related issues. She said there was a need for a group that could raise funds for various activities, and bring speakers and workshops into the schools.

This year marks the first time the PSO has divided into three groups, one for each school, and is governed by an executive board.

Jane Pescatore, 12 Lantern Lane and chairman of the PSO, said the PSO acts as a support group and does not have a political agenda like the PTA.

"Cohasset is such a small school system that it is beneficial not to be affiliated with a national organization," Pescatore said. "We are more of a cohesive group and are totally independent. We are apolitical."

Pescatore also said there are too many requirements and restrictions in the PTA while the PSO allows the parents more freedom to work with the teachers and in the classrooms.

"Because the PSO is not involved with salary negotiations, we work with the teachers as teachers, not as employees," she said.

The PSO is open to anyone in the community, not just parents of students, who is interested in the development of Cohasset's school system.

"We provide a communication link between the community and the schools," Pescatore said.

Catherine Davis, 52 Linden Drive and co-president of the middle-high school PSO, said the organization is a great way for parents to become involved with their students' schooling. Davis said representatives regularly meet with the principals to talk about improvements that could be made. "We always keep our ear to the ground," she said.

A member of the PSO always attends the school committee's meeting and the organization has had four or five members go on to be elected to the school committee.

"It's a natural transition to the school committee," Sandell said.

Currently, the PSO has a community relations group working with the Cohasset Council of Aging to try to bring seniors into the schools to get them involved. As well, every year the PSO donates thousands of dollars worth of books to the libraries of all three schools.

Cinderella run by football team ends in Tyngsboro

By Mke Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Any football coach will tell you that turnovers absolutely kill. In the case of Cohasset's 21-7 season-ending playoff loss to Tyngsboro Tuesday night, these unforgiving gaffes helped bring on a slow, grueling death.

Four first-half turnovers put the Skippers in a quick hole that they were forced to battle valiantly out of all night. By the time the Skippers offense finally seemed to get untracked, it was simply a case of there being too little time and too much Jonathan Godfroy, Tyngsboro's gifted halfback who kept moving the chains and wore down Cohasset's defensive front with his 223 rushing yards.

"He's the best back we've seen this year," said Cohasset head coach Tony Rolfe, of Godfroy, following the loss that marked the first post-season appearance for C.H.S football since 1980. "We were throwing guys at him, but he just kept making them miss, or shaking them off and picking up positive yardage."

Indeed, only two of the junior speedster's 40 carries on the night went for negative yardage, and those were both for mere one-yard losses.

The host Tigers scored on their first possession, marching 54 yards in nine plays after a short Cohasset punt. Godfroy ate up most of the real estate here, carrying seven times for 32 yards, including the final eight on a quick hitter over left guard.

The Skippers committed their first turnover just two plays into their ensuing possession when wideout Tom Anderson was separated from the ball after a short reception and the Tigers Brian Carey pounced on it at the Cohasset 31-yard line.

It took the Tigers eight plays to cover that ground. Godfroy rambled for nine yards on a 4th-and-2 call and picked up another first down on 3rd-and-4 a few plays later to set his team up 1st-and-goal at the 4-yard line. Captain Brian McDermott punched it in from there going right up the gut, and Ryan Halloran split the uprights with his second PAT to make it 14-0 with 1:16 still remaining in the first quarter.

"I thought the defense as a whole came up huge tonight. They played their hearts out and kept us in the game. I'm extremely proud of the effort all of the kids gave."

Cohasset High head football coach Tony Rolfe

Whatever shot the Skippers might have had at wrestling away a little momentum was frittered away quickly by the offense, as the ball was turned back over to the Tigers twice in the Skippers next three offensive plays.

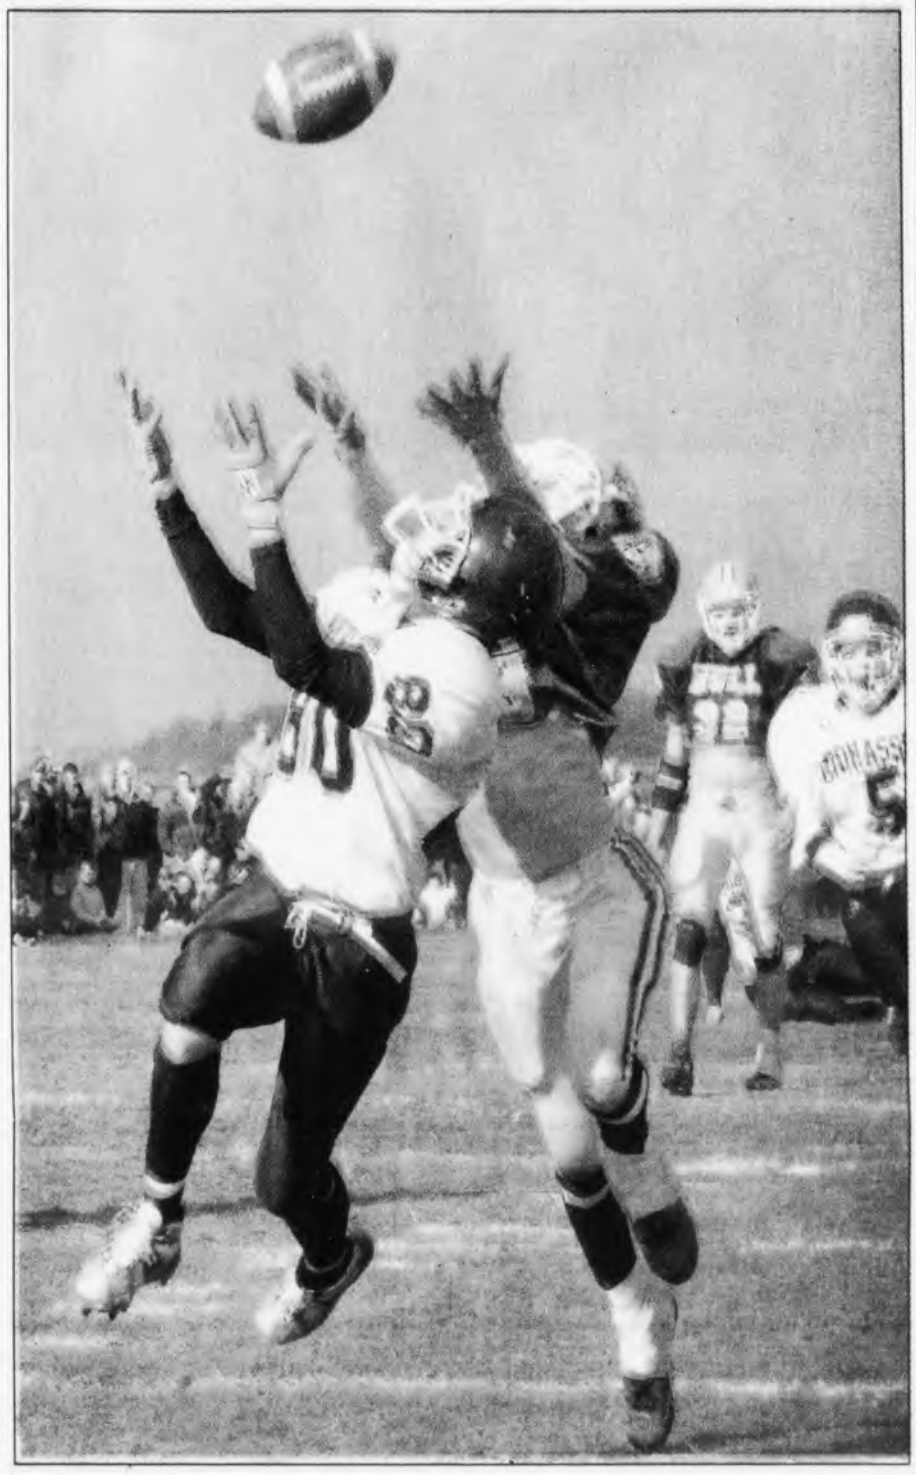
The Cohasset defense came up big both times, however, preventing the Tigers from drawing any more blood. Jason Brown, Paul Previte and Tony Truglia all came up with key tackles to keep it a 14-0 game and senior deep back Dave Bouchard picked off a pass from Tigers quarterback Jason LaForge in the end zone for a touchback with 8:45 remaining in the half.

"I thought the defense as a whole came up huge tonight," appraised Rolfe following the game. "They played their hearts out and kept us in the game. I'm extremely proud of the effort all of the kids gave."

This pick by Bouchard finally seemed to provide the Skippers with a something of a lift, as the offense marched across midfield in just five plays, picking up their first two new sets of downs of the night in so doing — the first on an 11-yard pass from Mike Snowdale to Chris Bilodeau, the second on a well disguised play action 14-yard sweep by Brown. The drive would die there, however, a 4th-and 3 pass slipping through the fingers of the generally sure-handed Bilodeau. Just about anyone who's followed Cohasset football this year will tell you that Bilodeau would never have missed that pass before he suffered a broken finger earlier in the week. Ditto for another potential first down toss he wound up dropping in the second half.

"We just don't miss passes, and that's especially true for Chris," asserted coach Rolfe, in his sixth year at the helm of Cohasset football. "That's one of the main things that got us to this (playoff) game.

"It's hard to do a lot of things with a broken finger, but catching a football has got to be one of the hardest. I give Chris a lot of credit for going out there and giving it his best."



The Cohasset defense was forced to rise to the occasion again after the offense's fourth TO of the half, this one delivered by Godfroy when he stepped between an

Squirt B team bests SeaHawks for first win

COASTAL STARS 'GAME OF THE WEEK'

It has long been said that Thanksgiving, more than any other holiday is a time of tradition. And while this sentimental notion has some room in the heart of the sports fan, Thanksgiving for the sports enthusiast means rivalry. There is nothing more intense in sports than a game where long standing rivals go at it. Records are meaningless, friendships are forgotten, and one objective consumes all combatants-win the game.

Most Thanksgiving rivalries take place on the football field, but there was a hockey showdown this Thanksgiving weekend, Sunday at 9:20 a.m. in Rockland, where the Coastal Stars Squirt B team faced off with their fiercest rivals, the South Shore Seahawks, in a game that gave the Coastal Stars their season's first victory.

What makes the rivalry so intense is a split that developed four years ago where Cohasset and Marshfield separated from the Seahawks to form the Coastal Stars. Because of this history an almost familial rivalry developed where one time teammates are now forced to compete against their old brethren for bragging rights on the South Shore.

The Star's head coach, Lenny Coppenrath, knowing the importance of this game, and always striving hard to see his team develop, saw an opportunity to turn his season around with a victory over their arch rival Seahawks.

Coach Coppenrath, guided by his fellow state trooper and brilliant hockey strategist, Lt. Steve Matthews, decided they would shift from a defensive mindset to a more offensive minded attack for this game.

As the first period got under way the switch in strategy appeared to work beautifully as the Stars grabbed a quick lead off a goal by the stalwart Marshfield forward Steve Caniff who took a feed from defenseman Mike Bird to put the Stars up 1-0.

The Stars lead grew later on in the first when high scoring Marshfield forward Kevin Matthews dug free a loose puck from a pile up in front of the net and roofed one by the sprawling Seahawk goaltender.

The Seahawks finally answered the Stars' offensive barrage early in the second on a broken play that enabled a Seahawk forward to go in uncontested for their first and only goal.

The Seahawks momentum didn't last long as Cohasset forward and long time Seahawk power forward, Chris Brown, came charging down his wing and went glove side upper corner on the Seahawks goalie to regain their two point margin. As the second period was winding down Brown's selfless determined play enabled him to get the puck to line mate Steve Caniff who went one on one with the Seahawk goalie and beat him a second time for the Star's fourth goal.

The Stars coaching staff was ecstatic going into the third . Assistant coaches Mike Valenti, Alan Smith, and Joe Bird, although pleased with the offensive output wanted to keep

C.H.S. gridders fight to the end

EXTRA POINTS

MIKE SPELLMAN

As I was riding along in the bus Tuesday night with a bunch of giddy Cohasset High football parents on the way to the Eastern Mass. Div. 5 playoff showdown between their hometown boys and Tyngsboro at Tyngsboro High way up on the New Hampshire border (an MIAA venue decision that had us all scratching our heads), I had plenty of time to reflect on all of the occasions in the not so past past on which I'd proffered the opinion that the battle for South Shore League football supremacy would come down to Norwell and Abington.

To be more specific, I recalled conversations with Cohasset acquaintances in which I donned my South Shore high school football authority cap — a narrow, pointy number which I now find to be a little more "roomy" than I once believed — and informed them of what I thought of the chances of their upstart Skippers against the bigger and stronger Norwell and Abington teams.

D'oh!

For the two or three Cohasset Mariner readers out there who aren't already familiar with the details of Cohasset's road to this South Shore League championship and post-season berth I gave them little shot at, a quick recap: Norwell wound up tying Hull and losing to Abington to kill its Super Bowl dreams, following which Cohasset beat Abington in an instant classic battle of the unbeatens, 20-16, on Nov. 2. The Skippers then knocked off Hull, 13-3, on Thanksgiving to collect on all of the spoils.

It wasn't until I watched the Skippers fall in defeat Tuesday night, 21-7, to a bigger and stronger Tyngsboro team, however, that I finally "got" that this team's accomplishments were far from a fluke.

Simply calling these Cohasset High gridders "overachievers" doesn't seem quite enough After all, this — along with "no one respected us" — is probably the most worn out and hackneyed of today's sports cliches. In the case of these boys, however, let me state in the strongest of all possible terms that this is really, Really REALLY the case.

After watching Tyngsboro steam roll its way to touchdowns on their first two possessions Tuesday night, and seeing the Skippers turn the ball over on four its first five chances, the deferentially softened "blowout story" lead paragraphs were racing through my mind. I've been to few games, after all, that started out this way and didn't end in similarly ugly fashion.

But something funny happened to these Skippers on their way to post-season shame: these players who probably gave away on average 20 pounds apiece to their counterparts, rather than getting even a little down, got really angry and obstinate. Time after time over the remainder of the contest, someone stepped up to make an essential big play.

GRIDDERS, PAGE 16

Senior middle linebacker Paul Previte — all 5-foot-8, 175 pounds of him — would fight off the block of one of Tyngsboro's 270-pound linemen to make a big hit at the line of scrimmage.

Lineman Ben Lynner (205 pounds), Tony Truglia (170 pounds), Chris Caron (170 pounds) and Cosimo Camby (210 pounds) would likewise, time after time, stand up impressively to these opposing behemoths.

The story on the other side of the ball was similar. Undersized Cohasset offensive linemen Camby, Brendan Goff, Stephen Davis, Will Prendergast and Jari Martin didn't surrender a sack of quarterback Mike Snowdale on any of his 14 passing attempts, and they even managed to open a few holes between the red and white clad sides of beef for Jason Brown runs.

This really was a classic David versus Goliath story line. Cohasset High (303 enrolled students, 9-12) boasting less than half the student body of Commonwealth Athletic Conference champion Tyngsboro (650). In this case, however, with the host Tigers rushing out to a 14-0 lead, "David" seemed to have an arm tied behind his back and a sling that pulled to the left.

In summation, and since I'm already into cliché overdrive anyway, I'm reminded of this popular coaching adage.

They've come up with all sorts of ways to measure the various and sundry physical abilities that are deemed to be essential to football success, save for one very big one: heart.

Clearly, this Cohasset High football, though deficient in many of these areas we can measure, was well ahead on the curve on the heart scale.

attempted option pitch from Snowdale to Brown at Cohasset's 40-yard line.

The Tigers proceeded to march to Cohasset's 17-yard line with a minute to go before halftime, but Cosimo Camby came up with a big stick at the line of scrimmage on Godfrey and Bilodeau broke up a pass on third down to bring on the strong-legged Halloran for a 33-yard field goal attempt. Truglia and Chris Caron both popped past their blocks quickly, and it was the former who managed to get a hand on the boot, as Caron occupied the backfield blocker.

Brown breathed new life into the game when he popped through a hole between right guard and tackle, Stephen Davis and Brendan Goff, on the Skippers second offensive play after the break, and managed to shake off three tacklers downfield on his way to a 71-yard TD run that, with Tom Anderson's PAT, made it 14-7 just 4:05 into the third quarter.

A few minutes later, Previte came up with a huge stop of Godfroy on 4th-and-3, shooting up from his middle linebacker spot to get the ball back on downs for his offense at Cohasset's 37-yard line.

A nice 11-yard hookup between Snowdale and Bilodeau, along with a couple of nice runs by Brown, would move the ball just over midfield, but that would be as close as the Skippers would come to pay dirt again.

The Tigers would finally put the game out of reach eight plays after taking over at Cohasset's 44-yard line following a short punt, with seven of those calls going to their main man, Godfroy started with runs of nine and 14 yards, both times shaking off tackles in the backfield. Then it was another nine yard pickup, followed by a seven yard ramble. A couple of punishing inside runs set the stage for Godfroy to go back outside. Taking the handoff at the Cohasset 8-yard line, Godfroy started wide around right tackle before cutting back against the grain to race untouched for the backbreaking TD with just 3:04 showing on the clock.

"We just had too many mistakes and (Tyngsboro) capitalized on them," said Brown, a senior team captin, who completed his final high school game with 14 rushes for 92 yards. "We were probably a little nervous, a little too charged up. We came back and played hard after the bad start, but we just couldn't recover enough."

Tyngsboro moves on to play in the Div. 5 Eastern Mass. Super Bowl against Bellingham, 27-7 winners over Bishop Fenwick Tuesday, on Saturday at Boston University's Nickerson Field (6:30 p.m. kickoff).

Tape of the instant Classic Abington-Cohasset Game

Seeking to raise money for a new Athletic Trainer at Cohasset High, the C.H.S. Athletic Dept. is making available tapes of this past Friday's huge Skippers victory on the gridiron over league rival Abington. In addition to the game in its entirety, the tape will include the Channel 5 report and highlight reel from the game, as well as snipets from the C.H.S. pre-game rally and Senior Night ceremonies. Also included in the package will be a copy of the game rosters and the game report from the Cohasset Mariner.

The cost of this entire package is $15, with all monies going to the C.H.S. Athletic Dept. Interested parties should call Cohasset High Athletic Director Ron Ford at 781-383-6103.

Cohasset-Hull Thanksgiving tape now available

The tape of the Skippers 13-3 come-from-behind win that clinched Cohasset's first post-season berth in 21 years is now also available for $15. The tape will include local news highlights.

Skippers wrap up 'perfect' season on gridiron

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

It could not have been more perfect.

Cohasset took down rival Hull on Thanksgiving, 13-3, to cap off one of the greatest regular seasons in Cohasset Skippers history.

"You can't go out any better than that," said a jubilant Will Prendergast, senior captain of the Skippers. "It is an unbelievable feeling."

In the first half, Cohasset fans had very little for which to cheer. The Skippers picked up only one first down and, true to form, the Hull Gut provided dreadful weather conditions.

The teams forced one another to punt the ball for the game's first five offensive possessions. Hull junior Greg Fleck put his team on the board with a 24 yard field goal as time expired in the first half.

In the second half, everything changed. The clouds separated, and the sun shined through just as soon as the Skippers were ready to make their charge.

"I think Clark [Chatterton] had something to do with that," asserted fourth year head coach Tony Rolfe, referring to the long time CHS athletic director who succumbed to cancer last year.

The Skippers came out in the second half fired up, stopping Hull on their opening possession. Pinned inside their own 2-yard line, junior quarterback Mike Snowdale marched Cohasset 95 yards down the field. In the highlight of the drive, Snowdale completed a 35 yard pass to senior Eric Libby, who normally plays cornerback, but stepped in as a receiver in place of the injured sophomore Chris Bilodeau.

The Skippers were stuffed at the goal line, but got the ball right back when Hull had a 3-and-out.

On the ensuing possession, Cohasset drove right back down the field and capped things off on a one yard touchdown run by senior tailback Jason Brown on fourth down.

With under seven minutes with which to work, Hull drove the ball to midfield, where the Skippers forced a turnover on downs. The Skippers were unable to advance the ball in their ensuing possession, forcing them to punt, and giving the Pirates one final chance.

However, junior Tom Anderson booted a high, spiraling punt that was fumbled by the Pirates return man, and Skipper senior Chris Caron pounced on it. Caron finished the day with four tackles (including a sack) on top of his fumble recovery.

Cohasset then trampled the tired Hull defense, and Jason Brown scored his second touchdown, a four-yarder, to seal the victory with a minute remaining.

After the game, Brown seemed very appreciative of his offensive line, who opened holes for him all day, especially in the second half.

"If the line does their job, I can do mine," he explained. "It's as simple as that."

Brown was one of the top defensive performers for the Skippers, tying sophomore Sean Connolley for the team lead with six tackles.

Senior captain Paul Previte, junior Cosimo Cambi, and sophomore Tony Truglia all had four tackles in the effort.

For the seniors, this win was extra sweet, especially after Skippers were demolished last year 43-6 at home. Now, they can graduate with a winning record (2-1-1) in their careers on Thanksgiving.

"We came out hard," said Prendergast. "We wanted a little payback."

Game Notes

- Cohasset amassed only 28 yards of total offense in the first half, but picked up 166 in the second..

- This is the second time Brown has scored two fourth quarter touchdowns. The first tiem he pulled this off was I in the crucial shootout with Abington three weeks ago.

- Cohasset only held the ball for 5:36 in the 20 minute first half.

Powder puff football...not quite

The senior girls walked off the field as winners of this year's annual grudge match between the two upperclasses, defeating the juniors in lopsided fashion on the gridiron.

Top right, junior Deanna Brown borrows a move from big brother Jason Brown as she slips by the "tackle" of senior Emma Gordon for a big gain.

Right, to the victors go the taunting rights. Seniors (L-R) Amanda Watts, Kristin Sheerin, Emma Gardner and Kate Grimm aren't shy when it comes to celebrating a win.

the team focused on defense in order to protect the lead. Coach Bird, the owner of Marshfield Tire and proud sponsor of the team, said the team could not have focused on offense early in the game were it not for the coaches confidence in their goaltending and defense.

Their confidence was well placed as goalie Ethan Coppenrath was outstanding in the net and played the best game of his season. His effort won him the game's MVP award as unanimously chosen by parents and coaches.

Making Ethan's job easier was the superb play of defenseman Mike Bird, who inspired by his grandmother cheering for him in the stands, turned in his best performance of the season. Bird's great effort was supported by fellow defenseman Kenny Weiand, Mike Valenti, and Mike Gorman. Weiand and Gorman played there always dependable defensive game and Valenti a gifted puck handler and superb skater was able to move the puck out of the defensive zone to create many offensive break outs.

In the third period it was forward Kevin Matthews notching his second goal of the game on an unassisted rush through two defenseman then keeping the puck low and hard blasted it by the now beleaguered Seahawks goalie. With nine minutes left in the third the hustle and consistent play of the Star's second line was rewarded on a spectacular on his knees, (after being tripped), goal by Star forward Patrick Gilbert who was assisted by line mates Taylor Smith and James Quinn.

The unsung hero award went to the line of Conor Mahoney, Justin Yeager, and Tim "Digger" Fahey. Digger Fahey was the subject of praise from both coaches and parents due to his relentless effort both offensively and defensively.

A jubilant coach Coppenrath reflected after the game about his team's victory and tradition. He said he is all for tradition and the tradition he would like to see is one of hard work and dedication. He said we practice that way and it's nice to see us play that way. Coach admitted he got a couple of good bounces but quickly added. "Luck is a combination of opportunity and preparation- we came prepared."

Super Bowl format creates a super mess

COVERING ALL BASES

By Joe Mullin

High school football teams playing three games in 10 days seems a little much. In fact, it seems more than a little much.

I'm not one to cause trouble. No sir, many years ago I decided to live by a simple rule. Never trouble trouble unless trouble troubles you. For the most part, it works. However, old people get cranky and you know what that means.

The regular high school football season ended on Thanksgiving Day. The following Tuesday (yesterday), the Eastern Mass. high school semifinals took place and the winners go on to the Super Bowls on Saturday and Sunday.

Teams from the area that could possibly be playing 3/10 or 3/11 include Cohasset, Duxbury, Whitman-Hanson and Bridgewater-Raynham.

It's easy to blame the MIAA for that schedule, but they're only trying to make the world and then some happy.

People want Super Bowls and they want true champions. So, we get the playoffs that lead up to the Super Bowls.

Any ideas?

Since you asked, I have an idea and with the idea my little motto about that trouble, trouble thing goes out the window.

Play the Thanksgiving Day games on the Saturday or Friday before Thanksgiving, like the other nine or 10 regular season games.

You don't like that idea. You say tradition will be lost. The kids of the manor won't have a place to hide between 10 a.m. and 12 noon while the significant other is cooking the bird. Don't get upset, read on.

Now comes the other part of the bright idea. Hold alumni football games on Thanksgiving Day. Round up a bunch of chubby old graduates who can still move and have them go at it.

Those that are too old and too chubby can still show up at the game, meet old chubby buddies and recall the days the teams were bigger and meaner and they played both ways.

The gladiators of old can return to the field of battle as players or spectators, work up an appetite either by playing or yelling and then return home for the feast prepared by the SO while the warrior was out doing his thing.

Now, the playoffs can be held on the weekend following Thanksgiving and the Super Bowls can be held the following weekend.

Plenty of rest for all concerned. Even the alumni warriors can show up at the games and show off their wounds from the recent encounter. The only problem with that would be the smell of muscle soothing linament that would permeate the air.

The idea is simple if not magnificent. Nothing is disturbed. If anything, more has been added to the football season.

That's why in many societies, the older people get to sit in the front row around the fire and make the rules of law. It has nothing to do with aches and pains and the heat from the fire helps ease the aches.

And while we're on the subject of rules of law, there are rules that have to be followed by those who wish to play in the alumni game.

First — Nobody, and that means nobody gets in shape for the game. No gut, no play.

Second — All participants must bring a note from their SO saying it was okay to play in the game.

Third — Sons and daughters of the players attending the games are not allowed to snicker at pop when he blows one. They are allowed to tell mom what happened when they get home. Mom can snicker.

Fourth - No runner will be allowed to run the ball more than 30 yards at one time (I think you know the reason for that rule). At that point the game will be held up and a designated runner will go in for another 30 yards or less. If the run is longer, another delay will occur.

Fifth — Coaches of the teams have to be of a forgiven nature.

There you have my contribution to football and tradition.

You're welcome.

The 2001 Deer Hill School cross country team

Over 90 students in grades 4-6 participated in the Cohasset Recreation Department cross country program run by Mr. Weydt, the Physical Education teacher at the Deer Hill School. Special thanks were extended by Mr. Weydt to his "fantastic volunteers": Deer Hill School Principal Mr. Callahan, fourth grade teacher Mrs. Levine, Osgood School PhysEd teacher Mr. Dykas, Mrs. Leahy, a parent, and Cohasset Police Officers Lisa Matos and Brian Curran.

SPORTS NOTES

Ski/snowboard lessons

Registration for ski/snowboard lessons at Blue Hills will be held at the Cohasset Recreation Dept. office, o nthe first floor of town hall, on Tuesday, Dec. 11, from 2:30-6:30 p.m..

Lessons for either skiing or snowboarding will be five weeks in duration, meeting Tuesdays, starting Jan. 8 through Feb. 5. Equipment rentals for both skis and boards are available at Blue Hills. Should anyone need to rent equipment, this will be done at the time of registration.

Fees for this five week program, including bus transportation, are as follows: ski and snowboard lessons without rentals- $160, ski lessons with rentals- $210, snowboard lessons with rentals- $220.

Further questions should be directed to the Cohasset Recreation Dept (781-383-4109).

Busses will leave town hall paring lot at 3:15 p.m. sharp on Tuesdays and return to town hall lot at approximately 6:30 p.m.

In order to complete rental information, you will need to know your child's weight, height and shoe size for the Dec. 11 registration.

Tryouts for the sixth grade boys traveling basketball team will be held this Friday, Nov. 30, at 6:30 p.m., at the Osgood Gym. Questions should be directed to Tim Bilodeau (781-925-1792).

Youth basketball evaluation sessions

Grades 1-3

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club/Recreation Department request all boys and girls in grades one through three, who registered for youth basketball this season, attend a 45-minute evaluation session so that balanced teams can be drafted. The schedule is as follows:

Saturday, Dec. 1

Grade one, boys and girls, 9 a.m., Deer Hill School

Grade two, boys and girls, 10:30 a.m., Deer Hill School

Grade three, boys and girls, noon, Deer Hill School

For questions or comments, call Jack Worley at 781-383-4109.

Grades 4-6

On Saturday, Dec. 1, the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club will hold evaluations and team selection by all coaches for boys and girls in grades four to eight. The season will begin Saturday, Dec. 9. The evaluation schedule for each grade is listed below. The first 40 minutes will be spent evaluating the boys and girls. The final 20 minutes will be a coach's conference to select the teams. The teams must be selected on that day since the actual games begin the following week.

IT'S HAPPENING

Holiday show through Dec. 9

The Herdmans were the worst kids in the history of the world. They lie, steal and smoke cigars, even the girls. They talk dirty, hit little kids, cuss their teachers and take the name of the lord in vain. So what happens when the meanest, nastiest kids ever meet up with the Christmas Story? You get the Best Christmas Pageant Ever.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present this heart warming holiday show at the Cohasset Town Hall weekends through Dec. 9.

Director Amy Wilder of Scituate has taken more than 50 children (and a handful of adults) ranging in ages from 4 to 15, haling from Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham, Hull and Rockland and put together a heart-warming and funny show.

Deborah Carlton of Scituate is the music director and Jean DiGiacomandrea of Scituate, who appeared in the show 4 years ago, is producing this holiday show.

The Best Christmas Pageant will open on the day after Thanksgiving and run Friday and Saturday nights at 730 and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. with an extra matinee on Saturday Dec. 8. The show will close on Dec. 9. Tickets are just $10 and can be bought at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset, Front Street Books in Scituate, at the door or by phone at 383-1718. If you are a Girl Scout you can get reduced priced tickets by calling 545-1655. Escorted groups and senior groups are also welcome You may have your tickets reserved by calling Jean at 617-750-8987.

The Donna Green Studio, 11 Elm St. in Cohasset Village, is holding its annual Holiday Open House on Saturday, Dec. 1 from 11a.m.- 4p.m. This year "The Pirate Ship," a magical new print from Donna's upcoming book, "To My Son, With Love," will be featured. Also on display will be Green's festive Christmas cards, personally autographed books, and prints.

Upstairs in the Loft, Monique and friends will have a doll adoption day for anyone wishing to either leave a doll or adopt a doll. All proceeds will go to the children of the firefighters lost on Sept. 11.

'The Pirate Ship,' by Donna Green

Columnist at Buttonwood

Buttonwood Books will host Sharon Randall in Cohasset on Fri. Nov. 30 from 7-9 p.m. Randall is a full-time nationally syndicated columnist who has been writing since 1994 for the Monterey County Herald and Scripps Howard News Service with distribution to some 400 newspapers around the country.

"Birdbaths and Paper Cranes" (Sleeping Bear Press, $18.95) is a compilation of the best of Randall's popular column "Bay Window." The column, published twice weekly, is filled with stories about her personal life, however the experiences she relates could have happened in most any family. Reservations are requested to facilitate seating and refreshments. Please call 781-383-2665 to reserve or to order your signed copy if unable to attend. Free.

Food, wine-tasting

Start your holiday celebrations with a "Victorian Taste of Christmas," a festive evening of wine, hors d'oeuvres, music, and holiday shopping at the Hull Lifesaving Museum's celebrated store. This Saturday, Dec. 1 from 6-9 p.m., more than a dozen restaurants will present a selection of foods to sample while you enjoy a variety of fine wines from West Corner Liquors. This is a great way to treat yourself this holiday while also supporting the museum's youth programs.

Reservations in advance are requested, although tickets may be purchased at the door. The cost for this culinary event is $30 for members and $35 for non-members. Contact Barbie Guild for more information at 781-925-5433.

Recent events have affected us all in so many ways

SCHOOL'S IN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

This month's school page has a lot of news from November and some upcoming news and information for the month of December. The events of the last few months, particularly Sept. 11 have affected all of us in so many ways. I want to commend all the students and families, along with the staff of the schools for helping to keep the children feeling secure and giving them ways to help. Several programs were put in place at home and in school for children to raise money for different groups and allow them to make a difference. This is very needed and extremely beneficial to them as they are people too, who have fears, concerns and ideas. We as adults need to make time to listen and hear what the kids are saying and how they want to help and be a part in all of this.

As we head into our busy holiday season and start all the preparations for it, listen to the words that are being shared by our kids and encourage them to give in any way that they feel is right. Many programs are looking for artwork, cards and letters from children to brighten up someone's day. This is a wonderful way to share without being a financial burden and involves the children in a great way.

I want to take this time to send a huge thank you out to Ted Holland who found a way for him to make a difference. Ted brought into our town a wonderful way of "giving" by donating clothes, toys, bedding and more to a group of Lakota Indians who really have nothing. Between his work and the work of the founder, John Paul Sullivan, this year was a tremendous success. Thank you to everyone who donated items. John Paul will need to take two trips this year to bring all of the goods and deliver them to the Lakotas. This was a beautiful way for our children to see and understand what it means to need versus want and to make such a huge difference to so many people. Great work to all involved!

Recently, a wonderful program was held for the second graders at the Osgood School and for the sixth graders at Deer Hill. This curriculum enrichment program was met with enthusiasm from teachers and students alike. Hawk Henries, a musician in the Nipmuc Nation performed as the children have been studying and learning about Native Americans. Please make sure to read the stories that follow.

Another "hats off" award goes to all of the students, teachers and families who have been so hard at work knitting hats for Rosie's Place for the holidays. To date, more than 120 hats have been made and some of these can be viewed in the Deer Hill lobby. Ms. Ann Berman, the Deer Hill art teacher, runs this amazing program each year and is truly an inspiration to all involved. Keep knitting and watch the paper for the final tally.

As we are all in shopping mode for the holiday season and so many of us are using the internet for some of it, why not let those dollars work for us in another way? Both the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood Schools are registered under www.SchoolPop.com, a program that benefits schools all over the country. By registering your name on this site, purchases that are made from any one of many stores such as L.L. Bean, Gap, Lands End, etc will have a percentage of the sale put into an account for the school that you select. Once a quarter, this money will be sent to the school to be used as wanted or needed. That is it, very easy and a wonderful way to support the schools with shopping that you are already doing. So what are you waiting for? Sign on and log in, it is worth it.

The Sixth-Grade Yearbook Committee would like to thank all the people who recently purchased Tupperware for the Tupperware Yearbook Fundraiser. To date, they have sold more than $2000 worth and the orders are still coming in. It is not too late to place an order. For more information or to receive a catalog, please call Jen Piepenbrink at 781-383-0143 or email me at piepstupper@yahoo.com.

I just wanted to put a reminder message to all school families in reference to the different allergies to foods that children may have. Please make sure to follow all guidelines that are sent home from each school about any allergies that a child or children may have. Many of us do not realize the extent of damage a little bit of peanut butter, some walnuts put in brownies or the many other sources of food that trigger a very serious, possibly even fatal reaction in a child. I know that if the child with the allergies were my child, I would hope and want everyone to understand and respect the need to have those allergies taken seriously. It will not hurt anyone to have to wait until they are at home to eat that peanut butter or snack if it means protecting the well-being of another person. Please do your part in this terrifying problem.

This Saturday, Dec.1 is the Annual Village Fair. The METCO Program is taking orders for wreaths and candles for pick up on Dec. 1 from 9 am-2 p.m. at the Cohasset Middle/High School. These fresh high quality balsam wreaths are from Maine, are double faced and 22 inches in diameter. The cost per wreath is only $9! Also available are Ivory unscented pillar candles measuring 3x6 inches and the cost for these is $8 per candle. Hanukkah candles are $7 a box. Please make all checks payable to PSO METCO and place your order in the Osgood main office, Deer Hill main office or with Aleisa Gittens-Carl, METCO Coordinator at the High School. You may call Lisa Dunne at 781-383-1596 with any questions.

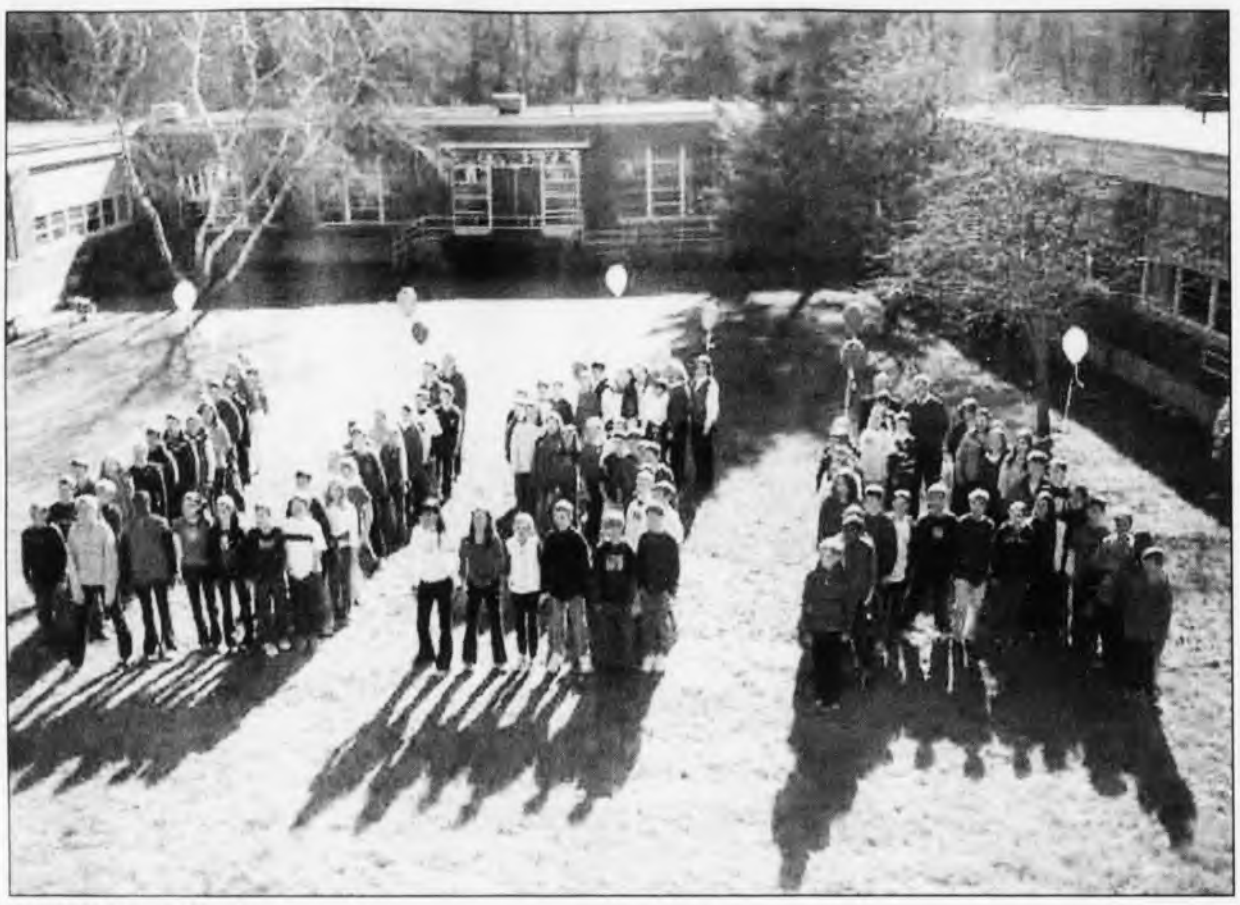
PSO meetings for December: Presidents Council Meeting: Dec.11 at 7 p.m. at the South Shore Community Center.: Osgood School; Friday, Dec. 7 at 9:30 am,; Deer Hill, Monday, Dec. 10 at 9:15 am

The Cohasset PSO would like to remind all parents that meetings are open to everyone and would like to encourage fathers and mothers to attend whenever they can. All input is valuable and appreciated and really open the door for communication between parents and the schools. Make sure to check the time and date of the upcoming meetings.

The next PAC meeting is being held on Dec. 5 at 7:30 p.m. in the Osgood Music Room. All parents of children with special needs are encouraged to attend. This meeting will be dealing with basic rights.

The next School Committee Meeting will be held on Thursday, Dec. 6 at 7:30 p.m. in the high school library. All are invited and encouraged to attend as the budget process is beginning for the 2002-2003 school year. Everyone's input is crucial to this process.



Wednesday, Dec. 12 is a early release day for the Middle/High School only. School will be dismissed on this day at 11:20 am.

The Joseph Osgood Holiday Concert is being held on Tuesday morning, Dec. 18. The MS/HS Holiday Concert is Wednesday evening, Dec. 19 at 7:30 p.m. There is nothing like a grinning group of children singing away to get you into the spirit.

All items for the Schools In page are due to me no later than the third Friday of each month. Please send all photos to Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com or drop them off at Cohasset News in an envelope marked Schools In, Cohasset. All written materials can be sent to me in the following ways.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Book drive at CHMS

The Cohasset High/Middle School has a wonderful way for families to give this holiday season. The Cohasset Middle High School Book Drive is beginning and will run through Jan. 15. Please participate in the gift of giving to your school by contributing $5 towards the book wish list for the library and art department at CHMS. Many of the classics in the library are worn-out paperbacks. The art department needs books for reference to depict style and content. The goal of this book drive is to purchase hardcover books of the following lists.

We know we can do this together. If only $5 were sent in for each student, this wish list can be fulfilled. If there are families or students who would like to donate towards a specific book, please let that be known with your donation. A special bookplate acknowledging your generous contribution will be affixed in the book. In case of duplicate overlaps, please note three titles as well as the name(s) you wish to have printed on the nameplate. Let's get together this holiday season! All checks should be made payable to: Cohasset Middle High School Bookdrive, 143 Pond St., Cohasset, MA 02025. attn: CHMS/PSO.

Any questions can be sent to CMHSPSO@hotmail.com. Please look for upcoming information in your monthly letter from the school.

More hats for homeless

Deer Hill students are once again knitting hats for a homeless shelter. This year, the handmade hats will be given to Rosie's Place, a Boston-area shelter for women and children. Students are being taught to knit simple wool hats at Deer Hill's after-school art program Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays.

The students now have 140 completed hats and are working every day to add more to the collection. Each hat is labeled with the student's name and age as well as a personal greeting or message for the hat recipient.

The hats are currently on display in the main lobby at Deer Hill School, and all are welcome to visit and view the students' fabulous head-warmers. Students have discovered that there are some wonderful knitting parents and grandparents in our community, eager to assist with our efforts. All are welcome to knit and contribute hats and the simple knitting instructions are available at Deer Hill School.

Plans are to deliver the hats to Rosie's Place around Christmas, Wednesday, Dec. 12 (weather permitting).

For more information on this knitting project, call Ann Berman at Deer Hill School, 781-383-6115.

SS Vo-tech open house

The South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School; open house will be held on Thursday, Dec. 6, from 6:30 to 9 p.m. The school is located on Route 123, 476 Webster Street in Hanover.

School principal, Charles Homer, says, "all 14 technical programs will be staffed to explain to future students and their parents the many opportunities at South Shore.

The South Shore Regional school district includes Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Hanover, Hanson, Rockland, Abington and Whitman.

Prospective students and their parents can see shops in operation such as automotive, auto body, culinary, cosmetology, machine, welding, industrial technology, electrical, electronics, drafting, carpentry, heating ventilation and air conditioning, graphic arts and health careers.

Refreshments will be prepared and served by the culinary staff and students. "Open House is an excellent opportunity for prospective students and their families to checkout the technology for the jobs of the new century." Says school superintendent John Kosko.

For more information about open house activities, call 781- 878-8822.

Henries casts his spell

By Michael Scott Astley
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Recently, expanding the budding young minds of our elementary students included a truly magical experience. Children and adults were similarly transfixed during a series of conversations and performances with musician and cultural ambassador, Hawk Henries.

Hawk captivated elementary school audiences at both Osgood and Deer Hill with fascinating stories and the mesmerizing tones of his vast flute collection. Beginning with the observation that people often view his unique outward appearance with wonder and even fear, Hawk shared a constructive discussion about the value of diversity. After all, each of us is decidedly individual.

As a proud member of the Nipmuc Nation, Hawk spoke of a culture rich in history and tradition. After being raised in Rhode Island, he settled in Maine. He has employed himself by making fine Eastern Woodland song flutes. He crafts these solid wooden flutes using traditional hand tools and fire.

Hawk is in great demand as a Native American educational performer. His superb interactions, for he stimulates captivating exchanges, are far more than mere performances. Hawk transports his eager audiences into his world. Hawk's world is a place where all people, young and old, live in peace and share beautiful and universal music. Surrounded by scores of enthusiastic children, Hawk is truly in his element.

As one young boy curiously peers up into the end of the instrument that Hawk is playing, a wide smile grows across his face. Music is the single language that every culture, each unique and indispensable, understands. In sharing his traditions and his treasured flutes, Hawk has offered the elementary students and teachers of Cohasset a special opportunity to explore human diversity through stories and song. He cast powerful spells of compassion upon tomorrow's leaders. Perhaps our combined sensitivity will become more developed for that gift.

Hawk Henries inspires second-graders

The children in Miss Murphy's second grade class wrote this article in cooperative groups.

Our class is going to tell about Hawk Henrie's visit. Hawk Henries is a musician in the Nipmuc Nation. He came to the Osgood on Monday, Oct. 29. Hawk told us stories and played songs with the flutes he made. He came to our school because we are studying Native Americans. We will know tell you more about Hawk.

Hawk Henries is an interesting person. He is talented because he played a lot of instruments. He made a lot of instruments from wood. He made us all laugh because he kept saying, "Do you have geography?"

He has a good song memory because he remembered so many songs. He was unbelievable when he played a flute with his nose. We liked meeting Hawk Henries.

Our class would like you to know how we felt about Hawk Henries's music. His music sounded like birds singing. The music made us feel like we were in a forest. It was very peaceful and soothing. We were amazed by his unbelievable music. We really enjoyed Hawk's music.

Hawk Henries told us Native American stories. Nature is very important to Native Americans. His stories taught us not to give up. His stories also taught us that helping others is important. He is a very good storyteller. We learned a lot from Hawk Henries.

OBITUARIES

Frances Adams

Frances G. Adams, 87, of Vero Beach, Fla., formerly of Hingham, died Nov. 14, 2001, at Indian River Memorial Hospital in Vero Beach after a brief illness.

Born in McAlester, Okla., Mrs. Adams moved to Vero Beach 22 years ago from Hingham.

She worked for IBM in Massachusetts. She was a teacher and tutored in New England.

Mrs. Adams was a graduate of Smith College in Northampton, and attended the University of Grenoble and the University of Sorbonne, both in France.

She was a volunteer on the Board of Friends of the Library in Vero Beach and a volunteer for the Library Book Depot.

She leaves a daughter, Judith Adams Shadron of Brunswick, Ga.; a son, Dr. Randolph M. Adams of Marshfield; a sister, Cornelia Maples of Lee's Summit, Mo.; four grandchildren, Jeffrey M. Adams of Cohasset, David T. Adams of Sagamore, Leslie Adams Greeley of Kingston and Wendy Adams Coleman of London, England; and four great-grandchildren.

A memorial service was held at Indian River Estates, with the Rev. Donn Littlefield officiating.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Indian River County Main Library, 1609 21st St., Vero Beach, Fla. 32980, or to the charity of one's choice.

Frederick Garrison

Frederick Garrison, age 86, died Nov. 26, 2001 at his home in Cohasset.

Born in Waban, he graduated from the Rivers School, Harvard College in 1937 and Harvard Business School in 1939.

During World War II, he served with the U.S. Navy in San Francisco as coordinator of ordinance on board all naval warships departing that port for the Pacific theatre of operation.

Mr. Garrison was a retired consultant and former vice president of the New England Confectionery Company.

He leaves his wife, Nancy (Scripture) Garrison; his two daughters, Gay Garrison of Ithaca, N.Y. and Anne Garrison of San Diego, Calif.; his two sons, Timothy of Natick and Frederick of Underhill, Vt.; and his 10 grandchildren. He also leaves his two brothers, George Garrison of Worcester and Arnold Garrison of Waban.

Funeral arrangements are being made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

A memorial service will be held on Friday, Dec. 7 at 2 p.m. at First Parish Meeting House, 23 North Main St., in Cohasset. The Rev. Jennifer Justice will officiate.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in Mr. Garrison's memory to The Friends of Cohasset Library, c/o Linda Wakeman, 106 South Main St., Cohasset 02025.

George F. Pope

George F. Pope, age 90, of Cohasset, a retired refrigeration technician, died Nov. 24, 2001 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Mr. Pope was the owner of Pope Refrigeration. He also worked as a refrigeration technician and mechanic at St. Margaret's Hospital. He retired from the hospital 25 years ago. During the 1950s, he worked at Fore River Shipyard in Quincy.

Born and raised in Revere, he graduated from Revere High in 1929. He has lived in Cohasset for the past 49 years.

He leaves his wife Eunice (Burton) Pope; his two sons, George D. and Richard J. Pope, both of Scituate; and his five grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. Interment was in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell funeral Home of Cohasset.

Donations may be made in Mr. Pope's memory to the Norwell Visiting Nurse Association, 673 Main St., Norwell 02061.

May S. Merritt

May S. (Paine) Merritt, 93, of Scituate, a retired substitute teacher, died Nov. 12, 2001, at Norwell Knoll Nursing Home in Norwell after a period of failing health.

Mrs. Merritt worked in the Scituate public schools for many years.

She was born and educated in Marshfield and moved to Scituate 65 years ago.

She graduated from Marshfield High School.

Mrs. Merritt taught sewing and tailoring for the Scituate Adult Education program for many years.

She was a member and Sunday School teacher at Beechwood Congregational Church in Cohasset and Union Mission Church in Scituate for many years. She was also a deaconess at Beechwood Congregational Church, and the church's Merritt Hall was named for her and her husband.

She was a member of the Beechwood Improvement Society.

Widow of the late E. Witford Merritt, she leaves a son, Earl S. Merritt of Williamsburg, Va.; two daughters, Lois J. Barnes of Vernon, Conn., and Judith A. McDevitt of Quincy; 12 grandchildren; and 11 great-grandchildren.

A memorial service was held at the Beechwood Congregational Church. Interment was private.

Arrangements were by the Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home, Scituate.

Memorial contributions may be made to the May Merritt Living Trust, c/o Beechwood Congregational Church, 51 Church St., Cohasset, 02025.

Eunice L. Brownell

Eunice L. (Carlander) Brownell, age 82, and a longtime resident of Cohasset died at her residence on Sunday, Nov. 25, 2001.

She was the wife of the late Carold H. Brownell, Sr.

She was a graduate of Cohasset High School and the Cambridge School of Swedish Massage and Medical Gymnastics.

She had a part time business as a Swedish masseuse as well as working for Pyrotector of Hingham for 10 years.

During World War II, she was involved with the Hanover Town Fireworks. She was a volunteer in her retirement years with the Boy Scouts of America.

Mrs. Brownell was a member of the following organizations: the South Shore Viking Association, the Vassa Order of America, the Independent Order of Vikings, and the Massachusetts Mayflower Society.

She leaves her daughter Deborah C. Brownell of Hanson; and her sons, Carold Brownell, Jr. of Cohasset, Marc Brownell of Norridgewock, Maine, and Philip Brownell of Santa Ana, Calif. She also leaves her four grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held on Thursday, Nov. 29 at the First Parish Church on Cohasset Common at 2 p.m.

Visiting hours are omitted and interment will be private. Arrangements are made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made in Mrs. Brownell's memory to the South Shore Vikings Association, 410 Quincy Ave., Braintree 02184.

CMHS press box broken into

If the Hull-Cohasset Thanksgiving Day football game had been played at home on Alumni Field, the announcers might have had to use megaphones to provide the play-by-play coverage. That's because sometime late Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning, a thief or thieves broke into the press box at the field and stole the public address system. Also taken were a Sony compact disc (CD) player and the first-down yardage chains.

The total value of the stolen items is about $1,000, Det. Rick Grassie said.

Grassie said school officials reported the break in at about 9 a.m. Wednesday. He said the incident is under investigation and anyone with information should call the police at 781-383-1055 or the middle-high school at 781-383-6100.

Grassie discovered a footprint on the door to the press box which was forced open, breaking the door jam.

"This isn't a prank," he said. "It's a B&E, larceny and malicious destruction of property – that kind of stuff is criminal felony charges not a misdemeanor."

Spirited six seek out the things that go bump in the night

By Gregory Mathis
GMATHIS@CNC.COM

Brian Bezanson was convinced at an early age his aunt's house was haunted.

But it didn't scare him. Instead, it made visits to her Abington residence exciting opportunities to search for ghosts and spirits.

More recently, his belief in paranormal occurrences has been strengthened by strange things happening to him.

In his last apartment near the 7-Eleven, before moving to his current Abington residence on Route 18, he was awoken by a noise made on the crucifix that hung on the headboard of his bed.

"It would tin, almost like someone was flicking it. Then the door would open and close," said Benzanson, coincidentally tuned into Ghostbusters II on the TV in the background.

Bezanson said he believes the 'flicking' sound was the work of a ghost or spirit.

"I was sad to move out of there," he said. "I was hoping it would follow me, but it didn't."

The strange flicking of the crucifix fueled Bezanson's interest in the supernatural and has led him to form South Shore Paranormal Investigations.

His belief in spirits and ghosts was solidified when he and his girlfriend and partner, Jen Bousquet, visited his aunt's house with a "Night Vision" digital camera seeking out his deceased uncle. Bezanson, who was extremely close to his uncle, was hoping for a sign that he was still present in the house.

As Bezanson and Bousquet made their way through the house with the video camera, Bezanson called out to his uncle, asking if he was there. An "orb," a flash of light, came across the video screen. Bezanson and Bousquet were so overcome by the sign, they began to cry. Choked up with emotion, Bezanson told his uncle he loved him. Right after that another ray of light shot across the Night Vision video camera, he said.

It is experiences like that that drive the work South Shore Paranormal Investigations — a group of six local people interested in studying the realms of the supernatural. It's a non-profit group that will travel to your home or work to investigate possible paranormal occurrences free of charge.

"We are available to anyone in New England for no cost," Bezanson said. "We do not charge for investigations, we conduct them only to help the victims of a haunting and to further our understanding of paranormal phenomena."

Bezanson said business has been picking up lately as the group has received more attention in the media. They've recently been featured in the Halloween edition of the Improper Bostonian and have appeared on the Matty in the Morning radio show.

The local group includes Bezanson, Bousquet, Blake Melville, Pat Spencer, Caitlyn Birmingham and Wayne Matthewson. Bezanson said membership to the group, which is $50, is closed for now.

The hits on the Web site, www.ghosthuntersonline.com, have increased as well and people are e-mailing and calling Bezanson with questions pertaining to their own paranormal experiences.

"I like talking to people about it," he said. "I stay on the phone for hours taking notes."

Bezanson said after talking with a possible client, they'll go out to the home or business to check out the site.

"A lot of people don't believe in ghosts. We try to stay very skeptical," Bezanson said. "We try to rule out every possible situation. Just because you hear a noise it doesn't mean you have a ghost in the house. We go in with a healthy degree of skepticism.

"When we can rule everything out, that's when you know you really have something," Bezanson said.

The group is concluding an investigation just west of Boston in which the father saw an aberration next to his bed and has even been pushed out of the bed. Also, every time he locks the bedroom door, it mysteriously unlocks. Bezanson said the father was scared for his two children.

After visiting the house and setting up some of the group's high tech equipment, Bezanson said orbs were seen when the two children were in the house. He concluded the orbs were following the children, not the parents and the hauntings may have something to do with what may have happened to a child in the house many years ago.

When the group doesn't have a haunted house to explore, they set up their equipment in public spots like Mount Vernon Cemetery in Abington to search out spirits.

"We've got some interesting orb video of them (spirits) flying around," Bezanson said.

He said they've also recorded voices on tape and sharp temperature drops in the cemetery indicating the presence of spirits.

Bezanson said the sharp drop in temperature — the cold spots — are a result of the spirits sucking the heat out of the air for energy.

"The spirits need energy to manifest, so we wait for a day with a lot of energy," he said.

Bezanson said the group does its work for free because it's collecting research information on the paranormal.

"We're just trying to pile up research information," he said. "We want to help the families more than anything else."

Bezanson said once a ghost or spirit is discovered, he provides the families with several options.

"We have some Holy water to sprinkle about and we have clergy who do house blessings," Bezanson said.

If the case is real bad, Bezanson can put families in touch with demonologists to conduct an exorcism, or he has two mediums based in New Jersey who can be called on for assistance.

"We're not ghost busters," he said. "We're just ghost hunters."

Many hands make light work. The South Shore Paranormal Investigators hold an Electromagnetic Field Recorder, one of the tools of their trade.

'Rovers' ready for Randolph

Lombardo's show benefits Quincy charity

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

"And there were green alligators and long necked geese
Some humpty backed dromas and some chimpanzees
Some cats and rats and elephants, but sure as you're born
Don't you forget my unicorn"

As unlikely as it may seem today, "The Unicorn," The Irish Rovers' lilting, Celtic-pop ditty wrapped around this wistful refrain, was a million-selling crossover hit in 1968, sharing chart space with heavyweights like the Beatles, the Rolling Stones, Jimi,Hendrix, and Aretha. Franklin.

It was exactly the openness and expansiveness of that fabled musical and cultural era, and the Rovers' crowd-pleasing, party-up spontaneity as an onstage live act, that won the group both a hip audience's heart and a stake on the pop-culture landscape at the time.

Far from fading away after one hit at the end of the 1960s, the Irish Rovers have played on steadily over the last three decades, rivaling other major genre acts such as the Chieftains and the Clancy Brothers as international ambassadors of Celtic folk-music. The Rovers have endured partly through adopting their official "Christmas Party," mixing seasonal standards with their regular live sets of traditional ballads, jigs and reels, into their overall performing agenda since the mid 80s, and touring internationally under that banner each year between Thanksgiving and New Year's Eve. Of course, a genuine 60s pop-crossover pedigree has never hurt a musical act in sustaining a long career either.

"The Irish Rovers' Christmas Party" makes a rare local appearance on Wednesday (December 5), when the Rovers bring their famous holiday show to Lombardo's in Randolph. The show is a benefit event for Quincy's Interfaith Social Services, in an effort to raise money for the organization's annual "Feed the Hungry" campaign.

The Irish Rovers will perform Wednesday, Dec. 5 at Lombardos in a benefit concert for Quincy's Interfaith Social Services.

"The 'Christmas Party' tour is something we in the band look forward to doing every year," said Rovers guitarist/vocalist George Millar, one of five original members in the currently seven-piece band and the vocalist on the original hit recording of the "The Unicorn." "The shows we do on this part of our schedule are usually benefit events. And about half of our show onstage is Christmas standards mixed in with our typical set-list of Celtic ballads and such. The Christmas songs are usually numbers that we feel are appropriate for any given occasion, things like 'God Rest Ye Merry Gentlemen,' 'What Child Is This?' or one that we try to do at every show, 'Bells Over Belfast,' which, along with its seasonal theme, is also a hope for peace in regard to the ongoing Irish political troubles."

Millar said the "Christmas Party" originated under rather unlikely circumstances. The Rovers had what the singer/guitarist calls an "Irish underground hit" in the early 80s with the original recording of "Grandma Got Run Over By a Reindeer," better known in the States from the novelty-hit version by Patsy & Elmo. The Rovers' own success with the song brought about friends and colleagues' suggestions of forming a fully conceived Christmas-themed show for the season, which became affixed into the group's regular schedule within a few years.

"Our 'Christmas Party' is very unique, we think," Millar said. "We try to do a different sort of traditional show than say, Bing Crosby might have back in the day. A lot of the songs are solemn and serene in keeping with the season, but we'll always mix that with more lively, happy drinking songs, jigs and reels along with our typical routines of jokes, high jinks and spirited sing-alongs. It's that fast-moving party atmosphere that seems to be what the Irish Rovers are all about."

Millar also acknowledges that the shows on this year's Christmas tour carry for many in the Rovers' audiences added significance in light of recent tragic events. The group itself has been touched by the New York terrorist attacks, as Millar noted that the Rovers' touring keyboardist, who currently lives in the United States, lost four friends from Ireland in the attacks. Millar also mentioned that the group considered canceling a Christmas tour date at Staten Island College out of respect for some 200 Island residents who were also victims, until the show's original producer, citing increased audience demand, urged the Rovers to keep the date and perform.

"Despite the ongoing grief among the area residents, if we can go to Staten Island and make some of them happy for two hours, it's well worth the trip," Millar said. "It's a lot like how we handle different situations back in Ireland. Whether it's a wedding or a wake, people get together, play music and tell stories. All in all, it's how we cope."

Braised Short Ribs

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Short ribs are rarely made at home because they are unfamiliar to most cooks, they are fatty, and they take time to cook. However, most of the cooking time is unattended, the fat can easily be removed from the sauce, and the resulting fork tender meat is so richly flavored that it far outshines a beef stew or a roast.

The basic method is straightforward. The ribs are browned, usually on top of the stove but sometimes in the oven. Then, the meat is removed along with excess rendered fat, vegetables and aromatics such as garlic are sautéed, the meat is added back with liquid (such as stock or wine), the pot is covered, and the meat is cooked for 2 to 3 hours at a relatively low oven temperature. The long slow cooking melts the collagen (connective tissue) in the meat until it is fork tender and succulent. Bad short ribs, however, are fatty, tough, and the accompanying sauce is thin and acidic.

To solve the problem of short ribs, I started with the meat itself. I wanted to serve 6 to 8 people so about six pounds or ribs was about right. It is important to use ribs that are at least 1 1/2 inches thick; the thicker meatier ribs are more tender and flavorful. The length of the ribs varies from about 3 to 7 inches but I found that 4 to 5 inches makes for the best presentation and portion control. This is a fatty cut of meat so purchase the leanest looking ribs you can find and make sure that the ribs are trimmed of excess fat. The ribs need to be seasoned and browned in a couple of batches over high heat in a large heavy-duty skillet. (I found I needed only one tablespoon of vegetable oil since the ribs provide plenty of their own fat.) It is important to brown the ribs on all sides to render as much fat as possible.

In terms of vegetables, my favorite accompaniments are onions, carrots, shallots and garlic. I used 2 chopped medium onions, 2 chopped medium carrots, 6 chopped medium shallots and 1 medium garlic head, cloves separated and crushed. This combination lends lots of flavor-earthy and sweet. I found I didn't want the vegetables to brown, just to soften, for best results. This dish is a bit dull without a health dose of parsley, thyme and rosemary. Using 10 sprigs of parsley, 8 of thyme and 1 of rosemary provided the flavor I was looking for. I also preferred the dish with a couple of bay leaves thrown into the pot.

The sauce must be thickened and there are three common methods: using a roux (butter and flour) before deglazing, using kneaded butter after the braising process, and sautéing flour into the vegetables before deglazing. I found that sautéing a few tablespoons of flour into the vegetables was the best method. The sauce thickens to a velvety consistency provided you use the correct amount of flour - 3 tablespoons.

As for the liquid, I immediately thought of chicken broth since canned beef broth is inedible. As for the wine, a common additional ingredient, I preferred Pinot Noir, Burgundy or Cabernet Sauvignon. (The dish has a slightly different taste depending on which wine you choose but all were good.) A recipe for Beef Burgundy recently printed in Cook's Illustrated suggested reserving 1/2 cup of the wine for the final stages of the dish. This worked well, giving the sauce a fresher, more lively taste. A half cup of port also married nicely to the beef and was added at the onset of braising.

Cooking temperature is key in braising, oven heat usually being low for best results. At 375 degrees, for example, the meat turned out a bit stringy and the liquid actually reached a vigorous boil. It turned out that 300 degrees was optimal – the meat was silky and tender yet the cooking time was not extended to 3 or 4 hours as would be the case with a lower oven.

Finally the sauce contains a lot of fat. If it is not removed, the liquid will be virtually inedible. The easiest method is to chill the sauce overnight. The fat will rise to the surface and solidify and it can then be removed in seconds. If you do not make this dish the day before, simply pour off the liquid, let it sit for a half hour, and then spoon off the fat that rises to the surface.

Minor adjustments to the recipe included a small amount of tomato paste for color and flavor, chopped fresh parsley, and a side of garlic mashed potatoes or sautéed root vegetables make a nice accompaniment.

BEST BRAISED SHORT RIBS

Yes, this is not a quick dinner but it can be made a day ahead of time which is perfect for entertaining. During chilling, the fat will rise to the top of the sauce and solidify, making it very easy to remove.

5 1/2-6 pounds bone-in beef short ribs, at least 1 1/2 inches thick and 3-5 inches in length preferred
Salt and freshly ground pepper
1 tablespoon vegetable oil or olive oil
2 medium onions cut into 1/2-inch dice
2 medium carrots cut into 1/ 2inch dice
6 shallots, quartered
1 medium garlic head, cloves separated and smashed with skin remaining
3 tablespoons flour
4 cups dry full-bodied red wine such as pinot noir, cabernet or burgundy
1/2 cup ruby port
3 1/2 cups chicken broth, low sodium or homemade preferred
10 sprigs flat leaf parsley
8 sprigs thyme
1 sprig rosemary
2 bay leaves
1 tablespoon tomato paste
1/4 cup chopped flat leaf parsley for garnish, optional

1. Heat a large heavy-duty skillet over medium high heat. Heat the oven to 300 degrees and adjust rack to the center position. Liberally season the short ribs with salt and pepper. When the skillet is hot, brown half of the meat until deeply colored on all sides using the sides of the skillet, tongs or leaning the ribs against each other for balance. Transfer ribs to a large Dutch oven. Repeat process with the second half of the meat.

2. Pour off all but 2 tablespoons of fat from the skillet and lower the heat to medium. Add the onions, carrots, and shallots. Sauté until soft and the onions and shallots become translucent, about 6 to 7 minutes. Add the garlic and cook an additional minute. Stir in the flour until well combined, about 1 minute more. Add 3 1/2 cups wine to the pan and bring to a simmer scraping up any browned bits remaining at the bottom of the pan.

3. Add the contents of the skillet to the Dutch oven along with the port, chicken broth parsley, thyme, rosemary, bay leaves and tomato paste. Set Dutch oven over medium high heat and bring to a boil. Cover and set the pot in the oven. Cook until meat is fork tender, 2 1/2 to 3 hours.

4. Remove Dutch oven from oven. Using tongs, transfer the ribs to a large plate, removing excess vegetables and herbs that may cling to the meat. Discard any loose bones that may have fallen away from the meat. Strain braising liquid into a bowl, pressing out liquid from solids. Cover the ribs and liquid separately with plastic wrap and refrigerate overnight. (If serving the ribs the same day, place the liquid in a glass bowl or large measuring cup and spoon off excess fat. It is best to let the liquid rest for at least 30 minutes to allow most of the fat to rise to the surface.)

5. Spoon off and discard the solidified fat from braising liquid. Add to clean Dutch oven and bring to a boil over medium high heat. Briskly simmer until the sauce is reduced to the consistency of heavy cream, 5 to 10 minutes. Add the remaining wine and the reserved ribs to the pot. Reduce the heat to medium low cover and cook until the meat is heated through, about 5 to 8 minutes. Serve immediately with or without chopped fresh parsley.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28

Take advantage of a harmonious sun-Neptune alignment this morning; rest, reflect, refocus. Do something that brings beauty into your life or the life of another. It is okay to start new activities before 7:35 p.m., when the Taurus moon forms a flowing 60-degree contact to expansive Jupiter.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 29

This day has its challenges. Take it slow and easy. Ninety-degree lunar alignments to Uranus and Mars occur this morning. Watch your speed. Stay busy with practical projects; follow through on jobs that have been left hanging; clean and reorganize. Avoid arguments or confrontations with others. Influences lighten up as the day goes on. The moon opposes Venus and becomes inactive at 6:21 p.m. Love is the name of the game tonight. Plan a romantic dinner for two.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 30

Wake up in a good mood. Allow extra time to get where you are going. The moon enters Gemini at 12:04 a.m., and the full moon culminates at 3:49 p.m., 9-degrees of Gemini. Because this is the second full moon to occur this month, it is a Öblue moon.Ó Mercury, the planetary ruler of Gemini, forms a 60-degree alignment to Neptune. Its influence accents the need for clarity and focus regarding details, minor points. On the other hand, it may spark flashes of intuition, new insights. Take extra quiet time out for yourself. You can make gains on an inner, personal level.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 1

The month of December features two potent eclipses; a solar eclipse culminates December 14, and a lunar eclipse December 30. Today the versatile Gemini moon continues active travel until 8:48 p.m. If you want to be productive, handle a variety of tasks and errands. Finish old business rather than starting new projects. Relax and enjoy favorite pastimes this evening.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 2

The moon enters the sign Cancer at 5:30 a.m. Venus enters Sagittarius at 6:12 a.m., remaining there until December 26. Plan to spend quality time with loved ones; be more nurturing, sensitive to their needs. Go on a cooking or baking spree. Arts and crafts projects also get the green light. Instead of worrying about situations you cannot change, focus on the positives in your life. Count your blessings.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 3

Wake up in a good mood. The Cancer moon becomes inactive at 6:04 a.m. However, sun/Mercury oppositions to Saturn take center stage. Tackle jobs you have been putting off and finish them. Fulfill promises, repay debts, follow through on commitments. Zero in on projects that require mental precision and attention to detail. You can be most productive. On the other hand, you should avoid signing contracts or taking on new responsibilities.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 4

The morning may be slow-starting; allow extra time to get where you are going. The Cancer moon continues inactive travel until 9:15 a.m., when it enters Leo. You can make gains developing programs that require financial or moral support from others, particularly between 9:15 a.m.-2:16 p.m., when the moon aligns with Venus. The sun and Mercury conjoin at 13-degrees of Gemini, placing the emphasis on communications, sharing ideas. A lunar opposition to Neptune prompts you to relax and mellow out completely this evening.

Autumn leaves are a gardener's gold mine

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

As the brisk days of autumn grow shorter, the gardens, and those who tend to them, ready themselves for a well-deserved rest. Frosty evenings and chilly breezes discourage warmth-loving dirt diggers, like myself, from venturing forth until midday, only to have darkness descend all too early with little progress made toward my intended duty of preparing the gardens for wintry weather. I wander from garden to garden, planting bulbs and squeezing perennials into tight spaces unfit for them to prosper, knowing they will most likely have to be moved next season. Perhaps it would have been wiser to resist those late-season bargains, but many of us devoted plant people feel obligated to adopt the last few orphans in hopes of sparing them from the dumpster or the compost heap.

By November, most passionate gardeners finally develop a sense of urgency as our innate desire to hibernate compels us to accept that the growing season has finally come to an end. The time has come to put the gardens to bed and begin our preparations for the holiday season. Lawns will benefit from a final mowing this month with blades lowered to approximately 2 inches. An application of lime and a winterizer fertilizer can still be applied to promote a healthy root system and an early greening of the lawn next spring.

Before this final ritual can be performed, however, it may be necessary to participate in another rite of autumn, the raking of copious quantities of leaves. Windy conditions have undressed the majority of our deciduous trees and shrubs, carpeting our lawns and gardens with a multi-colored blanket whose patterns change daily as persistent gusts of wind swirl the crisp leaf litter. Hours spent raking and hauling monumental piles of leaves can be obliterated overnight as Mother Nature scatters her bounty from yard to yard. For some, raking fallen leaves is an endless chore with little reward other than a momentary tidy appearance when the task is complete, but for the experienced gardener, the gathering of autumn foliage is a valued activity providing a multitude of benefits. Many gardeners enjoy the physical labor involved in vigorously pursuing our hobby and raking is a wonderful form of exercise. In addition, the accumulated leaves may be used as a winter mulch, a beneficial additive to the compost pile, or as a soil conditioner.

Frequent raking of our drifting autumn leaves is an advisable practice. While many gardeners view this leafy covering as Mother Nature's way of providing a protective, cozy winter mulch, a prolonged accumulation of leaves can actually be detrimental to many plants. The broad leaves of maples or the smaller leaves of cherry, birch and a wide variety of shrubs are likely to mat together when they become wet. The presence of a dense layer of damp leaves can quickly suffocate underlying grass or plants and reduces air circulation around the base of shrubs which may eventually promote diseases in addition to providing an ideal refuge for foraging rodents and voracious slugs and snails. Instead, the leaves which have been collected can be selectively put to use.

Oak leaves are particularly effective as a winter mulch as they are less prone to matting. Use these leaves to fill cages or barriers which have been placed around rose bushes or shrubs, including boxwood, azaleas, or hydrangeas, which are prone to desiccation by winter winds. For use as a garden mulch, particularly in open areas, these leaves may require an additional covering of branches or evergreen boughs to hold them in place during periods of high winds.

To use most leaves to their best advantage, shred them with a lawn mower or "leaf-eating" device. This will help them to decompose more rapidly when composted or turned into the garden and they are less likely to blow away should they be used as an organic winter mulch in the perennial border.

Compost is a gardener's black gold and autumn leaves are a valuable ingredient in its composition. During the growing season, I avoid adding large quantities of grass clippings to the compost heap as they tend to compact, producing a mushy, slimy, smelly accumulation, but when autumn arrives, the combination of grass clippings with shredded fallen leaves creates a perfect mixture which provides a precious additive to the gardens the following season. In combination with debris from the perennial gardens, the compost heap reaches mountainous proportions at this time of year.

All types of soils benefit from the addition of organic material which must be constantly replenished as it continuously breaks down. An inch or two of shredded leaves can be spread around perennial borders as a winter mulch after they have been cleaned up, although care should be taken not to cover those plants which exhibit evergreen rosettes or foliage. New beds or the vegetable garden will profit from the addition of several inches of shredded leaves which can be turned in to improve drainage, moisture and nutrient retention, worm populations and an overall enhancement of the soil. The addition of lime will offset the acidity organic matter produces and when spring arrives, soils will be ready for early planting.

D'Ann's...Does it Again

Restaurateur Michael Cocomazzi has done it again, creating a comfortable and immensely popular dining spot where others have failed. This time, it's D'Ann's Sports and Entertainment in Holbrook.

A new venue but a proven recipe: the menu is a clone of his popular D'Ann's Neighborhood Grille & Pizzeria in Abington. Look for the same successes too: big salads (the Chicken Caesar is particularly good) and burgers for lighter dining, but a large menu for extended dining as well.

Top appetizers include their special "Snack Attack," a combo of different items for two. Entrées getting the nod range from comfort food like the best broiled Boston scrod around, a house special chicken supreme and a juicy choice prime rib to the all-new broiled seafood platter, which is simply a great value for seafood lovers. D'Ann's also serves a delicious pizza with various toppings, has a full children's menu (only .99 every Sunday) and a great game room for kids so parents can relax and enjoy a meal together.

If you're looking for a restaurant with high prices, forget it! D'Ann's is, in fact, one of the most engaging, comfortable, down-home restaurants in the area and serves some of the best food around, as well. Owner Michael Cocomazzi, a most delightful host, welcomes all to experience "a reasonably priced gem." And remember, "If it's D'Ann's...it's delicious."

Pembroke artist featured at Staircase Gallery

South Shore Conservatory welcomes Pembroke artist Roberta Simpson Walsh and her monoprints to the Staircase Gallery from November through the end of December.

Her beautiful prints, some created with brilliant colors, and others with muted colors, are often produced using objects from nature such as leaves and feathers.

"Since childhood, I've loved artistic expression. I've enjoyed teaching art to eager students and I hope to continue to learn and grow artistically," says Walsh, a South Shore Art Center artist.

Deeply affected by the recent national tragedies, Walsh has found a renewed appreciation for her freedom to create from her heart.

"Recent events have altered our lives, and now we are faced with uncertainty each day. Yet, art has endured through times of turmoil and wars. American artists have the freedom to continue to produce uncensored art of their choice. We should reflect on this and our freedom and appreciate the time given us to create our art," Walsh states.

She reflects wistfully on the past, and of the future says "I will create art all the while wishing for the naiveté that I once had."

Having graduated from the University of Maine with a bachelor's degree in education and a major in art, Walsh has taught all facets of art for more than 15 years. To this day she expands her own learning process by taking a few new art courses each year.

In addition to giving private and group art lessons in her home studio, she also teaches part-time at Massasoit Community College, Duxbury Art Association and at South Shore Art Center in Cohasset. She has also taught in the Hingham public schools, Rockland public schools, Abington public schools and at Sacred Heart School in Weymouth.

"Today, I devote more time and energy to engage in the creative process and I am thankful for the opportunity to do so."

The Staircase Gallery is located at One Conservatory Drive in Hingham. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturday, 9 a.m. to noon. Admission is free. For more information, call 781-749-7565, Ext. 16.

Fighting mad over school building cuts

Town to lead effort to get funding back

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Cohasset will take the lead in an effort to stop the state Department of Education from making significant cuts to the School Building Assistance Bureau program.

"The Board of Education is cutting funds from projects that are underway," Selectman Michael Sullivan said. "These projects should be at the top of the list for funding because towns have made fiscal decisions based on the DOE's commitments. What do they expect us to do?" he said.

Most in attendance were up in arms as the matter was discussed because the cuts will hit local taxpayers hard.

Supt. Edward Malvey was not pleased about the news.

"This absolutely, unequivocally cannot happen," he said. "The Department of Education cannot lead communities down a path and then misguide them."

Selectman Tom Callahan said, "this is the worst time to do this."

The current budget on Beacon Hill reduces funding the SBAB by almost 50 percent. This means town that are expecting reimbursement for their projects, like Cohasset, will have to wait longer for compensa-

Keeping an eye on Cohasset's health

Godzik honored for his dedication

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset may indeed be a healthier place thanks to Dr. Joseph Godzik – the town's longtime health agent.

Whether dealing with Title 5 (the state environmental code governing septic systems), conducting a rabies clinic for your pet, or making sure local restaurants are inspected – Godzik has been handling a range of local health-related matters for some 18 years.

And while most Cohasset residents go quietly about their business unaware of Godzik's duties until they need his services, his efforts have not gone unnoticed.

The 450-member Massachusetts Health Officers Association recently presented Godzik, who holds a degree in veterinary medicine, with the Michael D. Saraco award at its annual education conference to the member who most exemplified the qualities of the man for whom it was named.

"Not only Title 5 but there are so many regulatory things that have changed the scope of local public health in the state."
— Dr. Joseph Godzik, health agent

"Dr. Godzik is a hardworking and dedicated public health official who has provided enthusiastic leadership and dedication to the Massachusetts Health Officers Association and the residents of Cohasset," says association director Dawn Sibor of Hingham.

Godzik said he was particularly gratified to receive an award named after the man who initially sparked his interest in the public health field. It all started when Godzik, who was still in the US Army and stationed at Ft. Devins at the time, was serving on the Board of Health in Pepperill where he lived with his wife and four children. Saraco, who has since passed away, was the part-time health officer there.

"When Mike would come by, we'd talk about local public health and that type of thing," Godzik recalled.

The timing was right for Godzik, who was getting ready to retire from the military after 21 years.

"We talked about my background and local public health programs," he said about his chats with Saraco. "I wanted to get away from administration. My work at Ft. Devins entailed my being on the road a lot – covering all New England and upstate New York.

"I wanted to go back and do more hands-on work."

It wasn't long thereafter, that Godzik heard about the Cohasset

Discovery center starts fundraising

Will be housed in 1929 Osgood wing

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The Children's Global Discovery Center to be housed in the 1929 wing of the old Osgood School kicked off its fundraising campaign Tuesday.

With a fashion show from Talbots, and a raffle of more than $2,500 worth of goods, the trustees of the "interactive museum" are in the process of raising the estimated total of $1 million that would include the cost of exhibits and renovating the wing of the building. About $300,000 is already committed to the project through private donations.

"The center is going to show children how everyone in the world is unified under the umbrella of humanity while at the same time, celebrating the differences between cultures," said Leah Taylor Roy, a co-chairman of discovery center board.

One-hundred and fifty women parked their SUVs and descended upon Atlantica Restaurant for the fashion show and raffle. Many local businesses donated items to the event, such as Red Lion Inn, Cohasset Liquors, Cohasset Hardware, Cards 'n Shards, and others. The trustees said they expected to raise $10,000 from the show.

The center's vision is one of being both an educational and recreational forum for children. Roy believes the center distinguishes itself from other museums because of the wide range of activities it will incorporate.

"We will have play groups, some in Spanish and French, art classes, climbing structures, water and sand play areas, ethnic cooking classes, and rotating exhibits," she said. Roy

Group wants anchor sunk

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The contentious battles between the Government Island Study Committee and Herb Jason and John Small look to be headed for another round.

The committee is now opposing a ship's anchor that would be added to Government Island. While the committee previously supported the incorporation of the anchor, at Tuesday's selectmen's meeting Ham Tewksbury and Bob Davenport said the group had not realized how big the anchor would be.

"Our problem is the anchor is way out of scale for such a small area," Tewksbury said. "It just doesn't fit in the area."

Davenport felt the committee had been misled. It was only when they read the Mariner last week, which included a photograph of Jason standing by the anchor that the committee realized the size.

Joseph Ngo was a thriving businessman with a nice house when he first came to the United States from Vietnam 25 years ago. But he and his family are now homeless.

"I worked in the United States for 25 years," he said. "And I worked hard — I used to do 12-hour days, 20-hour days." When Ngo first came to America, he worked as a fisherman out of Boston. Some years later, he bought a home in Shrewsbury and also started his own business in Natick, a convenience store called J&D Convenience.

This week in COHASSET

New Year's Eve hours are set

Red Lion Inn, Atlantica, and the Cohasset Golf Club will be permitted to stay open till 2 a.m. on New Year's Eve. Selectmen unanimously approved the hours.

Schedule set

The following schedule for Annual Town Meeting and Annual Town Election were approved by selectmen Tuesday night. Town Manager Mark Haddad wished to call particular attention to Jan. 14 when the last day citizens petition articles can be submitted for the annual Town Meeting warrant. He urged all residents to try and complete their articles before that date.

Dec. 4 - The warrant for Annual Town Meeting is opened.

Jan. 8 - Presentation of the Town Manager's proposed FY 2003 operating budget to the Board of Selectmen.

Jan. 14 - Last day citizens petition articles can be submitted for inclusion in the annual Town Meeting warrant.

Jan. 16 - Presentation of the Town Manager's proposed FY 2003 operating budget to the Advisory Committee.

Jan. 17 - Last day for submission of all other articles for inclusion in the annual Town Meeting warrant.

Jan. 21 - Draft warrant presented to the Advisory Committee for its review.

Feb. 19 - Last day to submit nomination papers to the Board of Registrars to be placed on the election ballot.

March 1 - Warrant sent to printer

March 18 - Warrant delivered to the Post Office for delivery to all registered voters.

March 22 - Constable posts the annual Town Meeting and annual Election Warrants.

March 30 - Annual Town Meeting

April 6 - Annual Town Election.

Liquor license request denied

Selectmen denied a request by Stop n' Shop to obtain two one-day liquor licenses for Dec. 22 and 23. Stop n' Shop was hoping to have a wine and cheese tasting but selectmen felt it was inappropriate.

"Stop n' Shop has no experience with liquor," Selectman Michael Sullivan said. "This is just a bad idea."

Meeting schedule

The following meeting were posted at Town Hall as of Dec. 3.

Conservation Commission, Dec. 6, 7:30 p.m.

Library Committee, Jan. 8, 7 p.m.

Growth and Development, Dec. 13, 7 p.m.

Senior Housing, Dec. 12, 9 a.m.

Committee on Town History, Jan 21, 7:30 p.m. at the Lothrop House

Zoning Board, Dec. 17, 7:30 p.m.

All meeting at Town Hall unless otherwise noted.

Winter parking

Winter parking regulations are in effect, Police Chief Brian Noonan said.

The all-night parking ban continues until April 1.

Master Plan surveys due

The Town has now sent a survey to every registered voter to gather information on the future of Cohasset in preparation for the Master Plan. It is important that residents respond as soon as possible by returning the survey in the self-addressed envelope provided by Dec. 15.

Budget cutbacks affect school health program

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Another day, another cutback due to the state tightening the budget.

The Enhanced School Health Grant, which appropriated $85,000 to the Cohasset School Department last year, is being slashed and now will only award $36,550 to Cohasset.

Supt. Edward Malvey said the cuts are not definite but he expects them to come soon.

"We're just waiting for the other shoe to drop," he said.

The school system was expecting the $85,000 for a few more years.

While Malvey said there will be reductions made across the board in school health services, the school nurses will most likely take a big hit with the possibility of two nurses being laid off. The asthma program could also be eliminated, he said.

"We haven't specifically identified what areas will be affected and will be better prepared to make that decision later in the month," he said. The cuts would not take effect until Jan. 1.

The grant has allowed the Cohasset school department to fund two positions as well as allowing the health department to correlate data relating to student's illnesses. Cohasset has been working with the Department of Public Health in order to provide better health care. The grant also made it possible for the school system to purchase health-related equipment, such as stethoscopes and thermometers.

"We're just waiting for the other shoe to drop."

— Supt. Edward Malvey

Malvey said another detrimental aspect to the cutbacks is the school department will now have to put its health improvement plans on hold

"The rug was pulled out from underneath us," he said.

Karen Murphy, the school nurse leader, said the cutbacks are coming at a terrible time.

"We are probably going to have to eliminate two positions and with the amount of health issues we are facing, that would be bad," she said.

Murphy said she is concerned with less faculty, the remaining staff is spread too thin in the event of a medical emergency. "Teachers are not all that comfortable treating children and the nurses provide support in those situations," Murphy said.

Currently, there are three full-time nurses, one part-time nurse and a full-time health aide in the school system. The nurses screen and compile data for all the students regarding their height, weight, and response to sensory testing, such as for hearing and eyesight. The nurses also administer medication with a physician's approval and written permission from the parents.

Murphy said the grant has paid dividends in allowing the schools to computerize all of the students' records.

"Computerizing the records took a phenomenal amount of time and energy. We have to report any time a student visits us," she said.

Malvey is concerned about the matter. "This is a big loss because now the school system is going to fall back into the status quo," he said. "We can still cover all the medical needs for the students but it limits us as to what we can do."

Selectmen approve St. Stephen's plans

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The village improvement plans for St. Stephen's sidewalk got the go-ahead Tuesday night from selectmen.

The plans will now be sent to MassHighway which reviews them, and sends them back with either its seal of approval or suggestions for improvements.

The plans were approved by a 4-1 margin with Ronnie McMorris dissenting. She felt if a curb was put in, the proposed two feet added to the road would not be sufficient.

"Two feet will not be enough," she said.

McMorris said drivers take advantage of the low curb which allows them to better negotiate the tight quarters by driving on it. With a defined curb and the road expanded only two-feet, she felt the drivers will not have that luxury.

Town Manager Mark Haddad disagreed.

"Two-feet is plenty of room for cars to get by," he said.

Dean Rizzo, the executive director of the Cohasset Revitalization Corporation, knows residents are concerned about the possible ledge blasting but said it may not come to explosives.

"One scenario we're looking at is drilling holes into the ledge, filling it with a certain type of material — then overnight it expands, cracking the ledge."

He emphasized this process breaks the ledge at the fault lines, maintaining the natural integrity of the area.

Overall, the selectmen were enthused with the project.

Rizzo said he will ask MassHighway to let the town procure its own contractor.

"This is an ideal project to hand over to the town," he said.

Normally, MassHighway secures the bids and contractors itself but has been allowing towns to take more of a pro-active stance especially in the case of smaller improvements, like this one.

Rizzo said the plans could receive approval by the end of the spring. He said it will take a couple of months for MassHighway to review the plans and render a decision.

There will be public hearings in January or February for residents to decide on the type of material to be used for the sidewalks and the type of light fixtures to be installed on the street.

The St. Stephen's sidewalk, which is being paid for through a state grant, would be the first part of the village revitalization project to see construction.

Keeping an eye on Cohasset's health

opening from then Cohasset Board of Health member Barbara Kern at a conference of the Massachusetts Association of Health Boards. He applied for the Cohasset post, accepted the subsequent offer, and after about a year of commuting, moved his family to Scituate.

His military experience as chief of veterinary services and preventive medicine provided Godzik with a background related to his new public health duties. Godzik, who completed his undergraduate degree at Pennsylvania State University, was awarded a direct commission in the Army after graduating from the University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School in 1961.

The main function of veterinary services in the military is food protection and Godzik was charged with inspection of food procurement facilities for the Army and quality assurance work. Veterinary services also dealt with military dogs and taking care of pets as time would allow, including conducting rabies clinics and installing quarantine facilities for animals involved in a biting incident.

Although his term as an elected member of the Board of Health in Pepperill afforded Godzik the chance to work with state regulations – nothing could have prepared him for Title 5, which became law in 1995.

"Not only Title 5 but there are so many regulatory things that have changed the scope of local public health in the state," he says.

But Title 5, especially in Cohasset — known for its unfriendly ledge when it comes to septic systems — has been a particular challenge. Conducting percolation tests, which involve examining and classifying soils to determine where the water table is, can take a few hours to an entire workday.

"In the past, septic systems were considered a temporary solution until the sewer came," Godzik said. "But when the (state) sewer money dried up 10 to 12 years ago, we realized septic systems were here to stay and needed to be sited, constructed and maintained in a better way than they were before."

[Cohasset, which is under a court order from the state to solve its wastewater woes and is adding upwards of 1,200 homes to its newly expanded sewer treatment plant, cannot extend sewer to entire town due to the exorbitant cost.]

Other changes in public health regulations over the past few years are those that govern body art (tattoos), the suntan business, and beaches including testing for harmful bacteria. The state adopted the federal food code last year for food establishments which has added considerable paperwork to the restaurant inspection process, Godzik said.

Health officers also keep track of communicable diseases in town, such as Hepatitis A, and follow up with the patient to find out whom they may have been in contact with.

The Cohasset Health Department, which employs public health nurse Judy Fitzsimmons, also promotes health and healthy lifestyles with its annual health fair and periodic programs such as one recently conducted on food allergies. Future plans include conducting cholesterol screenings for the 18-25 year-old bracket, considered to be at risk for unhealthy levels of cholesterol, a contributing factor to heart disease.

Looking ahead, Godzik sees the increasing threat of diseases, such as the West Nile Virus which is transmitted by mosquitoes and can be dangerous to humans, as "emerging disaster." "With global warming, we'll see more diseases in the Northern Hemisphere that we haven't seen before," he said.

A widower, Godzik, 66, plans to retire next year and spend more time travelling and visiting his four children and six grandchildren.

As he readies for retirement, he hopes the younger generation will be attracted to the public health field and bemoans the lack of funding for public health at the state level.

"Environmental science graduates can get a good bit more (salary) in the private sector," Godzik said. But, he says the job provides plenty of challenges and a lot of variety for those wanting fulfilling work.

"Some think the health department, especially in smaller towns, only deals with septic systems and that's it. But the gamut is much greater – there's a wide spectrum of things to do."

Steve Bobo, chairman of the Board of Health, thinks Godzik will be hard to replace.

"Joe is a real gentleman with an encyclopedic knowledge about the health field, and one of the best practitioners of the scientific method I've ever known," he said.

Local high school students named to 'Who's Who'

'TIS THE SEASON....

Hello Cohasset. I hope that all of the fairs and holiday celebrations are starting to get you into the mood for this holiday season. The weather is wonderful, the lights and decorations are being placed all around and the "man in the big, red suit" has been spotted at locations all over. 'Tis the season....

ON STAGE

Cassandra Cardelle is dancing in "The Nutcracker."

Cassandra Cardelle of Cohasset is performing in the annual performances of "The Nutcracker" running from Nov. 23-Dec. 30 at the Wang Center. Cassandra is dancing to the role of Polichinelle and has been a student at Boston Ballet for seven years. The tickets for this enchanting holiday performance can be purchased by calling Telecharge at (800)447-7400 or in person at The Wang Theatre Box Office, 270 Tremont St., Boston.

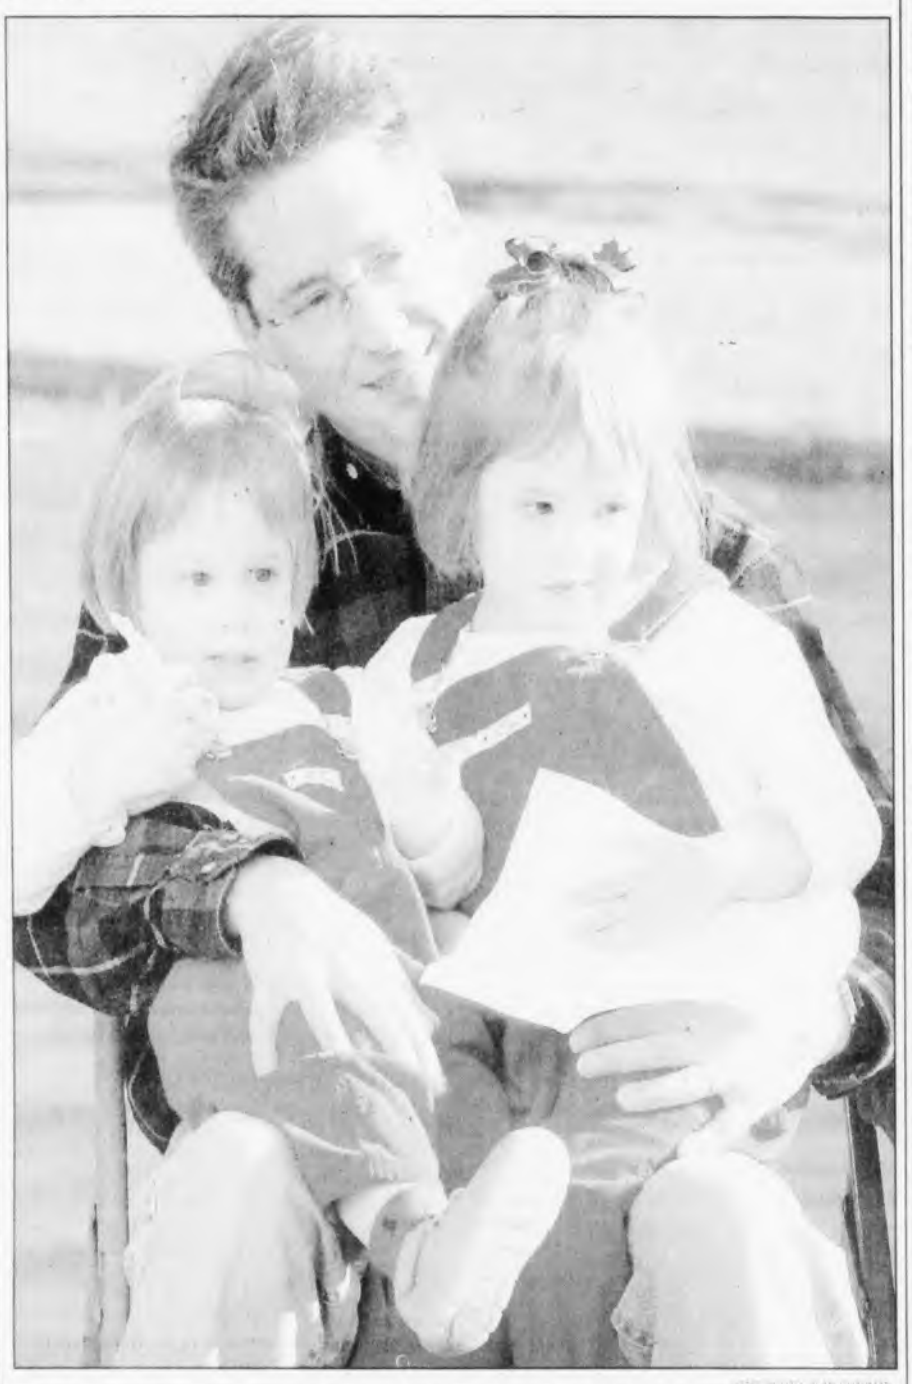
WHO'S WHO

Many local students were recently named to the 35th Annual Edition of "Who's Who Among American High School Students, 2000-2001." The students from Cohasset are: Catherine Bosworth, Kelly Devine, Amy Devlin, Jenna E. Fegreus, Cara Foley, Katherine Grimm, Martha Henderson, John Hertig, John Hussey, David Ingber, Kristen Keating, Dan Littauer, Megan McCain, Karen McMorris, Anna-Jane Murphy, Robinson Murphy, Skyler Ralston, Amanda Watts, Kristen Watts and Nancy Winters. Congratulations to all of you, this is quite an honor.

SENIOR FUN

The Cohasset Elder Affairs has some wonderful upcoming events to let you know about. On Friday, Dec. 7, a trip is happening to the Wayside Inn. The cost for this is $5 round trip to Sudbury. Lunch is on your own. On Friday, Dec. 14, a minimum of 10 people is needed to go see Salem's House of Seven Gables. The cost for ticket and transportation is $10.

The Cohasset Elder Affairs is holding a wonderful Open House at the Cohasset Senior Center on Dec. 14 from 11 a.m.-2 p.m. This program is a way for the entire community to come and see what the Senior Center has to offer to elders in our town. Refreshments will be served, entertainment will be featured and it will definitely bring some holiday cheer! The Cohasset Senior Center is at the South Shore Community Center and everyone in town, young and old should try to get in on this day and see the opportunities that are here for the elders in our town.



NDA HONOR ROLL

Notre Dame Academy in Hingham announced the Honor Roll for term 1 and several Cohasset students were on it. Brittany Carroll, '02, and Martha Henderson, '03, both received First Honors. Jacqueline Chase, '05, Laura Kondrat, '03, Rachel McElroy, '03, and Katherine Roche, '03, all were named to the Principal's List and Caroline Henderson, '05, Anna-Jane Murphy, '03, and Krista Nicynski, '03, earned Second Honors. Great Job to all of you!

ALL-CONFERENCE

Thomas Allen, a senior cornerback attending Springfield College, earned second-team all-conference accolades for the second-straight season. He led the Pride and finished second in the conference with five interceptions and ranked fourth on the team with 55 tackles in 2001. Thomas earned the conference's defensive player-of-the-week award on Nov. 12 after tying a school record with three interceptions at Union to become the fifth player in Pride history to accomplish the feat. This is awesome news Thomas, keep up that fantastic playing.

MARATHON RUNNER

Charles and Andrea Santoro are very proud parents indeed. Their daughter, Nichole, is a recent graduate of Salve Regina in Rhode Island. Some of you may know that Nichole is currently a long-term substitute at the Deer Hill School. Nichole ran in the Ocean State Marathon in Rhode Island on Oct. 7 and did so well that she is now qualified for the Boston Marathon. Guess what else? This was Nichole's first marathon she had ever run! Congratulations Nichole on this unbelievable accomplishment!

CHURCH RECEPTION

A reception is being held on Sunday, Dec. 9 from 11:30a.m.-1 p.m. at the Beechwood Congregational Church to welcome Rev. Doug Fish and his wife Barbara to the church. The community is invited to this reception and a warm and heartfelt welcome is being sent to both the Fishes.

That is it for this week. Please send in all your photos, news and events to me no later than 9:00 a.m. on Monday mornings. All photos should be labeled and dropped off at Cohasset News in an envelope marked, "Around Town Cohasset."

Art boosters seek support

By Olga Nohe
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset Arts Boosters have been helping the students of the arts at Cohasset High School since 1985. We are an organization of parents and friends of the arts who want to see that our students have the support they need to showcase their talents. We provide that support in two very important ways. The fist, of course, is financial. A fund-raising letter has been sent this week to all parents with students at the high school asking for a donation. We will use this money to pay for such expenses as membership fees for the state drama festival; art and photography supplies for special projects which are not provided for in the school budget; the publication of the student literary and arts magazine, "Whispers and Shadows;" and two scholarships to graduating seniors and one undergraduate study award. We have been fortunate to be one of the recipients of a grant from the South Shore Music Circus which helps a great deal in funding some of the above projects.

The second way we provide support is through planning and hosting several events during the year which provide a venue for our talented singers, musicians and artists to perform in front of an audience. The cabaret will be held in January and pops night will be in May. If you would like to help with one of these events, please call Donna O'Donnell, Arts Boosters President, at 781-383-6113.

If arts education is something you feel is important and would like to show your support by making a donation, you may send your tax-deductible donations, payable to Cohasset Arts Boosters Club, to:

Olga Nohe, Treasurer, 21 Whitney Woods Lane, Cohasset 02025.

Buttonwood book angels

In the spirit of holiday sharing, Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset and Buttonwood For Kids in Hingham invite all to participate in our Book Angel program. The Book Angel Program that will run through Sunday Dec. 16, is a program to help put books into the hands of disadvantaged children. The Book Angel takes an angel from the tree and purchases a book for that child that is close to the interest highlighted on the angel. Buttonwood will then discount that book 15 percent and deliver the book to that child's sponsoring group. Together, Buttonwood Books &Toy and Buttonwood For Kids support Wellspring in Hull, The Friends of the Homeless in Weymouth, The Hingham Interfaith Food Pantry, the Mary Martha Learning Center, the Blue Hills Healthy Families Program and the South Shore Educational Collaborative Teen Parent Program.

This is the eighth year Buttonwood has sponsored the Book Angel program. For more information call 781-383-2665 (Cohasset) and 781-749-2665 (Hingham).

Garage rentals are available

Garage rental is $75 for two hour blocks of time. However, there is some leniency on time constraints, allowing set up and clean up time, before and after the function.

While renters may utilize the games, electronic equipment, pool table, ping pong table, TVs, etc., they will be charged for additional fee for damages to any equipment or the facility.

A $50 security deposit check will be required prior to the function. This check will not be cashed unless there are damages due to use. Otherwise the check will be returned or destroyed after your function.

Trash and/or garbage must be removed before leaving the garage.

Call the recreation department at 781-383-4109for more information.

Cohasset welcomes the Allard family

Family jets into the simpler life

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

What do Michael Jordan, Kobe Bryant, Nomar Garciaparra, Pedro Martinez and the residents of Cohasset have in common? Bill Allard.

Allard, who is chairman of Marquis Jet Partners, moved with his family from Washington, D.C. to 231 S. Main St. at the beginning of the summer.

The former CEO of SFX Sports Group, one of the world's premier sports marketing and management agencies, said it was an easy decision to move to Cohasset.

"After a while, you realize the athletes are just regular people."

— Bill Allard, on heading a sports agency

"We just wanted to simplify our life," he said. "We looked at different places but when we came to Cohasset we just fell in love with it."

When Allard was in charge of SFX Sports Group he had an opportunity to hobnob with some of the industry's most recognizable stars. He played golf with Michael Jordan and after negotiating a deal between Tag Heuer watches (a high-end watch company) and Grant Hill, received watches from him.

"After a while, you realize the athletes are just regular people. Once you sit down with them they are actually pretty grounded and have the same concerns and anxieties as everyone else," he said.

SFX Sports Group represents more than 1,000 athletes and is in charge of their contract negotiations and endorsement deals. Under Allard's direction, the Sports Group developed and produced internationally televised sporting events, and supported the sports marketing activities of numerous Fortune 500 companies. The company also produces a wide range of sports-theme television series and feature films, such as "Arliss" and "Varsity Blues."

From left, the Allards: Christian, Lindsey, Charlotte, Bill and Libby, at their South Main Street home. Both Bill and Libby grew up in Massachusetts and are happy to be home again.

Allard has now started Marquis Jet Partners, which offers private jet service to those who can afford the hefty price tag. Rather than having a company or individual sign a five-year contract with his company, which is what similar companies do, he sells 25-hour "debit cards" for flight hours that can be redeemed whenever a client wishes. He currently has 35 people, who work for the company, and approximately 40 clients. The price for the "debit card" can range from $109,000 to $255,000.

"A lot of athletes, entertainers, and Wall Street investors use our service," he said. "It is a great alternative to flying commercially and since Sept. 11 has become a much more viable industry."

Both Allard and his wife, Libby, grew up in Massachusetts and wanted to move back to be closer to family. Having 13 people over for Thanksgiving was "a blessing," the couple said.

Allard said Cohasset's school system was another reason they chose the town. He has three children — Lindsey, who is in grade 4, Christian who is in grade 2, and Charlotte who is in pre-school — all of whom are enjoying their time in the classroom.

"It's a really great school to be in and there are so many friendly people," Christian said.

Allard said he wants to become involved with the community and is already coaching basketball for the Cohasset Youth Basketball Association. Both he and his wife are involved with St. Anthony's Church and look forward to participating in community events in the future.

Allard donates some of his time to charity and serves on the board of directors for the Special Olympics. "I wanted to pick one charity and commit myself to it," he said. "I felt by using the relationships I have formed with athletes, I could add a lot to the Special Olympics."

Libby said she has been volunteering with the school system and is starting to meet people around town. "There is such a sense of realness and community to the town," she said. "Everybody has been so welcoming." She added she enjoys sailing and hopes to become involved with a local sailing program.

Allard has appeared in the "Top 100 Most Powerful People in Sports" in The Sporting News for the last three years and was listed by the international paper, The Guardian, as one of the 50 most powerful people in the world of sports. He graduated from Babson College with a bachelor of science in business, and received his masters of business administration from Harvard.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Volume III

What have you been doing the last 50 years? If you've been lucky enough to spend the past half-century right here in town, then you'll enjoy reading the 416-page "Narrative History of Cohasset, Volume III" as a reflection of those years. If you're a "newcomer" then the book will fill you in on all you've missed and provide insight as to how Cohasset got to this point.

If you act quickly, you can order the new town history at the discounted price of $27.50 until Jan. 1, after that the price goes up to $32. Checks should be made payable to the Town of Cohasset and sent attention Julia Gleason, 28 Stockbridge St., Cohasset 02025.

Here at the Mariner, we cherish our copies of Volumes I and II, and look forward to the latest installment. The first two volumes of the town history have provided us with hours of reading enjoyment and valuable background for stories over the years. It was through Bertram J. Pratt, who authored Volume II chronicling the first half of the 20th century, that we learned about the summer Humphrey Bogart graced the stage at Cohasset Town Hall, as a mainstay of Alexander Dean's resident acting company in 1934. Dean, who was then the head of the drama department at Yale University, tried new Broadway plays to make Cohasset a successful part of the "Straw Hat" circuit.

Pratt's research also takes us through two World Wars and Cohasset's growth from a summer colony into a 20th century town.

"Although this work treats only a brief interlude in the life of Cohasset," writes Pratt in the author's preface, "the period is one during which great changes took place, more perhaps than during any other similar span.

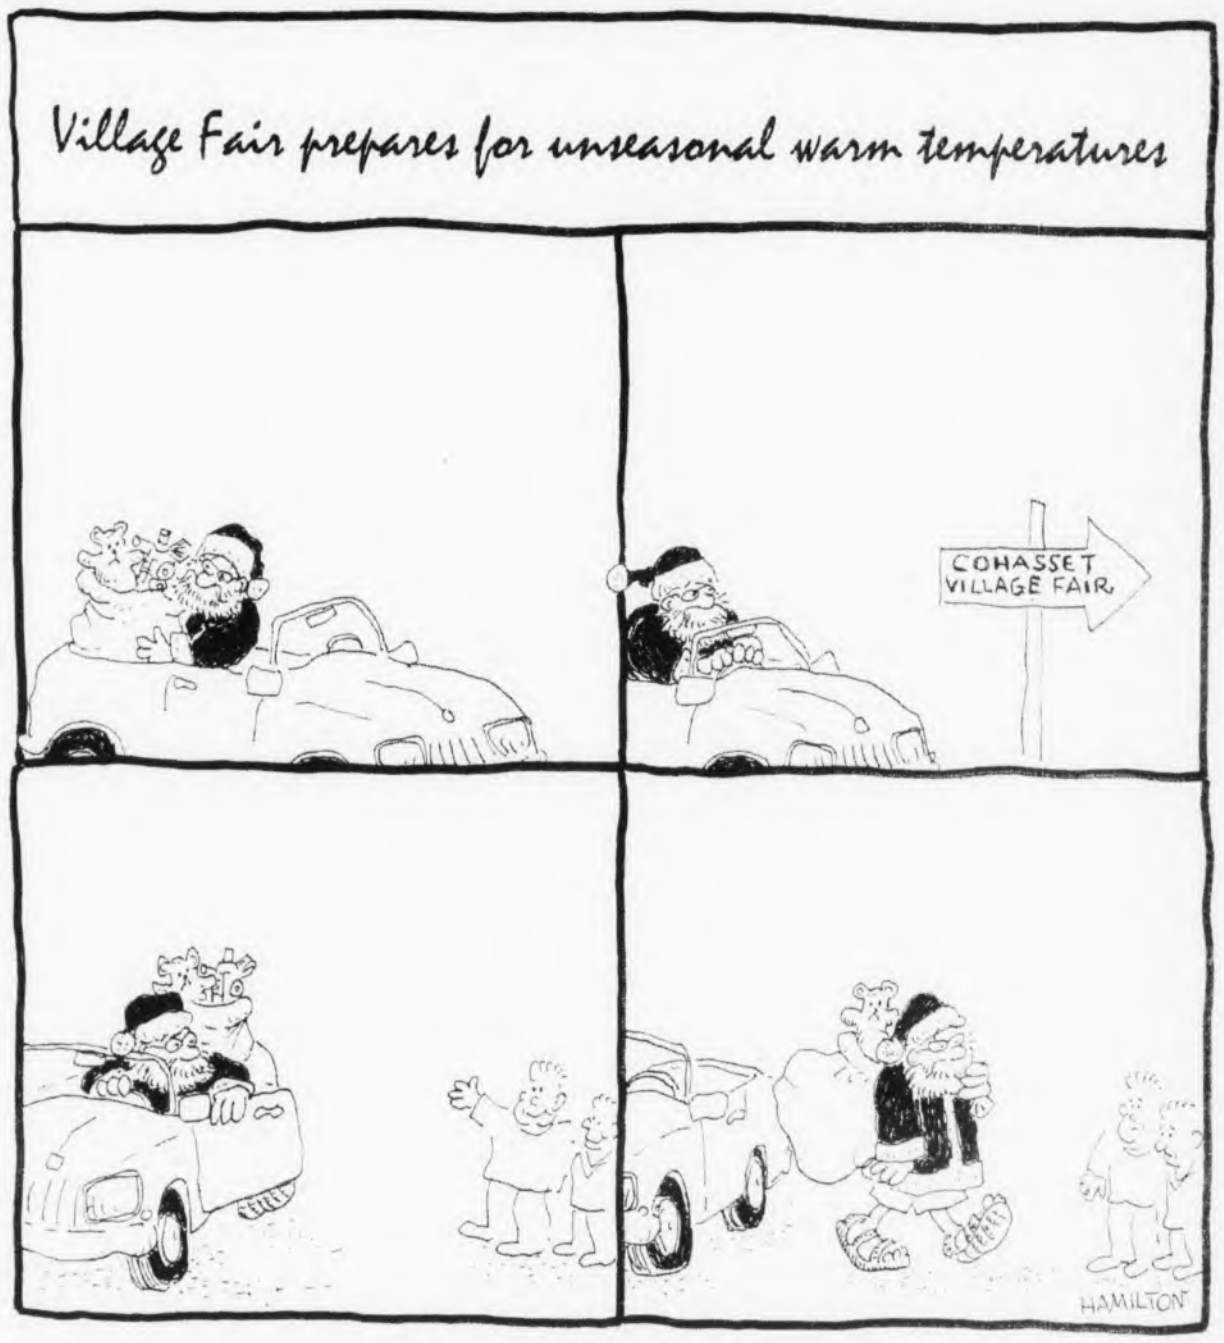
"The story of these changes parallels the advance of the country as a whole, and in this volume a thread of national events has been woven as a backdrop against which to paint the local scene."

Some 50 years earlier, E. Victor Bigelow penned "A Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset" that takes us from the beginning of the town's geological existence when the town's ledge, soil and vegetation were formed to John Smith's discovery of the harbor in 1614, to Cohasset's separation from Hingham, to the Revolutionary War, the Civil War and beyond.

With little in historical records, the Rev. Bigelow describes how difficult was the task of compiling the town history.

"No pathway into the mass of historical documents has ever been opened," he writes in the preface. "In fact, only the meagerest collection of manuscripts could be found in the town's archives, while private diaries and stories and other such memorial were almost wholly wanting."

Nevertheless, Bigelow's 540 pages provide us with a wonderful window into the past.



One of our favorite chapters describes the old-fashioned method of "riding and tieing," which depicts one neighbor helping another. Back in the early 1700s when Cohasset was still part of Hingham, it was difficult to go the four or five miles to the Old Ship meetinghouse. Not everyone owned a horse.

"The first man, and his wife or daughter upon the pillion behind him, rode along the crooked old way towards Hingham about half the distance; then dismounting, they tied their steed to a tree at the roadside and walked on to the meetinghouse. Meanwhile the second couple, wearied by their long walk, reached the horse, and mounting him, rested upon his back while the animal finished the journey to the church.

"Thus the four came together for their weekly refreshment in the house of God."

What wonderful stories lie inside the pages of Volume III, authored by Jacqueline Dormitzer? We can only guess – but know a lot has happened the past 50 years. And no doubt 50 years from now, an editor of the local paper will be talking about Volume IV with equal anticipation.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Making a difference

TO THE EDITOR:

He doesn't wear a mask or even a red cape, but he is a hero in my eyes nonetheless. Several times a week I notice a man jogging along the Jerusalem Road/Straits Pond/Forest Avenue area with garbage bag in tow. He stops his running long enough to pick up rubbish which has routinely been strewn along the roadside and in front of neighbors' homes. Anyone who has jogged carrying anything more than a water bottle can appreciate the magnitude of his efforts.

I started this letter as a way of saying "thank you" to him and to ask you, the citizens of our breathtaking and fortunate community to do two things:

1. Take the time to smile and thank him the next time you spot him running by, and

2. Look beyond your own immediate back yard and help remove the litter. If everyone were to simply pick up the trash that is found in front of their property line I think we would all perceive a palpable difference.

Given the ongoing climate of world events and the consequential feeling of loss of control, might this not be one way of taking charge and preserving what is ours and so too learn an important lesson from the detriments of isolationist thinking? Thank you sir. We are all indebted to you.

Supporting the Jingle Bell Walk

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the South Shore Community Center, we would like to express our appreciation to the many merchants and volunteers who lent a helping hand at our seventh Jingle Bell Walk.

The bells were ringing from St. Stephen Church thanks to Mary Kennedy. Santa and Mrs. Claus and many assistant elves arrived at Government Island by the traditional fishing boat, thanks to Capt. Kelly. The whole crowd then paraded excitedly toward the center in great holiday spirits.

Congratulations to the winners of the Turkey Trot, and all the children who joined in. Everyone had a great time with many, many youngsters participating in the fun. The Grand Winners were: in the 3-and-4-year-old class, Matthew Froio and Kristen Timothy; in the 5-to-7-year-old class, Joseph Admirard and Jamie Timothy; and in the 8-to-10-year-old class, Connor Admirard and Christine Corner.

We would like to express our sincere thanks to the following who have contributed to our seventh Jingle Bell Walk:

Patron Sponsors: Abington Savings Bank, Hingham Institution for Savings and Rockland Trust.

Sponsors: Fitness First, Adrian Morris Salon and Hunneman Hallmark Real Estate.

Friend of the Center: Sovereign Bank, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, Dependable Cleaners, Jack Conway Real Estate.

We would like to thank the following Santa's Helpers for their contributions: Nobles, Cohasset Food Mart, Cohasset Lobster Pound Inc., Victoria's Pizza, Pat the Barber, Good Sport, Carousel Antiques, Tedeschi's, Atlantic Valuation Group, Cohasset News, French Memories, Goodale Insurance, Heads 'n Tails, The Silver Spoon, Hub Shipping, Coca Cola, Kimball's by the Sea, Nuthin' More Natural, Farsh Oriental Rug, RGP Pizza, The Village Butcher, Ports & Co., Walgreen's and Stop and Shop.

Also, Donna Green, Artist, Red Lion Inn, Buttonwood Books, Citgo Gas Station, Strawberry Parfait, South Shore Arts Center, Heman Salon, Barefoot Rugs & Country Furnishings, Cards & Shards, Cohasset Hardware, Flemings, Atlantica, Atlantic Bagel, Bernard's, Dunkin' Donuts, Curtis Liquors, Cohasset Pizza House, Papa Gino's, Hancock Paint, Maggie's Corner, Village Wine & Spirits, Shaw's, King Jewelers and Springbrook Toys.

We would like to thank all our volunteers. A special thanks to Linda Bolster and Ellen Nesbitt of the Newcomers Club for recruiting volunteers; the Girl Scouts, the McElroy family, Melinda Murray for the goodie bags; The Rusty Skippers Marching Band, Cohasset Fire Dept., Cohasset Police Dept., Santa and Mrs. Claus and all their helpers; Mark Haddad; Kit Coffey; and First

COHASSET CARES

Nice and not-so-nice people

By Allan MacDonald
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

I would guess just seeing the phrase "nice people" 'Conjures up, in most Americans, an equal mix of sincerity as a reaction on one hand and sarcasm as a reaction on the other.

"Nice" is a word discouraged in English class because of course it lacks specificity. But in American society the word is nevertheless very useful, very common, and very comforting [as long as it's not used sarcastically]. Despite being generic, it's a word most of us understand.

Cohasset has so many nice people—people who, that is, offer greetings [say hello when met walking], people who train their children to be courteous [hold the door please], people who volunteer to help readily.

Like every town we also have some people who are not so nice, and I daresay they stand out here because of the town's affluence and education. I think of the rudely impatient fellow behind me one morning downtown as I prepped my coffee. He was pretty smart to say to his buddy that probably he was going to have ice coffee.

Thoughts about nice people filled my mind while driving home from the RTF the other day. The RTF employees had told me about the Veterans Day uproar when some townspeople became outraged because they had not bothered to check to see if the facility would be open and couldn't bear taking their recyclable and trash back home for another day when the RTF would be legally open for business. Not content with dumping their stuff indiscriminately, these people foul-mouthed the town employees so badly that when police arrived, arrest had to be threatened.

I wonder if one of these troublemakers was the guy I observed at the RTF several months ago who couldn't get his way, couldn't follow the rules, and pulled a nasty tantrum.

I wonder if these troublemakers are parents of the "Halloween terrorists of several years ago.

We are observing worldwide that for some people it's more important to be arrogant than to be nice. You just wonder what makes them tick. You just wonder how they developed their values. You just wonder how they feel they are of benefit to the world.

On a much nicer note—the new "Cohasset Cares" canvas shopping [or whatever] bags are in and ready for the perfect Christmas presents. The bags are only $10 and are 12 x 16 inches, natural color, imprinted with "Cohasset Cares" and "Reduce-Reuse-Recycle " around the globe with a tree, in green. Available from Beth at 200 N. Main St. 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, cash only please. This item facilitated through Troop 28, BSA, which has been involved in so many other improvements to the RTF. See you next time.

Radio program for blind in jeopardy

State budget cuts could affect station

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

It has become a waiting game for a well-known outreach program.

The Talking Information Center (TIC) in Marshfield recently received notice from the state that its funding will be significantly reduced because of looming state budget cuts. The station, located next to WATD, relies heavily on state funds.

TIC was founded in the late 1970s with the mission of providing blind and other vision-impaired people with a means of getting information. Since it was founded, hundreds of volunteers have been donating their time to read newspapers, magazines and books on the air.

TIC executive director Ron Bersani said the painful part of the whole thing is waiting to see how big of a budget will actually come down.

"It's so hard to say," he said. "Everyone in my position is in the same boat — we don't have any information to go on. We probably won't know what will happen for another 10 days." Bersani added most of TIC's funding comes from the state Commission for the Blind.

"The people over there have been great with keeping me informed," Bersani said. "They've been very up front."

Bersani said the situation is even worse than it seems. Not only is he expecting a major fund reduction this year, but he is anticipating the next fiscal year will bring even more cuts.

"All bets are off in terms of how bad the economy is," he said. Bersani added he just does not know what to expect from the budget this year. It could be a five-percent cut or even a 15-percent cut. In any case, he expects to have to cut some of the station's new projects like audio streaming, archiving and Internet programming. One thing he knows won't stop will be the dedication of the TIC volunteers.

"We going to try our hardest not to cut positions," he said. "But we may have to reduce some of the funding to our affiliates." He added there are other TIC locations in Worcester, Springfield, Lowell, Framingham, Falmouth and Dalton. He is not sure how much funding to the affiliates will be reduced, but he is concerned about it.

"If there are budget cuts, I don't see the TIC denying any service," said WATD founder and director Ed Perry. "Over the course of just one week, there are a 100 different people who donate their time on the air. The state's money really just creates infrastructure. To shut down (the TIC's) services would just be over-discrimination against a particular group of people. A great many of us will eventually lose the ability to read the printed page."

This is not the first time the TIC has been in such a bind. In 1989, the TIC's budget was cut by 25 percent, but it managed to weather the storm.

"That was a different time with different circumstances," Bersani said.

Bersani said the TIC needs help from surrounding communities through donations and additional volunteers. At first, he was concerned that he wouldn't get any help from the community because of everyone giving to Sept. 11 tragedies.

"I think Sept. 11 only made people more generous," he said. "It caused people to look at life and say 'Wow, it's over in a flash.'" He added the station has already received $1,000 in donations.

Bersani said in March, the TIC will hold its annual radio auction, the biggest fundraiser of the year. He said when that comes, it will be a pivotal drive for the TIC.

But right now, the only thing Bersani can do is wait.

"It's been brutal—this is like living under the guillotine," he said. "It's hard to plan because we don't know what to plan for."

To make a donation, send checks to the TIC, P.O. box 519, Marshfield, MA 02050.

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Is your mind as boggled as mine over the figures that are being tossed around for the sale of the Boston Red Sox?

I've been told that there are people willing to spend between $350 million and $400 million for the right to squander another $12 million a year on Pedro Martinez and more than that on Manny Ramirez — and perhaps another million on the bat boy, for all I know.

In fact, buying the Red Sox seems to be such a popular pastime that multimillionaires are forming teams of money-men to contest for an opportunity to charge you and me a fee just to watch lesser millionaires lose out to the Yankees as they have for the past 83 years.

The leading contender is a group headed by the former San Diego Padres owner, who hired Roseanne Barr to screech the national anthem before a game.

The last time Our Olde Towne Team was sold, a man named Tom Yawkey reached for his checkbook, scribbled a marker for $1.5 million and took the team home in his pickup truck. Yes, that was a tidy sum in the 1930s and, yes, I've heard of inflation, but . . . come on!

For $350 to $400 million I could buy a couple of small Third World countries and have enough left over to put a down payment on a third.

Even that doesn't get you the whole club, only the 54 per cent which is owned by the Yawkey Trust as well as an 80 per cent interest in the New England Sports Channel (NESN, that's Channel 63 on my TV set) and 12 acres of land around Fenway Park, soon to be torn down.

Bids on the Sox closed last week with at least six bidders still in contention. You could tell because there were six Brink's trucks drawn up before the law offices of Bingham Dana, which will probably make more out of the deal as Red Sox attorneys than the Yawkey Trust.

The leading contender, I am told, is a group headed by former San Diego Padres owner Tom Werner, who once hired Roseanne Barr to screech the national anthem before a game, and Les Otten, who once accomplished the difficult task of running a ski area in Maine into the ground.

They're supported by former Baltimore Orioles president Larry Lucchino, former Florida Marlins owner John Henry, former Maine Sen. George Mitchell and, get this, the New York Times, which also owns the Boston Globe, whose publisher once owned the Red Sox outright.

Another bidder is Charles Dolan, chairman of Cablevision, which owns Madison Square Garden, the New York Knicks and the New York Rangers. His brother, Lawrence, owns the Cleveland Indians. One of his local advisors is Steve Tocco, former director of Massport.

Then there's Jeremy Jacobs, the penny-pinching owner of the Boston Bruins and the Fleet Center; Aramark Corp., which holds the concession rights at Fenway Park; Frank McCourt, who owns enough land in Southie to build a new waterfront ball park; Miles Prentice, a lawyer who struck out in his try to buy three other baseball teams.

And, last but by no means least, concessionaire Joe O'Donnell and developer Steve Karp, who list as a principal investors one Craig Stapleton, the former co-owner, with President George 43 Bush, of the Texas Rangers and is himself a cousin of the Pres by marriage.

A long time ago, when the hapless St. Louis Browns were sold, the writer John Lardner recalled that the sale "surprised a lot of people because they didn't know the Browns were owned."

They'll know that the Red Sox are owned. It's by whom that will boggle the minds.

Light a star on the memory tree

Remembering, in a tangible way will enrich the holiday season, the joy our loved ones have shared with us in seasons past.

Commemorative lights will shine on the Memory Tree on the lawn of South Shore Community Center, as well as a star placed on the tree in the lobby with the name(s) of loved one(s). LIBRARY CORNER

Children's programs

You better watch out, because Santa Claus is appearing again at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Sunday, Dec. 9 from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. for all children or adults who would like to visit with him.

Traditional Christmas stories will be told by Santa and his "Elf" who may or may not wear tights this year. There will be a departing treat for all good boys and girls. Join us for this holiday visit.

More at the children's room

Look for the complete set of Harry Potter books on tape which are now available at the. library. The movie has made these books so popular and now you can take them home and listen to them at your leisure.

While you're at it, check out the books on tape selection for your holiday travels and general reading. The library has some wonderful choices for youngsters this holiday season.

TO THE EDITOR:

A belated, yet no less heartfelt thank you to Joe Campbell and the Atlantica staff for accommodating this past June's Grade 6 Deer Hill Promotion Luncheon.

It is not everyone who would have taken the chance on a group as large as ours. The setting was beautiful and the service was efficient and most courteous. How very lucky we are!

Fighting mad over school building cuts

tion from the state. Cohasset originally expected to start receiving 60 percent of the $40 million loan the town is using to build the schools by 2005. But, with current setbacks, the town may not see the funds until 2010.

For those five years, taxpayers would be expected to cover the state's portion of the loan payments, at an average rate of $875 per year (based on a house valued at $550,000) until the state reimbursement kicks in.

Town Manager Mark Haddad, feeling the cutbacks will be remedied, said he does not think the problem will extend far into the decade.

"This is not a problem for the next 10 years," he said. "This is an 2003, 2004 problem."

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, said reining in the funding is an internal Department of Education decision and not a legislative one. Legislature appropriates a certain amount of money to the DOE and from then on, is up to the DOE to allocate the money to different areas.

"Whatever they are trying to do is based on their budget predictions," he said.

Bradley and Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, sent a letter to state Education Commissioner David Driscoll, asking him not to hold up payments to communities whose projects are already in the pipeline. He also said they suggested instead of cutting back the funding for communities which are expecting the money — that the DOE curb the authorization of new projects.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris agreed saying, "the DOE should have reined in the budget before it gave authorization to all the projects. Now we are left in the dark."

Both Bradley and Malvey felt this may be a test, or exercise, that the DOE is putting communities through. They speculated it may be an attempt to sneak a budget cut past the towns. The two men felt if the town and citizens protest enough the situation could be remedied.

"The people that scream the loudest have the largest impact," Bradley said.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed and Bradley thanked town finance director Michael Buckley for bringing the issue to the forefront before most communities knew about the problem.

"There are some legislators who do not even know what is going on," Bradley said. "But Cohasset is a smart community and is always on top of the issues."

Cohasset will be taking the lead in fighting this cause and hopes to be joined by neighboring communities, such as Hull, Hingham, Norwell and Scituate.

Haddad said he would like to know before Christmas on the status of the cutbacks and has asked Hedlund and Bradley to schedule a meeting with the town, DOE and Driscoll, and Governor Jane Swift to discuss the community's concerns.

Bradley said this is not a "wait till next week" issue and he will be working daily on trying to get the problem resolved.

Gallery artists

Janet Artin Kingan, Hingham; Marion Carlson, Abington; Nancy Colella, Norwell; Susan Gallagher, Scituate; Maria Lakhman, Malden; Lisa Marder, Cohasset; Margaret McWethy, Hingham; Nicholas Phakos, Milton; and Diane Sepela, Duxbury were recently selected as Gallery Artists of the South Shore Art Center.

Gallery Artists are juried into a special category of Art Center membership. A Gallery Artist is a professional artist, consistently working in his or her field, with a body of work large enough to meet a frequent showing schedule. Gallery Artists exhibit in group shows in the Art Center's Dillon Gallery, and in solo shows at satellite locations. Satellite gallery locations include the Landmark Building in Boston, the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham, and the Paul Pratt Library in Cohasset.

For information, call 781-383-2787 or visit their Web site at www.ssac.org.

emphasized while the center is aimed at children ages two through eight is will be a place that people of all ages can enjoy.

Voters at the special Town Meeting in October 2000 approved leasing the Osgood wing to the discovery center. The Paul Pratt Library Trustees approached Roy earlier that year about using the Osgood space, after hearing her express interest in developing a center to enhance childhood development on the South Shore. Plans were subsequently submitted to selectmen and a Request for Proposal was issued.

The town has offered the center a 10-year lease, for a dollar a year, until the museum is financially stable. Projections are that the museum would attract 30,000 visitors a year.

According to Patience Towle, library trustee chairman, the children's center will have 7,000 square feet of the building divided up on two floors. The library and discovery center will share parking. Towle is excited about the project.

"This is bringing something to Cohasset that is beyond the run of the mill," she said. "This has the potential to be something quite special."

Although the center is leasing the space from the town, it is a completely separate entity from the library. However, there will be an entrance to the center through the library as well as an outside entrance to the center.

Mary Larson, co-chairman on the discovery center board, said at the beginning of the new year the board will have more concrete plans for the building. She said the board will apply to foundations for grants for construction and expects to get large individual contributions..

Nominations for top Cohasset citizen sought

In keeping with an eight-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

The deadline for nominations for the 2001 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 4. Please see the nomination form on page 22. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2001 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2002.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

Homeless couple searching for housing jobs in order to support my family," Ngo said. "I worked so much I hardly ever got a chance to see them." Ngo has five children.

All of Ngo's luck ran out a little more than a year ago when he was diagnosed with Hepatitis C.

"My body couldn't work anymore," he said, adding after he stopped, the bills kept piling up. "I ended up having to sell my house and business."

He was able to collect disability money, but those funds did not even come close to covering all of his expenses.

Now, Ngo and his significant other Dao Nguyen, along with three of their young children, live on the bottom floor of the Faith Church in Hingham, a temporary home provided by the church in cooperation with the South Shore Friends of the Homeless. They found the place through local outreach organizations like the Friends, Quincy Community Action and the local welfare department. Ngo said he is happy he and his family have a place to call home, but he desperately wants to find permanent housing and he wants to go back to work.

When Ngo was first diagnosed with Hepatitis C, he said his doctor gave him medication, but it did not help. But he is looking forward to trying another new treatment for the disease sometime next week.

"If it works, I can go back to work," he said.

After Ngo sold his house in Shrewsbury, he tried looking for rentals around the South Shore, but he found rent prices in the area were not reasonable. He eventually found a place with a rent of $1,200 per month. After staying there for a number of months, he realized he couldn't afford it anymore, so the family had to leave. They had nowhere to go.

At the beginning of October, Ngo went looking for help. He visited Quincy Community Action and the welfare department. The staff at those organizations put him in touch with South Shore Friends of the Homeless director Dorothy Newell.

"Everyone was so helpful," Ngo said. He had an interview with Newell, and after that, Ngo was told that he could be helped with finding a temporary place to stay. Newell arranged it so that Ngo and his family could stay at the Faith Church, but they had to wait about 10 days until they could move in.

During that waiting period, Ngo and his family had to live in a motel located in Revere — something Ngo never wants to do again.

"I didn't like it at all," he said. "There's a lot of people there, and you don't know any of them."

The family moved into the church on Oct. 10, a day that was pretty special to Ngo for more than one reason — it was his birthday.

"I told (Newell) that it was a great birthday present for me," he said. "It was such a relief to find out that we had a place to stay. I want to say thank you to the people who helped us."

Although his life is not back to normal, Ngo said he is satisfied with his surroundings. His children go to school like everyone else and he is constantly searching for reasonable rental rates he can afford. He is also waiting to see if he will get a Section-8 voucher, which would help him along the way in affording something. But he knows even if he gets a voucher, there are waiting lists for apartments. Some of those waiting lists are booked for 15 years. Meanwhile, rental prices are increasing.

"It feels fine for me right now," Ngo said. "I don't want to have to bring my whole family to a shelter. I'm just lucky to have what I have right now, and I'm lucky to have so many good people helping me."

Ngo said his days include searching through piles of addresses and telephone numbers for permanent housing and trying to find a way to get back to work. There is no time limit on how long he can stay at the church, but he said he still has to try as hard as he can in order to find a place of his own.

HEALTH NOTES

Cleaning up Cohasset's ponds and streams

Workshop is Dec. 12

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

A public meeting and workshop will be held at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 12 at the Town Hall auditorium to report on the status of engineering evaluations relative to the proposed sewer system extension to the Little Harbor area. State DEP representatives will also report on ongoing environmental evaluations for the water resources in town. Please come if you're interested in either the sewering around Little Harbor, or the town's federally mandated plans relating to storm water for cleaning up our ponds, streams and estuaries.

According to the DEP, storm-water runoff is a major source of pollution entering our waterways. This process is called non-point source contamination. Accordingly, having addressed cleanup of major point sources of pollution such as landfills, industrial contamination, etc., the EPA has implemented regulations covering non-point source contamination. For Cohasset, non-point source or NPS pollution is mainly from surface water runoff to storm drains and catch basins which direct it to our ponds, streams and estuaries. Most contamination comes during storm events during what is known as first flush, or the first inch or so from a rain event, when accumulated surface contaminants on roadways and driveways, roofs, lawns and fields flow into the storm rains and out into the waterways.

Storm-water runoff is a major source of pollution entering our waterways.

The way the state has determined that NPS can be cleaned up by implementing a program of planning and management called TMDL (for Total Maximum Daily Loading) which issues a permit which limits the amount of NPS contamination entering our water resources. The Board of Health is sponsoring a grant request by Liz Harrington, the Town Planner, to conduct a survey of the Town's catch basins and storm drains which will form the basis for the town's efforts to clean up our various water bodies such as Little Harbor, Cohasset Cove, the Gulf, Straits, Sanctuary Lily and other ponds. This activity is an effort to stay ahead of the state and federal mandates to plan for and manage NPS contamination to our waterways.

The two major sources of pollution entering our water resources are septic systems and NPS contamination. The meeting at Town Hall on Dec. 12 will show us what the Town is doing about it.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Board of Health.

URI Executive MBA

Jill Long, Founder, MarketModels and URI Executive MBA Graduate

Why URI?
"The convenient 18-month every-other weekend schedule, the first-rate accommodations, the reputation of the URI faculty and AACSB accreditation all pointed me to the EMBA."

The impact?
The database marketing company she founded while enrolled in the URI Executive MBA has grown to 25 employees, with offices in three states. "MarketModels is a direct result of my experience in the URI Executive MBA. Whether I wound up running my own company or working for a multinational corporation, URI prepared me to succeed!"

Big kids connect with younger counterparts

Class sends students out into community

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

There are at least four students at Cohasset High School who are beginning to learn what teaching is like.

The Cohasset Recreation Department teamed up with four juniors at the high school to conduct a Movement Exploration class for children ages 4 and 5.

The program, which helps young children develop their motor skills and basic social skills, is part of an elective class that Shawna Sullivan, Sarah Dennis, Bryan Bilton and Becky Manning are taking at the high school.

"We make arts and crafts projects with them as well as playing games that focus on motor skills," Bryan said.

Jack Worley, director of the Recreation Department and supervisor of the students' project, said he sees the younger children benefiting from program.

"On one hand, it provides an outlet for social interaction and on the other hand, it encourages the growth of fine motor skills and coordination," he said.

Worley the program also aims to develop peer-group interaction for the pre-schoolers. He said the high school students have worked very hard in putting together this program.

"They have met every day for the last couple months learning how to run a program," he said. "They worked on press releases, application forms, advertising, logistics and everything one would have to know to run a successful program."

While trying to entertain up to 12 rambunctious children for 45 minutes can be very challenging, it's not all hard work.

"It's really fun to work with the kids. We have a great time out here," Shawna said.

"We make arts and crafts projects with them as well as playing games that focus on motor skills."
— Bryan Bilton, CHS junior

The students all said they enjoy being role models for the children.

"I like being in charge and having more responsibility," Shawna said. She added working with small children has made her realize she needs to be more flexible and relaxed.

Becky said it is wonderful to see the kids involved in social activities. "It's nice to see them making arts and crafts projects rather than watching TV," she said.

Sarah said while the children have a great time in the group, the parents benefit as well. "It's really nice for the parents who can go out and get things done without constantly thinking about their child."

The four juniors are running the program as a requirement for a Social Studies elective class, called "Civics and Community Service." The class aims to teach the students about the importance of getting involved with the community they live in.

"Most of the students have a really positive experience," said teacher Jack Buckley. He said instead of the students being inside the classroom they are able to get out of the building and interact with the community. "A lot of good things come from this class, it's a win-win situation."

This is the fourth time the Recreation Department worked in conjunction with students from the high school on this program, which is being conducted for the first time in the fall..

The program is run on Thursday mornings from 10:50 a.m. to 11:40 a.m. from now to Dec. 20 and is free to all who are interested. For information, call the Recreation Department at 781-383-4109.

Unicorn Singers to perform concert at Old Ship church

Old Ship's annual Christmas Concert with the Unicorn Singers will be at the Old Ship Meeting House, 90 Main St. in Hingham, on Saturday, Dec. 15, at 8 p.m. This year's concert, a benefit for Renewal House, will feature selections from C.P.E. Bach's "Magnificat" (1749), a glorious though lesser-known "Magnificat" by Bach's most notable son. An orchestra of trumpets, flutes, and continuo will accompany the singers. The program will also include a cappella 20th century settings of 15th century seasonal texts and carols. Carols for all to sing will complete the evening. The Unicorn Singers, a 22-member mixed chorus under the direction of Margo Euler, has been performing a wide variety of music on the South Shore for more than 20 years.

Proceeds from the concert will benefit Renewal House, a program of the Unitarian Universalist Urban Ministry which serves women and children who are victims of domestic violence and abuse. Renewal House has for 20 years offered emergency shelter for women in crisis and their children, along with a variety of advocacy, counseling, and educational programs.

Proceeds from the concert will benefit Renewal House, which serves women and children who are victims of domestic violence.

For further information or for tickets, call 781-749-1679, or come to the Old Ship Parish House office at 107 Main Street, weekdays, 9 a.m.-12 p.m.. Advance tickets are $8 for adults and $5 for children/low income; tickets will also be available Noble's Camera in Hingham Square. The evening of the performance tickets will be available at the door ($10 for adults; $5 for children/low income).

To my friends,

I have enjoyed twenty-seven wonderful years of owning and operating Charlotte's Salon. I am happy to inform you that on January 2, 2002, Ray Zucker will become the new owner of Charlotte's Salon. I have both the utmost confidence and respect for Ray and I feel that he will do an excellent job of providing you with outstanding service. I am certain Ray will maintain a professional atmosphere, treat my staff well and offer them educational programs that will keep them on the cutting edge of the beauty industry. You will see all the same familiar faces in the salon. Holiday gift certificates will be sold and honored as usual.

I am very excited about my future plans! I will be working with Ray in the salon as a stylist and make-up artist. I look forward to taking new clients, my specialty as always will be hair color. I have come full circle back to what I love most "doing hair and make up."

I will also have more time to develop Charlotte's Scituate Harbor Boutique.

Teresa Beatty will continue to manage the boutique and I look forward to supporting her when ever possible. I will be in the Boutique on Mondays. My years of success are due to my loyal clients and my outstanding staff, and I thank you.

Sincerely,
Charlotte

Gov't. Island Study Committee wants anchor sunk

"I envisioned a normal anchor, but this is absolutely humongous," he said. He also thought the anchor would also be an "attractive nuisance" for children in the area.

The committee also says the anchor is not indicative of the type of ships that would have sailed out of Cohasset Harbor. The anchor, weighing five-tons, would be used for steamships, not small fishing vessels, Tewksbury said.

"The anchor does not fit into the history of our town. A typical anchor on a ship leaving from the harbor would only be about 500 pounds," he said.

Plans are to install the anchor on a circular granite and cobblestone base in the grassy island in front of the Cohasset Sailing Club. The granite centerpiece of the circle will be inscribed with a picture of a schooner or harbor pilot boat.

The Government Island Study Committee was also opposed to the memorial to the fallen lightkeepers, because of its size. Jason and Small were also the force behind that project.

Jason and Small arrived at the meeting after the study committee had left and told selectmen they cannot stop the project now.

"We've already bought the anchor," Small said. "There's no turning back now."

Jason and Small received permission to build the anchor in October, when selectmen unanimously supported the idea with no objection from the Government Island Study Committee.

At the meeting in which the idea was approved, Tewksbury lauded the idea.

"I think the anchor will add to the decor of the island, it's a good spot for it," he said at the time.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said Tuesday he will place the issue on a later agenda for selectmen to discuss.

Government Island, which also includes Lightkeepers' Residence and the templates used when the second Minot Light was being built, is one of the most historic areas in town and is listed on the National Registrar of Historic Places.

The anchor and display will be paid for through private donations, Small said.

GIFTS of HOPE

A child's smile brings hope to all.

What will make your children happy this holiday? For some, new toys under the tree. For others maybe a week off from school. But for many children in the Greater Boston area, it is something as simple as food. This holiday season, there will be over 200,000 hungry people in Eastern Massachusetts. In fact, one in five children under the age of 12 lives in a household that struggles to put food on the table.

Many people are looking for a way to help, but don't know how. Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program can help you reach those in need in your area. For the past 10 years, readers' Gifts of Hope donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children in the Greater Boston community. Another season is upon us. And more people need your help.

Please join the Cohasset Mariner and Community Newspaper Company in giving the greatest gift of all – the gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way toward helping those in need.

Here is some helpful information to plan your gift:

- $15 provides 30 people at a homeless shelter with a bowl of hot soup and a sandwich.
- $30 provides two families with a week's supply of groceries from a food pantry.
- $50 provides one neighborhood food program with 75 meals.
- $250 provides a food pantry or soup kitchen with more than 1,500 pounds of food.

PLEASE MAKE YOUR TAX DEDUCTIBLE CHECK OR MONEY ORDER PAYABLE TO: (Choose from one of the local charities) Father Bill's Place, Carolina Hill or South Shore Friends of the Homeless and mail to: Gifts of Hope, c/o Anne Rodwell, 16 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050 (Please do not make your check payable to this newspaper or to Gifts of Hope as that will only delay disbursement efforts. Thank you.)

Support Sailing Club Anchor Fund

Plans are to install a five-ton ship's anchor on a circular granite and cobblestone base in the grassy island in front of the Cohasset Sailing Club. The granite centerpiece of the circle will be inscribed with a picture of a schooner or harbor pilot boat. The anchor has been paid for with private funds. But the masonry for the foundation for the anchor, and if there is any extra money, granite curbing around the grassy island, could cost upwards of $10,000.

Tax-deductible donations for the project are welcome and should be sent to Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave. Checks should be made out to the Town of Cohasset, but mark the check for the anchor fund. The Cohasset Police Association recently donated $500 for the project.

Selectmen recently approved the plan and there was no objection from the Government Island Study Committee.

Toys for Tots

The Cohasset police are again joining with the US Marine Corps annual holiday Toys for Tots campaign. Victorian fair at Hull museum

The Hull Lifesaving Museum, 1117 Nantasket Ave. in Hull is hosting a gala holiday event this weekend with its annual Victorian Seaside Holiday Fair from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 8 and 9. This museum is festively decorated with greens and bows and the museum store is fully stocked with gifts, jewelry, blankets, books, music, ornaments, children's toys, stocking stuffers, teacher gifts, personal luxuries, and the museum's own exclusive clothing line of men's and women's polar fleece outerwear, caps, and long-sleeve T shirts.

While you shop, little ones can enjoy the special children's holiday activities, designed and supervised by the museum educator. Refreshments will be available to help keep holiday spirits high.

The fair will feature hand-crafted wares of more than a dozen of the region's artisans, including textiles, hand-turned wood, metal sculpture, jewelry, candles, hand-made clothes and seasonal novelties. Admission to the fair is free and there is ample free parking.

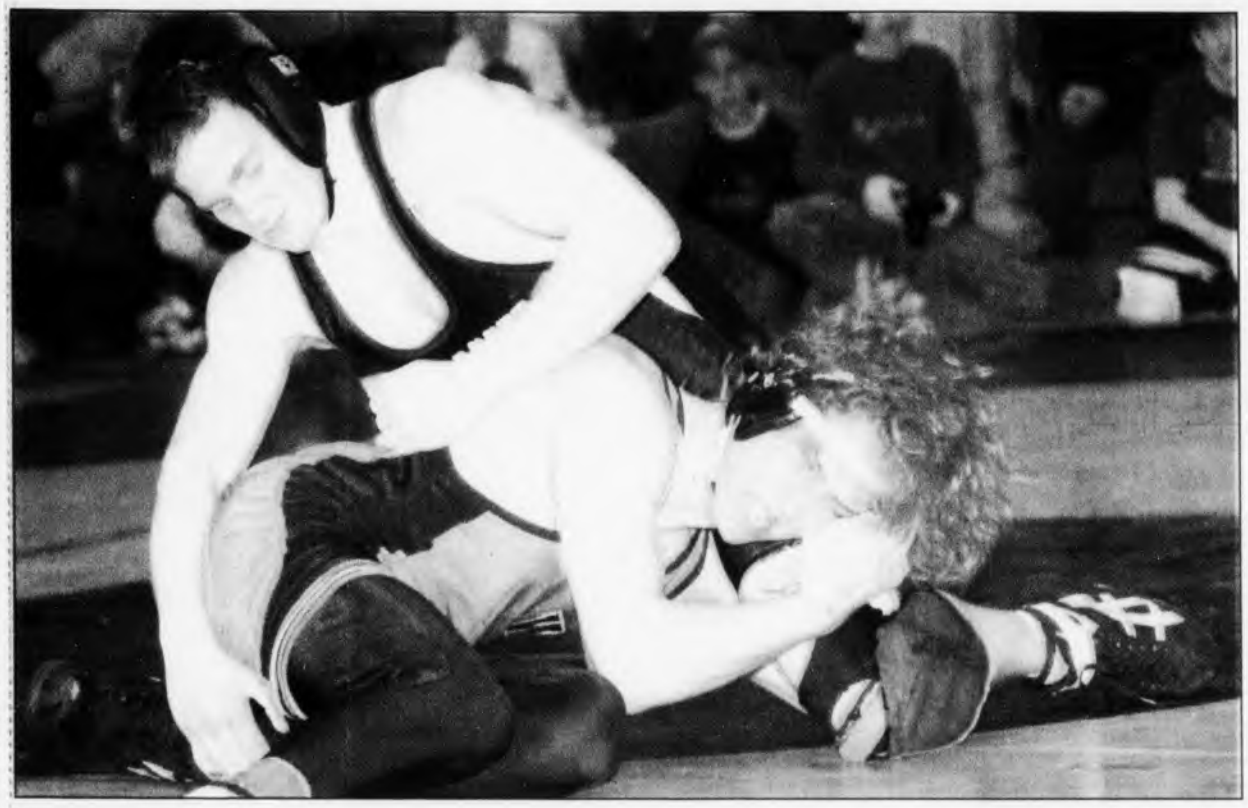
Boston Symphony oboist in Amahl

South Shore Conservatory presents "Amahl and the Night Visitors" on Saturday, Dec. 8, at 4 p.m. and 7 p.m., in Sanborn Auditorium, Hingham Town Hall, 210 Central St.

Gian Carlo Menotti's Amahl and the Night Visitors tells the story of the young peasant Amahl, who joins the legendary three kings on their journey to Bethlehem. A special feature of this production is the appearance of Wayne Rapier, oboist for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and one of the premier oboists in the world. The oboe portrays the ancient sound of Amahl's recorder, which keeps him company when he is herding his sheep and gazing at the stars.

Amahl features a cast of six principal singers and a chorus. The roles of Amahl and his Mother are played by Christopher Maher and Elizabeth Milch at 4 p.m. and by Douglas Kanner and Maura Finn at 7 p.m.. Christopher is a student at Derby Academy in Hingham.

Tickets at $10 per person, $7 for seniors and students, are on sale at South Shore Conservatory, Buttonwood For Kids and Nobles Camera Shop in Hingham Square, and Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset. Additional performances will be presented on Dec. 9 in Duxbury.



For more information or to order tickets by phone, call Laura Carleton, 781-934-2731, ext. 14.

Cohasset wrestling captain Dan Littauer (on top) should be a strong candidate to compete for the state crown at 152 pounds this season after placing top five in the state each of the last two years.

Fighting for prestige

Record numbers have wrestling coach eyeing return to prominence

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

This year's wrestling squad looks like it's ready to have Cohasset gain back the power it had in the mid-90's.

Cohasset has failed to reach the .500 mark the last two years, falling one and two wins short of sea level. But this year, veteran coach Torin Sweeney knows things are different.

"I don't want to be sub-500 again," he stated. "It has been tough to take."

If Sweeney is on a mission to get the most out of his team, he has certainly appointed the right captain to do it. Senior Dan Littauer has been working the team out on the track to prepare for the season.

"Dan is pushing the team extremely hard," reported the coach. "He keeps the level of drilling at a very quick pace."

Littauer will most likely be one of the top performers in the South Shore League. After placing top five in the state tourney the last two years, he has bulked up to 152 pounds and appears a strong candidate to compete for the state crown in that weight class.

Sophomore Phil Strazzula will also be in the hunt for a States bid. At 119 pounds, Strazzula finished fourth at Sectionals last year, and has been working with the Orange Crush wrestling team to get ready for this winter.

At 135 pounds, junior Terry Baroudi finished third at Sectionals last year. Like Strazzula, he is a hard off-season worker who looks to be

Prospects bright for boys hoop

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

Last year, the Cohasset boys basketball team surprised much of the South Shore with 14 wins, and the program's first trip to the playoffs since 1996-97. This year, eleventh year coach Ron Ford is expecting even bigger things.

Because of its very small size, Cohasset has finally moved down into the Div. 4 post-season bracket. This lights up the Skippers' chances to bring home a state title.

"We are going to try to up the tempo this year," Ford noted. "We have to get everybody prepared."

Simply making the tournament has never been an easy task. Cohasset will be up against what Ford considered the toughest South Shore League he has ever seen.

To give you some idea of what he means: five teams (Carver, Cohasset, Norton, Abington, and Norwell) were all in contention for a South Shore League crown going into their final games last winter, and all five are returning at least three starters this year.

Then there is the additions to the SSL this school year of Div. 4 power Mashpee, led by scoring phenom Rick Morantis, and Harwich, who shocked Cohasset by beating them late in the season last year. And, of course Hull, another perennial threat to capture the D-IV crown, will stand in Cohasset's way.

Ford, however, feels his team is up to the challenge. He has appointed three excellent senior captains in Matt Bilodeau, Pete Maitland and Liam Martin.

Both All-Stars for the soccer team this past fall, Bilodeau and Maitland will combine for a very impressive and athletic backcourt. Bilodeau has been known for his flashy drives to the basket playing point guard, while Maitland has become familiar with success at all five of the

Mariner All-Scholastic Football team

Skippers Brown, Previte and Snowdale named among area's elite

Argh…this was grueling. The football talent was abundant in Marinerland this fall, as the combined 55-35-4 record of our nine teams accurately reflects.

There were 38 players selected to their various league All-Star teams from Silver Lake, Marshfield, Rockland, Scituate, Hanover, Hingham, Norwell, Cohasset and Abington High Schools who we had to consider for our 25 available spots, along with a handful of other players who put forth a compelling argument for this honor.

Several of the players you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received strong consideration for this team. In the end, however, these are the choices we made:

Mike Snowdale- quarterback junior- Cohasset

Mike Snowdale

The junior missed the first game of the season with injury, and then exploded onto the scene, providing Cohasset with a passing attack the type of which it hasn't seen in many years…was leading all Div. 5 quarterbacks in Eastern Mass in touchdown passing through most of the season…wound up with 14 for the season to go along with approximately 1,200 yards through the air to play a big role in Cohasset's 9-1 regular season and the first league crown in over 20 years…the 5-11, 160 pound signal caller was particularly effective throwing on the run… South Shore League All-Star… says his biggest thrill of the season was the Nov. 2 win over Abington which put the Skippers into first place all alone in first place in the South Shore League…also a standout baseball player…pitched and played second base for the C.H.S. team last spring, and was a member of the Cohasset/Scituate Legion team this summer…Cohasset coach Tony Rolfe: "Mike was really well suited to our offense. He really understood our offense and made good decisions. He moved well and has a strong arm, and that worked out for us, because we weren't exactly the biggest team."

Paul Previte - Middle Linebacker Senior (Capt) – Cohasset

Paul Previte

The 5-8, 175 pound middle linebacker was the leading tackler for the South Shore champion Skippers (9-1) this season despite giving away serious poundage to most of the blockers and ballhandlers with whom he was forced to butt heads…in the Skippers 4-3 defensive front, Paul was forced to fill gaps all over the place, playing in back of the South Shore League's smallest front, and did "a fantastic job", according to coach Tony Rolfe…leading attributes, according to Rolfe, were aggressiveness and a nose for the ball…a South Shore League All-Star… Paul is leaning more towards playing lacrosse in college next spring…led the C.H.S. state Div. 2 runner up lax squad in scoring this past spring with 53 goals… a 2001 Mariner All-Scholastic and Pilgrim Conference All-Star for lacrosse…has applied for early decision at Trinity College and hopes to hear back by the end of month… Cohasset coach Tony Rolfe: "In a 4-3 defense, you need a middle linebacker who's going to hold up, and Paul really did that. He had the quickness to make plays, but also the good instincts, and he never shied away from contract, which was something considering his (lack of) size."

Jason Brown - Senior (Capt) Halfback/Defensive back - Cohasset

Made an amazing transition to halfback after starting the previous two seasons at quarterback…the 5-

Winning ways

Grid program will look to build on this season's successes

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Sports fans are generally fickle folks, as in "what have you done for me lately." This seems to hold particularly true of high school sports fans—where the turnover of parents generally follows the turnover of student athletes.

It seemed the entire town of Cohasset got behind the football team this fall. Clearly, not all of the 1,500 or so Cohasset residents who showed up at Alumni Field for the Nov. 2 win over Abington, which proved huge in the Skippers' march to the post-season (the first for the school in over 20 years), were football parents or students.

As thrilling a ride as it was for all of these townies, however, you know the first question off most of their lips these days is "can they do it again?"

"We should be OK," comes the reply from head coach Tony Rolfe. "We've got a nice core of players returning at a lot of different positions."

The Skippers lose 12 seniors in all from this team that went 9-2 (including the 22-6 playoff loss to Tyngsboro) this season, including captains Jason Brown, Paul Previte, Wil Prendergast and Liam Martin (who was lost to a broken leg in the season opener). Brown, the team's main offensive weapon (15 TDs and 1,400 yards rushing) and Previte, the team's leading tackler, were both league All-Stars. Prendergast was a vital cog on the line, along with fellow seniors John Hussey, Brendan Goff, Jari Martin, Marc Musco, Tom Bilodeau and Chris Caron. The other two players being lost to the caps and gowns, Dave Bouchard and Eric Libby, started in the defensive backfield.

Realistically, Rolfe knows that all of these players leave voids, but he also knows this is the lot of all high school coaches. Relatively speaking, the fifth year head coach didn't seem to think his program was taking an insurmountable hit.

The Skippers do, after all, return

Jason Brown

10, 185 pound speedster rushed for 1,400 yards and 15 touchdowns on the season to help lead the Skippers to a 9-1 regular season and the school's first league crown in over 20 years. speed and explosiveness were his leading attributes, but he also proved himself capable of picking up tough yards inside...a South Shore League All-Star fitness nut who trains year round with former Scituate High football and track star Joe Hayes, also a spring track star for CHS...ran the anchor leg for the school's 4x100 relay team that qualified for the All-State's last spring...also moved into the defensive lineup for the first time this season as a defensive back, and emerged as a big presence in both pass coverage and run support...is looking into playing football next year collegiately, and is presently exploring opportunities at Bowdoin, UMass-Amherst and the University of Maine, leaning towards majoring in Business Management. Cohasset head coach Tony Roltz: "It was definitely Jason's total commitment to the team that made him special. He had to learn a new position on the fly (Halfback), and play defense for the first time this year, and he turned out to be huge in both of them. He just did whatever we asked and always gave it everything he had."

Dennis Hill - Junior Quarterback - Silver Lake

Dennis Hill

This all purpose quarterback threw for nine touchdowns and ran for another four this season to lead the Lakers to a 6-3-1 season...passed for over 500 yards and ran for another 225 yards despite being slowed for much of the season by a severe ankle sprain...SL coach Dana Battista, an 11-year assistant at Duxbury before coming to Silver Lake, calls Hill the best quarterback he's ever coached, and that includes Duxbury's Adam Brown (who wound up with a full scholarship to Northeastern), Old Colony League All-Star...Dennis says he hasn't thought much about college, but hopes to play college football...also a standout on the hardwood, Dennis was the sixth man on SL's unbeaten Old Colony League champion basketball team last winter, and is expected to start at point guard this winter...Battista: "Dennis can run, he can throw, he's smart and he's got great field vision. I think he's going to have a huge senior year, and I see a lot of (college) scouts coming around to look at him."

Brian Barry - Senior (Capt.)
Tailback/Safety - Silver Lake

Brian Barry

After missing all of last season with a broken leg, Barry tore his MCL just three games into this past season, but still never missed a game...the injury did remove him largely from the offensive backfield equation, as coach Dana Battista opted to cut down on his wear and tear by playing him exclusively on defense, where he was vital at safety...finished the season with four interceptions and over 70 tackles...when fellow team captain Mike Bombardier went down for the season, Barry stepped in as the lead runner for the final three games, including a 100-plus yard performance on the ground against B.C. High—one of two for him on the season...Old Colony League All-Star...has rejoined the wrestling team this winter, after missing last season with the broken leg...being recruited primarily as a safety by college coaches...have talked to him about playing safety next season...among the schools he's considering are Bridgewater State, Curry College and Fitchburg...coach Battista: "He was probably the toughest kid on what I considered a very tough team. He was our defensive MVP. He was great in pass coverage or run support, and never shied away from anything. When we needed a runner, he stepped right in and, even with his injury, he never missed a beat."

Mike Carven - Senior (Capt.)
Quarterback/Defensive Back - Hanover

Mike Carven

This second-year starting QB finished his senior year off with another impressive season for Hanover (5-5). Carven was the Indians' leading all-around yard maker, rushing for more than 930 yards and 7 TD's, and threw for another 760 yards and 7 TD's...Also threw four conversions and ran in one...The senior had more than 290 total yards in a 23-6 win over PL foe Middleboro, rushing for 110 yards and two TD's, while going 9-for-15 for 180 yards and one TD pass...Is most proud of his performance in the team's Thanksgiving Day win over Norwell, in which Carven connected for two TD passes, totaling 75 yards...A South Shore League All-star last season, Carven was named a Patriot League All-star this year...Carven is also a member of the HHS Student Council and is active in community service...The senior is being recruited by Assumption and Stone Hill, among other schools. Hanover coach Dave Maimaron: "He's a tremendous athlete. The experience of playing all of last year really helped this season. He's a very smart player. Tough teams have a great deal of preparing to do because they don't know what he's going to do. He can throw and run."

Brian Kemp - Senior (Capt.)
Linebacker - Hanover

Brian Kemp

After suffering an injured spleen last season, which kept him out of the last three games, Kemp came back this year with vengeance...As Hanover's leading tackler with 122 take downs, Kemp was a major force to be reckoned with on the line...Midway through the season, Kemp was averaging double-digit tackles and only had two games in which he recorded less than 10...The Patriot League All-star is most proud of his performance in the team's game against Rockland, in which he had 15 tackles...Kemp added another 16 tackles in Hanover's 14-6 win over former South Shore League rival Norwell...Kemp is also a member of the HHS Academic Decathlon team and is ranked 14th in his senior class...The senior is considering continuing his football career at Wesleyan, Amherst College, Hanover coach Dave Maimaron: "He was healthy for every single game this year. He's a player that's very difficult to block. He's 200 pounds and when he hits you, you know it. He's just got natural instincts on the football field."

Bob Lacerda - Senior (Capt.)
Fullback/Linebacker - Abington

Bob Lacerda

This three-year starter had a great senior campaign for the South Shore League runners up...Over the last two years, Lacerda (5'6", 175 pounds) has racked up 1,600 total yards for Abington (8-2)...Despite twisting an ankle in the first game of the season, the South Shore League All-star continued to play and was the team's leader on offense, particularly on the inside...Is most proud of his performance in the team's 25-0 win over neighboring rival Rockland...The senior captain is a member of the National Honor Society and is a member of the AHS Student Council...Lacerda also plays baseball for Abington and is considering attending Salve Regina, Northeastern, or UMass Dartmouth next fall. Abington coach Jim Kelliher: "He's the heart and soul of the team. He's a tremendously hard worker and was our go-to guy. If we wanted first downs, he was the guy we'd count on."

Mike Miller - Senior
Halfback/Defensive back - Abington

This 5-foot, 10-inch, 160 pound halfback was a terror on the outside for the Green Wave...The two-year starter used his speed to score 10 touchdowns this season, racking up 62 points for Abington (8-2), who were the runners up in the South Shore League...As a defensive back, Miller was always put on the opponent's best receiver and gave them fits in doing so...The senior is most proud of his performance in Abington's 35-0 win over Hull, in which he scored four TD's and racked up 202 total yards...An SSL All-star, Miller also plays baseball in the spring and was a member of the AHS basketball team for three years...Miller would like to continue his baseball or football career in college. Abington coach Jim Kelliher: "He really came into his own this year. He's blessed with better than average speed and produced great outside yards. He showed tenacity. Once the ball was in his hands, we knew we'd get some extra yards. I'm very happy with what he did for us."

Mike Miller

Tom McSharry - Senior
Split end/Defensive back - Abington

Tom McSharry

Height was definitely an advantage for this 6-foot, 3-inch, 175-pound end, who pulled down virtually everything he was dealt...McSharry's good running ability also helped Abington (8-2)...A South Shore League All-star, McSharry is most proud of his performance in Abington's 42-6 win over Norton, in which he scored two TD's both of which were thrown by his brother Brian, a sophomore QB...Also racked up double-digit receptions in the team's 14-0 win over Norwell...McSharry is president of his senior class and has received the DAR award...The senior will captain the AHS basketball team this winter and also does track in the spring...McSharry is considering attending Bryant or Bentley. Abington coach Jim Kelliher: "He was a late bloomer. He comes from a very fine athletic family and had a great career here. If we needed a big reception, we'd make sure he'd get the ball. He always gave it his best."

Jeremy Gonsalves - Senior (Capt.)
Halfback/Defensive back - Marshfield

Jeremy Gonsalves

After seeing limited time behind 2001 graduate Sean Morris last season, Gonsalves came into his own this year, leading the Marshfield (6-4) offense...Was the Rams' leading rusher with more than 900 yards...Also scored 10 touchdowns...An Old Colony League All-star, Gonsalves (5'8", 165 pounds) is most proud of his performance in Marshfield's 26-7 win over North Quincy, in which he rushed for 203 yards on 14 carries and scored three TD's...The senior captain also plays basketball in a CYO league...Gonsalves is considering attending a variety of colleges, which include Dean, Curry, Wheaton, Nichols, and Bridgewater State. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "He's such a good player. He's not the strongest or biggest kid out there, but he'll really take it to you. He lays everything on the line. He sets blocks well and is very pretty to watch. Plus, he's got a heart three-times its size."

Brendan St. Peter - Senior (Capt.)
Offensive/Defensive lineman - Marshfield

Brendan St. Peter

A four-year varsity player, St. Peter was the sole returning lineman from the 2001 line, which averaged 6'4", 270 pounds...A highly versatile player, St. Peter played just about every position there is on the offensive/defensive lines from linebacker to even tight end...Often played two or three different positions per game...Is the only current MHS player to earn a Super Bowl ring, which came his freshman year in 1998...An Atlantic Coast League All-star last season, St. Peter was voted an Old Colony League All-star this year...The senior is making his second-straight appearance on the Mariner All-Scholastic football team. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "He's the best defensive player we had. He's a tremendous leader and would do anything he was asked. He's a student of the game. He sees the whole field and really is a complete football player."

Bobby McCarthy - Senior
Split End/Defensive back - Marshfield

Bobby McCarthy

A two-year starter, McCarthy was the Rams' top receiver...His success last season tipped opponent's off to his talent, and as a result, McCarthy was often double teamed...Still, the senior had a great season for Marshfield (6-4), often recording double-digit receptions...In this year's Thanksgiving Day game against Duxbury, McCarthy had 11 receptions...The senior is most proud of his performance in Marshfield's 21-7 win over Brockton, in which he scored the first touchdown of the game...Last season, McCarthy tied Sean Morey's MHS record for TD receptions ...McCarthy also played basketball for three years...The senior is considering continuing his football career at Wagner, St. Anslem, or Bryant. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "He just improved every year. He played his heart out day in and day out. He has a lot of potential to play in college."

Matt Murphy - Senior (Capt.)
Guard/Linebacker - Hingham

Matt Murphy

A three-year starter, Murphy capped an impressive HHS career...The 6-foot, 1-inch, 210-pound senior captain served as the team's "Ironman" playing virtually every position imaginable and not missing a single game in three years...In addition to his work on the line as a guard and linebacker, Murphy also made key contributions on special teams this year...A Patriot League All-star, Murphy is also a lead in the HHS chorus...The senior is considering attending college and may continue his football career. Hingham coach Paul Killinger: "He really was an ironman. There was no one thing that he was best at because he could do it all. He was never off the field. He'd play anywhere and he did. He played that much his sophomore year too."

Noah Kutsch - Senior (Capt.)
Linebacker/Fullback - Hingham

Noah Kutsch

This 5-foot, 9-inch, 170-pound linebacker may not have been big, but strong indeed...Noted by his coach as being a "great collision kid," Kutsch finished the year as the Harbormen's leading tackler with 90...The Patriot League All-star also recorded two interceptions and made a number of fumble recoveries...The senior is most proud of his play in Hingham's 14-6 win over Cardinal Spellman because he feels the defense had its best game...Kutsch is considering attending the University of Delaware next fall. Hingham coach Paul Killinger: "He was definitely the best tackler we had. He ranks up there with the Taylors and the Buckleys (HHS graduates). He's just one of those great collision kids. He's also an intelligent kid and going for the big schools and he certainly has the stuff to get in."

Matt McDonald - Senior (Capt.)
Offensive/Defensive lineman - Rockland

Matt McDonald

An injured ankle couldn't keep this three-year starter and two-time Patriot League All-star off the field this season...The talented lineman is best known for his impressive downfield blocking, which cleared the way for the Bulldogs' talented backs this season...Standing at 6'2", 230 pounds, McDonald—a two-time Mariner All-Scholastic—was a powerhouse on the line for Rockland (5-5-1) both at offensive tackle and defensive end...His intensity and desire to win are among his best qualities according to his coach...McDonald is most proud of his play in the Bulldogs' 34-0 win over Middleboro because "everyone was back healthy and didn't fold"...McDonald will captain the RHS basketball team this winter and also plays baseball in the spring...The senior is also a member of the Key Club and is active in Student Governement...He is hoping to continue his football career at Bryant or Wagner, among others. Rockland coach Ken Owen: "He was the inspirational leader of the team. He has a tremendous desire to win. He has a real nice understanding of what has to be done. If we needed a big stop, he was our guy."

Matt Boyd - Senior (Capt.)
Halfback/Linebacker - Rockland

Matt Boyd

Boyd's talent was often overlooked given the success of 2000 graduate Bob Murphy but this was his year to shine...Despite missing three games to an ankle injury, the senior captain (6'2", 205) led the Bulldogs in most offensive categories this season...A three-year starter at linebacker, Boyd scored 11 touchdowns this season...Capped his RHS football career off with style, scoring four touchdowns in the team's 48-14 win over Randolph on Thanksgiving Day, a game which he cites as his best performance...The senior also plays basketball in the winter and does the high jump for the RHS spring track team...Boyd is also active in the Key Club and Student Government and is a volunteer youth basketball coach...Boyd is hoping to attend Bowdin and continue his football career. Rockland coach Ken Owen: "When he was healthy, Matt showed signs of being a tremendous running back. He spent most of the season hobbling with a recurring injury. When he was out, we missed his not only his speed but his size. The Thanksgiving Day game was a fitting end for him."

Eric Savicke - Senior (Capt.)
Halfback/Free safety - Rockland

Eric Savicke

One of the few fully healthy Rockland players, this two-year starter and Patriot League All-star was by far the most versatile player the Bulldogs had...Standing at 6', 165 pounds, Savicke was a force on both sides of the ball for Rockland (5-5-1)...Savicke continually came up big for Rockland on interceptions, punt returns, pass receptions, and kick off returns...The senior also called all of the defenses on the field and was a "tailor-made" safety, according to his coach...The senior is most proud of his performance in Rockland's 42-8 win over Scituate, in which he scored two TD's – one reception and one interception...Savicke also plays basketball and baseball for RHS and is a member of the National Honor Society...Savicke is planning on attending the University of Rhode Island or Miami where he hopes to continue his baseball career. Rockland coach Ken Owen: "He had a great year. We used him in so many areas because he's so versatile. He's one of the better one's we've had back there. He could always be counted on and played consistent."

Dave Butterworth - Senior (Capt.)
Tailback/Defensive back - Scituate

Dave Butterworth

David did not come with anywhere near the gaudy totals of his junior year (102 points, 1400 yards rushing), as the Sailors lost much of their starting offensive line from 2000, and he was often forced to serve as a passing tailback...David (5-foot-11, 193 pounds) was still, unarguably, the team's number one offensive weapon...finished with close to 1,000 yards rushing and 11 touchdowns...finished his high school career with a three TD, 170 yard performance against Hingham...had two interceptions on defense...also served as the team's kicker... a three time Patriot League All-Star (2000 and 2001 for football, and 2001 for baseball)...also now a three time Mariner All-Scholastic selection...is being recruited for both baseball and football: UMass-Amherst, UNH and Curry are among the three teams that have expressed an interest in him for football, Wesleyan and Bryant for baseball...one-year older brother Bryan, who played quarterback for the Sailors ('99 and 2000), wound up with a full football scholarships to Canisius...Scituate coach Steve Maguire: "When other teams game plan specifically to stop David, and he still comes through big like he did, you know there's something special there."

Adam Luque - Senior (Capt)
Offensive Guard/Linebacker - Silver Lake

Adam Luque

Despite relative lack of size for a Div. 1 linebacker (5-10, 210 pounds), Luque was an absolute force in the middle for the surprising Lakers (6-3-1) this season, leading them in tackles with close to 90, despite missing two games with injury...on offense, he agreed to move from a glamour position in the backfield (fullback) to offensive guard this season, and coach Dana Batista credited much of the team's running success this season to that move, as the speedy Luque proved a force on pulling plays to the outside...with fellow captains Brian Barry and Mike Bombardier slowed for much of the season on defense, Adam's leadership and steady play on defense were essential elements in the Lakers surprising run at a post-season berth...came up with a couple of big sticks in last minute goal line stand that allowed Lakers to hang on for win over league rival Plymouth South...OCL All-Star...also captain this winter on the hockey team...would like to play linebacker in college, and has been approached by coaches at Bridgewater State, Westfield and Curry about that possibility...SL coach Dana Battista: "Adam was a consistent force for us on both sides of the ball. I can definitely see him having a nice college football career at a place like Bridgewater."

Jason Connelly - Senior (Capt)
Receiver/Defensive back - Scituate

Jason Connelly

Jason did it all for the Sailors this fall...he was team's top wideout and defensive back, and also returned kicks and punts, played on special teams cover units and was the team's punter...rumor has it he also sold tickets before the game and worked the concession stand at halftime...proved quite durable despite his lack of six (5-11, 165 pounds), finishing among the team leaders in tackles...led the team in receptions, several of his grabs being of the sensational variety...Patriot League All-Star...not bad considering football is Jason's sporting "hobby"...Jason is being heavily recruited for baseball as a pitcher and shortstop...compiled a 4-1 record with a 2.62 ERA this past spring for the Sailors, while batting .407...also a standout with the Scituate-Cohasset Legion team...is beign looked at by Western New England College, among others...Scituate football coach Steve Maguire: "Jason's a very good football player, but what really made him an All-Star in my mind were the intangibles and his leadership."

John Coleman - Senior (Capt)
Halfback/deep back - Norwell

John Coleman

The 6-foot, 170 pound halfback scored 14 touchdowns and rushed for over 1,200 yards this season—a feat made all the more remarkable considering he wasn't even the featured back for the first three games this season...also an

Skippers among area's elite exceptional blocker, Coleman started the season as a wingback, his primary responsibility creating room on the outside for Andrew Faranick…when Faranick went down with mononucleosis, Coleman stepped in and compiled seven consecutive 100-yard plus games…South Shore League All-Star…was used primarily as a receiver as a sophomore and junior, though he recorded a couple of 90+ yard performances on the ground last season with star halfback Mike Mohan injured…also a top lacrosse player for N.H.S.…is being looked at by football coaches from several local colleges as a tailback, including Salva Regina—a school that features a strong program in Criminal Justice. John's intended major…also looked at Bryant College…Norwell football coach Jim Sullivan: "His play spoke for itself. John was a consummate leader for us, both in his words and the examples he set. He was very effective in galvanizing this team. That presence he had is what I think we'll miss most next season."

Mike Barry

Tom Hannon - Senior (Capt) Defensive/offensive line - Norwell

Tom Hannon

Hannon was a three year starter for the Clippers, and was a leader for what many considered the best front line on both sides of the ball in the South Shore League this season…at 6-feet, 215 pounds, Hannon was forced to rely as much on athleticism and guile as strength …started at right guard and defensive end…SouthShore Leageu All-Star…said biggest thrill this season was handing Cohasset its lone regular season defeat on Nov. 9…hopes to play football in college, and is looking at several local schools, including Bryant, Salva Regina and Western New England… Norwell football coach Jim Sullivan: "Tom was the type of kid who took a lot of pride in his job on the football field. He thoroughly enjoyed being a pulling guard. To him, a good hit was as satisfying as a 30-yard run might have been to a running back."

Tim Hunt - Senior (Capt) Center/middle linebacker - Norwell

Tim Hunt

A three year starter at center and two year starter at linebacker… At 5-10, 175 pounds, he regularly gave away massive amounts of weight to defensive linemen, but that didn't stop him from being dominant, as his unanimous selection to the South Shore League All-Star team attests…also led team in tackles (approximately 100) from his Middle linebacker spot and was the defensive unit's signal caller…may actually wind up playing lacrosse in college rather than football, as he was a standout defender for the N.H.S. lax squad last spring…President of Student Council…National Honor Society member…is leaning heavily towards attending UMass-Amherst… Norwell football coach Jim Sullivan: "Tim was the type of kid who got every last ounce of potential out of his abilities. If he had been 6-5, 240 pounds, there's no doubt in my mind that he would have been everyone's All-American."

Mike Barry - Senior (Capt) Tight End/Defensive End - Scituate

A three-season sports standout at Scituate High who always seems to just come up short of All-Star selection…not this time…At 6-3, 210 pounds, Mike has been a force on both sides of the ball for the Sailors the last two years, earning Patriot League All-Star honors both times…both a good blocker and sure-handed receiver for the 5-4-1 Sailors this season…also a starter at S.H.S. in basketball and baseball last season…finished second in scoring last season for the Sailors Patriot League co-champion hoop team and has been named a captain for this year…also an excellent student. Mike has talked to the football coaches at Harvard and Georgetown…also considering attending the U.S. Naval Academy.

four of their five top offensive performers, led by SSL All-Star quarterback Mike Snowdale. All he did this year as a junior was throw for 14 TDs and 1,200 yards, both stats ranking him among the top Div. 5 QBs in Eastern Mass., and he'll have his two favorite targets back next season in sophomore Chris Bilodeau (another all-star) and junior tight end Tom Anderson, along with hard hitting and running junior fullback Braun Goodson (6-2, 210).

Junior Chris McKenna and sophomores Sean Connelly and Mike Dooley also performed well in spot duty at skill positions. From this mix of athletes, it figures that someone could step forward to assume Brown's lead running responsibilities.

No doubt that the hits to the line on both sides of the ball were palpable, but junior all-stars Ben Lynner and Cosimo Camby should provide strong anchors next season. Sophomore Stephen Davis will also return to a starting role.

Rolfe used most of his linemen on either offense or defense this past fall, Cambi being the lone exception. Worst case scenario, one figures he could always use these three standouts on both sides of the ball.

"We've got a winning attitude now," asserted Rolfe. "That's the biggest thing we'll bring back next season."

Powderpuff a spectator's delight

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

In what many consider one of the most enjoyable sporting events Cohasset has to offer, the senior girls took down the junior Lady Skippers in the Annual Powderpuff flag football game, 42-16.

The juniors appeared ready to hold their own against the seniors, sustaining some lengthy drives early in the game. However, they were twice stuffed inside the ten yard line, and the seniors were able to capitalize.

Senior tailback/punter/kicker Maggie O'Neill, voted Most Athletic for the yearbook superlatives, got her team on the board with a 72 yard run (Powderpuff is played on an 80-yard field).

Forcing the juniors to punt on their next possession, the seniors again took advantage. Senior returner Corey Sullivan fumbled the punt from Julie Shea initially, but managed to pick the ball up and scramble the length of the field to put her team up 16-0.

Senior Kristin Sheerin, a five time All-Star gymnast, utilized her great speed and devastating spin move to high-step her way to four more touchdowns.

Junior quarterback Maura O'Brien, a top athlete in soccer, basketball and track, gave her squad their two scores on quarterback sneaks.

When asked what the deciding factor in the game was, the answer was the same from both sides: experience. The teams are given only two weeks of practice time each year, giving the seniors a clear advantage coming into the game.

"We weren't sure what to expect," admitted junior running back/tight end Lindsay Grossman, a standout in field hockey, basketball and tennis. "I don't think we were prepared mentally."

Although tackling is illegal Powderpuff, many spectators were surprised to see the amount of brutality at the line of scrimmage. Perhaps it is a result of the tremendous grade loyalty all Skippers have after recently in the wake of the Spirit Week festivities (where we juniors gave the seniors a run for their money this year).

"I wasn't intimidated, but I was a little nervous," recalls O'Brien. "It was definitely a shock when they actually start to hit you."

The seniors claimed that their very physical play was a must considering their very small numbers. The senior class has fewer than 30 females, and 15 came out to play. By comparison, the junior girls had 35 girls playing.

The very small squad was forced to practice their offense no one to defend except a handful of teammates and coaches Tom Sweeney, Deb Beal (both physical education teachers and varsity coaches for CHS) and Drew Quigley, father of Rachel Quigley, a feared defensive and offensive lineman.

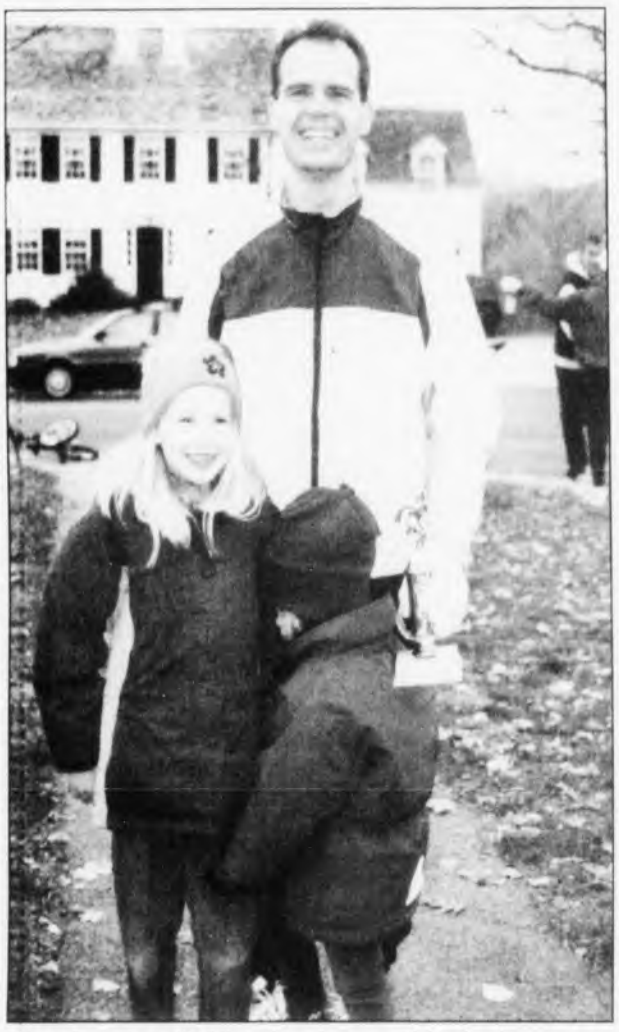
Cohasset race raises $2,700 for Toys for Tots

Great fun was had at Cohasset's First Annual 5-K Turkey Trot Race, sponsored by Daniel McCarron of Cohasset.

Over 100 people ran to help raise approximately $2,700. All proceeds went to Toys for Tots.



The winners:

Men

1st- Paul Stanislawzyk (16:06)
2nd- Kevin Norgeot (19:39)
3rd- Jeff Dimodica (22:56)

Women

1st- Sheila Kearney (20:14).

First place winner Paul Stanislawzyk poses with his daughters.

one of the best in his weight class.

However, he will have to contend with sophomore Ian Hickey, who emerged as a talent in his rookie season last year. But that seems to be the theme of this year's team: no one has a guaranteed spot.

Sweeney explained that for the first time in a long time, he has to "wrestle-off" for half the weight classes. He also admitted that even with this particularly large team, he holds no reserve in using everyone possible.

"We have 28 kids, and that is the most I have ever had," said Sweeney, who will enter his 19th season as the coach. "That is definitely going to be a big help this year."

At 103, junior David Kupse will have to battle with Littauer's freshman brother Jon, while senior Vinnie Gratta will have to contend with frosh Joseph Kehoe at 112.

Third year varsity wrestler Greg O'Brien and last year's JV state champ Chris McKenna, both juniors, will most likely earn a spot at their classes.

At the 215 class, senior John Hussey poses an intimidating presence, and will be looked to for some pivotal points late in matches.

Always looking for a greater challenge, Sweeney has scheduled even more tough non-league matches than he did last year. Div. 1 powers Silver Lake and Natick are just two of the more difficult towns Sweeney has requested.

In league, Cohasset will have to contend with Carver and Scituate, both of whom are looking very strong. Rockland, though, is again the favorite, returning everyone from 103-160 pounds (and all of them made States last year).

Sweeney feels that his team can handle it, noting: "This is the most eager group I've seen."

Great News for Angina Patients

There is a new non-surgical, painless, outpatient treatment.

It's called EECP® and Granite Medical is the first in the area to offer this treatment.

There is a new FDA-approved treatment that has improved the lives of more than 5000 angina patients. It is clinically proven to be effective, is approved by Medicare and is rapidly being adopted in medical centers across the country.

We have a limited number of openings available so call soon. For more information, call Barbara Brangiforte, LPN, our EECP specialist to see if you are a candidate for this treatment or visit our website at GraniteMedical.com.

Cohasset sophomore center Sean Connolley should be even stronger this season with a year of varsity play and a rigorous off-season training regimen under his belt.

positions.

Martin is still recuperating from a football injury he suffered back in September. He has attended every practice, and has every intention of contributing to the team down the road.

"That says a lot about him," lauded Ford of Martin's dedication to the team. "He is a very tough individual."

With Martin itching to get back in the line-up, it certainly does not help that two more key players, senior Nick Bolster and sophomore Chris Bilodeau, will be out at least a few weeks with injuries.

"Injuries have taken a toll on us early," Ford mentioned. "And our depth is not where it could be. But we have to just go out and play."

Bilodeau's absence will be made up for with the emergence of juniors Jay Kiddler and Jared Krupczak, who both saw plenty of varsity minutes last year.

Junior Ben Lymer and sophomore Sean Connolley will be second year starters for what is shaping up to be a very good frontcourt. Both have been lifting weights over the summer and should be prepared to give Cohasset the rebounding edge that has been missing in recent years.

Seniors Jay Martin and Jay Bertovich, back from a one year absence from basketball, will add to the muscle under the boards.

Still, player depth could be a problem for Cohasset, whereas last year the team was loaded with varsity level competitors.

"We have to get them (the new varsity players) as much experience as possible," noted Ford.

Ford also discussed the need for good conditioning for his short benched squad.

Cohasset opens the season next week with South Shore Vocational, Holbrook and South Shore Christian. Getting a look at some solid Div. 4 teams will show if this team really is up for the challenge.

COHASSET YOUTH LACROSSE NOTES

Looking for Coaches

The Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program is looking for volunteer assistant coaches at all levels for its spring season.

In all, seven Cohasset teams are expected to play in 2002, including boys teams at the 14 & Under, 12 & Under and 10 & Under levels, with two teams each at the youngest levels. For the first time, the program also will field girls teams, with one each in the 14 & Under and 12 & Under level.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse currently has head coaches at all age levels, but with so many teams and the possibility of nearly 200 children spread throughout, increasing the coaching staffs and enabling the players to get more personalized instruction.

Through its seven-year history, the foundation of the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse coaching staff has been volunteers who do not have children on the teams involved. In seeking additional coaches, the program is hoping to get both community volunteers and parents whose children will play. Experience playing or coaching the game is desired, but not necessary. Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will ay registration costs to coaching clinics for those individuals interested in participating.

At most levels, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse holds two practices each week, and has games on Sunday afternoon. Assistant coaches are not expected to attend every event, although the hope would be that they can make two of three per week.

In addition to coaches, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is interested in developing referees who can work its games. Interested individuals will be required to take some officiating instruction classes during the winter, and may then be eligible to work games either with a partner or solo in the spring. Officiating fees have not been set for 2002, but are expected to be $50 or more per game.

For more information or to express your interest in coaching or officiating, call Chuck Jaffe, coordinator of youth lacrosse, at 781-383-9858.

Sign-ups for Jan. 5

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will hold its sign-up for the spring season on Saturday, Jan. 5 from 10 a.m. to noon at Cohasset High School. For the first time, the program will be registering girls to play in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse Girls League, as well as its traditional boys teams.

This will be the only day to register for the program. Spaces are limited at all age levels; while Cohasset Youth Lacrosse endeavors to accept everyone who files their paperwork on registration day, the program has had to turn children away at some age levels in each of the last three seasons.

Registrations will be taken in the 14 & Under (7th and 8th graders) and 12 & Under age groups for both boys and girls. At the 10 & Under level, boys and girls can sign up, but the competition will be in men's lacrosse (full pads and contact) rather than in the women's game.

The youth lacrosse program is dedicated to introducing children to the sport. All players receive roughly equal playing time regardless of ability. Cohasset participates in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League, the nation's largest youth program, which does not keep standings or have playoffs. Every team makes several road trips per year, which be as close as games in Scituate or as far away as Martha's Vineyard.

In addition, there will be end-of-season jamborees for both the boys and girls.

The youth program is expecting to field seven teams this spring, depending on demand and available coaching. In spite of the creation of the girls program and the addition of a second 10-& Under team, roster spots at all levels will be limited and it is possible that some youngsters will be turned away.

Parents should expect Jan. 5 to be the only opportunity to sign up. Those who can not attend that day should contact Chuck Jaffe, coordinator of youth lacrosse, in sufficient time to have registration materials mailed and returned prior to Jan. 5.

The registration fee is $110, which includes a uniform and a youth membership in US Lacrosse, the national governing body for lacrosse. US Lacrosse membership includes mandatory insurance coverage and a subscription to a magazine especially designed for kids. Late registrations, if roster spots are available, are $165.

The program is limited to Cohasset residents. At the 14 & Under level, players can sign up for the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program regardless of whether they are active on Cohasset's Middle School teams, or if they play on the team of a private school.

In general, games are played Sunday afternoons. The spring practice schedule has not yet been set. The teams will begin practicing in early March — and indoor practice time has been scheduled — and start playing games in April. The season concludes with the MBYLL Jamboree, in mid-June.

In addition to players, the program is looking for additional coaches at all levels.

Lacrosse is a contact sport; at all levels for boys, practices and games include hitting. In accordance with Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League rules, all boys must be equipped with sticks, gloves, shoulder and elbow pads, and helmets with mouthpieces. Hockey helmets are not allowed, although hockey arm and shoulder pads are (hockey gloves are not flexible enough to allow a child to manipulate and control a lacrosse stick).

The girls game has less contact, but practices will be every bit as physical and demanding as for the boys. All girls must be equipped with sticks, mouthpieces and approved goggles.

There will be more information on the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program available at the Jan. 6 sign-up. If you have an age-eligible child and can not attend the registration session — or if you are interested in volunteering to coach — contact Jaffe at 781-383-9858.

Breaking up is hard to do

The Cohasset boys soccer team held its breakup banquet last week.

Trophies were awarded to the following players:: Jay Bertovich- Most Improved, Matt Bilodeau- MVP, Pete Maitland- 110% Award.

Juniors Robert Hickey, Greg O'Connell and Evan Pestone were announced as captains for the 2002 team.

Bilodeau and Maitland, the captains from this past year's team, were also honored for their selection to the Eastern Mass. All-Star team.

Fire department gets $1K grant

In appreciation of October as Fire Safety Month, and in honor of Norfolk County's 28 fire departments, Sheriff Michael Bellotti recently donated $1,000 to each department for community fire education, prevention and safety awareness.

"Recent events have shown the world what we already knew —that our firefighters are true heroes and essential to every community," Sheriff Bellotti said. "I am honored to be a resource for these brave men and women, and I hope this small gesture can add in some way to the outstanding work our state's firefighters already do."

Each department will use the $1,000 for fire-related purposes such as new equipment, education programs or training.

Grapevine Caterers takes root in Cohasset Village

Includes café to open on Stagecoach Way

By Mary Ford
MARINER STAFF

You've all been to Stagecoach Way. It's the brick walkway (with a sunken stone patio halfway through) that runs between the Town Parking Lot and the Hunneman real estate office in the village.

"We spotted the for-rent sign and thought this was the perfect location."

– Nancy Gould, Grapevine Caterers and Cafe

But unless you're headed to one of the businesses housed there, including Robert Thompson's dentist's office, Dr. Ronald Goldenson's doctor's office or the Adams day spa — the alleyway likely provides little more than a convenient short cut between your parked car and South Main Street.

But a local chef intends to change that. Armed with the ingredients of enthusiasm, imagination and a business plan, Robert Gould and his partners (his wife Nancy, sister Patty Toomey and brother-in-law Brian Toomey) have big ideas for the pathway.

They've leased the space that most recently housed a radiology clinic at 3 Stagecoach Way, and are in the midst of transforming it into a 10-seat café, kitchen and offices where Grapevine Caterers will take root.

During the summer season, the café will also offer alfresco dining by candlelight on the sunken patio, which the Goulds and Toomeys plan to brighten up with landscaping, the addition of some bistro tables, and a lot of tender loving care. Their lease permits them to use the courtyard on Stagecoach Way.

"We love it down here," Nancy Gould says. "We spotted the for-rent sign and thought this was the perfect location." Nancy said the spot reminded them of Chatham which is known for its hidden pathways with quaint bistros.

The Goulds, who live in Hingham, and Toomeys of Wakefield are shooting for a January opening.

While the café will offer take-home meals and breakfast and lunch seven days a week, with lots of fresh baked goods, soups, sandwiches, salads and wraps — the catering business will have an extensive menu and be able to handle affairs from casual cocktail parties for a dozen or so to elaborate weddings for hundreds.

For summertime alfresco evening dining at the cafe, then thoughts are to offer all-inclusive, set menus ranging from $32-$48, with a selection of appetizers, salads, soups, entrees and desserts. Plans also include asking selectmen for a license to allow patrons to bring their own beer or wine.

Landlord Jerome Phiter of Colonial Way Realty said he's happy the new business decided to locate in Cohasset.

"Everyone here wishes them well," he said.

Robert Gould, with 25 years as a chef under his belt — most recently as executive chef at the Marshfield Country Club — got into the field as a teenager at Howard Johnson's and later trained under different chefs including George Sit at the former Hugo's Lighthouse restaurant where Atlantica now is. Robert also served as executive sous-chef (second in command) for Gourmet Catering in Roslindale for four years, which provided catering for some high-profile clients including the Kennedys in Hyannisport and events such as the J.F.K. Library "Profiles in Courage" awards. He clearly loves creativity that cooking affords him.

Patty Toomey said she and her husband didn't hesitate to join forces as partners in the Goulds' new venture.

"We're not worried about the food at all," says Patty about her brother's gastronomic expertise.

The partners are convinced that good food and good service will translate into success despite the current economic recession. The catering business can be tailored to anyone's budget, they say.

"People are always going to eat," Robert Gould says. "And christenings, weddings don't stop."

Country House expands size and selection

The Country House Antiques and Interiors announces the opening of its new expanded showroom. The additional showroom will be filled with sofas, chairs, occasional furniture and accessories, giving clients even more products to choose from.

"The new space gives us a look which more appropriately reflects what we do. We hope it better conveys our message that you can find everything you need for your home right here in Cohasset," said owner Arlene Ferreira.

The Country House offers custom furniture from manufacturers including Harden, Hancock & Moore, Brown Street, Temple and Taylor King, as well as home decorative accessories, oriental rugs, lamps and oil paintings. Also offered is a selection of decorator fabrics and wallpaper.

"All of our brand-name products are discounted all the time," Ferreira said.

The Ferreiras have done business in Cohasset for more than 38 years. Arlene Ferreira started Country House Antiques 20 years ago. She has grown the business from a little antique store into a major furniture dealer here on the South Shore.

Now accompanied by daughter Kim Jalewsky, the Ferreiras offer expert decorating services as well as white-glove delivery service.

"We actually do business all over New England," said Ferreira. "Many of our customers have second homes and condos. We have delivered our furniture to Nantucket, Martha's Vineyard, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire and New York.

Country House is located at 818 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy. For information, call 781-383-1832.

New sales rep

City Express, Inc. a privately owned messenger service, has hired Tracy Fondanova of Cohasset as an account manager and sales representative. Fondanova joins City Express with six years of experience in the courier service industry. In her new role, Fondanova will maintain existing accounts and obtain new accounts.

For more information about City Express, Inc., call 617-227-0330 or visit cityexp.com.

Dependable names creative specialist

Cohasset's Christa Hagearty, president of Dependable Cleaners, announces the appointment of Brigit Silvestri as the company's new creative development specialist, a newly-created position within the company.

Silvestri brings with her more than 15 years of experience in the creation and implementation of innovative marketing strategies, with an emphasis in strategic planning, brand identity, consumer promotions and business-to-business communications. Silvestri also possesses strong writing skills and experience in print and multi-media production.

Silvestri is affiliated with the American Institute of Graphic Design and the Brand Design Association. She earned a B.F.A., cum laude, from Syracuse University and has recently relocated to Hull, where she resides with her husband, Tom, and their two sons, Dylan, 7 and Michael, 3.

In harmony with community

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSON@WICKED.COM

The concept of giving is something with which Bryan Campbell is very much in tune.

When the 17-year-old musically inclined Marshfield resident was called upon to play "Amazing Grace" on his bagpipes at a candlelight vigil following the Sept. 11 tragedies, Campbell never once hesitated.

In fact, the Marshfield High School student spends a good deal of his time finding ways to give back to his community. And he does all of it without any thought of accolades or praise.

"It's not just about helping the community for me," Campbell said. "It's about helping people individually."

Campbell is a young man of many talents, and he uses those skills to help with his community outreach. Shortly after the terrorist attacks on the country, a vigil at the high school football field was planned drawing more than 5,000 people.

Campbell said it was chance and timing that gave him to the opportunity to perform for the event. Originally, one of his music teachers was looking for a choir to sing "Amazing Grace" at the vigil. But she could not find the time to put it together. Campbell jumped at the chance to play at the event.

Marshfield High School Bryan Campbell, initiates some sword play with instructor Roger Whidden at Whidden's School of Fitness. Campbell helps Whidden teach the kids' karate classes at the school.

"Why not help out with that kind of thing?" Campbell said. "I had played in public before, so I had a little experience." Campbell said he will continue to help people in that manner whenever someone needs it.

And Campbell's talents and skills go beyond bagpipes.

Another task he takes on is helping teach karate classes at Whidden's School of Fitness in Marshfield. Campbell has already earned his black belt, and has been a student at Whidden's for about three years.

"The kids classes I have here grew so quickly," said the school's owner Roger Whidden. "I found out pretty fast that I couldn't handle all the kids myself." Whidden then turned to Campbell and asked him if he would help teach the kids' karate classes. Again, Campbell stepped up to the plate.

Whidden said one of the most remarkable things about Campbell is that he listens and catches on quickly to whatever the job may be. He said when Campbell came into his door a few years ago, he had already been to a number of karate schools. But Whidden insisted Campbell and the rest of the students start all over from scratch in learning his techniques.

"For me, it's so rare for me to have a student who can come from another (karate) school and start all over," Whidden said. "It shows a lot of character."

In addition to giving through music and teaching, Campbell also had a big hand in implementing and producing the local cable TV show called Mr. Roger and Neighbors, a program which illustrates the principles of subjects like karate, massage and acupuncture. The show has a comedic element involved in it, something Campbell is very good at generating.

Campbell stays involved with the show by monitoring sound boards and taking care of other technical aspects that need to be done in producing the program.

"I don't mind putting in the time," Campbell said of his community service activities. "I'm learning a lot, and developing skills. I don't think the question is 'Why do I help?' It's more like 'Why not?' I have the time, and I don't want to sit around and do nothing. I enjoy bettering my relationships with people."

While he continues to help in his community, Campbell is looking ahead to life beyond high school. Campbell said if he does go to college, he will think about being a philosophy and theology major. But he is not sure of his schedule as of yet.

"I just can't see myself at a desk," he said. "I need to do something physical. In my mind, there's only two things people need in life—food an shelter. If I can master those two things, I've got it made."

Tara Law, Campbell's mother, said she is very pleased with her son in accomplishing his goals and helping the community. She said when he was playing bagpipes at the vigil, it was a very proud moment for her.

"It was the enormity and the significance of the event as well as (Campbell's) maturity that struck me at the candlelight vigil. He really is very independent. The amazing thing is that he doesn't to all things to impress anyone. He just is who he is."

"People like (Campbell) rarely get any exposure because they do what they do so quietly," Whidden added. "He never looks for any glory."

A sugar plum of a production

Nutcracker magic is close to home this holiday season

By Kim Stempel
CORRESPONDENT

A beloved holiday tradition returns to the South Shore — when the Children's Dance Ensemble performs "The Nutcracker" on Dec. 8 and 9 at Hingham High School. This is the 15th year the ensemble has been staged in this unique full-length ballet.

Part of what makes this production unique is that "it's danced entirely by children. I don't hire individuals to dance the lead roles of the Snow Queen or Sugar Plum Fairy," said Mary Lou Cunningham, the Director of the Dance Workshop of Hanover.

Twelve-year-old Danielle D'Ambra, who is a new member of the ensemble and will be dancing the part of Clara, said that, "It's a lot of work but really enjoyable. I've had a lot of fun practicing for it."

According to Karla Hawkins, who is dancing the part of the Sugar Plum Fairy, the feeling of performing in the Nutcracker "is great. It's indescribable."

Ashley Carson is the senior member of the ensemble and is dancing in several dances, including the party scene, the snow dance and the waltz of the flowers.

"We are really close as a company," she said. "Just having this network of people is a wonderful thing."

Children's Dance Ensemble members rehearse every Sunday for four hours for this production, with additional rehearsals added as the event draws closer.

Cunningham, who has been the director for 28 years, has the school follow the Royal Academy for Dance syllabus. Cunningham participated in eight years of training to be in this program, and her students are graded each April by examiners from London.

The Children's Dance Ensemble has a varied repertoire which includes classical ballet, jazz, and modern styles. The ensemble is comprised of talented dancers between the ages of 12 and 18. Students of the Dance Workshop of Hanover audition in September for parts in "The Nutcracker," and new members are invited in to the Children's Dance Ensemble company by Cunningham. Members of the dance ensemble also have a voice in suggesting who will be invited to participate in the group. The remainder of the roles are danced by Dance Workshop of Hanover students who are chosen based on their auditions.

"They are very professional in their presence — both their performing and stage presence," Cunningham said of the dancers. Cunningham noted that the ensemble members are all accelerated students, both in terms of their dancing and academic grades.

The Children's Dance Ensemble, which is comprised of 13 core members, is the pre-professional children's performing company of the Dance Workshop of Hanover.

The group performs a benefit every year, with proceeds from the last five going to children's cancer research. They have also recently performed for the Lodge of Mason's in Brockton, and will also be guest dancers in Rachel's Dance School of Middleboro's production of "The Nutcracker." The company will perform the snow dance.

"The Nutcracker" will be performed Saturday, Dec. 8 at 6 p.m., and Sunday, Dec. 9 at 2 p.m. at Hingham High School. Tickets are $10 for adults and $6 for children and senior citizens. Tickets may be purchased at the door or by calling Dance Workshop of Hanover at (781) 829-0390.

Top, dancer Karla Hawkins, is on her toes as the Sugar Plum Fairy.

Above, Erin Leary, defies gravity as the Dew Drop Fairy in the Children's Dance Ensemble production of the "Nutcracker."

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

For some cooks, pumpkin cheesecake is a culinary holy grail, the secret recipe they pull out during any season when they want to impress guests with a spectacular dessert. The rest of us are a bit skeptical – after all, why muck up such a divinely simple recipe as cheesecake with pumpkin? The answer became clear during my testing. Pumpkin cheesecake, when made properly, is a divine marriage of three ingredients – cream cheese, sour cream, and pumpkin – that have a natural affinity for each other. The problem, I found, was to enhance the flavor of the pumpkin while also producing the perfect, creamy texture.

The first stop was the pumpkin itself. Forget about buying a small sugar pumpkin and making your own puree from scratch. It's too much work and the stuff in the can is at least as good. (Libby and One Pie make pumpkin purees.) Stay clear, however, of pumpkin pie fillings which also contain unwanted spices.

Besides sugar and spices, the three key dairy ingredients in most cheesecakes are cream cheese, sour cream, and heavy cream. I quickly discovered that simply dumping in a can of pumpkin puree to my existing cheesecake recipe wasn't going to work (the cheesecake was too wet and dull tasting) so I had to revisit these three key ingredients. I started by eliminating the heavy cream completely – this improved the texture as well as allowing the pumpkin flavor to shine through. The sour cream was not discarded but greatly reduced to a mere 1/4 cup (many recipes use well over 1 cup) so that its tang was still present yet it did not overpower the pumpkin. I left the cream cheese at the standard 2 pounds.

Another common ingredient is flour but even a small amount made the cheesecake drier and somewhat tougher. I tested various quantities of eggs and settled on 5 although I did not separate any of them, whipping the whites and then folding them back into the batter, a common technique for producing a lighter cake. (This technique also produced too much batter for my springform pan.) One and a half cups of sugar proved to be enough to produce a pleasantly sweetened cheesecake. I also tried adding brown sugar but the cake started to taste like pumpkin pie. For spices, I tried combinations of the usual - cinnamon, nutmeg, ginger, cloves. The cloves proved to be overpowering but 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon, 1/4- teaspoon nutmeg and 1/4 teaspoon ground ginger was perfect.

For the crust, I tested graham crackers, Oreo cookies, and gingersnaps and my tasters universally preferred the latter. (Cheap boxed grocery store gingersnaps are fine.) To make the crust, I started with 1 cup of crumbs and used 1/4 cup to dust the sides of the pan. The other 3/4 cup crumbs were mixed with 1 tablespoon of butter and pressed into the bottom of the pan. This version produces a cheesecake with a thick layer of crumbs at the bottom of the cake which enhances both flavor and texture.

As for baking, I found that a water bath was necessary to achieve the light, creamy texture I was after. (A heavier, New York style cheesecake does not need a water bath.) I tested a variety of oven temperatures and settled on 300 degrees for 60 to 70 minutes, allowing the cake to cool in the turned off oven for one hour with the door propped open. Finally, a pumpkin cheesecake with dignity and good taste.

CREAMY, SPICED PUMPKIN CHEESECAKE

Cold cream cheese does not whip well. It is best to leave it at room temperature for at least 45 minutes before starting this recipe.

1 cup gingersnap crumbs, from about 18-20 cookies 1 3/4 inches in diameter crushed in a zipper lock bag with a rolling pin

1 tablespoon melted butter plus additional butter for coating the inside of the pan

2 pounds cream cheese, softened

1 1/2 cups granulated sugar

5 large eggs

1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla extract

1/4 cup sour cream

1 15 ounce can pumpkin (not pumpkin pie filling)

1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon

1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg

1/4 teaspoon ground ginger

1. Adjust oven rack to the middle position and heat oven to 300 degrees. Remove bottom of a 9-inch springform pan and cover with an 18-inch wide sheet of aluminum foil. Insert bottom into pan and fold foil up around sides of pan. Brush the bottom and sides of the pan with melted butter. Add 1/4 cup gingersnap crumbs to the pan and tilt pan to coat the sides. Place the remaining 3/4 cups crumbs in a small bowl. Add the 1 tablespoon melted butter and, using a fork, mix well. Place the crumb mixture in the bottom of the pan, distribute evenly and press using a flat bottom glass. Cover the bottom and sides with an additional piece of heavy-duty aluminum foil and place inside a large roasting pan. Bring a kettle of water to a boil for water bath.

2. Beat the cream cheese in bowl of an electric mixer until smooth. Gradually add sugar and beat until smooth, about 3 minutes. Scrape bowl frequently. Add the eggs, one at a time, and beat until just incorporated. Add the vanilla, sour cream, pumpkin, cinnamon, nutmeg, and ginger and mix on low until well combined. Finish mixing with a rubber spatula being careful to scrape the sides and bottom of the bowl.

3. Pour batter into the prepared springform pan and set roasting pan on oven rack. Pour enough boiling water into the roasting pan to come halfway up the sides of the springform. Bake 60 to 70 minutes or until the cheesecake is puffy and the center is still a bit wobbly. Turn off the oven and prop the door open with the handle of a wooden spoon. Allow the cheesecake to cool in the oven for 1 hour. Remove springform pan from the oven; discard the outer layer of foil and set on a wire rack, cool to room temperature. Refrigerate for several hours or overnight until completely chilled. Can be made 2 to 3 days ahead. Slice and serve.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 5

Get an early start today. The morning holds high potential for productivity. Harmonious lunar alignments occur to Saturn, the sun, Mercury and Pluto until 10:51 a.m. However, it is best to postpone launching major ventures for a few days. An applying Mercury/Pluto alignment warns against signing important documents, making decisions. Think before you speak. Meditate for peace of mind.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 6

This day has its challenges. Stay upbeat and don't allow anyone or anything to throw you off course. The Leo moon opposes combative Mars at 9:20 a.m. and becomes inactive. A Virgo moon takes over at 12:11 p.m. Mercury aligns with Pluto at 3:12 a.m.; the sun and Pluto conjoin at 10:53 p.m. Take on a busy work schedule. You can make headway developing projects that need repair, problem-solving. Plan a quiet evening. Important insights or inspirations may come, if you have the quiet space and time to listen.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 7

Gear up for another demanding day. Stress management is important. Resolve to be more patient, easygoing. Keep your mind and hands busy, be productive. The Virgo moon forms potent 90-degree alignments to Saturn, Pluto, the sun and Mercury until 5:57 p.m., when it becomes inactive. A harmonious alignment of Venus and Neptune enhances creativity and prompts you to enjoy favorite hobbies, arts and crafts projects.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 8

An inactive Virgo moon offers an opportunity to catch up on unfinished projects or routine chores, errands. Make up a list of things to do and stick to it. Influences turn around completely at 2:57 p.m., when the moon enters Libra. Mars moves into Pisces at 4:52 p.m., remaining there until January 18, 2002. Don't be a hermit tonight. The evening is prime for social activities, romantic rendezvous.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 9

Take advantage of a break in the stormy astrological weather; relax and spend quality time with loved ones today. The Libra moon forms harmonious contacts to six planets. However, an applying Venus/Saturn polarity warns you to hold off on major purchases, shopping sprees. In addition, the influence of an applying Mercury/Uranus alignment may help you to gain new understanding concerning issues that have been troubling you.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 10

At 3:43 a.m. the Libra moon becomes inactive until 6:09 p.m. That means that this is a day to follow through on projects already begun, review and redo. New starts are off limits. At 6:09 p.m. the moon enters intensive Scorpio. It is okay to burn the midnight oil working on business or study projects, especially if it is something you have put off for a while. Venus opposes Saturn at 9:33 p.m., urging you to focus on the positives. Don't let doubt, fear, frustration creep in. Open your heart to higher visions.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 11

A Scorpio moon makes this a day to get things done. Roll up your sleeves and take on a full work agenda, particularly jobs that require mental focus and concentration. You can work out glitches and get to the heart of the matter. Others may be pensive, hypersensitive. Choose your words carefully. Take extra quiet time out for yourself. Look within for answers, and you will find what you need to get back on track.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 12

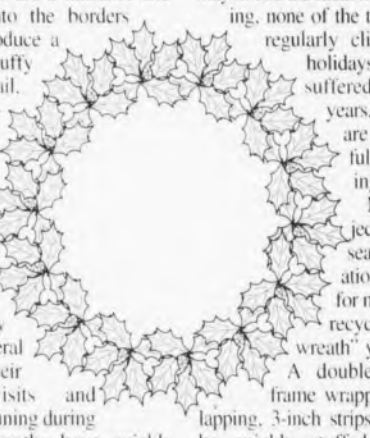
The Scorpio moon forms a 90-degree alignment to unpredictable Uranus at 7:48 a.m. and becomes inactive until this evening. Take it slow and easy this morning; allow extra time to get where you are going. Zero in on projects that have been left hanging and finish them. Influences continue to rate high for work that requires troubleshooting, problem-solving. The final windup to this month's new moon begins at 10:30 p.m., when the moon enters Sagittarius.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 13

A barrage of planetary activity makes for a challenging period today and tomorrow. Most prominent, the solar eclipse/new moon culminating tomorrow. The dark side of a new moon brings a time for looking back, letting go and clearing the way for new activities. A sun/Uranus alignment this morning may open doors to new solutions and possibilities. A lunar opposition to Saturn at 5:29 p.m. brings a lull period in the day. Spend time alone; rest, reflect, refocus.

Holiday decorating with glorious greens from the garden

Green thumbs up



By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

PART I

Record-breaking warmth ushered in the month of December as Mother Nature extended this autumn's stretch of unseasonably moderate, dry weather. It may be the season for holiday shopping, baking and decorating, but mild temperatures produced an irresistible urge for restless homeowners throughout our South Shore communities to spend the weekend clipping, raking, hauling and working in the garden rather than cope with the crowds at the mall.

Touches of springtime color appeared here and there across the landscape as a few of Mother Nature's early bloomers were deceived by the late season warming trend. Numerous lemon yellow blossoms emerged prematurely along the gracefully arched branches of the forsythia bushes. Although there may be fewer starry blooms next season, their sunny color amid the stark bare branches were a welcome sight. Nearby, several soft lavender-blue pincushion flowers of Scabiosa "Butterfly Blue" were accompanied by dozens of tiny, yellow and purple smiling faces from the omnipresent seedlings of Johnny Jump-Ups. The sounds and smells were reminiscent of a day in early spring while the harsh realities of winter weather in New England seemed months away.

This unseasonable warm weather has also awakened all the little creatures of the woodland. A resident frog lazily floated on the water garden's surface, occasionally gliding to avoid the nibbling of the vibrantly-colored orange and white gold fish as several plump gray squirrels came to the pond's edge periodically to refresh themselves while scolding every intruder. Unfortunately, with less vegetation in the wild on which to dine, Bambi and Thumper have become regular visitors to my garden in their quest for evergreen delicacies. Bunnies are a nuisance and every step into the borders seemed to produce a retreating, fluffy white cottontail, but their nibbling pales in comparison to their foraging friends. Despite the initial thrill of seeing deer in my backyard several years ago, their perpetual visits and destructive pruning during the colder months have quickly cured my delight in their presence. I may apply a deer repellent on their favorite shrubs this season in an effort to diminish their devastation.

Once the month of December arrives, the time has come to bid at least a temporary farewell to the gardens and focus on the holiday season. I set aside the first week of December to make a final inspection of the borders, rake the last crop of leaves, clean tools, store chemicals and empty soil from all breakable containers. Due to the mild weather, winter protection and mulches will most likely wait until after the first of the year, depending on the weekly forecasts.

In the next few days, I will begin the process of gathering greens to create my holiday decorations. Yews, arborvitae, junipers, ground pine, false cypress, Japanese holly, white pine and cedars are my favored evergreens as they tend to maintain their foliage without water, lasting through the holidays and into the new year. Hemlock boughs should be avoided as they tend to drop their small, stout needles shortly after being cut, even in water. A mature landscape can offer a wealth of materials suitable for flower arranging and holiday decorating. Over the years, I have consciously planted many trees and shrubs which serve the dual purpose of providing multiple seasons of interest in the landscape and excellent cut foliage, berries or branches for interior designs. I delay the pruning of most of these plants until December and fill several bags full of clippings ideal for my holiday trimmings. Although the month of December may not be the ideal month for pruning, none of the trees or shrubs regularly clipped for the holidays seem to have suffered over the years, and nearly all are thicker and fuller the following season.

My first project each holiday season is the creation of a wreath for my front door. I recycle a "pocket wreath" year after year. A double-ringed wire frame wrapped with overlapping, 3-inch strips of fabric can be quickly stuffed with mixed greens to produce a handsome, welcoming centerpiece. Whether I am creating a landscape plan, decorating a room, arranging flowers or preparing a simple wreath, I strive to apply the basic principles of design to all my projects with emphasis on contrast of color, form and texture and repetition of these same elements. Having a green front entry doorway, a variety of colors and textures are essential to maximize the wreath's appearance. Needled greens, some tinged with silvery blue, yellow and bronze are mixed with a variety of lustrous, shiny broad-leafed evergreens including leucothoe, holly, PJM rhododendron, mountain laurel and euonymus.

While soils remain dry and workable, the shriveled remains of frost-damaged annuals should be removed from whiskey barrels. Hardy chrysanthemums, asters, or sedums may survive the winter in your barrel, but could be snipped back to a few inches. A collection of mixed green branches and berries inserted directly into the soft earth in place of the faded annuals and around hardier plants will create a festive, holiday display and provide additional winter protection for remaining plantings.

D'Ann's...Does it Again

Restaurateur Michael Cocomazzi has done it again, creating a comfortable and immensely popular dining spot where others have failed. This time, it's D'Ann's Sports and Entertainment in Holbrook.

A new venue but a proven recipe: the menu is a clone of his popular D'Ann's Neighborhood Grille & Pizzeria in Abington. Look for the same successes too: big salads (the Chicken Caesar is particularly good) and burgers for lighter dining, but a large menu for extended dining as well.

Top appetizers include their special "Snack Attack," a combo of different items for two. Entrées getting the nod range from comfort food like the best broiled Boston scrod around, a house special chicken supreme and a juicy choice prime rib to the all-new broiled seafood platter, which is simply a great value for seafood lovers. D'Ann's also serves a delicious pizza with various toppings, has a full children's menu (only .99 every Sunday) and a great game room for kids so parents can relax and enjoy a meal together.

If you're looking for a restaurant with high prices, forget it! D'Ann's is, in fact, one of the most engaging, comfortable, down-home restaurants in the area and serves some of the best food around, as well. Owner Michael Cocomazzi, a most delightful host, welcomes all to experience "a reasonably priced gem." And remember, "If it's D'Ann's...it's delicious."

Hull move raises stink

Sewer hookup plan trashed

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Cohasset and Hull are not getting along too well.

Hull is selling sewer access to the private developer of a proposed subdivision off Jerusalem Road when Cohasset, which is under a court order to solve its wastewater woes, could use additional capacity.

According to Town Manager Mark Haddad, Cohasset has repeatedly requested to meet with Hull's sewer commission and selectmen in an attempt to buy the space. He says his requests have fallen on deaf ears and sent a letter to Hull selectmen with those concerns.

"We approached Hull eight months ago asking them to meet with us and we have gotten no response," he said.

Hull recently granted a real estate developer permission to connect his proposed subdivision to the Hull treatment plant. According to published reports, Hull selectmen agreed to treat the 25-house development last week and, in exchange for treating more than 13,000 gallons of sewage a day, developers are pre-

Get ready for what could be a long hearing before the Zoning Board of Appeals about the largest multi-unit housing project before the town in recent memory, if ever.

Add affordable housing to the mix and a state-law, dubbed "The Anti-Snob Zoning Act" — which could allow one of the last tracts of undeveloped, industrially zoned land in town to go residential — and the resulting discussion should make interesting copy.

AvalonBay Communities Inc. has cleared a hurdle on the way to building a 254-unit luxury apartment complex off Route 3A on the former 62-acre Webb-Norfolk Conveyor site.

The Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency has given the project site approval enabling the developer to file an application for a comprehensive permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

"It's the first step in the process," said Michael J. Roberts, senior acquisitions director with Avalon, in a telephone interview Tuesday. "Really the purpose of the (MHFA) site approval is a means to give us the opportunity to present to MHFA our plans include what size and scale, what the economics will look like and other potential issues."

Roberts explained the MHFA letter says the development falls within the

There's no place like home...

Holiday house tour draws hundreds

By Lauryn Mittleman
CORRESPONDENT

On an ideal day for a stroll (though admittedly it felt more like Christmas in July), last Thursday an estimated 800 participants set out to be inspired by The Community Garden Club of Cohasset's Christmas Reflections House Tour & Holiday Tea. At the end of the day all agreed there was little more to ask for as the event, which earned rave reviews, featured few if any lines, and a total of five already spectacular homes made extra special for the holiday season.

"People just love getting all different ideas."
— house captain Maureen Byrne

"We were very pleased with this year's turnout," said event co-Chairman Judith Dickstein early this week. "I think there was a good steady stream throughout the day."

"And everyone worked so hard," added fellow Community Garden Club volunteer Sue Hall, remarking that the day's weather was also just right for showing off the homes' sensational outdoor settings and views.

Decked out in a befitting nautically themed motif, the dashing home known as Caravel-by-the-Sea kicked off this year's tour and did indeed dazzle with its seashell-studded trees, topiaries grown of gumdrops and memorable lighthouse made entirely of pinecones. In the kitchen we saw goodies for the big

Hassan celebrates 30 years in the business

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

It's how we find the places we are looking for. Whether it is a business or residence — a sign that draws attention to the building can drum up business, or help relatives and friends locate a home.

David Hassan, whose shop and residence is located at 805 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, has been in the sign business for 30 years and now his work graces the storefronts of many South Shore businesses.

"I never even took wood shop in high school," Hassan joked.

Hassan's signs have become a hallmark of Cohasset with the Red Lion Inn, RGP pizza, Village Wine and Spirits, the Music Circus, Philip Smith Interior Design and others proudly displaying his designs. He describes the sign at the Red Lion Inn as one of his most elaborate signs.

The sign is carved out of mahogany wood with separate red lions, also carved from mahogany, added to the front of the sign. The lion, as well as the lettering, was all highlighted in 24-carat gold leaf paint.

Hassan grew up in Cohasset and went through the school system graduating from Cohasset High School in 1968. He began to paint houses and realized he needed a box to hold his supplies, so he built one.

He went to Pat Plante, who was the wood shop teacher at the time in Cohasset, and asked Plante to show him the ropes of wood carving. Plante obliged, and Hassan got his start.

Hassan said he most enjoys the design aspect of sign making.

"No matter how great the painting and carvings are, if it's not eye catching it's not going to get the job done. Design is the key aspect," he said.

Hassan said he sees the sign as a

Women dealing with homelessness together

Editor's note: The people profiled in this story chose to have their last names omitted from the record. This is one in a series of articles focusing on homelessness on the South Shore as part of CNC's Gifts of Hope campaign.

By Seth Jacobson

Annette and Paula hardly spoke when they first met in a Boston pub almost 15 years ago, but now they are as close as friends can be. Homelessness brought them together.

The two women currently reside at the Carolina Hill shelter in Marshfield. Paula has been living there for seven months, and Annette has been there for 14 months.

"We have to be there for one another," Annette said. "We have to help each other through these hard times, and we have to help each other deal with the stress of being here. Believe me, it's stressful being in a shelter."

When Annette, 42, and Paula, 43, first met 15 years ago, they were both living very different lives than they are now. Back then, Paula was developing a fierce drinking habit and Annette was doing a lot of hard drugs such as heroin and cocaine. Although those days are gone, both women know that was the time in their lives that dealt them both a tough hand.

Annette became homeless in 1999 after she was evicted from her apartment in Boston, a place she had lived for nine years with the help of a Section 8 voucher. The reason she was evicted was because the landlord of the apartment wanted more money but Annette simply could not afford it. Her voucher only provided her with limited funds. At the same

The Town has now sent a survey to every registered voter to gather information on the future of Cohasset in preparation for the Master Plan. It is important that residents respond as soon as possible by returning the survey in the self-addressed envelope provided by Dec. 15.

Town meetings

The following meetings were posted at Town Hall as of Monday, Dec. 10.

Conservation Commission, 7:30 p.m., Dec. 13
Growth and Development, 7 p.m., Dec. 13
Harbor Committee, 7 p.m., Jan 8
Community Preservation Committee, 7:30 p.m., Dec. 17
Planning Board, 7:30 p.m., Dec. 19
Water Commission, 7:30 p.m., Dec. 18 at 339 King St.
Committee on Town History, 7:30 p.m., Jan. 21 at the Lothrop house
Zoning Board, 7:30 p.m., Dec. 17

All meetings at Town Hall unless otherwise noted.

New manager

Joseph Campbell, 14 Pleasant St., has been officially named the new manager of Atlantica Restaurant. Campbell has been de facto manager for over a year but because of a clog in the paperwork, his name was not on the liquor license. Executive chef, Eric Stenfors was previously listed on the license. Campbell is also the manager of Kimballs restaurant. Selectmen unanimously approved the change at their Tuesday meeting.

Nurses funded

The state Enhanced School Health Grant will now be fully funded. The state threatened to cut Cohasset's grant by almost $50,000. However, at the School Committee's meeting last Thursday, Supt. Edward Malvey told the board that the grant will now be fully realized.

Without the money, reductions would been made across the board in school health services, with the possibility of two nurses being laid off. The grant also makes it possible for the school system to purchase health-related equipment, such as stethoscopes and thermometers.

AT&T coming

A company representative from AT&T cable will be attending next week's selectmen meeting to discuss any concerns customers may have. All residents who have experienced problems with AT&T's customer service are encouraged to attend the meeting.

New police officer

Town Manager Mark Haddad informed selectmen that he has hired a new police officer. Bill Green Jr. will begin the police academy in January and should be ready to join the force 22 weeks after that.

Schedule set

The following schedule for Annual Town Meeting and Annual Town Election were approved by selectmen Tuesday night. Town Manager Mark Haddad wished to call particular attention to Jan. 14 when the last day citizens petition articles can be submitted for the annual Town Meeting warrant. He urged all residents to try and complete their articles before that date.

Dec. 4 - The warrant for Annual Town Meeting opened.
Jan. 8 - Presentation of the Town Manager's proposed FY 2003 operating budget to the Board of Selectmen.
Jan. 14 - Last day citizens petition articles can be submitted for inclusion in the annual Town Meeting warrant.
Jan. 16 - Presentation of the Town Manager's proposed FY 2003 operating budget to the Advisory Committee.
Jan. 17 - Last day for submission of all other articles for inclusion in the annual Town Meeting warrant.
Jan. 21 - Draft warrant presented to the Advisory Committee for its review.
Feb. 19 - Last day to submit nomination papers to the Board of Registrars to be placed on the election ballot.
March 1 - Warrant sent to printer
March 18 - Warrant delivered to the Post Office for delivery to all registered voters.
March 22 - Constable posts the annual Town Meeting and annual Election Warrants.
March 30 - Annual Town Meeting
April 6 - Annual Town Election.

Zoning Advisory Committee to be created

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

At the suggestion of Town Planner Liz Harrington, the Planning Board agreed to create a Zoning Advisory Committee to advise the Planning Board on proposed zoning changes. The Zoning Advisory Committee would review drafts of articles, and develop and finalize language for zoning amendments, Harrington said.

Planning Board member Bob Sturdy endorsed the concept. He said many Citizens Petition articles go before Town Meeting "raw" and the committee would provide a place "where this could be put on the agenda and dealt with."

"I support this as an advisory group the same way the Planning Board got useful information from the Design Review Board," he said.

Zoning Board of Appeals Chairman Woody Chittick disputed concerns the committee would just add a layer of bureaucracy. The linkage between various bylaws needs to be examined as well as the ever-expanding case law on zoning matters, he said.

"The group could go a long way in helping to modify the zoning bylaws so there is consistency," Chittick said.

"The group could go a long way in helping to modify the zoning bylaws so there is consistency."
— Woody Chittick, ZBA chairman

The makeup of the seven-member Zoning Advisory Committee will include the building commissioner, town planner, and representatives of the Planning Board, Selectmen and Zoning Board of Appeals (or their designees) and two citizens appointed by the Planning Board. The committee's charge will be to study and report periodically to the Planning Board its recommended updates to the zoning bylaw and zoning map.

The first meeting of the new committee is Dec. 18. Planning Board chairman Al Moore will appoint the two citizens to the committee, Harrington said.

Ledge to make a spring comeback

Planning Board to prioritize zoning issues

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Ledge preservation proponents promised to return in the spring and they plan to keep their word by drafting a new article for the March 30 annual Town Meeting.

They will go ahead with or without the Planning Board's blessing although the group hopes the Planning Board will be "on board" this time around.

To that end, Mark DeGiacomo — the ledge preservationists' spokesman — presented a preliminary draft of a proposed article for the annual Town Meeting to the Planning Board last week.

DeGiacomo's presentation was part of a Planning Board overview of zoning issues, which the board plans to prioritize, that also includes accessory dwellings, use variances, multi-family senior housing, wireless communications district, adult stores and requiring a site-plan review for significant changes in grade on projects that affect drainage both above and below ground.

At November's special Town Meeting, a group of citizens — including a large number of Beach Street neighbors — proposed zoning bylaw that would require a variance before ledge eight feet in height or more could be altered in any way. But the article failed to muster the necessary two-thirds majority needed, in part due a majority of the Planning Board, which said the article was flawed and asked the matter be postponed because the board had not had time to fully air the issue. In fact, in a political move the week before the Nov. 4 special Town Meeting, the Planning Board voted to continue the hearing on the ledge issue until their Nov. 7 meeting, effectively shelving the measure.

With time closing in to submit articles for the annual Town Meeting, Mark DeGiacomo, 59 Beach St., didn't want the preservation group to have a case of déjà vu. So he presented a draft article to the Planning Board last week, which he feels addresses the issues that raised concern in November.

While the proposed bylaw would still require a variance to alter prominent ledge for the purpose of constructing a structure, driveway, common driveway or parking space — it would not cover altering ledge for sidewalks, septic systems and sewer pipes. It would also not prohibit someone from altering a smaller section of ledge that might rise eight-feet or higher in another part, DeGiacomo said.

DeGiacomo explained the redraft was preliminary and could look very different after the Planning Board goes over the wording. However, the preservation group may submit a Citizens Petition article to ensure a space on the warrant because the mid-January deadline for articles is approaching.

Beach Street neighbors, who make up the majority of the ledge group, have said they have no time to waste because land off their street is being eyed for development, which would include blasting ledge to construct driveway access to the property.

[Last month, Ellen Morrissey and David Walsh, owners of two adjacent parcels totally some 12 acres off Beach Street, went to Superior Court to appeal the Planning Board decision to deny their application that "subdivision approval is not required" in part on the basis that ledge outcroppings render the proposed lots without practical access from their frontage on Beach Street. The Planning Board decision, if upheld, would force the applicants to go through the entire subdivision approval process before they could subdivide their land into lots.]

In a related matter at last week's meeting, Planning Board member Bob Sturdy offered a zoning by-law that would require site plan review for changes in grade that affect drainage. He explained that changes in contour because of septic system walls or alteration of ledge could create drainage problems for abutters.

"This possibly could take care of some of the problems people have with removal of ledge," he said.

While DeGiacomo praised Strudy's idea, he said the drainage by-law would address some of the ledge issues but not all.

At Tuesday's selectmen meeting DeGiacomo said, "we hope to have a ledge article that the Planning Board can support."

Anchor plans go forward

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

In what appeared to be the final round of Herb Jason and John Small versus the Government Island Study Committee, the selectmen dealt the committee what appears to be a knock-out punch Tuesday.

The committee, led by Ham Tewksbury and Paul Pattison, vehemently opposed placing an anchor on the island.

"It's too big for the area," Tewksbury said. He added the anchor bears no relation to Cohasset's shipping industry and it could pose a hazard to children playing in the area. The group was also concerned with a copper-beech tree which they feel could be damaged by placing the anchor is such close proximity to it. The group suggested the anchor be relocated to Mariner's Park, off Parker Avenue, which would alleviate the problem.

Jason countered the group's argument, claiming the selectmen had already given him approval for the project a month ago. Small informed selectmen the anchor had been purchased and money has been raised. He said there was no turning back now.

"We've already spent and raised money on this project based on the design and location that was originally proposed," Small said.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he received 10 calls throughout the day with residents expressing their opinion on the matter. He said of the 10 calls, seven were in support of the anchor. "I think the selectmen should honor their original vote," he said.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said the Government Island group did not present a strong enough case in order to change his opinion. Selectman Ronnie McMorris agreed with Sullivan and scolded the group.

"We have been chastised in the past for not including the Government Island Study Committee in our discussion of these issues. This time we did, and initially the committee gave its support," she said. "There is no merit to any of the group's arguments to change my mind."

Jason and Small received permission to install the anchor in October, when selectmen unanimously supported the idea with no objection from the Government Island Study Committee.

Plans are to install the anchor on a circular granite and cobblestone base in the grassy island in front of the Cohasset Sailing Club. The granite centerpiece of the circle will be inscribed with a picture of a schooner or harbor pilot boat.

Parking worries over proposed kayak shop

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

No one wants to see the Mill River Marine Railway — part of which is known as Cohasset's Motif #1 — collapse into the rapids where the Gulf River meets the harbor.

But local lobstermen, members of the Cohasset Sailing Club, rowing center, Government Island Study Committee, and Harbor Committee also don't want to see access to the harbor — particularly parking — be usurped by proposed development of the site.

Peter Roy, who owns the property that includes the lobster pound and boatyard, has floated plans for four condominium units, a new main three-story boat-repair business and a kayak and rental shop before the Planning Board. However, no formal application has been filed. Planning Board member Bill Good said last week. Roy, who lives on Margin Street, also owns Atlantica, the Olde Salt House and Kimball's by the Sea.

Roy needs variances for parking and the residences proposed for the site for the project to move forward. His spokeswoman Linda Shropshire said Roy's attorney Charles Humphreys filed an application with the Zoning Board of Appeals this week.

It's the proposed kayak shop that's grabbed the attention of the concerned citizens who packed the Planning Board meeting room last week and who envision the town as becoming a mecca for the sport to the detriment of townspeople.

"We share an overriding concern about the impact upon parking and traffic at Government Island as a result of a kayak rental center at the site," said Bob Deutsch, commodore of the sailing club. Deutsch said last summer inside an hour 130 people including nearly every commercial fisherman and lobsterman signed a petition that reflected those concerns.

Deutsch said the groups represented at the Planning Board meeting were aware the buildings at the site are decrepit.

"We recognize something has to be done," he said, adding concerned citizens hope future business at the site would complement and not conflict with activities at Government Island.

Local lobsterman Paul Figueiredo said parking — which is first come, first serve — is critical for lobstermen who need access to their boats.

Planning Board member Peter Pratt said the lobster industry is very important to the town and played a key role in obtaining money and federal help in dredging the harbor.

"You are the oldest continuous industry in the town," Pratt said.

Sailing club trustee Bob Davenport, who also serves on the Government Island Study Committee, said the committee's position has always been that Government Island be reserved for residents only. Out-of-town guests at weddings and other functions at the Lightkeepers' Bancroft Hall use the upper parking lot. Most of those events are in the evening and therefore don't pose a problem, Davenport explained.

Many in attendance felt a rental kayak center would attract novices, creating a safety issue in the harbor and a headache for the harbormaster.

Good, who was acting Planning Board chairman last week, said while the board would hear the concerns expressed, it would hold off its discussion until there is a formal application from the applicant.

But reached by telephone Shropshire, who was perturbed there was any discussion without the proponents present, explained the kayak shop is a very small part of the project and they are not asking for any parking on Government Island. She said in past three years, the project has gone before many groups and must have water-dependant use under Chapter 91, a state law.

"The kayak shop seemed like a perfect fit," she said. Shropshire stressed the ability to construct the four residences was critical to the project to make it financially feasible.

"We won't do it if we can't do that," she said. "People need to understand that."

But later in the meeting, when zoning bylaw amendments were discussed, Zoning Board chairman Woody Chittick said if there is no "use variance" amendment to the zoning bylaw before the annual Town Meeting, plans for condos at the Mill River Marine would be dead in the water this year.

"Use variances are not permitted in the town," he said. The parcel is zoned waterfront business.

Shropshire said she would check with Humphreys but thought the variance for the residences would not constitute a "complete change of use" because of the waterfront businesses, such as the boatyard and lobster pound that would remain at the site.

Gavin Richard Schwandt makes his debut in town

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PHILBRICK

'TIS THE SEASON

Hello Cohasset. Wasn't the snow wonderful to see it only for a day? I know, not everyone enjoys it quite as much as I do but it definitely helped to get me in the holiday spirit. Somehow, this holiday season is not having the same sparkle and magic for me with all that is happening in our world but then, I look around and see all the lights around town, wonderful decorations in people's yards and I start to smile. Being with children also helps as nothing is as special as seeing, hearing and experiencing life through the eyes of our children. I would like to wish everyone celebrating Hanukah, a very special holiday wish.

BOUNCING BABY BOY

Let us start this week by welcoming a beautiful bundle of blue joy into this world. Edna and Paul Barry and Sherry and Barry Schwandt recently became grandparents to Gavin Richard Schwandt. Gavin is the adored son of Lynn and Rob Schwandt and I am sure that he is receiving all kinds of hugs and kisses. Enjoy that little guy and have a great time spoiling him with love.

PROUD GRANDFATHER

Proud grandfather and legendary producer Rik Tinory of Cohasset, will be front-row center at the Wang Center this Friday evening to see his granddaughter Cassandra Cardelle, 9, "strut her stuff" in Boston Ballet's "The Nutcracker" in front of a sold-out crowd!

LOST BLACK CAT

Linda Farrag contacted me this past week in hopes that maybe someone reading this could help her in her search. Linda had a beautiful black cat who is approximately two years old who has disappeared in the vicinity of Grace Drive in West Corner. This wonderful cat is wearing a turquoise collar with identifying collars, one that is from the Standish Humane Society. If anyone has found or seen this cat, please call Linda at 781-383-9519.

BEAUTIFUL TREE

Anyone who would like to see a beautiful holiday sight should drive down Flintlock Ridge Road after dark for a look at a magnificent Christmas tree decorated yearly by Paul Gavaza, assisted by apprentice Dan Smith. The tree was bought approximately 15 years ago as a live Christmas tree for the Gavaza Family and has been decorated yearly since and is now as tall as the house.

If anyone out there has some more locations to let us know about, please make sure to get the information to me for next week's column.

BC HIGH HONORS

BC High announced the honor roll for the first quarter and several Cohasset students were on it. Making high honors were: Christopher J. Carr (02), David F. Crowley-Buck (03), Christopher P. Barber (05) and Andrew J. Flynn (05). Making Honors were Gregory F. Smith (02), Edward M. Chase (03) and Kevin M. Dinsmore (05). Congratulations to all of you for a job very well done.

CLASS OF '82 REUNION

The CHS Class of 1982 is getting ready to plan its 20th Reunion. Anyone who is interested and would like to join the committee should contact Marcy (Brown) Fleming at 781-585-9913 or email her at marcydon@msn.com. The first meeting will be held the first or second week in January date and time to be determined.

NEW YEAR'S EVE

Here is a fantastic way to ring in the New Year in style! The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association is hosting a fundraiser on New Year's Eve at Atlantica to raise money for new baseball and softball fields in Cohasset. For $35 per person, there will be DJ, cash bar and heavy hors d'oeuvres served. It is going to be a great time with good friends! For ticket information, call Lynne DeGiacomo at 781-383-6413, Mal McCunney at 781-383-6387 or Anne Kearney at 781-383-1451.

FOOTBALL AWARDS

The Annual Football Breakup Brunch was held at Atlantica on Saturday. The Gridiron Club would like to congratulate members of the varsity (9-1), junior varsity (6-2) and middle school (5-2) football teams for an outstanding season!

Tony Rolfe and the coaching staff are looking forward to another 20+ freshman to complement the sophomore, junior and senior football players in the 2002 season under the leadership of captains Tom Anderson, Ben Lynner and Chris McKenna.

Special thanks go to Ronnie Goodwin of Goodwin Graphics for donating the printing on sweatshirts presented to those who have made special contributions to Cohasset Football as well as to all 2001 South Shore League Champion football team members and coaches. Thank you to Father Mulvehill for providing the invocation and to Ron Hobson for his entertaining talk about a favorite subject: football!

Faye Sargent, Sean Galvin, John Durkin, Nick Cambi, Kelsie Litchfield, and Dave Snowdale were recognized for their help during games. Cosimo Cambi received the coveted practice shirt from Will Prendergast.

The following awards were presented: Coach's Award: Will Prendergast; Unsung Hero: Jari Martin; Most Improved: Mike Casey; Hustle and Desire: Paul Previte; Team MVP: Jason Brown; Outstanding Back: Dave Bouchard; Outstanding Lineman: Chris Caron; Hull Game (Co) MVP: Eric Libby and Brendan Goff; Scituate/Cohasset Youth Football Award: Paul Previte; Cohasset Gridiron Clark Chatterton Award: Will Prendergast; Golden Helmet Award for three consecutive years of varsity play: Jason Brown, Paul Previte, Jari Martin, Will Prendergast, Brendan Goff, John Hussey, Liam Martin, Tom Bilodeau, Nick Bolster.

The following players received lettered jackets: Dave Beauchard, Chris Caron, Mike Casey, Sean Connolly, Michael Dooley, John Durkin, Eric Libby, Marc Musco, Mike Snowdale and Tony Truglia.

Here is an inspiring quote for all of us to think about this week. "For all my good intentions, there are days when things go wrong or I fall into old habits. When things are not going well, when I am grumpy or mad, I'll realize that I've not been paying attention to my soul and I've not been following my best routine." — Robert Fulghum

That is all for this week. Please make sure to get me all your news, event information and holiday happenings no later than Monday at noon. All photos can be left at Cohasset News in an envelope marked "Cohasset Mariner, AT." Please make sure to send all the written information to me that goes along with the photo. This Friday is the deadline for December's School Page. Have a great and festive week.

To my friends,

I have enjoyed twenty-seven wonderful years of owning and operating Charlotte's Salon. I am happy to inform you that on January 2, 2002, Ray Zucker will become the new owner of Charlotte's Salon. I have both the utmost confidence and respect for Ray and I feel that he will do an excellent job of providing you with outstanding service. I am certain Ray will maintain a professional atmosphere, treat my staff well and offer them educational programs that will keep them on the cutting edge of the beauty industry. You will see all the same familiar faces in the salon. Holiday gift certificates will be sold and honored as usual.

I am very excited about my future plans! I will be working with Ray in the salon as a stylist and make-up artist. I look forward to taking new clients, my specialty as always will be hair color. I have come full circle back to what I love most "doing hair and make up."

I will also have more time to develop Charlotte's Scituate Harbor Boutique.

Teresa Beatty will continue to manage the boutique and I look forward to supporting her when ever possible. I will be in the Boutique on Mondays. My years of success are due to my loyal clients and my outstanding staff, and I thank you.

Sincerely,
Charlotte

Local stonemason builds on his family's history

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Brendan St. John, left, with his business partner and best friend Joe Gratta, by a stonewall they built along Jerusalem Road.

Light classical music floating through the air, the fireplace glowing, and a one-month-old baby girl quietly sleeping in the corner.

Such is the home of Brendan St. John, a stone mason and an eighth-generation Cohasseter, who helps build the homes and walls around town. He is a tall, muscular man whose physical characteristics reveal what he does for a living.

St. John is proud of his surname. And it's no wonder because the St. John family, which hailed from Dublin, Ireland, has been part of the fabric of Cohasset for upwards of 150 years.

It's most notable member, Joe St. John, who also served as postmaster, operated a general store in the early 1900s at the head of Depot Court (where the bus stop now stands) which was the heartbeat of the community.

Brendan St. John isn't a household name like his great-grandfather once was — but that hasn't stopped him from adding to the town's history in the literal sense.

After graduating from Cohasset High School in 1984, St. John went to work for a mason in Quincy where he learned the ropes of the business. He learned how to place field stones together, "like a puzzle," in order to build walls.

He said he originally joined the trade for the money then started enjoying the work and stuck with it. He recalled even as a little kid he was building walls.

Eight years ago, St. John left his job in Quincy to start his own business with partner Joe Gratta who has been in the business for more than 50 years.

"He is not only my partner, he is my best friend," St. John said. His father also works for him in the business.

"It's great working with my Dad because now I get to boss him around," he joked.

St. John, who completes approximately 70 jobs a year, said working as a mason is not for everyone.

"Everything is heavy, nothing is light," he said. "I have to start every day by lifting hundreds of pounds of rock before I even leave my driveway. It's physically grueling."

However, St. John loves his job and has worked on such Cohasset landmarks as the Veterans memorial by the harbor, and the stonewalls along Jerusalem Road.

"It's a wonderful feeling to know the monument will be there for a long time," he said. St. John added he felt through his masonry projects, he has done his part to add to the St. John's lure in Cohasset. "I drive by all the jobs I've done and just hope they can be appreciated for eight more generations."

St. John is not the only person who enjoys his work. Susan Filbey, 134 N. Main Street, said she was delighted to have St. John work on her house. Four years ago, St. John built a mud-room with brick floors and a brick driveway for the house.

"He goes beyond what most masons do and he really helped us out with the design," Filbey said. "He's reliable, and does good work at a great price. What's not to love?"

Recently, St. John reconstructed the historic Souther Tide Mill in Quincy. It was built in 1806 and is the oldest existing tide mill in the country. Using 120-tons of granite blocks from East Coast demolition sites, St. John and his men rebuilt the walls used to stabilize the mill.

At one point, he was not even sure he was going to be a mason.

St. John once contemplated going to law school, but said he could not picture himself working in another area.

"I just couldn't sit behind a wall in a cubicle. I would go out of my mind," he said.

In the winter, St. John said business slows down significantly and he is confined to working indoors. Wine cellars, and basement work usually occupies his time in the blustery, cold months.

"I enjoy recuperating in January and February, it is nice to spend a lot of time with my family," St. John said.

At his home, St. John proudly displays his family's rich history in Cohasset with black and white pictures from the 1800s and early 1900s littering his walls.

"My family, and its history in Cohasset, means so much to me," he said.

St. John hopes his baby daughter, Anastasia, carries on the Cohasset tradition started more than 150 years ago.

"I imagine she will live here," he said.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Chapter 40B

Reporters are notoriously poor at math. That's because most of us either study English or journalism in college and thought we were saying goodbye to arithmetic forever.

However, after a just few months on the beat, we realize that is a fallacy. Budget time rolls around in our towns and we find ourselves trying to figure out how to translate a whole bunch of new numbers into interesting, informative stories that our readers can understand.

While that part of the job is tough enough — no one ever warned us about comprehensive permits.

For those of you asking, "what are those?" Simply put, comprehensive permits allow high-density projects, and one-stop shopping for the developer at the zoning board. Towns, like Cohasset, are vulnerable comprehensive permits because they have less than the 10 percent state threshold of their total housing stock as "affordable housing."

Little Cohasset has only 3 percent or 76 units that quality as affordable housing by state standards. So it should come as no surprise that AvalonBay is knocking at our door. AvalonBay needs a comprehensive permit in order to build a 254-unit apartment complex on industrially zoned land off Route 3A.

Comprehensive permits – which are offshoots of Chapter 40B (dubbed the "Anti-Snob Zoning Act") — can be confusing.

Just for starters, because Avalon is a rental project — which is financed differently than condominiums — the entire number of units would count toward the town's affordable housing inventory though only 20 percent would in fact be affordable. Therefore Avalon, if approved, would put the town at or over the 10 percent benchmark and remove it from under the comprehensive permit cloud.

Neighboring Hingham, which only has 2.4 percent affordable housing stock, is currently being inundated with comprehensive permit applications. The Zoning Board of Appeals there hired two consultants to help the town wade through some of the more complex projects, such as the 2,500-unit retirement campus being proposed off Whiting Street in South Hingham., which has a file that is literally inches thick.

Here at the Cohasset Mariner, we pledge to keep you informed as Avalon embarks on the comprehensive permit process.

But the fact comprehensive permit applications challenge better trained minds than ours, makes us feel a little better when we are burning the midnight oil trying to decipher pages of confusing notes and figures in order to write these stories.

POLITICAL NOTES

GOP holiday party

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee will host a holiday party to benefit the annual scholarship fund which will be awarded to a graduate of the Cohasset High School class of 2002, on Sunday, Dec. 16, from 5 to 7:30 p.m. at the seaside home of Will and Marjorie Smith, 400 Atlantic Ave.

Open to the public, reservations may be made with Polly Logan at 781-383-0031, Edythe Ford, 781-383-1648, or Julie Guild 781-383-6443. Heading the gourmet cooks who are planning holiday canapes are hostess Marjorie Smith and Ford.

Special guests invited to attend are Sen. Robert L. Hedlund, candidate for treasurer of the Commonwealth, Bruce Herztelder, and Jamie Bush of Hingham. Newly elected state chair of the Massachusetts Republican State Party, Kerry Murphy Healey is trying to recruit for U.S. Senate race and others are trying to enlist candidates for Lt. Governor of the Commonwealth.

Scholarship donations of $15 or more may be sent to Treasurer George Watts, Jr., 76 Nichols Road, Cohasset 02025.

The true value of Village shopping

TO THE EDITOR:

A recent headline in a Boston Globe newspaper article read "In tight times, value is a big draw." My thoughts took me to the values found in shopping at small unique stores that are often found in places like Cohasset Village. Small businesses may not be able to provide the same discount that you receive at a chain department store, but there is a certain value attributed to conversing with a local shop owner (often a fellow neighbor) within a festive village environment this holiday season.

Although many plans and ideas have been discussed to improve the village, the critical component essential to the economic survival of these small businesses is community support. Whether you are looking for that special one of kind gift, a flower arrangement, refreshments and great foods for your entertaining, or an extension cord for your holiday lights, give the local shops in Cohasset Village a chance to help. They may not have everything you are looking for but you may be pleasantly surprised by what you will find.

Many of us value the goods and services provided by local merchants throughout the year, however in the hustle and bustle of the holidays we can easily become caught up in the mall frenzy or the ease of on-line shopping. The preservation of the social and economic vitality of the Village requires the combination of a safe and pleasant environment; quality goods and a commitment to service by the local business; and loyal customer support. Please consider visiting a local business to help with your holiday needs. May you be pleased with what you find, including holiday cheer being shared from both sides of the counter.

Common sense

TO THE EDITOR:

My daughter, who teaches in a school with many disadvantaged children (poverty, broken families, language deficiencies etc.) has noted that some children seem destined to succeed, although too many seem unlikely to make much of the poor hands that life has dealt them.

She observes that the common denominator of the "good kids" is a background of love and discipline! She means supportive love, and guidance that makes clear what behavior is expected, and what is unacceptable.

That formula for successful preparation for life doesn't require riches to buy all the latest electronic toys, and nor is love expressed by acceding to every desire of the child, excused by the rationale that the child should have all that the parent didn't have. No, effective love and discipline primarily requires only common sense.

Take a timeout on monuments

TO THE EDITOR:

Although I think Herb Jason's idea for the anchor monument is honorable, I would like to propose we have a moratorium on such projects around town for the time being.

There seems to be in Cohasset a compulsion to "over improve." People no longer seem to be content with simple grassy areas, or natural vegetation. Instead benches, brick patios, walkways, elaborate plantings, and monuments seem to be springing up everywhere.

What drew me to Cohasset initially was its simplicity, and the feeling that the town really may not have changed much in the past one hundred years. Well, that is clearly no longer the case. I, for one, would like us to take a deep breath, and really think about whether we need to beautify everything in sight, or whether we can live with a little grass and natural vegetation, and keep a sense of Cohasset's heritage.

COHASSET CARES

Christmas Shopping in 2001

By: Allan Macdonald
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Assuredly this Christmas is different — and hopefully no subsequent Christmases will be even more dire. We certainly need to continue to think hard about the situation and to do the practical and spiritual work necessary to improve our world.

Gift-giving makes us pause this year. May the Recycling Committee suggest an item or two that are naturally benign and beneficial to us and to the earth, the canvas carrying/shopping bag and the composter.

The 12 inch x 16 inch natural-canvas bag is imprinted with "Cohasset Cares" and the words "Reduce-Reuse-Recycle" around a globe with tree, all printing in green. The bags are sold at cost, only $10 each, cash please. Purchases are being facilitated by Troop 28, BSA, which has been involved in so many other improvements at the RTF. Please see Beth at 200 N. Main St., 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

We also have some composting components available at $15 each at the RTF, black plastic shells.

Best wishes and see you next time.

Allan MacDonald is the publicity chairman Cohasset Recycling Committee

The 12 inch x 16 inch natural-canvas bag is imprinted with "Cohasset Cares" might make a good Christmas gift, the Recycling Committee says.

Mrs. Dacey's holiday parties for the Lads & Lassies club

LINCOLN HILLSIDE

KATHLEEN O'DONNELL

Growing up in Cohasset in the early 1960s, there were many noticeable signs that Christmas was nearing; electric candles appeared in the windows of neighborhood houses, home-made holly wreaths were hung on front doors, and the heavy storm windows went up on the houses of Lincoln Hillside. There were other more subtle signs too. A selection of Christmas cards and paper money wallets featuring silver bells, pine cones and wintry church scenes dusted with sparkly powder appeared in the card racks of Dan & Anne Campbell's jewelry store. The Sears catalog was suddenly the favored reading material of the under-ten set. And the satin ribbons on the gift-wrapped packages at Mary Fleming's store changed from her traditional blue or green to a festive red.

One event which many of the Lincoln Hillside children looked forward to was the annual Lads & Lassies Christmas party at the home of Mrs. Eleanor J. Dacey on Nichols Road. Mrs. Dacey was a gentle and generous women who once or twice a year organized and hosted social gatherings and seasonal parties for young children in Cohasset. It wasn't until very recently that I realized that the children who attended these parties also attended St. Anthony's Church, where I believe Mrs. Dacey also worshipped. At eight years old, I was too young to be aware of those details. For me, these parties were sheer bounty and I felt very lucky to be included in the fun.

A get-together at Mrs. Dacey's home was sure to be a special event. At each party Mrs. Dacey (assisted by her daughter and in many cases by Henry & Mary Brennock) played her grand piano beautifully and led us all in song. We sang Stephen Foster, rounds, folk songs, holiday songs and Christmas carols. Every child wore their very best dress-up clothes; all the boys wore dress shirts and long or bow ties. The girls eagerly donned velvet jumpers, lace blouses, and their patent leather shoes which were kept for best. I'm sure that the last action performed on each child as they left their homes for a Lad & Lassies party wasn't a kiss from Mom, but rather a last final swipe with a wet comb through razor-parted or freshly curled hair.

That those parties were golden highlights of many a Cohasset childhood there is no doubt.

Mrs. Dacey's parties always featured a special entertainment. One year we enjoyed a tuxedo-clad magician. Another year there was a troupe of puppeteers. A buffet table was always laden with cupcakes, crust-less sandwiches, a large punch bowl and seasonal napkins. I'm not sure what more Mrs. Dacey could have done to make our afternoon celebrations any nicer.

At a time when Santas weren't to be found on every street corner and in every store from Thanksgiving onward, the annual visit from Santa at Mrs. Dacey's Christmas parties added another level of excitement. With naturally curly white hair and twinkling blue eyes, this truly was the real Santa, right there in a house on Nichols Road. At the busiest time of his year, he took the time to come to Cohasset. We felt very privileged. Life simply didn't get much better for an eight-year-old.

As each party drew to a close, we children would happily line up to say good-bye and offer our thanks to Mrs. Dacey and her daughter. Knowing that we would go home and tell all about the party to our families was almost as much fun as the parties themselves. That those parties were golden highlights of many a Cohasset childhood there is no doubt. From the vantage point of 40 years later, I look back on those afternoons of entertainment and think it must have been gratifying for Mrs Dacey to know how much pleasure she'd brought to so many children.

As the Lads & Lassies was a social club for young children only, the passing years meant that I outgrew membership. I don't remember what happened to Mrs. Dacey after that.

I don't recall seeing her in Cohasset in the 1970s, though she may still have been living in her brown house which overlooked Little Harbor.

So I never knew what had happened to Mrs. Dacey until last summer when I noticed an obituary in the Cohasset Mariner: "Eleanor J. Dacey, July 5, aged 92, of Duxbury, formerly a resident of Cohasset for 30 years". Inside and out, she was a lovely woman and she brought a lot of pleasure to many of the children of Lincoln Hillside for many years. Merry Christmas Mrs. Dacey, and thank you.

Kathleen O'Donnell, a CHS graduate, grew up in Cohasset and now lives and works in the UK with her family. Her reflections about growing up on Lincoln Hillside appear occasionally in the Cohasset Mariner.

Lost diners

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

For a while, 50 or 60 years ago, it seemed like every town had one, or two, or three — long, thin buildings that resembled railroad cars at rest by the highway, their gleaming walls and windows and kitchen aromas attracting the hungry traveler.

They were the ideal spot for a quick cup of coffee from an earthenware mug en route to work in the morning, a role now filled to overflowing on every corner by another antiseptic Dunkin' Donuts franchise.

You could catch a hot dog or a hamburger for lunch with the speed of a McDonald's or a Burger King or order a more elaborate meal like fried chicken with mashed potatoes and gravy as they do in a KFC.

Best of all, most of them were open very late at night so you could have a cup of sobering coffee and polish up your alibi and other stories before heading home after a night of carousing.

I'm speaking, of course, of the diners that used to dot the landscape in the days before Burger King, Dunkin' Donuts and KFC began turning out hamburgers, doughnuts and fried chicken according to a mathematical formula like Ford assembles cars.

Right now, says Will Anderson of Bath, Maine, only some 200 diners exist in the northeast and the number is dropping fast, most recently Eddy's Diner, which used to grace the junction of Southern Artery and Quincy Avenue in Quincy. It's now a branch of the South Shore Savings Bank.

Only some 200 diners exist in the northeast and the number is dropping fast.

Anderson has just penned a tribute to the vanishing eateries called "Lost Diners and Roadside Restaurants of New England and New York," in which he traces the history of the diner, which apparently began in the 1870s when Walter Scott sold hot food and coffee from a horse-drawn wagon in front of the Providence Journal.

Did you know that the Modern Diner in Pawtucket, R. I., was the first diner in the nation to earn a place on the National Register of Historic Places and that they are planning to open the American Diner Museum in Providence in 2003?

At the same time Anderson was publishing his book, "Yankee Magazine" was publishing its list of the six best diners in each of the New England states. Yankee's best in Massachusetts is Kathy's Diner in Northampton.

There's nary a South Shore diner on the list of candidates.

In fact, outside of one on Hancock Street in North Quincy, I don't think there is a diner left on the whole South Shore.

My particular favorite from 60 years ago was Andy's Diner at the top of the hill in Weymouth Landing before the big rock was torn down to make way of Quirk's used cars. I can still savor his baked sausage with mashed potatoes, peas and gravy. It cost 50 cents or 65 cents, if I recall right.

I also thought highly of a nameless diner at Nantasket Beach, run by a fellow known as Old Man Cohen, and located where the Carousel-Under-the-Clock is today. It performed a peculiar function for those of us who worked in Paragon Park.

Late at night, after the park and the bars had closed, Old Man Cohen was known to splash and ounce or two of something stronger and more expensive than 10 cents worth of coffee into an earthenware mug and serve it to his friends.

But that didn't happen at every diner, of course.

HEALTH NOTES

More sewers, storm water and growth

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

A public meeting and workshop was held yesterday, Wednesday, Dec. 12, at the Town Hall auditorium to report on the status of engineering evaluations relative to the proposed sewer system extension to the Little Harbor area. State DEP representatives also reported on ongoing environmental evaluations for the water resources in town. The meeting was important, because, it shows the DEP that Cohasset is serious about cleaning up its water resources, which will eventually cause the state to rescind a judgement against Cohasset which fines the town for violating the EPA's clean water act. Cleaning up our groundwater problems has been expensive and troublesome, resulting in major inconveniences to many because of the disruption of our streets to bury sewer lines, and disturbing our yards to get the lines into our houses.

It has also changed Cohasset in more fundamental ways. We are a bedroom community for Boston, and nothing can change this fact of our geography. The town's jealous protection of our open space has resulted in about 20-25 percent of the roughly ten square miles completely protected by prohibiting building in one way or another. We have taken advantage of the Conservation Trust; we have the Trustees of Reservations, and many private initiatives to protect our land. But still, there are many acres of land which are available to build on, given the current state of our zoning laws and the technical progress being made in sewer and on-site treatment technology. Nobody needs to remind anyone in town who has watched with concern the recent "mansionization" of many houses in town, and the prices paid for others that there is enormous pressure to develop every inch of available land.

We have seen the town increase its inventory of homes by 40 new homes in the last three years.

Some have believed that it is possible to limit growth by limiting town services like sewers and good septic systems. Others believe it will not be possible to build on much of our land because it is unsuitable. Neither eventuality is realistic. The town must have healthy ways of getting rid of its wastewater. With the help of modern technology, wastewater can be processed on-site in practically every site where a home could be built. And if sewers are built, there will always be pressure to hook up adjacent dwellings. An example is the former Curtis estate on upper Jerusalem Road. This land of about 55 acres was left to trustees to be converted into a home for elderly women. Instead, the trustee used it as a home until he died, and the estate was turned over to the executor who, finding that the terms of the will left little possibility for the estate to ever be turned into an elderly home, sold the land and the income from the proceeds is finally being used to aid needy women as intended in the original Curtis will. The land was sold to a Hull developer for about $550,000 who recouped his money from the sale of three parcels containing houses. The rest of the land was considered unbuildable unless it could be attached to a sewer scheduled to go down Jerusalem Road, capacity from which would be directed to Hull under an agreement with that town. In a recent negotiation with Hull, the developer will pay Hull more than $600,000 to increase the capacity available to Cohasset to accommodate 26 new homes on the former Curtis estate. This land formerly considered unbuildable includes a stream called Rattlesnake Run along with other adjacent wetlands.

With the help of modern technology, wastewater can be processed on-site in practically every site where a home could be built.

We are in the process of expanding our sewer capacity and the state is on the threshold of expanding the permissible use of so called innovative/alternative on site treatment of wastewater, and all of this is being done without any kind of realistic plan in place to deal with growth of the type we are seeing. The sewer commission and the Board of Health are constrained by State regulations in place, and we must follow state rules. Without updated and well planned zoning and open space guidelines taking into account the relentless pressures for growth, we will be forced to authorize more homes than the town can absorb. Consequently this bedroom community will have more beds and less room. As a town, we have to establish goals for growth, and then decide how we are going to achieve them.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Students learn to deal with biases

New teacher launches project with 8th-graders

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

In his first year teaching at Cohasset Middle-High School, Rick Smith is trying to teach his students about tolerance and acceptance.

"Everyone in the world has biases, but it is how you deal with them that is important," Smith said.

Smith, the technology teacher at the middle-high school, initiated a hate project for his 50 eighth-grade students in which they investigated and reported on a bias of their choosing.

Smith said he thought of the project when he was walking through the halls after Sept. 11 and heard students making disparaging comments about Muslims. He realized the need to talk about prejudices and biases.

"When students use derogatory words and it hurts other people, they need to realize it is wrong," he said. "The students had an understanding of their biases but it was never discussed that much."

The first step of the project was for the students taking a bias survey on the internet. They recorded their responses to 16 scenarios and kept their answers private for their personal use.

After they took the survey, the students picked a category, such as race, ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, and prepared a presentation on the subject.

A one-page summary of their findings was plastered on an eight-foot by four-foot poster which was displayed in the halls of the middle-high school. Pieces of paper that say "stop" were arranged on the poster to form the word "hate." The students' summaries of the issues they investigated surround the word.

"When students use derogatory words and it hurts other people, they need to realize it is wrong."
— Rick Smith, technology teacher

An example of the type of issues the students were asked to reflect on is; two teenage boys are shooting hoops and are a little bored, they decide to make things more interesting by getting a friendly little wager going.

Whoever scores the most points will be treated to a pizza by the other player. One of the boys is African-American and the other is Asian. Who do you think is more likely to end up with the pizza?

Another scenario described is; your busy company needs a new receptionist, and as personnel director, it's your job to hire her. The receptionist job is a key position, as she's the first person every client will meet. She should reflect the company image: friendly, smart and efficient.

An agency has sent over two applicants and they're both equally well-qualified and personable. They're even dressed in similar stylish suits, the type of professional "look" you need. One of the women is thin and the other is definitely a "plus-size." Whom would you choose?

Smith felt the variety of scenarios described in the survey made the students examine all aspects of their biases.

Smith said his students got a lot out of the project. He said he was nervous when introducing the project to the class because of the reaction he might have received from eighth-graders.

"I was happily surprised with the sensitivity the students showed," he said. Smith, who previously taught in Sharon, said his former school emphasized diversity while in Cohasset it sometimes takes a back seat.

"The kids are pretty protected here," he said. "It's important to know that there is a big world out there."

Smith said the next project he is going to introduce is one on tolerance. He said it was a natural transition from dealing with hate, to learning to tolerate others.

To view all 16 issues the students were asked to respond to visit:

guy, while the master bathroom boasted a bottle of champagne by the whirlpool for a more intimate perhaps New Year's celebration. The day's guests were also delighted by the children's room, where several plush characters and one fair-haired angel was already tucked in her bed. And last but not least, lest we forget the surprise in the bathroom adjacent. Explaining just how the decorated fir came to find its home in the shower stall, volunteer decorator Joan Carlo explained, "I thought to myself, 'what do I do?' There had to be a tree in here somewhere!"

Indeed it was amongst the talks of the tour, while just up the roadway awaited the day's second sight to behold. There the splendid Atlantic Avenue Victorian sported "please come in" pineapples in its exterior flower boxes, while inside awaited an abundance of traditional holiday fruit adorning everything from tables to mantles. In the dining room a most tempting punch bowl sat ready to serve the well-appointed table, while the home's stunning four-season sunroom lay set for a special holiday tea. And finally, we won't soon forget the impressive (and painstakingly hand-glued) topiaries sculpted of silver Hershey Kisses — just one of the many hand-made touches you didn't want to miss.

"People just love getting all different ideas," offered house captain Maureen Byrne on the whole, adding the crew of volunteers at this home in particular had a wonderful time getting in the spirit preparing, and pretending they were in Florida!

Meanwhile, another Community Garden Club team of elves were similarly busy at the tour's next stop — the distinguished 456 King St. — where homeowner Louis Harvey explained decorative work had been in the planning for a month. Winding their way up the hill to the old hunting lodge visitors knew they were in for a treat, as most expressed being anxious to see for themselves the recently added tower and other renovations which have been ten-years in the works by homeowner Harvey. In the end all agreed the finished product was well worth the wait. "Don't miss King Street," was regularly heard whispered throughout the day, with particular praise given to the hand-painted holiday gourds, and the stockings hung with care on the Great Room's massive stone fireplace. Overall, however,

"The teams' major objective was to be understated . . . to use fresh materials and show restraint," explained Community Garden Club member Nancy Gilmore from her post watching tour takers pass and collecting their compliments. "We've all fallen in love with this house, and we wanted to let it speak for itself."

And so after bidding goodbye to St. Nick himself (sitting proud in his fire red Prowler in the driveway) the day's revelers next headed on to experience the cozy and warm Williamsburg-reminiscent home at number 178 South Main. And with its nature-inspired wreaths, simply packaged presents and classic New England décor, the former sea captain's home remained refreshingly similar to the Christmases coming centuries before. Here visitors remarked on the apple and Audubon theme mirroring the home's interior, while picking up ideas like hanging family photographs from the tree and filling the fireplace with holly. But perhaps the most memorable item,

"I loved the way they set the kitchen table with all the makings for s'mores, and made the marshmallows into little snowmen," said admirer Cathy Went of Hanover.

And finally, ending the day in true style, Christmas Reflections participants felt privileged to sneak a peek inside the elegant residence presiding over Beach Street. There poinsettias and live piano music were first to greet guests, while elsewhere in the home awaited a wealth of fresh offerings from pepper berries, to junipers, to cranberry hydrangeas. Here especially, "They did a really nice job with the bouquets," remarked hostess Sharon Daly, adding she'd heard more than one admirer wishing to sneak them home.

So after enjoying the home's tree built for two in the romantic master bedroom suite, the outside deck's swan surrounded by pinecones and moss, and that last little tree outside on the dock overlooking Little Harbor, tour-goers returned to their own homes to put their ideas into action. Meanwhile, for the Cohasset Community Garden Club it was time to say a few thank yous.

"We really appreciate the support of the community and the club effort," summed up Dickstein this week. "It takes a whole nation to put this together . . . to make everybody happy and the tour enjoyable, and we've got some terrific talent in this club. Everywhere I looked that day I would see something different, and I think the beauty of our tour is that these are ideas real people can duplicate in their own homes. Some are very simple, but they make a terrific statement!"

Speaking for fellow co-chair Lee Drew, Dickstein goes on to offer the club's appreciation to the homeowners who opened their doors for the cause, as well as all the volunteers who took to their ovens to bake delicacies for the tour's tea portion. A thank you is also extended to the Broad Cove Chorale's a cappella octet for providing the day's carols, while finally, ticket purchasers will be pleased to learn that the day's proceeds will support the Garden Club's many community-minded projects including historic restoration and preservation, civic beautification, scholarship grants, education programs and more.

Alzheimer's support and adult day care

The Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore will sponsor a program on Wednesday, Dec. 19, at 7:30 p.m. at the Hingham Senior Center, 220 Central Street.

Gervaise Haley, R.N. and Director of Harbor House Adult Day Health in Hingham will present 'What is Adult Day Health."

A slide presentation will explain what goes on at an adult day health center, how it enhances both the patient's and caregiver's lives, the cost, the care provided and how centers differ.

Haley certified as a dementia specialist, whose career has encompassed designing and implementing specialized programs for Alzheimer's patients, is also an adjunct faculty member at Northeastern University. A discussion and question and answer period will follow her presentation. A list of all area day health centers will be available at this meeting.

For further information, call Ruth Scully at 781-740-2426 or JoAnn Mitchell at 781-749-5417. For this meeting only there will be no respite care provided during the meeting.

Signs speak for themselves

painting, and tries to create an interesting foreground, middle ground, and background to the sign. He says people often come in and ask for signs with big lettering and huge designs but he points them in another direction.

"It's analogous to a song," he said. "If a song is continuously loud and obnoxious it's not going to grab anyone's attention but, if you add soft moments to the song the loud parts gain importance."

Hassan, who has been in business for 30 years, feels he has learned what it takes to create a great sign.

"I've educated myself in what catches people's eyes. I work very hard at the design and I think that's why I have been in business for so long," Hassan said.

He added that computers have completely changed the industry. Before the advent of computers, Hassan would have to sketch the designs multiple times to get it right. Now, he can manipulate the size, color, and overall look of the drawing with the click of a mouse.

Hassan said the challenge is to come up with a design that does not blend in with everything else.

"There is so much interference out there that if you can come up with something that people stop and look at, you are going to succeed."

Hassan said one of the luxuries of the sign business is the independence he has.

"It's wonderful being my own boss, there is such a sense of freedom," he said. "The business has never really gotten slow because there is always a need for signs."

Hassan has five full-time employees that work for him. Bob Giallongo who does the carvings, George Cobbett Sr. who builds the signs, George Cobbett Jr. who works on the printing and vinyl aspects of the job, Brian Coughlan who works on the lettering and Fred Koelsch, who is Hassan's bookkeeper.

Another benefit to the sign business is that a job well done acts as an advertisement for his business as well, Hassan said.

Hassan has three children, Joshua who is 31, Liz who is 19, and Sarah who is 16. Hassan married his wife Jane in September.

The signs can cost anywhere from $200 to $10,000 depending on the size and the intricacy of the design.

Sewer hookup plan trashed

pared to pay $650,000.

In 1999, the Planning Board gave its conditional approval to developer Stephen Corey's plan for Jerusalem Road Estates.

But at the time, the Planning Board said an on-site septic system would be virtually impossible to install at the location, apparently prompting Corey to contact Hull.

Attorney Charles Humphreys, who represents Corey, said his client was forced to look elsewhere when Cohasset would not provide the sewer service needed.

"The easiest thing to do was to make a deal with Hull," he said. He added that Cohasset should have been more willing to help Corey find suitable sewer space.

Haddad is baffled.

"If Hull had extra capacity, why wouldn't they talk to us?" he asked.

Haddad said he will be meeting with Town Counsel to discuss the legality of the matter. The primary issue is whether a developer can make an agreement with another town and still use Cohasset's new sewer pipes which were installed as part of the North Cohasset sewer project. North Cohasset is hooked up to Hull through an inter-municipal agreement.

Hull Town Manager Philip Lemnios said he has received a couple communications with Cohasset and will meet with the selectmen after Jan. 1.

"I don't feel that making the deal with the developer impacts Cohasset one way or the other," he said.

Hull Selectman Josh Cutler said he has never seen any letters requesting a meeting. He added at the Hull selectmen's meeting Tuesday some Hull and Cohasset residents were opposed to hooking up Jerusalem Road Estaes to the sewer plant because they felt if the town denied the connection, the subdivision would not be built.

"It is not our place to control zoning issues in Cohasset," Cutler said.

Cutler said Hull selectmen would be happy to meet with Cohasset selectmen, with whom they have always had good inter-town relations.

Cohasset Selectman Ronnie McMorris was not pleased with Hull's actions.

"That was not a very neighborly move by Hull," she said.

Sean Cunning, a member of the sewer commission, said he is not too concerned with the situation.

"We're looking at the bigger picture," he said. While Cunning said he's shocked that Hull would sell the capacity to a private developer, which is out of the norm, he added that13,000 gallons of sewage per day should not impact Hull's capacity significantly. Cohasset is buying 80,000 gallons of capacity per day for the North Cohasset project.

AvalonBay Communities, which is proposing a 254-unit apartment complex off Route 3A in Cohasset, is also looking at the possibility of buying sewer capacity from Hull.

Avalon Bay's next stop: ZBA guidelines for a comprehensive permit. Now Avalon can formally file for the permit with the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Town Planner Liz Harrington also said MHFA's approval is a "very preliminary step" in the process and essentially means the project meets the criteria for the state housing subsidy program.

The Virginia-based developer is proposing building 23, two-to-three story wood-frame buildings with one, two- and three-bedroom units at the former Webb-Norfolk site across from Atlantic Bagel. Avalon will seek a comprehensive permit for the $43 million project under the state's "Anti-snob Zoning Act" that renders many of the town's zoning regulations inapplicable in exchange for setting aside 20-25 percent units for affordable housing.

The statute — Mass. General Laws Chapter 40B — sets a 10 percent goal of affordable housing for each community. Cohasset has about 3 percent or about 76 units of affordable housing in town.

Avalon says rents will range from $1,200-$2,000 for the market-rate units and $700-$1,000 for the 60 or so affordable ones, which would look the same as the other units and be dispersed throughout the complex.

The project with heated pool, spa, exercise facility and clubhouse is geared toward "empty-nesters" and young professionals with no kids although Avalon estimates the project would add an additional 30 schoolchildren to Cohasset. However, Superintendent of Schools Edward Malvey has gone on record saying that number could be much higher.

MHFA stated the proposed housing design is generally appropriate for the site and the project appears financially feasible. However the agency said, after soliciting comments from Cohasset officials and town boards, Avalon must address the following:

• Provide a traffic-engineering study and site entry and design solution that addresses traffic impacts on the local street system

• Construction plans must adhere to all applicable environmental protection requirements, including assuring protection of the public water supply

• Complying with conditions issued by the Conservation Commission or state Department of Environmental Protection on wetlands protection and storm-water management

• Evidence of providing adequate sanitary and storm sewer service

Roberts said before Avalon applies for the comprehensive permit, the company wants to figure out how to handle wastewater from the development. One option is buying excess capacity in the Hull Treatment Plant that would include installing two miles of pipe to connect to the Hull. [Hull recently sold some sewer capacity to the developer of Jerusalem Road Estates.] An on-site sewer treatment plant could be another option for Avalon, Roberts said.

"We want to be comfortable with our plans (for wastewater) before we file with the comprehensive permit," he said.

Member Peter Pratt voiced concerns at last week's Planning Board meeting because MHFA didn't incorporate the board's concerns in its Avalon site approval. The Planning Board is concerned with the potential loss of valuable commercial property in Cohasset, which is 93 percent residentially zoned.

Of the total 384 acres zoned for commercial development in town, 171 remain undeveloped. The proposed complex would eat up 38 percent of that.

The Planning Board sought an opinion from Town Counsel whether the town could deny Avalon's comprehensive permit based on the grounds it would severely restrict any future commercial development opportunities. In other words, the Planning Board hoped the town's need for commercially developable land could outweigh its need for affordable housing.

Town Counsel said there were cases in which towns successfully denied comprehensive permit applications that conflicted with the town's master plan — but the effort couldn't be a ploy to frustrate housing for which there is a need.

Planning Board member Chris Ford said the MHFA letter was essentially a "form letter" and was nothing to get overly excited about.

"It is, what it is," he said.

Member Bob Sturdy objected to the concept of "anti-snob zoning." He feels personally that people should live where they can afford to and that "every single geographic section" should not have to provide affordable housing. There is no God-given right to live in places like Newport, he said.

Roberts of Avalon said he is hopeful the project will move ahead and plans to file for a comprehensive permit early next year.

"There is certainly a challenge with the sewer but we're optimistic we can figure it out," he said.

Women dealing with homelessness together

time. Annette was still coping with her drug problem.

"The landlord gave me three months to stay there and try to find another apartment, but that was unsuccessful," Annette said. She had nowhere to go. Through a referral, Annette found Carolina Hill, but she really did not feel like going to the shelter. She wanted to be around her Boston-based family.

"It's really hard being out here," she said. "There's really no transport to get around — we have to rely on cabs and those cost a lot of money. It's tough to find a job when you have no way to get around. We have to get by the best we can." She added the other tough aspect of living in the shelter is accommodating her two young sons who live there with her.

Paula said her life used to be rather normal before she became homeless. In fact, she had a lot going for her. She lived at her own place in Roslindale.

"I was in a very professional position in the medical industry," she said. "I worked in the surgical department of a major hospital. I was in that job for many years, and I was always self-sufficient."

Paula said eventually she had a child, but at the same time, the relationship with the person she was involved with started falling apart rapidly. In the end, she made him leave her house for good.

"I was on my own, and right away, I found I was struggling with daycare expenses for my son," she said. "In addition to that, I started seriously worrying about how I was going to pay everything else like credit card bills and paying rent. I was under extreme pressure and I ended up having an emotional breakdown. I quit all the jobs I had at the time and I got on anti-depressants. I couldn't handle it anymore." She added she also began drinking very heavily.

On Oct. 3, Paula was evicted from her apartment after seven years of living there. By that time, her child was eight years old. Her son now lives with her at Carolina Hill.

"It was so much stress," Paula said. "It was a very traumatic period in my life. Stressful situations just became overwhelming to me. Now, I'm working on my relationship. He knows I live in a shelter. I like it at Carolina Hill. I always visited Marshfield growing up so it's nice coming back. It's a good place for me and my son. I've met some of the most beautiful people here."

Annette and Paula are both struggling to find some sort of housing outside of Carolina Hill, but they are not having that much luck. They are discovering the harsh reality that rent prices, no matter where one goes in Massachusetts, are not cheap. They are also finding that many of the places which rent apartments have waiting lists which stretch a long way back.

"I haven't heard anything yet," Annette said. "It's just a waiting process now."

In the meantime, both women are getting back to normal with their physical health. Annette has been sober for a year and Paula stopped her drinking. Both of them attend drug and alcohol classes and know the key to success is getting their lives on the right track. They say they have learned from their mistakes and are working hard for a second chance.

"God knows what would've happened to either of us if we didn't calm down," Paula said.

Annette and Paula said they are both going to see their loved ones during the holidays, but they will be looking forward to spending time together when they get back. They both said there is an amazing spirit of camaraderie at Carolina Hill between all the women who live there.

"We're all in the same situation," Paula said. "We're all we have right now. I've been very proud of Annette because she's been such an amazing person in here. I look at her as a role model. For her to conquer her demons that she had is amazing to me."

Both women are also being sure to keep their respective life goals in sight. Paula wants to go back to school to further her career and Annette wants to eventually go to nursing school.

"First, I want to deal with my recovery," Annette said. "The tools that I need are the meetings I go to. I'm just going to take it one day at a time. We all have to do what we have to do here. We can't complain about it. We just have to depend on one another."

"I never thought I would be homeless," Paula added. "I think it's time to put the faces of homelessness in view so people can see it can happen to them too — in an instant."

School construction projects are up to speed

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The new construction projects at the Deer Hill School and middle-high school are right on schedule, according to School Building Committee chairman Robert Spofford.

"We're very pleased with how the projects are going," he said.

Spofford said the middle-high school is approximately 25 percent complete and is even a little ahead of schedule. Currently, the cement foundation has been laid and the construction company, TLT Construction Corp., is in the process of installing the brick on the exterior of the building.

Spofford said because of the nice weather, the construction company has been able to get a jump on exterior plans, such as brick work and landscaping. The company is currently trying to get the building encased so it will be able to do interior work, such as wiring and the construction of the classroom walls, in the winter. TLC will also finish the floors of the classrooms over the next couple months.

Spofford said by next fall, the new construction should be completed. This does not include renovations to the old middle-high school. Students will begin to take classes in the new building in the fall so the construction company can start renovating the old building. For example, the library at the old school will be moved into the new one, and a principal's office will be built where the old library used to be. Plans are for students to be completely immersed in the new school by Dec. 15, 2003.

"Our mantra continues to be: we are on budget, we are on time," he said.

The middle-high school is a larger project than the Deer Hill School and Spofford said when it is completed it will be a state-of-the-art facility. There will be new science labs, media and language arts labs, a new auditorium and new locker rooms to name a few of the features.

"Our mantra continues to be: we are on budget, we are on time."

— Robert Spofford, School Building Committee

He said the only problems the committee has faced so far are normal construction delays that have not impeded the process at all. He added new construction tends to have fewer problems than renovations because if there are fewer unforeseen problems with it.

At the Deer Hill School, construction is looking just as good as with the middle-high school. With plans to move all of the students into the building by Dec. 15, 2002, Spofford said the construction company is trying to get the building encased for the winter. This is so BSC construction, which is doing the work on the Deer Hill School, can start the interior work on time and finish the project by the anticipated date.

Spofford said over the summer the construction company will be moving the cafeteria, and other rooms to the new school. He added the construction company has been wonderful in accommodating the school's request concerning safety issues around the project.

"With children running around, you always want to make sure you're very safe," Spofford said.

He said while education begins with a positive teacher-student relationship, having a modern facility in which to nurture those relationships can only help.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he is very pleased with how the projects are coming along.

"Both projects are going very well," he said. "We hope this is indicative of things to come."

Supt. Edward Malvey said the School Committee will send out bids in March for specific furniture designs and computer equipment.

"We've started the initial phases of reviewing what needs we will have for furniture and other materials," Malvey said.

He added he is extremely pleased the construction has not inhibited the students from learning at all.

"There has been no slow down of the education process," he said.

Buttonwood Books will host Scituate illustrator Joan Paley on Sunday Dec. 16 from 2-4 p.m. in Cohasset. Paley will sign her new book, "The Emperor Lays An Egg," by Brenda Guiberson. Paley created the collages in the book by cutting shapes from paper that she hand painted. Free. Call 781-383-2665 to order your signed copy if unable to attend.

'Christmas Carol' at Buttonwood

Buttonwood Books in Cohasset will host illustrator Dean Morrissey on Saturday, Dec. 15 from 1–3 p.m. Morrissey will host a drawing workshop and signing his latest work, an adaptation of "A Christmas Carol" (Harper Collins, $17.95). This classic story by Charles Dickens has been recently adapted by Stephen Krensky and illustrated by Morrissey, whose extraordinary pictures invite readers to step into Victorian England with art that is richly detailed and imbued with the color and texture. Morrissey lives on the South Shore with his wife and son. Free. Please call (781) 383-2665 for more information or to order your signed copy if unable to attend.

Endicott College coming to town

Will offer master's program for local teachers

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Local teachers won't have to go very far to work on a master's degree program.

Thanks to Endicott College and Cohasset Middle-High School, teachers and other community members seeking a master of education degree in arts and learning will only have to travel to CMHS for the course work.

"We are trying to make the program as accessible to as many school systems as possible," says Robert Boose, vice president and dean of the graduate school at Endicott, which is in Beverly. "The whole notion is we are trying to reach out to the adult learner."

Endicott offers off-campus programs on the North Shore and in corporate settings, but this will be the college's first program on the South Shore.

It all started when Endicott's Paul Squarcia, the former superintendent of schools in the Silver Lake Regional District, contacted CMHS assistant principal Jack DeLorenzo. DeLorenzo worked for the Silver Lake district (which includes Pembroke, Kingston, Plympton and Halifax) before coming to Cohasset years ago.

"Basically Paul called me up," DeLorenzo recalled. "Endicott was trying to get a program on the South Shore and went to the South Shore Art Center, which couldn't commit because of having too busy a schedule."

DeLorenzo said CMHS will have a new arts facility in September as part of the school renovation project. He explained that under state education reform, teachers must obtain a master's degree within five years.

At an informational meeting earlier this week about 20 people expressed interest in the program including five to six from Cohasset.

"This is going to be good for the South Shore and good PR for Cohasset," DeLorenzo said. In addition to convenience and PR "consideration for Cohasset teachers will be given toward their tuition," he said.

Enid Larsen, assistant dean of graduate programs, said the course "Arts and Learning" will provide a multi-disciplinary approach to learning through the arts.

"It's not just for teachers but for anyone interested including community leaders and therapists," she said.

The Endicott Web site describes the Arts and Learning program, as enabling "students to develop enhanced skills for utilizing the arts (music, movement, drama, poetry, visual arts, storytelling, digital arts) through arts-based research and in the development of curriculum, treatment approaches, leadership skills and community development."

The graduate course, which will be taught by Stephanie Grinier of Hingham, is expected to start in February and will be conducted on weekends.

Once the Arts and Language program is launched, more master's degree programs could be added to the Cohasset site.

For more information, call Endicott at 978-232-2199 or DeLorenzo at 781-383-6100.

Working out relationships

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Cohasset police could soon be hooking up with local teenagers — and not in the local police log.

Athletic Director Ron Ford said police officers will volunteer to help supervise the fitness center, which will be staying open after school until 3:30 p.m.. Police volunteering their time would not only save the town some money — but could improve relations between the police department and the youths of Cohasset.

Police Chief Brian Noonan supports the idea.

"Years ago, officers all lived in the town and were involved with the community," he said. "We're trying to re-establish that relationship between the town and the officers who protect it."

He said since the idea has been thrown around, three officers have already volunteered for the program.

"I think it's a wonderful program," Noonan said.

Ford said he felt this was a good way for officers and students to get to know each other.

"At the center they will be working in a different environment, one that is more conducive to getting acquainted," he said. "This may help everyone."

In Hanover, the concept of police and teens working out together in a gym environment started years ago.

Hanover police Officer Tom Hayes, who is also president of the Hanover Police Boys Club, said improving relations between the young people of Hanover and the police department has proved very beneficial. The program, which has been in existence for 25 years, includes aerobic classes, karate classes, and weightlifting training.

The center charges $1 for high-school students to work out, $2 for officers and college students, and $3 for all adults.

"We are all one family," Hayes said. "The officers here put there heart and soul into the program."

The program in Hanover raises all the money itself, with no financial support from the town. The center charges $1 for high-school students to work out, $2 for officers and college students, and $3 for all adults.

Hayes said the center has proved to be extremely successful.

"We've had five or six kids in the program who are now part of the police force," he said.

Ford said opening the fitness center for more hours will provide a greater opportunity for kids to take advantage of the center.

"The fitness center has been an integral part of the school," Ford said. "Opening the doors longer provides a great opportunity for the students."

In a letter to the School Committee, Mike Gill, school health director, stated he would be forced to lock the fitness center doors at 2:05 p.m.., when school lets out for the day because he has not received any donations this year. Gill suggested using the Athletic Revolving Fund might be the best way to provide a budget for the fitness center.

The School Committee supported the request by authorizing a transfer of $3,500 from the Athletic Revolving Fund to the program to pay for adult supervision per afternoon session from 2:15-3 p.m. for the remainder of the school year. With funding in place, supervision should be assured, Gill said, but volunteers from the police would help offset the cost estimated to run $4,500-$5,000 annually.

Ford said the center will be used by student athletes during the season and in the off-season. He said he envisioned 25 to 30 students using the facilities every day.

"A lot of kids aren't in season and still want to work out," he said. "It's such an incredible facility it's a shame for it not to be used."

GIFTS of HOPE

A child's smile brings hope to all.

What will make your children happy this holiday? For some, new toys under the tree. For others maybe a week off from school. But for many children in the Greater Boston area, it is something as simple as food. This holiday season, there will be over 200,000 hungry people in Eastern Massachusetts. In fact, one in five children under the age of 12 lives in a household that struggles to put food on the table.

Many people are looking for a way to help, but don't know how. Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program can help you reach those in need in your area. For the past 10 years, readers' Gifts of Hope donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children in the Greater Boston community. Another season is upon us. And more people need your help.

Please join the Cohasset Mariner and Community Newspaper Company in giving the greatest gift of all – the gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way toward helping those in need.

Here is some helpful information to plan your gift:
- $15 provides 30 people at a homeless shelter with a bowl of hot soup and a sandwich.
- $30 provides two families with a week's supply of groceries from a food pantry.
- $50 provides one neighborhood food program with 75 meals.
- $250 provides a food pantry or soup kitchen with more than 1,500 pounds of food.

PLEASE MAKE YOUR TAX DEDUCTIBLE CHECK OR MONEY ORDER PAYABLE TO: (Choose from one of the local charities) Father Bill's Place, Carolina Hill or South Shore Friends of the Homeless and mail to: Gifts of Hope, c/o Anne Rodwell, 16 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050 (Please do not make your check payable to this newspaper or to Gifts of Hope as that will only delay disbursement efforts. Thank you.)

A "seasoned" Dan Kinchla returns for his second season in net for the Skippers this winter.

Hope on ice for Skippers

Encouraging signs abound for C.H.S. hockey team

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

Signs, signs, everywhere there are signs. And virtually all of the ones directed toward Cohasset High's hockey team are pointing up.

For starters, Pilgrim Conference realignment has removed the larger schools from the Skippers league schedule. Former league rivals Scituate, Rockland and Hanover, the defending Div. 3 state champion, have been placed in a newly created powerhouse Patriot League along with Hingham, the defending state Div. 1 champions, and Duxbury, the 1999-2000 Div. 2 state champs.

Cohasset is now left with old "small" school rivals Hull, Norwell and Abington, along with South Shore League newcomers Harwich and Mashpee, providing a much more reasonable league slate than last year for the Skippers, to say the least. Though Cohasset High, with 303 enrolled students (as of Oct. 1), is still the smallest school by far in the league, at least it is no longer pitted against schools literally twice its size.

And the news gets better. The Skippers lost only two players to graduation, and return three full forward lines. What is more, coach Dennis Walsh reports he has formed a solid fourth line from the newcomers.

Skippers skate past Devils, 14-0. See page 18.

"We're very optimistic with the way things are shaping up," said Walsh, who returns for his 30th year as the Skippers bench boss, that in itself another of the positive signs.

It will also be his last. Walsh retired from teaching last year but decided to give it one more whirl on the ice.

"Yup, one last hurrah," confirmed Walsh with a laugh. "I know my mindset is that we might as well go for it all now. With this group, I really feel like it's within our grasp to advance quite far in the states."

As for motivation, they've got that too. The Skippers missed the state tourney by just one win last season, going 8-10-2.

"We almost met our goal," the coach noted. "Hopefully, that will give us a little added incentive this season."

Want more good news?...You've got it.

Twenty-eight skaters turned out for the opening of camp two weeks ago, and all are still here. This represents one of Cohasset High's top turnouts in years. The Cohasset High Hockey Boosters responded by raising funds to help create a junior varsity program for the first time in many years, and former CHS hockey and football star Pete Sandblom has been hired to coach the team.

"In years past it was tough to get some of the newer players much ice time, but this will help us bring those players along," noted Walsh. "This is obviously a great thing for the future of the program."

The two losses to the caps and gowns were both on the blue line. Dan Morse was a solid stay-at-home defender, as well as a captain and leader, while Jay Rasmussen was a potent two-way threat.

Fortunately, coach Walsh feels he has two players who can step pretty seamlessly into those roles in newcomers Mike Colorio, a junior, and Ted Straughn, a freshman.

"Mike and Ted are both talented players who have stood out almost since the first day of practice," reported the coach. "Tim is a very strong kid for his age who looks more like a senior than a freshman out there."

This is not all that surprising considering Ted comes from a "hockey family." Older brother Tim was a top defenseman last year as a junior but has been moved up to forward thanks to the emergence of his junior sibling and Colorio.

Turning it around

Lady hoopsters open with impressive win

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

If their first game was any indication, this year will be very, very different for the girls basketball team.

Coming off a 1-17 season last year, the Lady Skippers came out full throttle against Avon Monday night for a 62-36 win.

"It was a good way to open the season," understated head coach Ellen Carr. "[The game] showed some of our strengths, and some of the areas we need to work on."

Junior Lindsay Grossman scored a game high 23 points, including 14 in the first half. With quick hands, she was able to operate at point guard and shooting guard, while racking up steals and assists.

Sharing the backcourt duties was sophomore Jen Buckley, who performed extremely well in her first ever varsity start. A very fast standout on the varsity soccer and track teams, Buckley totaled 13 points while splitting time at point.

The success of the tandem of Buckley and Grossman should be further enhanced upon the return of junior Heather Peramo. The junior suffered a broken pinky in a recent practice, but hopes to return to the team within a week. With Peramo back in the line-up, she and Buckley will fill out the backcourt, and Grossman will be able to move back to her more natural position of small forward.

Junior Laraine Langford, the starting point guard of last year, will be returning to the line-up by their next game. Her fast hands and solid ball-handling skills will fit nicely into Carr's aggressive game plan.

"Our guards are fast, and I think they are hungry enough to go after Cohasset Junior Julie Lordan, a South Shore League All-Star, was a deserving Honorable Mention for our All-Scholastic team.

Skippers' O'Neill named among area's elite

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process here was not an easy one.

Several of the young women you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received strong consideration for this All-Scholastic honor. After consulting with area coaches, however, these are the choices we made for our 2001 Mariner All-Scholastic girls soccer team.

Maggie O'Neill - Senior (Capt.)
Midfield – Cohasset

Deftly directed the Lady Skippers attack from her center-mid position the last few years, but moved to the frontline to score a few huge goals during the team's furious stretch run this fall that saw them fall just short of the magic .500 mark and a tourney berth ... wound up with five goals and three assists...a three-year starter...two-time South Shore League All-Star...a Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable mention last year...plays soccer year round as a member of the South Shore Select team...has applied for early acceptance to Villanova University, which her older sister

It's generally a nice feeling to walk through the main entrance of Cohasset High and immediately spot clippings from the most recent Mariner sports section hanging right there outside the athletic director's office.

That was far from the case last week when I was instantly assailed by my choice of two days earlier to run a big photo of Cohasset star wrestler Dan Littauer above the fold on the front of Cohasset sports, along with our wrestling preview story.

Ironically, you see, it was at about the same time this page was running through the presses last Wednesday night that Littauer, the team's senior captain and leader in every imagin-

Cohasset-Norwell gymnastics team appears primed for big things this winter

By Joe Reardon

Gymnastics coaches often hesitate when it comes to predicting how well their teams will do during the winter months, and rightly so. Injuries that come hand-in-hand with the sport and the usual colds, strep throats and flu can decimate a team, particularly if it lacks depth.

Cohasset-Norwell coach Kara Connerty said she doesn't want to "jinx" this season's squad by talking of elaborate expectations. Connerty, now in her third season coaching the combined team after three years coaching the Clippers, did say the Cohasset-Norwell team is deep with a freshman flavor in the fold. Add attends, a Div. 1 school that competes in soccer in the Big East, one of the nation's most competitive athletic conferences...if accepted, Maggie may try-out for the team as a walk-on or sign up to play for a nearby club team...has also applied to Merrimac College...plans to major in Liberal Arts... Cohasset coach Deb Beal: "Maggie is such a strong presence in the middle of the field. She had such a great sense of the game, and was always so consistent. I hate to think where we would have been without her the last few years."

Maureen Halloran - Senior (Capt.) - Stopper - Hanover

This three-year starter was a force in the defensive midfield for Hanover...While a talented defensive player, Halloran also made substantial contributions to the Lady Indians' offense and is most well-known for her near perfect placements on restarts and for her ability to connect on a big throw in...Scored a goal and two assists for Hanover this season...The Patriot League, Eastern Mass. and All-state All-star was a key factor in Hanover's Div. 3 State Championship in 2000...Halloran has played for the South Coast club team since the age of 10, developing uncanny skills in the process, according to her coach...Also a two-year captain on the HHS basketball team and made the Mariner All-Scholastic hoop squad last season.Halloran also is on the prom committee and is active in Student Council...The senior is considering attending a number of colleges, including Salve Regina, Northeastern, and Stonehill and would like to continue her soccer career. Hanover coach Garth Nelson: "Maureen has an excellent vision of the field and is a good communicator. She has all the fundamental technical skills you could ask for in a player. She's very competitive and is a very consistent performer. She's a kick to have around."

Jocelyn Hickey - Senior (Capt.) - Midfielder - Hanover

A two-year starter, Hickey's solid play on the left sideline in Hanover's midfield came up huge for the Lady Indians this season...Her good speed and solid footwork created many offensive opportunities for Hanover...The senior captain took most of the Lady Indians' corner kicks and racked up three assists in the process. Hickey also scored three goals this season...Played a key role on Hanover's Div. 3 State Championship team in 2000. Hickey says she is most proud of her team's ability to play together all season long...The Patriot League All-star is also a member of the National Honor Society and Community Serivce Club...Hickey is considering attending Brown, Providence, St. Mike's or University of Vermont. Hanover coach Garth Nelson: "The combination of speed, grace, and intelligence is what made her a solid player. She's got a great cross and penetrates well. She's poetry in motion."

Liz Woodward - Senior (Capt.) - Forward - Hanover

A three-year varsity player and first-year starter, Woodward had a solid year on the frontline for Hanover...Scored four goals for the Lady Indians from the center forward position...Grew up playing soccer in the sweeper position on a Club Soccer team, HHS coach Garth Nelson saw a potential forward in Woodward and made the switch...The senior captain, who saw key minutes off the bench last season in which Hanover won a Div. 3 State Championship, combined good speed and ball control to penetrate opposing team's defenses...Also a great receiver, Woodward's patience was solid, often taking smart shots as opposed to rushing a play...The Patriot League All-star is president of her senior class and is president of Student Council...Woodward is considering many colleges including Boston College and Boston University. Hanover coach Garth Nelson: "This was really her breakthrough year. She was an excellent captain who concentrated most on the needs of the team. She was a quiet leader and was always positive. She kept everyone's chins up."

Sarah Abbott - Senior (Capt.) - Fullback - Marshfield

A three-year starter Abbott's control in the Marshfield backfield was a key element to the team's success in the Old Colony League...The senior captain combined good speed, impressive footwork, and solid ball control to consistently clear balls...Also a tremendous defensive player, Abbott often marked her opponents' best forward...Voted by the OCL as one of the top five players in the league, Abbott also represented Marshfield on the Eastern Mass. All-star team...The senior played a key role in the Lady Rams' impressive post-season run last season which ended at the Div. 1 State Championships...Also a talented tennis player, Abbott will most likely play first singles for MHS this spring and will be a captain...Abbott is ranked among the top 10 percent of her class, is on the National Honor Society, Student Council, Key Club, Developing Friendships, and is VP of American Field Service...She is considering attending Colby as a pre-med student and plans to play soccer. Marshfield coach Fred Podbelski: "She is a very skilled player. She's probably one of the more skilled defensive players in the league. She has tremendous footwork, speed, and ball control. Plus, she's just a great kid."

Joy Gueverra - Senior - Midfielder - Marshfield

A three-year starter, Gueverra's impressive strength was simply a force to be reckoned with in the center midfield spot...Although mostly a defensive player, Gueverra also made key contributions on offense and finished as the team's third leading scorer with six goals and six assists...Was Marshfield's own iron woman, playing multiple positions and taking all of the team's corners and restarts, placing the ball perfectly nearly every time...Started as a halfback last season and played a role in the Lady Rams' Cinderella tourney run which landed them at the Div. 1 State Championship...Was recognized as an All-state All-star last year and plays on the Club Wave team...A member of the MHS Chamber Orchestra playing piano and violin, and is historian of the LEAP Club Gueverra is considering attending a number of schools including Stony Brook, El Mira, Providence and will play soccer. Marshfield coach Fred Podbelski: "She's a tremendously strong player and is so versatile. She could play any position and play it well. Her strong delivery was part of the reason we went so far last year. She's very talented."

Katie Alexander - Senior (Capt.) - Midfielder - Abington

This four-year starter caused headaches for opponents with her ability to penetrate defenses and tie up the center midfield...Was the Green Wave's second-leading scorer and among the South Shore League's top three with 20 points on 14 goals and six assists...An SSL, Eastern Mass., and All-state All-star, Alexander's tough play in the midfield helped lead Abington to its first SSL championship in 10 years with an unblemished 14-0 record (16-1-1 overall)...Alexander was the top playmaker for the Green Wave, using her solid vision of the field, excellent air play, and aggressiveness to create offensive opportunities and helped the team to outscore opponents 58-5...She is most proud of the team's 3-0 shutout over former league rival Hanover...The senior is also a captain on the AHS basketball team and made the Mariner All-Scholastic squad last year...She is considering attending Southern New Hampshire or Springfield and will play soccer. Abington coach Jeff Kent: "She's probably the best player we've ever had as far as playing the ball in the air. She got a number of goals on corner and restarts by getting her head on the ball. She's a real leader on the field, constantly communicating and directing traffic. She brings out the best in everyone."

Kate Abbatangelo - Senior (Capt.) - Midfielder - Abington

A three-year starter for the South Shore League champion Green Wave, Abbantangelo's solid play on the left side of the midfield, particularly on defense...Was a solid marker on defense and also made key contributions offensively...Scored three goals and three assists for Abington...The SSL and Eastern Mass. did a lot of the behind the scenes work that led the Green Wave to a 14-0 SSL title, significantly adding to Abington's impressive passing game with great crosses and long-range, flat passes...Cites the 3-0 shutout over former league rival Hanover as her favorite game...Abbatangelo is also a singles player on the AHS tennis team in the spring and treasurer of the National Honor Society...The senior captain is considering attending Colby-Sawyer, Endicott, or University of New England. Abington coach Jeff Kent: "She did all the things that don't show up in the stats book. She played the ball well on both ends of the field and is a great leader. She proved to be very valuable."

Brittany Cheney - Senior (Capt.) - Goalie - Abington

Unquestionably one of the best goalies in all of Massachusetts, Cheney had a record-setting season for Abington...The senior keeper racked up 15 shutouts this year which broke a 15-year old school record...Cheney was nearly untouchable in the net, allowing just five goals in 18 games for an impressive .28 goals against average leading the Green Wave to a SSL title with a perfect 14-0 record...These numbers also ranked her first among the league's best keepers...Her incredible vertical leap, impressive diving saves, and aggressiveness on corners enabled her to cover the net from all sides...Says she is most proud of Abington's 3-0 shutout over former league rival Hanover...A three-sport standout at AHS, Cheney is captain of the basketball team and also plays softball in the spring...The SSL, Eastern Mass., and All-state All-star is a two-time Mariner All-Scholastic in soccer and also made our girls hoop and softball squads last season...Cheney is considering attending Boston College, Providence, or the University of Maine and will play softball. Abington coach Jeff Kent: "She's just an extraordinary athlete. She has great quickness, great hands, distributes the ball well, and great range in the net. She's a real formidable keeper. She gave us a great sense of security."

Kacie LaPointe - Sophomore - Midfield - Abington

A two-year starter, LaPointe is quickly making her presence known in the South Shore League...A midfielder on the right side, LaPointe was the team's third leading scorer and among the top five in the SSL with 15 points on eight goals and seven assists...The sophomore combined great footwork, speed, and toughness to aide the Green Wave's offensive charge, which outscored its opponents 58-5...Her play on the midfield on both ends, offensively and defensively, no doubt contributed to Abington's championship season, leading the team to its first SSL title in a decade with a perfect 14-0 record (16-1-1 overall)...A SSL All-star, LaPointe also runs track in the spring and plays soccer on a club team...Cites the Green Wave's 3-0 win over Hanover as her favorite game...The sophomore will be one of the top returnees next season. Abington coach Jeff Kent: "She's a very skilled player. She handles the ball well and passes well. She's very reliable, has a great field sense and plays well beyond her years. She plays at 100 mph for 80 minutes."

Dawn Turner - Senior (Capt.) - Forward - Rockland

A two-year starter for Rockland, Turner was the key to the offense on the rebuilding Lady Bulldogs team...A highly skilled forward, Tuner used solid speed and good footwork to weave through defenses and strike from inside the box...A Patriot League All-star, Turner was the team's leading scorer with 20 points on 11 goals and nine assists...The senior captain plays soccer 12 months out of the year both as a player with RHS and with the South Shore Select team...Turner also plays basketball and will play softball for the high school in the spring...Turner is considering attending Boston College, Boston University, Cornell, Ithaca, or Stonehill and may continue to play soccer. Rockland coach Laurindo Lima: "Dawn is a great finisher. She reads the game very well. She's a smart player. She has a good ability to press through people and she scored a lot of her goals that way."

Becca Marshall - Sophomore - Forward - Hingham

A first-year starter, Marshall had a break out year offensively for Hingham...The sophomore finished the year as the team's leading scorer and was among the Patriot League's top three with 28 points on 17 goals and 11 assists...Marshall combined great speed, ball control, and ball placement to lead the Harborwomen's offensive charge...Scored a hattrick in a Div. 2 South Sectional tourney win over Wareham and is most proud of the team's play in that game...The PL All-star continually came up big for the Harborwomen, often scoring game-winning goals...Still just a sophomore, Marshall is a member of the Spanish Club and has competed on the HHS track team. Hingham coach Guy Enoch: "As good as she is, I still think she's a diamond in the rough. She still has a lot of soccer to play. She's definitely going to be one of the leading players next season."

Hilary Lynch - Junior - Goalie - Hingham

Had a solid second year in the net for the Harborwomen, finishing the year as one of the Patriot League's top keepers...Lynch's ability in the net proved invaluable for Hingham, often coming up with big saves when needed most...The junior recorded six shutouts this season and had a 1.23 goals per game average...A two-year starter, Lynch combined great high ball, breakaway, and corner kick coverage to keep Hingham in some close games and often get them out of jams...Lynch cites the team's 1-1 tie with cross-town rival and Div. 1 state finalist Notre Dame Academy as one of her favorite games...A Patriot League All-star, Lynch also plays on the HHS basketball and lacrosse teams and is a member of student council...Lynch will return as one of the league's best keepers next season and was elected to captain the team. Hingham coach Guy Enoch: "She has incredible courage. She's not afraid to just dive in on breakaways, her corner protection is solid. She really stepped it up this year. I really think she was the top keeper in the league. She's a great leader which makes a difference as a goalie. She's not just standing there. She understands the game."

Michelle Massman - Senior Sweeper - Silver Lake

Michelle absolutely flourished in the role of sweeper this season after playing fullback as a junior, a move that was necessitated so that team captain Jill McLelland (another Mariner All-Scholastic) could be moved up front to help the attack...Old Colony League All-Star...plays soccer year round as a member of the Sporting Cristales out of Duxbury, along with twin sister Maureen (who was also a member of the Silver Lake team)…has also played basketball and softball since her freshman year at Silver Lake, the last two seasons in each as a varsity team member…would like to play soccer at the next level and has already talked to a few collegiate coaches…is looking at Northeastern, Merrimac and St. Anslems, among a few other universities…Silver Lake coach Bubba Ashby: "Michelle was an extremely pleasant surprise this season. We put her at sweeper and she just took to it. We were a younger team, so a lot of the game was played our end. She was the one who made the difference in so many of these games. There were games she just dominated the area around the goal."

Jill McLelland - Senior (Capt.)
Midfielder - Silver Lake

Jill was moved from sweeper to center midfield this season to direct the young Lady Lakers attack and wound up leading the team in scoring (eight goals, one assist) to pace the way to a 6-6-5 record and a tourney berth in what was supposed to be a rebuilding year… Old Colony League All-Star…a three year starter, the previous two at sweeper…scored only one varsity goal prior to this season …used to play club soccer as a member of the Mass. Bay Blazers…also a standout in basketball and spring track at Silver Lake…has also been named to captain both of these teams this year…would like to play soccer in college, but whether or not she plays club or interscholastically will likely depend on where she winds up…is looking at a number of schools, including B.C., B.U. and Stonehill…Silver Lake coach Bubba Ashby: "We asked Jill to take over at a new position, and she did it. She knew we were depending on her to score and she came through. The most important things she offered, though, were toughness and leadership, two things we really needed this season."

Lisa McEachern - Senior (Capt.)
Midfielder – Scituate

Lisa was the emotional leader and quarterback on the attack for the 10-7-1 Lady Sailors this season, earning her second Patriot League All-Star selection…a three-year starter at halfback…has played soccer extensively in the off-season for various town and district traveling teams…also a member of the Scituate High ski and spring track teams…runs the 800 and throws the javelin for the track team, and earned Patriot League All-Star honors as a junior for her efforts…notched two goals and three assists this season…would like to play soccer at the next level and has already talked to a few collegiate coaches…is looking at Southern New Hampshire, Colby-Sawyer and Keene State…would like to study Sports Management and/or Elementary Education…Scituate coach Joe Strazdes: "Lisa was a real leader for us. She has a lot of speed and is very quick to the ball She's a real spunky player who went hard all of the time. As a coach you just love to have that type of player. She sets a great example for everyone else."

Kim Connelly – Senior Forward/Midfielder – Scituate

After missing most of her sophomore year with a fractured ankle and being slowed by a variety of injuries her junior season, Kim bounced back to lead the Lady Sailors in scoring this fall (seven goals, six assists), helping them to a 10-7-1 record and into the post-season…seemed to be at her best in big games, such as in a huge late season 1-0 win over powerhouse Patriot League rival Hingham in which she set up the game's lone goal with a beautiful rush and feed….has played club soccer year-round since the fifth grade as a member of the Marshfield Wave…also a standout softball and basketball player…earned Patriot League All-Star and Mariner All-Scholastic honors as a softball player last spring…has been a starting guard for the basketball team since her freshman year…soccer is far and away her favorite sport, though, and the one she intends to play at the next level…has spoken to coaches at Brandeis and Emerson Colleges…plans to major in Criminal Justice with an eye towards a career in the FBI… Scituate coach Joe Strazdes: "Kim is an extremely physically talented player with excellent ball skills and passing ability. It was always the games that meant the most that seemed to bring out the best in her."

Jacqui Graden - Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Norwell

Jacqui enjoyed a great senior season that only got better once the regular season ended…after the Lady Clippers barely squeaked into the post-season, Jacqui elevated her game to help carry them to three tourney wins and a trip to the Southeast Sectional championship game, the furthest advancement in the history of the Norwell girls soccer program…scored both goals in the opening round 2-1 upset win over second seeded Holbrook…off of this, she earned Eastern Mass and state Div. 3 All-Star honors…also a two-time South Shore League All-Star…team's leading scorer this season with nine goals and three assists…plays club soccer year-round as a member of the Sporting Cristales out of Duxbury along with her twin sister, Alanna, who was the starting goalie for the Norwell High team this fall…also a standout for N.H.S. in basketball and softball (softball)…would like to play soccer in college…is looking at Western New England, Mount Ida and Roger Williams, as well as a few state colleges…Norwell coach Bruce Emerson: "Jacqui was far and away our best player. She has very nice foot skills and is very quick and aggressive. Jacqui is really a great team payer, and I can't help thinking how good she might have been with just a little more help."

LACROSSE NOTES

CYL to field girls teams in '02

For the first time in its seven-year history, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is planning to field teams for girls beginning in spring 2002.

The plan depends upon both interest from age-eligible girls and availability of fields, but organizers expect to field two teams in the Mass Bay Youth League - girls, the female counterpart of the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League that the town's boys have been playing in since 1996.

The current plan is for girls to play in the 14 & Under (7th and 8th grade) and 12 & Under (5th & 6th grade) levels, with one team in each.

As with the boys teams, Cohasset's girls will be playing in a league that covers most of Eastern Massachusetts, and in a division that stretches from Weymouth to Martha's Vineyard. Games will be played on Sunday afternoons; no practice schedule has been set.

Just as important, the girls league has the same ideals as the boys, specifically teaching the children to play without regard to standings or playoffs. Girls will play equal playing time, regardless of ability, will have regularly scheduled practices and workouts and will be expected to maintain the same standards of conduct and responsibility both on and off the field that have been the hallmark of the boys program.

Chuck Jaffe, who has coached in the boys program for six years, is expected to move over to head the girls program with help from several assistant coaches.

The girls will begin practice in March, start playing games in April and will end their season at the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse Girls Jamboree in mid-June. While the practice schedule is not yet determined, it is expected to be the same two-practices-per-week schedule that the boys teams have maintained for years.

Girls are required to supply sticks, mouthpieces and goggles. Registration will be $110 per player, and will include a uniform and membership in US Lacrosse, the national governing body for the sport. Registration day is scheduled for from 10 a.m. - Noon on Saturday, January 5 at Cohasset High School.

For more information on the program or to volunteer to coach, call Chuck Jaffe at 781-383- 9858.

the ball," explained Carr.

In the frontcourt, Skipper fans were able to see a rarity: Cohasset dominated the boards with their height.

Sophomores Danielle Pinkus and Ashley Faber combined for 18 points, 12 rebounds and four blocks, showing excellent promise as forces under the hoop.

"It is huge," said Carr of having a height advantage. "We want to build on that."

Junior Maura O'Brien threw in eight points at power forward to help her team seal the win.

The varsity squad was not the only team that had success on Monday, though. The junior varsity, headed up by Deb Beal, destroyed the Lady Panthers JV, 50-10.

Freshman Casey Anderson tore up Avon's frontline for 28 points. Nearly every one of Anderson's 13 field goals came off assists from sophomore point guard Gillian Weber.

With season opening wins on both varsity and JV levels, morale should improve as the team does. And while not getting ahead of herself, Carr did mention that she believes this team has the ability to surprise some teams this year.

"I think we can make a much bigger impact than our record from last year would indicate," concluded the coach.

Hoping to make a big splash

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset-Scituate high school swim team has not had much go right for it. Conference rules prohibit all of the members from competing, the team must travel a lengthy bus ride to Weymouth just to practice, and they are in the burdensome process of changing leagues.

But second year coach Jamie Kearney is not going to let anything get in the way of a successful season.

"We have been put in a tough position, and the season hasn't even started," Kearney asserted. "But we have a very capable team this year."

The team appointed four captains this year, a male and female from both towns, to lead the way.

For Cohasset, veterans Kelly Stone, a senior, and Bryan Bilton, a junior, have a combined 11 years of varsity swimming experience under their belts.

From the Sailors, seniors Jen Kruetzberg and Sean "Swim Team" Sorenson also lead the way with experience.

Senior Cara Foley of Cohasset has been named a swimmer/coach, helping out the team on stroke technique and speed.

"I am thrilled with the leadership that I have," complimented the coach, a long time swimmer herself. "They have definitely been the motivation early on."

Kearney is pleased with the balance she has of veterans and rookies, noting the some of the talented newcomers on the squad.

Freshman Danielle Swain was very impressive in the team's preliminary timings. Second year sophomore Delia Reagan also recorded very solid times, and the young duo should be a force in a variety of events.

At this point, I could take wild advantage of my duties as sportswriter and promote my addition to the team, but I won't.

While the Scituate-Cohasset squad attempts to transition smoothly into their new league, Kearney has raised the intensity of conditioning in practice. According to her, the team is averaging 1,000 yards more every practice than it did last year.

Also, second year athletic director Ron Ford of Cohasset was able to get an extra hour of pool time for the team, invaluable time to work on starts, finishes, turns, and relays.

Still, Kearney strongly wishes that there could be a pool at one of the two schools, as the swimmers generally return home well past seven o'clock.

"It is just a shame that with both schools undergoing their renovations, that neither one had the foresight to put in a pool," said Kearney.

The Sci-Coh team begins meets this week and Kearney feels confident about the chances of her squad.

"This is a very optimistic group of kids with a great sense of team concept."

Hope on ice for Skippers

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 15 Mike Devine were widely considered two of the more well rounded defensemen in the South Shore League last season. Two excellent skaters, they each appear equally adept at protecting the net or joining the attack.

Not to suggest the net needs an abundance of protecting. Dan Kinchla emerged as a surprising force between the pipes last season as a junior in his first season ever of high school hockey. The coach predicts big things this winter from a "seasoned" Kinchla (also a star soccer player and spring trackster for C.H.S.), who he notes survived largely last season on instincts and athleticism.

"Dan is really much improved," he said. "He really has become smarter in net, and he's really, really looking forward to this season."

The Skippers have scrimmaged against Scituate, North Quincy and Marshfield — all Div. 2 tourney teams last season — and Walsh reported that his charges "held their own against all of them."

The primary focus of the first two games was auditioning, but Walsh shortened his bench for this past weekend's tilt with Marshfield, and sounded extremely upbeat by what he saw.

Though not cast in stone, the veteran coach now feels he can enter the season with four solid forward lines — a rarity for the vast majority of high school programs — with top returning scorers Greg O'Connell and Matt Davis, both juniors, centering the top two lines.

O'Connell will find himself between Rob Carpenter and Pete Whorisky to start the season, while Davis will be flanked by Tom Anderson and John Durkin.

The other two lines are Dave Bouchard-Chris Caron-Mike Rasmussen and Sean Chase-Ted Straughn-Will Moody.

"It might be tough to play all four lines regularly, but there's not a lot of drop-off between lines two, three and four," said Walsh. "We'll just have to go with the players who are working the hardest. That's one of the good things about depth. Everyone is pushed."

Skaters bedevil Devils

Skippers open with 14-0 win over Randolph (nope, that's not a misprint)

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Cohasset won its season opener, 14-0, a couple of Touchdowns and PATs, eh?...excuse me... this was hockey!?!

That's right: the Skippers came right out of the gate to make all of those observers who called them clear favorites in the South Shore League look like geniuses, taking down Randolph on the road Friday night in mind-numbing fashion.

Perhaps the most encouraging sign to come out of the win is the fact that the first thing Cohasset coach Dennis Walsh wanted to talk about afterwards were the things his team DIDN'T do well.

"I don't think we skated as well as we can," said the longtime bench boss. "Sometimes when things are coming a little too easy, teams stop skating, and that's a habit we don't want to get into. There were a few things we saw tonight that we should work on."

But there were a few good thing too, right coach?!?

" Oh yeah," he replied with a laugh. "We did quite a few things well. We passed the puck very well and created some very nice opportunities.

"Also, Randolph is a team that gave us some problems last year, so I think we saw pretty clearly that we're a lot better team than we were last year."

The Skippers were dominant right from the start of the game, but led only 2-0 at the end of the first period and 3-0 near the midpoint of the second. That's when the floodgates opened.

"We had a lot of good shots early, but we were just barely missing and Randolph's goalie came up with some big saves," reported Walsh. "Then things just started clicking."

Indeed. The Skippers scored five time in the final eight minutes of the second period and six times in the third.

Junior winger Tom Anderson led the carnage with five points— two goals and three assists.

Two goal performances were also submitted by Sean Chase, Chris Caron and Matt Davis, while Greg O'Connell, Pete Whoriskey, Mike Devine, John Durkin, Dave Bouchard and freshman Ted Straughn added solo tallies.

Senior goalie Dan Kinchla recorded the shutout in the season opener, turning back 10 Blue Devils shots, though few of them were testers, according to Walsh.

"Sometimes it's tough to tell much about your team after a game like this," offered Walsh, continuing with the even keeled assessment. "We skated four lines all game, and a lot of defensemen. It looked like we might have some nice depth."

Not a half bad start

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset wrestling team opened the season by splitting a tri-team match on Monday, topping Tri-County, 51-24, but falling 42-36 to host Mansfield in a match that came down to the final bout.

The Skippers were paced by a pair of pins each from sophomore Phil Strazulla at 130 pounds and junior Terry Baroudi at 135.

In the win over Tri-County, pins were also recorded for Cohasset by Dave Kupcz (103 pounds), freshman Joe Kehoe (119), freshman Bill Carbone (125), Brian Litchfield (160), Mike Casey (189) and John Hussey (215).

Casey's pin was particularly impressive, given that he bumped up from his usual 171 pound weight class to take on the much bigger Tri-County grappler at 189.

Chris McKenna also notched a big overtime win in the victory at 145.

Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney felt his team was at a distinct disadvantage in the Mansfield match that followed, as the hosts were given the opportunity to scout the Skippers.

According to the veteran C.H.S. coach, the Mansfield coach juggled his lineup, bumping his usual 130 and 135 pound wrestlers, basically conceding wins to top Cohasset wrestlers Baroudi and Strazulla in order to plug them in at other spots in the lineup.

Still, the match came down to the finale at 125 with Carbone. Unfortunately, the promising frosh could not pull off the upset.

Freshmen Jonathan Littauer and Matt Casey— at 103 and 140 pounds, respectively—picked up their first varsity victories in the Mansfield match. Senior Ian Hickey also notched a win in the second match at 140.

McKenna bumped up a weight class from145 to 152 versus Mansfield but lost on points.

Wrestling Notes

Though making it clear he did not wish to complain, Coach Sweeney did concede that the conversion of the upstairs gym annex into a library has made it more difficult for him to prepare his team for matches.

In previous years, the wrestling and gymnastic teams shared the annex, while the boys and girls basketball teams split the main gymnasium. Now all four winter sports teams are sharing the one gym, and the grapplers are being held to a strict two-hour limit for practices. With it taking approximately a half hour to set up and pick up mats at the beginning and end of practice, Sweeney winds up with approximately 90 minutes of true coaching time.

"I understand with all of the work being done around the school that all the teams are having to sacrifice, but it has been a bit of a hindrance for us," he confessed. "I don't have quite the time to go over certain points I used to, and I'm having to compress my usual schedule."

able way, was attempting a throw of teammate Brian Litchfield toward the end of wrestling practice when his elbow popped, dislocating and hyper-extending it, quite possibly knocking him out of action for his final year of high school wrestling.

"It's the curse of the Mariner," noted Wrestling coach Torin Sweeney with a mirthless chuckle. "Obviously, it's a crushing blow for the program, but it's even worse for Danny, who worked as hard getting ready for this season as I've ever seen any athlete work."

Littauer, with 85 career wrestling wins, appeared well on his way to joining the elite and extremely exclusive 100-win club, something that really would have opened the eyes of college talent evaluators.

"I'm extremely disappointed and upset," said Littauer, who still hopes to wrestle in college, in a phone interview earlier this week. "I think I still had some work to do if I was going to get any (college) coaches talking to me, but I'm still holding out hope. And I can always try to make it as a walk-on."

Littauer, a top five state finisher in his weight class as a sophomore and junior, began workouts with an eye toward this March's state competitions the day after he was beaten in the quarterfinals of last year's All-State meet. He had chiseled his 152-pound frame, according to Sweeney, which prompted the coach to say last week that there were only one or two others who might stand in the way of Littauer and a state crown.

Dan Littauer

"He was a legitimate state champion contender in my mind," said Sweeney, who begins his 19th season as Cohasset High's wrestling coach. "And that's not a title I throw around lightly. With all the of the work he did, I really feel that is something that was there for the taking for Dan."

Of course, there is a chance Littauer could get back on the mat sometime in February. Doctors have told him three to four months of recovery will be needed, but they plan to evaluate his progress every few weeks.

"It's not an impossibility," said Sweeney, speaking of a potential return for his star grappler in time for the state qualifiers. "But obviously it'd be a huge obstacle in the way of him getting back to the level he was at by then. But if there's anyone who can do it, it's Dan."

Indeed.

"I've gone to a few therapists who've told me they didn't think I could make it back (before the end of the season), but I'm going to keep looking for one that will give me a chance," said Littauer. "This is my senior year. If there's any chance of getting back, I want to take it."

What makes Littauer's loss doubly painful is the way he rose to the challenge of team leadership. A few weeks before formal practices could begin on Nov. 26, the senior was conducting workout sessions with wrestling teammates and hopefuls.

Sweeney was naturally concerned about the morale of his team in the wake of Littauer's injury, but reported this week that, collectively, they appear to be stepping up their efforts, knowing this is what is required to begin filling the massive void.

"That's one positive thing at least that's come out of this," noted Sweeney. "The kids have shown some character with the way they've responded. They know the job for the team as a whole just got a lot harder."

Littauer will honor his role of captain by attending every match and practice he can, though he noted it won't be easy.

"I like to lead by example, so it won't be easy standing on the sidelines and trying to help," he confessed. "But I'll do it because I want to do anything I can to help the team. I think the whole program has a chance to take a big step back toward where we were my freshman year (sectional champs, second place in Div., 3 states). Our numbers are going up, and we're getting a lot of strong athletes. It's an exciting time for this program."

One of the more exciting elements, at least from Dan's personal standpoint, is the quick emergence of freshman Jonathan Littauer, his little brother, who won his first varsity match on Monday, topping his 103-pound counterpart from Mansfield.

"Watching Jon is something I'm really looking forward to," said the proud big brother. "He's trained really hard to get ready for this season, and I'm going to help him in any way I can."

Hopefully, with a little luck and a lot of hard work, Dan might be able to show his kid sibling a few more things on the mat this season.

Gymnastics team appears primed for big things this winter that to the return of defending league all-around champion Kristin Sheerin and all-star Meredith Bixby and the squad should be very tough to beat in the Pilgrim Conference. First place would be huge for the team because it would give Cohasset-Norwell an automatic berth in the South Sectional championships.

"I don't want to say anything too soon," responded Connerty when asked if she considered Cohasset-Norwell the favorite to capture the conference title, "but we're hoping. We have a young team still. We have a lot of depth. The main thing is to stay healthy and develop the routines.

"Qualifying for the South Sectionals is one of our goals."

As young as Cohasset-Norwell is this winter, it's the "grizzled veteran" Sheerin who should capture quite a bit of attention in the conference and state. Sheerin, a member of the team since the seventh grade, spent the 2000-2001 season rewriting the Cohasset record books and establishing herself as the best gymnast in the school's history. After finishing a stunning sixth in the all-around her sophomore year, Sheerin slipped off the balance beam last season, knocking her out of medal contention. She has high hopes for herself and Cohasset-Norwell in general this winter, including qualifying for the Massachusetts team that will compete in the nationals in Las Vegas.

"We look to be the strongest we've been since I was in seventh grade," said Sheerin. "I'm really excited about it. That's (Las Vegas) my main goal. It's pretty tough so I really have to hit my routines."

There are some changes in the league that should help Cohasset-Norwell. The biggest change is that each team faces each other just once, compared to twice in recent years. That should bode nicely for Cohasset-Norwell whose gymnasts came back in good shape and are looking to get a fast start out of the blocks.

The team also will not have to contend with Hingham's Meg Peterson and Kerrianne Hart of Hanover. Peterson sustained a broken ankle that will require surgery and is gone for the season. Hart, who waged a fierce duel with Sheerin in a dual meet last season, only to fall short by a half point, will spend the season competing for her club team.

The Randolph and Milton combined squads, much like Cohasset and Norwell did three seasons back, which could bring about an intriguing combination. Nauset dropped out of the league and Duxbury became part of the Pilgrim Conference.

Closer to home, Cohasset-Norwell will be without co-captain Carlie Carter for the season. Carter, one of the most consistent members of the team and another gymnast on the roster since the seventh grade, was hobbled with injuries for much of last season before sustaining a horrific accident when the uneven bars she was warming up on prior to a dual meet against Randolph collapsed.

Carter's knee pain persisted and surgery was required.

"It's definitely a big loss for us," said Connerty. "But Carlie's been at every practice and she'll be helping with the routines."

Cohasset-Norwell looks strong with Sheerin and Bixby competing in the all-around and a freshman contingent that includes Norwell's Jen Guiney and Samantha Rosen and Nancy Durkin of Cohasset.

"They'll add a lot of depth to the team this year," said Connerty.

Junior Katherine Coyne of Cohasset will be competing in three events and Amy Maree of Norwell is versatile enough to be penciled in for two or three per meet. Norwell's Laura Good will also be in a pair of events.

The team has a new face in first-year junior Samantha Keough of Norwell and the return of Cohasset's Sarah Dennis, who missed all of last season with an injury. Cohasset sophomores Shelly Carter and Alicia Sanchez also make the team stronger than a year ago.

Cohasset-Norwell will see just where they are at in their opening meet at non-league opponent Notre Dame Academy on Dec. 18. The team has dominated the Cougars in recent seasons, but Connerty refuses to take any team lightly, regardless of pasts successes.

"No, definitely not," said Connerty emphatically when asked if Cohasset-Norwell could possibly fall into the trap of looking past weaker teams. "It's a long season."

Regardless of how Cohasset-Norwell fares this season, the combination of the two teams has been a huge success. The girls took to each other right away the first season and the meets have been filled with spectators from both towns.

"The girls really work well together," Connerty said. "Both towns' girls get along really well."

IT'S HAPPENING

Celtic Christmas

Aine Monogue, Irish harpist and singer.

This Sunday, Dec. 16 at 4 p.m., Hingham's Coffeehouse-off-the-Square presents a Celtic Christmas with the celebrated Irish harpist and singer, Aine Minoge and Friends. The afternoon will range from varied Celtic Christmas/Solstice music to familiar carols.

Minogue is a supreme harpist, formerly resident player at Ireland's Bunratty Castle. She is also a skilled teacher, introducing many to the harp at Hingham's Aisling Gallery.

The Coffeehouse-off-the-Square is at the Old Ship Church Parish Hall, 107 Main St. in Hingham Square.

Admission is $10 at the door and a variety of coffees, cider, teas, scones and other treats are available at 50 cents. Part of the proceeds go to the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee programs.

For information, call Jim Watson at 781-749-1767.

Community center classes are offered

The community center is now accepting registration for Gymnastic classes for children ages 3 and up.

Gym Dandy classes will be offering registration on Dec. 13, for children ages 1 to 3 years.

Buttonwood book angels

In the spirit of holiday sharing, Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset and Buttonwood For Kids in Hingham invite all to participate in our Book Angel program. The Book Angel Program that will run through Sunday Dec. 16, is a program to help put books into the hands of disadvantaged children. The Book Angel takes an angel from the tree and purchases a book for that child that is close to the interest highlighted on the angel. Buttonwood will then discount that book 15 percent and deliver the book to that child's sponsoring group. Together, Buttonwood Books & Toy and Buttonwood For Kids support Wellspring in Hull, The Friends of the Homeless in Weymouth, The Hingham Interfaith Food Pantry, the Mary Martha Learning Center, the Blue Hills Healthy Families Program and the South Shore Educational Collaborative Teen Parent Program.

This is the eighth year Buttonwood has sponsored the Book Angel program. For more information call 781-383-2665 (Cohasset) and 781-749-2665 (Hingham).

Unicorn Singers to perform concert at Old Ship church

Old Ship's annual Christmas Concert with the Unicorn Singers will be at the Old Ship Meeting House, 90 Main St. in Hingham, on Saturday, Dec. 15, at 8 p.m. This year's concert, a benefit for Renewal House, will feature selections from C.P.E. Bach's "Magnificat" (1749), a glorious though lesser-known "Magnificat" by Bach's most notable son. An orchestra of trumpets, flutes, and continuo will accompany the singers. The program will also include a cappella 20th century settings of 15th century seasonal texts and carols. Carols for all to sing will complete the evening. The Unicorn Singers, a 22-member mixed chorus under the direction of Margo Euler, has been performing a wide variety of music on the South Shore for more than 20 years.

Proceeds from the concert will benefit Renewal House, a program of the Unitarian Universalist Urban Ministry which serves women and children who are victims of domestic violence and abuse. Renewal House has for 20 years offered emergency shelter for women in crisis and their children, along with a variety of advocacy, counseling, and educational programs.

For further information or for tickets, call 781-749-1679, or come to the Old Ship Parish House office at 107 Main Street, weekdays, 9 a.m.-12 p.m.. Advance tickets are $8 for adults and $5 for children/low income; tickets will also be available Noble's Camera in Hingham Square. The evening of the performance tickets will be available at the door ($10 for adults; $5 for children/low income).

Toys for Tots

The Cohasset police are again joining with the US Marine Corps annual holiday Toys for Tots campaign. Unwrapped toys and games may be dropped off at the Cohasset police headquarters on Elm Street, 24 hours a day. Any questions, call 781-383-1055. Please help the police make a less fortunate child happy this holiday season!

Support group for family caregivers

Adult Children of Aging Parents (ACAP) meets on the fourth Thursday of every month from 7:15 - 8:30 p.m. at Allerton House in Hingham Assisted Living Community, located at 15 Condito Road. ACAP is a newly formed self-help support group that brings together family caregivers, relatives, and supportive others who have concerns for the well-being of an aging person. The mission of the group is to relieve the social isolation of the family caregiver and to enlarge one's support base. For further information, please call the Welch Education office at 781-337-4542.

Clothing drive

The Cohasset High School Social Awareness Organization will hold its 10th annual clothing drive from Dec. 10-21. All donations go to the Pine Street Inn. Drop-off bins are located in the main entrances of Cohasset Middle/High School. All donations are welcome.

HISTORY BOOK

History book production committee members Lynne Layman, Julia Gleason and Sue Mavilia at the Cohasset Town Hall during the Village Fair. Layman's color photographs of Cohasset will be printed in a color section bound in the book. Gleason has been in charge of prepublication book sales and distribution and Mavilia will be scanning the halftones that appear throughout the text. Publication date is June 2002 at $32, but the book can be purchased for $27.50 until Jan. 1. Checks should be made out to the Town of Cohasset and sent to Julia Gleason, 44 Stockbridge St. 02025

Volunteer cancer drivers sought

The road to recovery for many cancer patients can be a long one with many decisions to be made and hurdles to overcome. Although cancer treatments today work better than ever, temporary side effects can make patients feel too sick to drive or take public transportation to their appointments. For those without family or friends living close by, the lack of transportation may mean missing treatments that could save their lives. That's why the American Cancer Society's Road to Recovery program in Hingham is currently seeking area volunteers to drive patients to and from their treatment appointments or to work in the Hingham office and help coordinate the rides. Drivers willing to travel to Boston are urgently needed.

If you have a car and are able to donate any amount of time between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays, you can really make a difference in the life of a cancer patient by becoming a volunteer driver. Drivers' availability is matched with the needs of patients who call.

Through the services of volunteer drivers, who devote hours of their lives to cancer patients, the American Cancer Society's Road to Recovery program is committed to providing cancer patients with rides to and from cancer treatments. Last year, in the upper South Shore area, volunteer drivers provided approximately 600 rides to local cancer patients.

To volunteer as a Road to Recovery driver or Hingham office volunteer, contact the Hingham Hotline at 781-749-2535. Information is also available through the American Cancer Society's 24-hour information line at 1-800-ACS-2345.

STATUS REPORT

Police made 14 arrests last month

November was a relatively quiet month for the Cohasset Police Department, police chief Brian Noonan said. There were 14 arrests, one for shoplifting, two for operating after license suspended, one for assault by dangerous weapon, two for possession of a Class B substance, one for possession intent to distribute 100 feet of a school, one for an outstanding warrant, two for assault and battery, two for protective custody, one for operating under the influence of liquor, and one for minor transporting alcohol.

During the month of November, the police department investigated 18 motor vehicle accidents, nine of which resulted in personal injury. There were 213 motor vehicle citations issued totaling $6,440 in fines. Additionally there were 61 parking tickets issued for $ 1,475 in fines. There were three criminal complaints issued, Noonan said.

Also in November the Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 740 calls for police services, of those 108 were Emergency 911 calls.

In the month of November there were two "Breaking & Entering" one in a business, and one in school.

Sgt John Conte completed a three-week Command Training Program. The University of Massachusetts at the New England Law Enforcement Institute sponsors this program. The Command Training Program provides command officers with the skills needed to exercise effective management practices.

Finally in the month of November Sgt. Robert W. Jackson, and Detective Frederick Grassie completed the National Incident-Based Reporting System Training Program sponsored by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Weymouth man nabbed in alleged baby formula heist

An alleged shoplifter at Cohasset's Super Stop & Shop led police on a chase through Thayer and Whitney Woods and Wompatuck State Park last Thursday morning.

Police pursued suspect John Crowley, 35 of Weymouth, because he allegedly bit an assistant manager at the supermarket, who was trying to detain him until police arrived. The alleged bite broke the skin, Cohasset Sgt. Robert Jackson said.

It all started at about 8 a.m., when Cohasset Officers Shellee Peters and James McLean were dispatched to Stop & Shop after an assistant manager confronted an alleged shoplifter with $119 worth of baby formula.

There has been a rash of thefts on the South Shore of powdered baby formula, which can be sold on the street for cash, Jackson said.

When the assistant manager confronted Crowley, he allegedly wrestled with, and subsequently bit the assistant manager on the forearm. Crowley then dropped a duffel bag with seven packages of baby formula and fled running on foot across the street into Thayer and Whitney Woods, police said.

Jackson went into the woods with State Trooper Kathleen Sampson and a police dog and tracked the suspect for about four miles through Whitney Woods and into Wompatuck State Park. Crowley was eventually flushed out near the Hingham line on Route 3A. There Officer John Small, who had been re-deployed from a detail as part of the police hot and continuous pursuit, apprehended the suspect on Side Hill Road (a small, unpaved road that runs between 3A and East Street in Hingham) and made the arrest with the help of Officer Bill Quigley and Chief Brian Noonan.

An inventory of the suspect's vehicle at Stop & Shop, police said, revealed heroine paraphernalia, hypodermic needles and residue in the vehicle believed to be heroine.

Police charged Crowley, whose address is 26 off Station St., Weymouth, with assault and battery, shoplifting, resisting arrest, possession of an instrument to administer a controlled substance, and illegal possession of a Class A substance. There were also two warrant outs for Crowley, who is suspected in a previous shoplifting incident at Stop and Shop.

Crowley was arraigned on the charges last Thursday at Quincy District Court and has a pre-trial conference scheduled for Dec. 18, Jackson said.

The supermarket assistant manager was treated at the scene and took himself in for further medical treatment on his own. Citing privacy issues, police declined to comment on whether the suspect would be tested for AIDS.

In all seven Cohasset police officers, including the chief, and two State Police K-9 units were involved in tracking the suspect.

Kingston artists looking for warm reception for Luminary 'Cold Show'

By Kathleen Zigmont
CORRESPONDENT

With a varied group of artists among their ranks, the New Art Forum of Kingston has planned their annual "Cold Show" to take place amid the candlelight of the town's Luminary Night. Held in the yellow Yankee Barn on Main Street, the show will feature many forms of the visual arts.

"Our group members represent many facets of the art spectrum," said artist Lilias Cingolani, one of the founders of the New Art Forum.

"Artists like to talk about art, any kind of art. We like to bounce ideas off of each other. That's what's so wonderful about the group; we each enrich each other."

New Art Forum member Beverly Steele

"The graphic arts, photography, music and poetry, three-dimensional art forms, watercolor, printmaking, portraiture, landscape painting and the fiber arts are all represented. And we are very fortunate to have several well known jack-of-all trades art teachers among our ranks," said Cingolani, who noted that the forum has about two dozen active members. The Cold Show is very well received every year, she said.

"I think it's become a very important part of the night," she said. And the Forum, which was founded about six years ago by Cingolani and local artist Gobin Starr, has become an important and visible part of the town with their twice-yearly shows, art classes and new mural on display at the Kingston Public Library produced in conjunction with the library arts committee. Beverly Steele, who belongs to the Forum and helped coordinate the mural project, said having area artists assembled in one group helped pull the project together.

"We were all able to work together. And having different kinds of artists available to help was wonderful," said Steele, who said the mural took about four months to complete, with the seven panels painted in the Main Street barn.

Steele said the mural, called "The Jones River Through Time," depicts the importance of the river, which flows through the town, over the past several hundred years.

Panels depict the early inhabitants of the area — Native Americans — and colonists who came later, the shipbuilding of the times, and the manufacturing era. Panels also depict the importance of the river for recreational use and environmental preservation.

Other aspects of the group that involve the public include weekly classes held with a watercolorist, life drawing sessions and special demonstrations by well known artists. Field trips to the Gurnet Lighthouse and handmade book workshops are also scheduled during the summer months, with the public encouraged to join the group.

"Everyone is welcome," said Steele. "I know a lot of people want to try art but are reluctant. But this is a good place for people who love art," she said.

The Forum holds meetings, which vary in theme.

"Artists like to talk about art, any kind of art. We like to bounce ideas off of each other. That's what's so wonderful about the group; we each enrich each other," said Steele, who has been involved with the Forum for four years.

The enthusiastic enclave of artists who are part of the Forum include Cingolani, Steele, fiber artist Joan Randall, artists Paul Casagrande, Sara Althert, Tony Visco, Joan Vaughn, Sulvia Vaz, Robert Healey, Elaine Nudd.

Mary Doyle, three-dimensional artists Eric Strom and Sheldon Peavey; photographer Wayne Wescott; poet, musician artist and teacher Bill Alberti; art teachers Charles Sorrento, Evelyn Dunbar and Daria Herlihy; portrait artist Clemente Micarelli and printmaker Gerry Rosing. Many other area artists participate in the Forum's meetings and classes, according to Cingolani, who said part of their focus is to bring their art to the people.

The public is invited the view the New Art Forum's fourth annual Cold Show — Fun and Frolic — Saturday, Dec. 15 at the Yellow Yankee Barn, 228 Main Street, from 5 to 9 p.m. For more information on the art forum or the Luminary exhibit, call (781) 585-5622.

Crowe-ing about McCartney

Former Beatle adds flavor to 'Vanilla Sky'

By Ed Symkus
STAFF WRITER

Cameron Crowe is a man who likes to play with music in his movies. The former Rolling Stone writer, whose story was chronicled last year in his "Almost Famous," has been mixing top pop tunes into his films' soundtracks from the start. "Say Anything" had Cheap Trick, Peter Gabriel and Steely Dan. "Singles" featured Pearl Jam, Jimi Hendrix and R.E.M. The sounds of Bruce Springsteen, the Who and Tom Petty turned up in "Jerry Maguire." And "Almost Famous" had everyone from Neil Young to Led Zeppelin to Joni Mitchell.

In the mysterious, feverish and deliciously confusing "Vanilla Sky," the story of a successful but irresponsible man (Tom Cruise) whose life is turned upside down when he meets the right woman (Penelope Cruz) just after meeting the wrong woman (Cameron Diaz), music not only sets the mood of the film, it propels it forward, often shooting it up to dizzying heights. Not surprisingly, the soundtrack ranges from Bob Dylan to Todd Rundgren to Radiohead to Crowe's wife Nancy Wilson. And it all ends with an original tune — a light and lilting number called "Vanilla Sky" — by Paul McCartney.

"The 'Paul is dead' idea of playing a game of clues was always a beginning point on the movie," says Crowe of the oddly twisting plot. "I wanted it to be a 'Paul is dead' kind of experience. So we ended up playing a lot of Beatles songs on the set. And at one point Danny Bramson — who I work with on the music — and I looked at each other and said, 'Do you think Paul McCartney would come and look at part of our movie and maybe write a song?' And soon after, Danny said, 'I made some calls and Paul's gonna be in L.A. doing his album, and maybe we can get him to come to your editing room.' "

Crowe shrugged it off with a "Yeah, right," then forgot about it. Until one day Bramson pulled him aside and said, "I think June 9, he's gonna show up."

"I didn't believe it," says Crowe. "Nor did I tell anyone in the editing room what might happen. But sure enough, that day comes, and Paul shows up. And I actually got a sense of what it was like to see the world as Paul sees it. I was walking a little bit ahead of him down this hallway and I saw everybody kind of turn and look and see … Paul Mcf—ingCartney! And there is a unique look that happens on people's faces that he sees every day, but I'd never seen it on any of these people before and I'd been working with them for a couple years. It was the weirdest 'you're at the circus and there appears a freak' kind of a look."

Crowe recalls that he showed McCartney about 40 minutes of "Vanilla Sky," after which the former Beatle said, "Hey, that's great, that's great. You showed us yours, let us show you ours. Come over across town to the studio and I'll play you some of my new album."

Briefly dumbfounded, Crowe and Bramson looked at each other and mumbled, "Ummm, OK," then followed McCartney, who "got in his car, windows down, in full-on L.A. traffic.

"So we go to the studio and he played us these songs, and he said, 'Let me know if any of these interest you.' They all sounded really spirited and cool for the movie. But I kind of nervously said, 'If you are ever moved to write a new song that's in the mode of a folk song…' And my friend Danny is looking at me and thinking, 'What are you doing?' and I'm saying, 'That would be cool. And the movie is sort of about sweet and sour and the little things in life that you've gotta treasure and never take for granted.' And Paul's looking at me and listening, and then he's like, 'Cool man, cool, great to meet ya, see ya.'

"That was on a Tuesday, and on a Saturday, Danny's cell phone rings and it's Paul. And he says, 'Hey, listen. Get to know me a little bit, get to know me. Because I'm the kind of guy that if you ask me something I might just come through for you. I've just written a new song called "Vanilla Sky," and if you don't like it I'll just call it "Manila Envelope." Do you want to come over and hear it?' "

Crowe's eyes go wide recalling the incident, and he puts up his hands as if holding a steering wheel and makes a sound of screeching tires.

"So we went over to the studio and he played it for us," he says. "And it was a folk song, it was exactly what I'd asked for. He'd added a metaphor about the banquet of life. And it was the perfect thing to put at the end of the movie, over the credits, to let people calm down and think about what's just happened."

"Vanilla Sky" opens nationally on Dec. 14.

Quick Cinnamon Rolls

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Fancy breakfast breads are part of our family's holiday tradition, especially Christmas morning when waiting for eggs and bacon is a hopeless undertaking for any normal 6-year-old. Yeasted breads, however, take too much advance planning, so I set out to make quick cinnamon rolls using baking powder or soda, the sort of recipe that could be slapped together in just minutes and popped into a hot oven just in time to satisfy an itchy first grader.

The basic recipe is a biscuit and there are two different types: a biscuit made with cold shortening such as butter and one made with cream. The latter is easier and somewhat lighter so I started there. I tested both milk and buttermilk in place of the cream and preferred buttermilk - it added both flavor and made the biscuits lighter. I also wanted large rolls so I increased the recipe to 3 cups of flour from 2 cups and also added a small amount of sugar for flavor. The addition of melted butter was not necessary but a half teaspoon of baking soda added to the 2 teaspoons of baking powder already in the recipe gave the biscuits more lift. In my original recipe I called for 30 seconds of hand kneading (this actually provided a higher-rise biscuit) but found that between the rolling and shaping of the dough for cinnamon rolls, the kneading was not necessary.

As for the filling, a combination of white and brown sugars was best. I was cautious with the cinnamon – 1 1/2 teaspoons was fine - but I also used 2 tablespoons melted butter for brushing the dough before sprinkling on the sugar and spice. Most confectioner sugar glazes are truly awful since they pack a bitter, off flavor. However, the Cook's Illustrated test kitchen discovered that a combination of confectioner's sugar, buttermilk, and cream cheese made a terrific topping. I added the sugar to a small bowl, whisked in the buttermilk until the glaze was smooth and then whisked in the softened cream cheese.

As for working with the dough, I found that a 10 by 12 inch rectangle was ideal - anything larger made the rolls too fat but not tall enough. Once the dough is rolled out, excess flour is brushed off, the surface is coated with melted butter, and the filling is evenly distributed, leaving about 3/4 inch at one short end to form a seam. (The dough seals beautifully when dotted with seam a bit of buttermilk.) Starting at the opposite short end, the dough is rolled up as tightly as possible. Once the log is formed it should be lightly dusted with flour making it easier to pull the rolls apart.

Next I trimmed the ends, clipping just enough to expose a neat spiral. I found the best way to slice the rolls is to use a thin serrated knife and a sawing motion, applying very little pressure. The long is then cut in half, half again and each quarter cut in half again, forming eight rolls. I tried using cake pans, springform pans, and pie plates to bake the rolls. The nine-inch deep dish pie plate was my favorite since the baked rolls are easy to remove. (The sides of a regular pie plate are a bit too sloping which makes odd-looking rolls.) However, you can also use a cake pan although it is best to remove the rolls before glazing, otherwise they can be tricky to get out. Oven temperatures were tested and 425 degrees was too hot - the rolls got a bit too browned and tough on their exterior - but at 400 degrees the problem was solved. Lastly, I found the rolls should cool for 5 minutes before glazing and 5 minutes more before serving.

QUICK AND EASY CINNAMON ROLLS

You can make these rolls in 30 minutes, start to finish.

For the rolls:

3 cups all purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups buttermilk

For the filling

2 tablespoons brown sugar, light or dark
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons ground cinnamon

For the glaze

3/4 cup confectioners' sugar
1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon buttermilk
1 tablespoon cream cheese, softened

1. Adjust oven rack to upper-middle position and heat to 400 degrees. Lightly butter a 9-inch deep-dish pie plate, a 9-inch cake pan or a regular 9-inch pie plate. Stir together the sugars and cinnamon for the filling in a small bowl, set aside.

2. Whisk together flour, baking powder, baking soda, sugar, and salt in a medium bowl. Add the buttermilk and stir with a fork or wooden spoon until shaggy dough forms, about 30 seconds. Turn out onto countertop and work until dough comes together, about 15 seconds longer. Form into a rectangle.

On a well-floured surface roll or pat dough into a rectangle 10 x 12 inches. Remove excess flour from surface. Brush butter onto dough leaving a 3/4-inch seam allowance on one 10-inch side. Evenly distribute sugar/cinnamon mixture over buttered area. Beginning at the 10-inch side without the unbuttered edge, roll into a log as tightly as possible. Dot the unbuttered edge with buttermilk and seal seam. Even out the thickness of the log if necessary and lightly dust with flour. Slice off a bit of each end to reveal a neat spiral. (The log is best sliced with a serrated knife using a sawing motion and very little pressure.) Slice the log in half. Slice each half in half again. Slice each quarter in half resulting in 8 rounds. Place in the prepared pie plate and bake until light golden brown, about 25-30 minutes.

3. While rolls are baking whisk together the confectioners sugar and 1 tablespoon buttermilk. Add remaining buttermilk a couple of drops at a time until glaze is thick and smooth and glossy. Whisk in cream cheese until well combined. Remove rolls from oven and allow to cool on a rack for 5 minutes. Drizzle or spread glaze over hot rolls. Allow to cool for an additional 5 minutes before serving. Makes 8 rolls.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 12

The Scorpio moon forms a 90-degree alignment to unpredictable Uranus at 7:48 a.m. and becomes inactive until this evening. Take it slow and easy this morning; allow extra time to get where you are going. Zero in on projects that have been left hanging and finish them. Influences continue to rate high for work that requires troubleshooting, problem-solving. The final windup to this month's new moon begins at 10:30 p.m., when the moon enters Sagittarius.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 13

A barrage of planetary activity makes for a challenging period today and tomorrow. Most prominent, the solar eclipse/new moon culminating tomorrow. The dark side of a new moon brings a time for looking back, letting go and clearing the way for new activities. A sun/Uranus alignment this morning may open doors to new solutions and possibilities. A lunar opposition to Saturn at 5:29 p.m. brings a lull period in the day. Spend time alone; rest, reflect, refocus.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 14

Stormy astrological weather continues. An alignment of Venus/Pluto tests the stability of relationships. Hidden tensions or resentments may surface. Stop, look and listen. Careless or indiscreet remarks may come back to haunt you. The solar eclipse/new moon culminates at 3:47 p.m., 23-degrees Sagittarius. Planetary influences begin to ease up this evening, offering an opportunity to relax and unwind.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15

Plan to get a lot accomplished today. Hard work will pay off. At 3:24 a.m. the Sagittarius moon aligns with Mercury and becomes inactive. A pragmatic Capricorn moon takes over at 4:48 a.m. and aligns with Mars at 2:08 p.m. Mercury also moves into Capricorn at 2:55 p.m., remaining there until January 3. You can initiate new activities, make important decisions, sign contracts after 2:55 p.m.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 16

The Capricorn moon opposes Jupiter at 4:35 a.m. and becomes inactive for the remainder of the day. No major planetary activity occurs. However, Capricorn is an ambitious sign, and this day holds high potential for productivity. Rather than launching new ventures, plan to catch up on unfinished projects, errands, cleaning. Follow through on promises you have made to others.

Spend quality time with loved ones.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 17

Yesterday's advice applies to today as well. The Capricorn moon continues inactive travel until 1:43 p.m., when it enters Aquarius. Tackle projects you've been putting off and get them out of the way. Take quiet time out for yourself; reflect on and learn from past experiences. Open your mind to new possibilities.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 18

Get an early start to this day. The green light is on for new beginnings across the board, in your business and personal life. Pull out all the stops. The most favorable period is in effect until 9:49 a.m., when the Aquarius moon aligns with Saturn. However, the remainder of the day continues to rate high for decision-making, major purchases, starting new enterprises. Go with your first impression; your instincts are on target. The evening is prime for social or romantic get-togethers.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 19

Above-average planetary influences are in effect today. You can cut through obstacles and achieve goals. New starts are recommended. The moon continues active travel in Aquarius until 9:41 p.m. In addition, Venus forms a harmonious alignment to Uranus, the planetary ruler of Aquarius. All group activities, team sports, community endeavors are highlighted. This is a great day to collaborate with others to achieve common goals.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 20

At 1:09 a.m. the moon enters Pisces, remaining there for the next 2 1/2 days. You can make gains developing projects that require imagination and creativity. This is an ideal period for arts and crafts, baking, decorating or wrapping gifts. There are a couple of rough spots, however, this evening, when the moon aligns with Mars and Saturn. Sidestep fears, anxiety. Prayer and meditation can help you to maintain inner peace.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 21

A challenging lunar alignment to Pluto warns you to avoid morning hassles or the blues. Storm clouds move out by 10:00 a.m., and a harmonious Mercury/Mars alignment takes over. If you carefully organize your time, you can be most productive. The Winter Solstice arrives at 2:22 p.m., when the sun enters Capricorn. An applying alignment of Mars/Saturn may raise stress levels. It's okay to burn the midnight oil catching up on work projects.

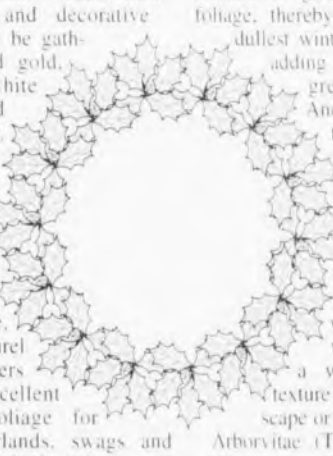
SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22

The Pisces moon aligns with Venus at 3:44 a.m. and becomes inactive for the remainder of the morning. However, a 90-degree alignment of Mars/Saturn takes center stage. Its influence serves as a reminder that there is much work yet to be done. Make up a list of things to do and go for it. The moon enters Aries at 1:45 p.m., bringing an energy boost. The first quarter phase of the moon occurs at 3:56 p.m. A Mercury/Jupiter opposition sets the stage for a fun social evening.

Holiday decorating with glorious greens from the garden

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT



Part 2

South Shore residents were transported from springtime to winter in a matter of a few short days, as record warmth was abruptly succeeded by cold temperatures and the first snowfall of the season. A heavy, white blanket of snow shrouded the errant blooms of forsythia and pansies, erasing all traces of our recent unseasonable weather and creating a winter wonderland. Snowmen, snow shovels and sleds replaced rakes, lawnmowers and leaf blowers as the arrival of wintry weather provided an immense boost to holiday spirit.

Wreaths, swags and holiday decorations adorn nearly every home and neatly bundled Christmas trees can be seen atop many a car roof traveling along our local highways. Magical, dazzling displays of twinkling lights illuminate the evening sky as brightly lit candles sparkle in windows to welcome home tired shoppers. Everyone is busy shopping, baking and trimming their homes and landscapes for the holidays.

After many years of gathering greens, branches and berries, I have developed a system for collecting fresh greenery, knowing just where to find the prime materials to suit my decorating needs. Although I would never be so bold as to clip someone's shrubbery, a few select meadows and vacant wooded lots supplement the clippings I procure from my own landscape. A pair of pruning shears is always handy under the seat of my car so that I can perform my civic duty by pruning neglected roadside plantings.

Stunning stands of winterberry, wild rose hips, and cedars covered with a profusion of icy blue berries are high on my priority list. Queen Anne's Lace, milkweed pods and decorative branches may be gathered, sprayed gold, silver or white and sprinkled with glitter, while tacky, to add a little sparkle to holiday decorations. White pine, cedar, ground pine, mountain laurel and junipers provide excellent evergreen foliage for wreaths, garlands, swags and arrangements both indoors and out as they last through the holidays and into the new year, even without water. Those which have received annual trims have become compact, attractive shrubs, enhancing the public landscape.

The branches of eastern red cedars, actually members of the juniper family, are my first choice for holiday decorating. They provide marvelous texture, vary greatly in color, and maintain their appearance throughout the holiday season. Prevalent in overgrown pastures and along roadsides in our area, their scale-like green leaves or needles may be tinged with blue, copper, gold or bronze. In addition, the female of the species may bear clusters of small blue berries which further embellish decorations. Numerous cultivars of upright junipers are valuable assets to the landscape and may display even more dramatic color variation than the native species.

Prostrate junipers tend to be prickly and may cause skin irritation when handled, necessitating the use of gloves, but they offer wonderful long-lasting color and texture. There are a profusion of blue-tinted varieties and others which demonstrate yellow-tipped foliage. Several landscape cultivars acquire a mauve to violet tinge in the fall and winter, providing additional color possibilities.

Members of the false cypress family (Chamaecyparis) are handsome additions to any landscape. Hinoki and fern spray cypress offer rich, deep green, fan-shaped, sealed foliage. A number of golden yellow-tinted varieties, including C. Golden Spangles, are also available and provide stunning contrast to green or blue-green foliage, thereby brightening the dullest winter landscape and adding pizzazz to an all green wreath. Another member of this family, the thread-leaf cypress, forms graceful, mop-like mounds of delicate foliage in green, blue-green or tipped with yellow, which contributes a wispy, cascading texture to both a landscape or floral design.

Arborvitae (Thuja), similar in appearance to the false cypress, furnishes equally attractive textural qualities. Pyramidal types make wonderful screens or hedges. Compact, globular cultivars, such as T. Rheingold, offer dwarf growth habit, lime green foliage in spring and copper-colored needles in fall and winter. All members of this family provide wonderful, enduring greenery.

A traditional foundation shrub, the family of yews (Taxus) ranks high among the most durable and useful shrubs for both landscaping and decorating needs. Available in both prostrate and upright forms, their narrow, flat deep green needles last for weeks once cut and provide excellent contrast to other greens. Shade tolerant, these shrubs respond well to shearing and shaping, an activity I save for the holiday season.

The eastern white pine (Pinus), with its long, soft green needles lightly touched with a hint of blue and silver, offers numerous benefits including marvelous textural quality, enduring foliage, delightful fragrance and decorative cones. Its primary drawback is its tendency to ooze sap. Collect pine boughs in a separate bag and take care to protect surfaces from the pitch. White pines are easily transplanted when small and may be sheared to contain their growth, but they can grow to more than 100 feet and are not always the best choice for a smaller landscape.

D'Ann's...Does it Again

Restaurateur Michael Cocomazzi has done it again, creating a comfortable and immensely popular dining spot where others have failed. This time, it's D'Ann's Sports and Entertainment in Holbrook.

A new venue but a proven recipe: the menu is a clone of his popular D'Ann's Neighborhood Grille & Pizzeria in Abington. Look for the same successes too: big salads (the Chicken Caesar is particularly good) and burgers for lighter dining, but a large menu for extended dining as well.

Top appetizers include their special "Snack Attack," a combo of different items for two. Entrées getting the nod range from comfort food like the best broiled Boston scrod around, a house special chicken supreme and a juicy choice prime rib to the all-new broiled seafood platter, which is simply a great value for seafood lovers. D'Ann's also serves a delicious pizza with various toppings, has a full children's menu (only .99 every Sunday) and a great game room for kids so parents can relax and enjoy a meal together.

If you're looking for a restaurant with high prices, forget it! D'Ann's is, in fact, one of the most engaging, comfortable, down-home restaurants in the area and serves some of the best food around, as well. Owner Michael Cocomazzi, a most delightful host, welcomes all to experience "a reasonably priced gem." And remember, "If it's D'Ann's...it's delicious."

Brudnoy AT THE MOVIES

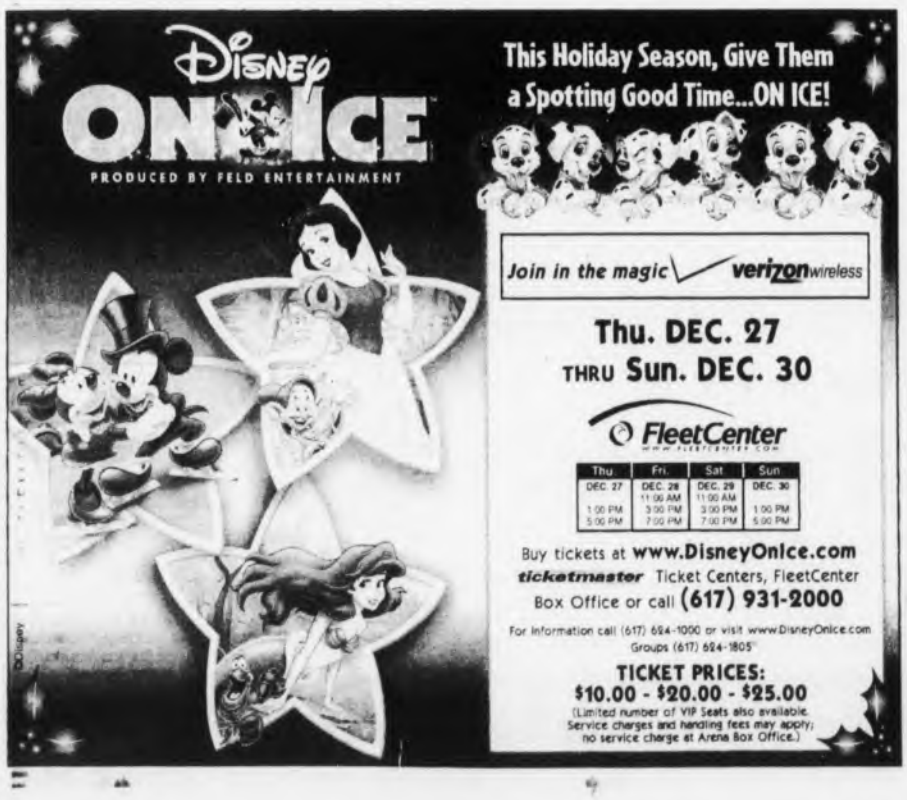
David Brudnoy CNC Film Crit-

Owen Wilson makes fine 'Lines'

Behind Enemy Lines (B)

Owen Wilson, best known as a comic actor, works well in this action movie.

This week we're down on the Taliban and up on the Northern Alliance, though, given the Afghani custom of switching sides at the shaving of a beard, by tomorrow half the Northern Alliance will be ex-Taliban. We're confused, we Yanks, to whom geography is as alien a school subject as Latin. Just as few of us can find Peshawar today on a map without prompting, even fewer could, even now, delineate which are the new ethnic mini-states carved, by bloodshed, out of Yugoslavia, after the fallacy of multiculturalism had been revealed, once the communist glue had come unstuck, as the delusory fraud that it is.



So, even though "Behind Enemy Lines" posits Serbs as the enemy in this handsomely accoutered adventure film about a naval aviator lost in Bosnia during one phase of that endless exercise in tribal bloodshed, were the film shot today instead of yesterday it might have made the Bosnian Muslims the villains. As one character, a French admiral who ranks above our American hero admiral (Gene Hackman, in full harrumph and spit-and-polish mode), puts it: who can tell the difference between Serbs, Croats, and Bosnians? Whichever side the movie chose to demonize, it dwells not on politics — fess up: you couldn't care less about who's who and where's what and why what's where is occupied by whom, in the "former Yugoslavia," as we considerately refer to that sink hole of European savagery — but on showing one of our guys in a jam. We're the good ones, the blond ones with nice teeth and prone to boyish jocularity; they're the bad ones, the ones who talk funny and look mad as they glower and shoot folks.

As Lt. Chris Burnett, Owen Wilson, known best for goofball roles and for his pouty mouth and his snout just crooked enough to be eye-catching but not sexy enough to match the rest of his all-American puss, positively glows, even under layers of mud and grime (and with hair that somehow manages to sustain that au courant parted-somewhere-near-the middle and floppy dishabille charm), and believably inhabits a role that might have been Brad Pitt's had Pitt and his perfect coif not been busy awaiting rescue in last week's war movie, "Spy Game."

Burnett and his pal, another grinning, cocky, handsome lug, are shot down — they have gone out of bounds, disobeying orders; in movies like this that's de rigeur — and the buddy is murdered, so Burnett takes to the hills. But they've photographed something that mustn't be seen by the civilized world, the Serb soldiers realize, though we see what that is only later. So, though everyone pretends to be committed to some cockamamie USA-NATO-brokered cease-fire confab — think of the current Mid-east "peace process" charade — everybody kills whomever.

Can Burnett be saved? You would think so, but as in "Spy Games," there is a Higher Purpose here, not to undercut the "peace" process, so Admiral Reigart (Hackman) is told by his superior (Joaquim de Almeida) to stand down. Ha! Imagine Gene Hackman standing down for a whole movie. Enter gang-busters action, unobtrusive computerization, and a not-too-cringe-inducing screenplay, plus solid acting. Hey, we're in a bust-their-fannies mood nowadays, so the film is bound for box-office glory and Wilson for more action and fewer dumb-bunny roles.

Written by David Veloz and Zak Penn; directed by John Moore. Rated PG-13.

Crash-prone intersection

More accidents at Beechwood-3A

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

When it comes to motorists travelling Cohasset's busy Route 3A – seven seconds additional delay at the state highway's intersection with Beechwood Street might be an irritation but it could prevent accidents, a new report says.

The Massachusetts Highway Department grades intersections on level of service in relation to delays and gives the intersection an overall "B" – which means the average stopped delay is about 13 seconds per vehicle.

But that could change if recommended safety improvements are implemented. The potential changes, including allowing for left turns on a delayed green light, would add about seven seconds to the average delay and drop the intersection's grade to a "C."

Cohasset police have complained about the intersection for years and the state study appears to confirm their concerns. Town Manager Mark Haddad said any improvements would be paid by the state because it is a state road. Plans are to have a representative from MassHighway sit down with selectmen and state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, some time after the first of the year to discuss the study's recommendations, Haddad said.

A total of 29 crashes were record-

Sewer shell price soars

Work on plant to be phased in

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The sewer plant's "new clothes" could cost a lot more than the estimated $150,000 appropriated at Town Meeting.

But rather than go back to the voters for more money, the improvements to the exterior of the sewer plant buildings may be done in phases.

Dan Coughlin, of Tutela Engineering Associates, town consultants, estimated the price to be almost $450,000 for the entire project which would include making the main building look like an old country barn.

The figure got Town Manager Mark Haddad's attention.

"Where is the extra money going to come from?" he asked.

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan was also taken aback.

"We need to find another way to do this because $450,000 is hard to swallow," he said.

Couglin said shingle-style paneling on the sides of the plant as well as a new roof on the main building would "soften the look" of the sewer treatment plant.

About two years ago, residents whose homes surround the salt marsh behind the Paul Pratt Library were shocked when the upgraded sewer treatment plant started to take

Wrapping up in a fur for Christmas

Consignment shop features dozens of coats

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Every woman deserves a fur coat.

That's what Andi Merrill believes. The former department store buyer, who has managed the Cohasset Consignment Shop since 1982, has used her expertise over the years to establish a "fur department" during the winter season in the shop at Tedeschi Plaza off Route 3A.

"We're known for our furs," says Merrill, a Scituate resident, as she combs through the fur rack pointing out the workmanship on a full-length ranch mink with diagonal sleeves and gathered back.

"You've got to be tall to wear this one," she adds about a full-length silver fox for $1,900. "And it's worth every penny."

The coats — which are on consignment — come from women who want to sell their furs. Most live within a radius of about 70 miles including places such as Wellesley, Marblehead and the Cape. Merrill consigns all the furs herself and works with the owners to come up with a selling price. Money from the sales are shared with the shop, whose proceeds benefit the Social Service League of Cohasset, a non-profit that supports Meals on Wheels and provides the services of a licensed social worker to surrounding communities, among other programs.

"They make women feel feminine and luxurious."
— Andi Merrill, manager

Merrill explains the women, who sell their furs at the shop, know they'll bring a good price and their furs, which are held on the rack by a chain, are secure. The shop's reputation has traveled far.

"I even had one customer ship a mink jacket with a fox tuxedo front up from Pennsylvania," she says. "Her sister lives in Cohasset."

Another customer buys a new fur coat every two years and consigns the old one.

Merrill doesn't accept any coats that are more than 20 years old (most are much newer).

She explains that coats dry out with age; even when they are well cared for, and she doesn't want the liability of the skins splitting after the customer has them. So she examines the coats carefully for age, condition and style.

"Last year I had a Fendi mink (French designer)," she recalls. "It was a gorgeous mink wrap, floor-

While election day in Cohasset seems like a baseball season away, time is growing small for incumbents to decide if they are going to run again. Starting Jan. 7, residents will be able to pick up nomination papers at the Town Hall if they are interested in seeking office.

One prominent position that will be open is on the School Committee, whose chairman Stephanie Noble will not seek re-election. Noble said while she loves working on the committee, she is currently studying for her master's degree in teaching and does not have enough time to devote to the board.

Noble, who is finishing her first term, said helping to pass an override for the school renovations has been one of her biggest accomplishments on the job. She said being on the committee has taught her that change comes through

Former homeless drug addict cleans up his act

Editor's note: This is one article in a series focusing on homelessness and how local charities are trying to combat the problem.

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

He is affectionately known as Big Daddy, and he spends most of his time being a role model for others, including his own kids. By looking at him and speaking with him, one would never be able to tell that he is a former drug addict who used to spend his nights sleeping out on Boston Common.

His name is Brian Taylor. In a interview with this newspaper last year, Taylor described the life he was living at the time. He spoke of his addiction to drugs like cocaine and pot. He said he drank whenever he could. He was homeless for more than two years. At one point in his life, Brian and his wife ended up moving into a crack house.

But things have since changed.

During Taylor's interview, he talked about wanting to change his life for his wife and five children, who were living in another location at the time. That change he spoke of has finally arrived. Taylor has now been clean and sober for more than a year.

"I'm here by the grace of God," Taylor said. "I was a drug addict for 22 years. I'm 35 now, and I really feel like my sobriety is a major accomplishment. I used to think I was supposed to get high. I thought it was my destiny."

Taylor now lives in Germantown, a section of Quincy, in an apartment of his own, along with his wife and three of his children. He has a job within the carpenter's union, and he also spends a great deal of his time speaking to children about the hazards of drugs in conjunction with a program at Father Bill's Place in Quincy, a shelter where Taylor lived until July when he got an apartment.

The program is called "Tell the Truth" and it operates side by side with D.A.R.E. Taylor likes to call his part of the speaking program "Big Daddy Says."

"I try to educate kids about homelessness, and I just tell them what I've gone through," he said. "When I start talking about the things I've gone through, kids are sitting at the edge of their seats." He added he would like to make his speaking to children a more full-time activity. He wants to bring the program into schools, churches and other locally based programs.

Taylor still insists that none of his success would have happened if not

CPC finalized

The four citizens-at-large that applied for the Community Preservation Committee were appointed at a Selectmen's meeting earlier this month. While there were only three spots, David Wadsworth who was appointed to the committee because of his place on the historical commission, withdrew his name, which allowed Paula Kozol, who is co-president of the Cohasset Historical Society, to fill that spot.

The other three citizens appointed were Jeff Waal, Stuart Ivimey, and David McMorris. Selectman Ronnie McMorris, wife of David McMorris, did not vote on the appointments.

Other members of the Community Preservation Committee include: Al Moore from the Planning Board; Jim Dedes from the Conservation Commission; Debbie Cook from the Open Space Committee; Selectman Thomas Callahan; Ann Barrett from the Housing Authority.

Recycling bag

There are new recycling bags being sold at 200 N. Main St. and other places around town. The bags are being sold for $10 and the money that was donated to purchase the bags came from the Boy Scouts Troop 228. Selectman Merle Brown displayed the bag at last week's selectmen meeting and encouraged residents to support the cause.

40B hearing

Anyone who is interested in learning about chapter 40B housing is encouraged to come to the selectmen's meeting on Jan. 15. At the meeting, the intricacies of the law will be explained.

School assistance program update

Town Manager Mark Haddad informed the board of selectmen Tuesday the Massachusetts Department of Education has placed the town on its January agenda to hear complaints about lowering the school building assistance funding.

"We are going to stay on top of this," Haddad said.

Haddad said he will try and contact neighboring towns to join Cohasset in the meeting. He wished to thank Rep. Bradley, D-Hingham, and Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, for all their help in pursuing the issue.

If the matter is not addressed, Cohasset may have to wait 10 years before receiving state reimbursement on the middle-high school and Deer Hill projects.

Schedule set

The following schedule for Annual Town Meeting and Annual Town Election were approved by selectmen Tuesday night. Town Manager Mark Haddad wished to call particular attention to Jan. 14 when the last day citizens petition articles can be submitted for the annual Town Meeting warrant. He urged all residents to try and complete their articles before that date.

Dec. 4 - The warrant for Annual Town Meeting opened.

Jan. 8 - Presentation of the Town Manager's proposed FY 2003 operating budget to the Board of Selectmen.

Jan. 14 - Last day citizens petition articles can be submitted for inclusion in the annual Town Meeting warrant.

Jan. 16 - Presentation of the Town Manager's proposed FY 2003 operating budget to the Advisory Committee.

Jan. 17 - Last day for submission of all other articles for inclusion in the annual Town Meeting warrant.

Jan. 21 - Draft warrant presented to the Advisory Committee for its review.

Feb. 19 - Last day to submit nomination papers to the Board of Registrars to be placed on the election ballot.

March 1 - Warrant sent to printer

March 18 - Warrant delivered to the Post Office for delivery to all registered voters.

March 22 - Constable posts the annual Town Meeting and annual Election Warrants.

March 30 - Annual Town Meeting

April 6 - Annual Town Election.

Work on sewer plant to be phased in form. They subsequently went en masse to a Sewer Commission meeting to complain about the plant's aesthetics.

Howie Altholz of Summer Street, who has acted as the de facto head of the citizens group, said when the plant was designed abutters were assured it wasn't going to look like a warehouse. He said the salt marsh is a very sensitive and beautiful area and the sewer plant has dramatically changed that.

"We just want the town to fulfill its commitment," he said.

Sewer Commission Chairman Gary Vanderweil proposed a solution that could work within the budget.

He suggested instead of fixing all the buildings at once, the town concentrate on the main building with the money the sewer commission currently has.

"Let's get the main building done first and work from there," he said. The treatment plant consists of one large structure and several outbuildings.

Vanderweil felt if renovations to the main building were completed to the abutters' satisfaction, other improvements may not be necessary. He also said the plant is not the eyesore it is made out to be.

"All the abutters have screens at the end of their properties to shield the view," he said. "It's really not that bad."

"This was supposed to look like an old country barn, and it doesn't."

— Selectman Michael H. Sullivan

Vanderweil's also said an additional $25,000 used to plant trees at the back of the abutters' houses would further help screen the view.

He also suggested painting the remaining buildings a darker color to help them blend into the background.

If residents are still unhappy, Vanderweil said, the final step would be to go back to Town Meeting and ask for more money.

Selectmen gave the Sewer Commission plan high marks.

"I like the Sewer Commission's plan," said chairman Fred Koed. "If we had more money we would be in favor of larger renovations, but we don't."

Ronnie McMorris felt something had to be done.

"I don't think it is appropriate that people are looking out their homes into an ugly sewer plant when we assured them they wouldn't be," she said.

Sullivan said he wished the building was more attractive.

"This was supposed to look like an old country barn, and it doesn't," he said.

The old plant consisted of some outside tanks and smaller structures, which were lower and therefore less visible to the neighbors. But the new state-of-the-art sewer treatment system needed to be enclosed to protect the equipment, which has been able to increase four-fold the amount of wastewater treated and provide better treatment than the old plant.

Pond wants Hull to cleanup its act

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The Straits Pond Watershed Association does not want a new development on Jerusalem Road because of potential run-off into the pond.

"All we want is a clean pond," said SPWA chairman Lawry Reid. "We need the support from Hull, Cohasset, and all the taxpayers."

Members of the association attended the Hull selectmen's meeting two weeks ago in an attempt to stop the board from granting a sewer hook-up to developer Stephen Corey. Corey, who is planning to build a 25-unit development on Jerusalem Road, paid Hull $650,000 for capacity in Hull's wastewater treatment plant. Access to the sewer is critical for the subdivision to go forward because the rocky conditions in the area make on-site septic systems unworkable.

Reid said the storm-water runoff from a large development increases the pollution levels in neighboring bodies of water.

"Any time there is a large development it raises concern," Reid said.

Reid said there were strong sentiments expressed at the last SPWA meeting to stop the proposed sewer connection.

Hull members of the group were particularly upset because they felt Hull had violated a previous agreement. They felt Hull had voted to allow sewer hook-ups to existing homes but not to new developments.

"The spirit of what the residents of Hull voted on is being violated," Reid said.

Reid said ultimately, all the association wants is an ecologically healthy pond.

"We feel any decision that affects the quality of water in the pond should be thoroughly examined," he said.

Hull Town Manager Philip Lemnios said the Hull selectmen don't intend to revisit the issue.

"It's a done deal," he said.

Lemnios said SPWA brought up some issues at the Hull selectmen's meeting that were taken into consideration. He said primarily, SPWA would have like to have been consulted before a decision was made. Lemnios said the group was barking up the wrong tree.

"If they want to stop this development the group should go before the zoning board and planning board of Cohasset," he said. "Stopping the development is not an issue with us."

Town Manager Mark Haddad informed selectmen Tuesday he still has received no response on the letter he sent to Hull selectmen last week. The letter explained Cohasset's dissatisfaction with Hull for selling capacity to a private developer and asked for a meeting between the two towns. The town of Cohasset, which is under a court order to solve its wastewater problems, is interested in additional sewer capacity from Hull. The town bought capacity from Hull for the North Cohasset sewer project.

Haddad also said he is still waiting to hear from Town Counsel on the legality of stopping the private sewer connection because the sewage would go through Cohasset pipes.

Selectman Tom Callahan wished to express his personal dissatisfaction with the town of Hull and hoped to meet with its board of selectmen shortly.

Chairman Fred Koed said he is concerned that Hull's decision to not confer with Cohasset before making its sale was wrong.

"They are setting a dangerous precedent selling to private developers," he said.

Little Harbor sewer hook-up a possibility

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Little Harbor has been an area looked at for years by environmentalists.

Some, concerned about the bacteria levels in the water, want the homes around Little Harbor to be sewered.

According to a presentation delivered by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection, a sewer may be the best option. Dan Coughlin, project manager for Tutela Engineers the town's consultant on the issue, said his company is studying the feasibility of upgrading the sewer plant to incorporate the homes around the Little Harbor area.

"We will evaluate all the potential solutions and all the options in this project," Coughlin said. He said the capacity of the sewer on Elm Street would need to exceed 400,000 gallons of waste a day to satisfy the needs of the approximate 330 homes that would be hooked up. Currently, the town treats about 250,000 gallons a day.

"We are going to try and push the plant to its limits," Coughlin said.

He said if the plant could not handle the additional waste, small satellite disposal systems would be an option. Gary Vanderweil, chairman of the sewer commission, said sewering Little Harbor would help Cohasset comply with a state mandate to address the concerns of area.

"The concept to provide all the homes in the watershed area with sewering is a good one," Vanderweil said.

In the presentation, given to about 100 residents, the reasons the harbor is polluted were outlined. The DEP focused on Total Maximum Daily Load (TDML) which is essentially a "pollution budget" designed to restore the health to an impaired body of water. TDML is the greatest amount of a pollutant that a body of water can accept and still meet water quality standards for protecting public health.

The DEP presentation revealed the bacterial levels in Little Harbor are low to moderate in dry weather however, the levels are high during wet weather. Runoff from surrounding roads and ledge, overflowing on-site septic systems, and animal waste are some of the factors why the harbor is contaminated.

However, most felt the primary problem is with the fecal coliform levels. These levels can be used to determine whether an area is environmentally sound.

The excepted levels of fecal coliform in an area of that size is 14 colonies per hundred milliliters. This is in order for shellfish to be able to thrive. In order for people to utilize the harbor for swimming, the levels need to stay under 200 colonies per hundred milliliters of fecal coliform.

A recent test of the water revealed the count to be in the vicinity of 2,000 colonies per hundred milliliters of fecal coliform, much too high according to Steve Bobo.

Bobo, the chairman of the Board of Heath, said sewering the area would greatly reduce the fecal coliform levels in Little Harbor. He said an expanded sewage plant would be both cost effective and environmentally prudent.

"I think this is an idea that needs to be considered," Bobo said.

Bobo estimates 20 percent of the on-site sewer systems around Little Harbor have failed or are leaking into the harbor. While replacing these systems is an option, it is an expensive one.

The cost of replacing and running an on-site septic system can run in the neighborhood of $60,000, Bobo said. The cost of hooking up to a new sewer would be significantly less, probably around $40,000.

Vanderweil felt on-site septic systems would be even less practical considering the amount of ledge in the area.

Henry Rattenbury, former sewer commissioner and attendee of the meeting, felt the hook up to the Elm Street plant was the best option.

"To upgrade to the Elm Street plant would be a very effective way to deal with the situation," he said.

Based on a report in December 2000 by Sterns and Wheeler, a consulting agency, the sewer commission went to Town Meeting last April asking for $200,000. The town appropriated the money which has gone towards retaining Tutela engineers and providing the necessary environmental studies for the project. If it is determined that the Little Harbor area will need to be sewered, Vanderweil estimated the cost to be about $12 million.

The last two sewer projects the town took on were paid for by both the town and the residents of the homes to be sewered. Both the central expansion, which also hooked up the Lily Pond area, and the North Cohasset system were paid by 50 percent from the town, and 50 percent from the users. Vanderweil said he assumes this project would be paid for in a similar manner.

Coughlin said he plans to have the draft done by the end of January at the latest. The hope is to be able to go to Town Meeting in April and ask for additional funding. He said before the draft is completed he will consult with various boards around town to garner their opinions.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he looks forward to seeing the draft by Tutela Engineers.

"Before we make a decision, I want to make sure what we decide to do is in the best interest of both the town and those who will be hooked up to the sewer," Haddad said.

ZAC holds first meeting

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The Zoning Advisory Committee set its priorities for the upcoming weeks at its first meeting Tuesday at Town Hall.

The group convened to decide which issues it would concentrate on in an attempt to draft articles for Town Meeting in March.

There were nine issues the group needed to narrow down. They included: accessory dwelling units, adult entertainment, barrier beach protection district, cell tower restriction, demolition delay for historic structures, interim growth, ledge preservation, senior housing/multi-family issues, and use variances.

The ZAC decided to devote most of its time before Town Meeting on four of these issues. Accessory dwelling units, ledge preservation, senior housing, and use variances will garner most of the attention.

"Some of these issues are new to the table so there is not enough time before Town Meeting to properly examine them," said Elizabeth Harrington, the town planner.

Al Moore, chairman of the Planning Board, said he sees the ledge preservation and senior housing issues as the two most pressing matters.

It seemed the most important issue to the group was ledge preservation. Mark DeGiacomo, a member of the citizens group supporting ledge preservation, said the new committee should spend a significant amount of time on the article.

DeGiacomo has already drafted a preliminary article for ledge preservation and he hopes the ZAC will give it more teeth.

Harrington put together a four-inch thick packet for the members of the ZAC for them to review in order to be better able to get a handle on all the issues.

Harrington said she hopes the ZAC will be able to report to the Planning Board on a regular basis to inform it of the group's progress.

Selectmen formed the group last week in an effort to curb the amendments of zoning articles on Town Meeting floor. Moore said zoning articles are extremely complex and require a lot of examination before they are ready for Town Meeting. He said it was important to establish a better procedure.

Moore added it is important to note the ZAC is not judging these issues and whether the Planning Board recommends them or not is an entirely different issue.

Once the group is satisfied with the article, it will pass it on to the Planning Board which will vote to recommend or not recommend the article.

There was a crowd of 10 at the meeting on Tuesday and no one was quite sure who was on the seven-member board, which will be made up of representatives from selectmen, planning board and zoning board, the town planner, building commissioner and two citizens at large. There were three selectmen there, chairman Fred Koed, and selectmen Tom Callahan and Merle Brown. Later, selectmen voted unanimously to appoint Brown to the committee.

Of interesting note, Moore was notified during the meeting that his oldest daughter had given birth to twin girls. Both mother and children are in good health and Moore was clearly happy about the news.

"They sound like they're keepers," he said.

The storm hits. The power's out. But you're on.

Crash-prone intersection

ed at the Beechwood/3A intersection during the three-year period studied from 1997-1999, an average of 9.7 accidents per year or 1.28 per million vehicles and well above the state average of .89 per million for a signalized intersection. More than 40 percent of the collisions involved personal injury, including one fatality back in 1997.

Most crashes were not weather-related and occurred at off-peak hours on weekdays. Nineteen of the accidents were "angle collisions," as opposed to rear-end or head-on.

"The reason for the high number of angle collisions at this location is insufficient green time for vehicles turning left from Route 3A onto Beechwood Street," the report states. The signal does not have an exclusive left-turn phase.

"Route 3A carries heavy through volumes in both directions; it is difficult for the northbound and southbound left-turning traffic to find a gap," the report states. "In some cases drivers may miscalculate acceptable gaps. At other times out of frustration, drivers may try to force themselves into the through traffic." The report also says the "all-red interval" is too short, so vehicles attempting to continue through the intersection at the end of the yellow clearance interval may be hit by crossing vehicles (right-angle crashes).

Cars turning left in and out of the gas station (Exxon/Dunkin' Donuts) driveways caused seven crashes over the three-year study period.

"Left turns in and out of these driveways are very difficult under heavy traffic flow," the report states. "The vehicles must traverse extensive pavement (two lanes of traffic), and it is difficult to find acceptable gaps for merging safely."

Contributing to the seven reported rear-end collisions was the speed

Detail officers divert traffic from Route 3A following a Mother's Day accident last spring at the Beechwood-3A intersection. A new study says the intersection is accident-prone.

difference between through and turning traffic and stop-and-go conditions including delays related to cars making turns.

In addition to a delayed green light to allow for protected left-hand runs on 3A, the report also recommends:

• Installation of a raised median barrier to eliminate left turns in and out of the gas station driveways on 3A.

• Increase the all-red clearance from one to two seconds.

• Correct the pedestrian signal, which is not displaying the "walk" and "don't walk" symbols.

Haddad said a little more delay at the intersection might be a good thing.

"Chief Brian Noonan says people just fly through there," he said.

The study was conducted by consultants with the Boston Metropolitan Planning Organization which worked with the South Shore Coalition of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council on identifying congested intersections.

The study also included two intersections in Scituate including Route 3A at Mann Lot Road (near the 3A Farmstand) which has no traffic signal. The other Scituate intersection was Front Street and First Parish Road (in front of St. Mary's Church in Scituate Harbor). Congested intersections in Hanover, Pembroke and Weymouth were also studied.

Who's staying, who's going?

many little steps rather than large leaps.

She advised whoever fills her position to spend the first year on the board learning the ropes.

"There are so many issues that require heavy knowledge it is important to have a firm handle on them," she said. She also said residents must remember they are simply one vote out of five, so drastic changes are not easy to make.

"The public should be careful of candidates who say they are going to make sweeping changes," Noble said.

Other positions up for re-election include two seats on the Board of Selectmen. Terms are set to expire this year for both the chairman Fred Koed and Selectman Ronnie McMorris.

McMorris, who is finishing her second term on the board, said she intends to run again. She said she has helped to initiate some very productive programs in her tenure including the formation of the Growth and Development Committee. McMorris added she has a strong commitment to senior housing issues and hopes the town can rectify the problem.

She said one of the prouder moments of her tenure is how well the board handled the transition to a Town Manager based government.

"It was something totally different but we handled it extremely well," she said.

Koed declined to comment on his plans at this time.

The Town Moderator George Marlette said he intends to run for reelection. Marlette, who is completing his third term, thinks Town Meeting is finally hitting its stride and he hopes to be involved in the process in the future.

"I think we finally figured out how to run Town Meeting," Marlette said. He said one of his biggest accomplishments was bringing Town Meeting through tumultuous times and making the meeting relevant to all members of the community. He said his goals for the next term would include running the town with less bureaucracy and better unitizing technology in the Town Meeting process.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas's term also expires this year. She said she intends to run again. Douglas has worked at the Town Hall for more than 20 years and is finishing her third term as Town Clerk. She said she most enjoys meeting the residents of Cohasset and filling out the paperwork for the births and marriages in town.

Douglas said her job is particularly exciting around election time when all the papers are filed through her office. She said she most looks forward to being involved in the development of the town in the future.

There are three terms that will expire this year on the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Committee. Sheila Evans, Roger Lowe, and Roger Whitley will all be up for re-election and all will be running again. Evans said her biggest accomplishment on the board was helping to raise more than $1.1 million for the new library construction. She said she is looking forward to the library being built and "her dream coming true."

Lowe seconded Evans' sentiments and felt getting the new library approved was a great achievement. Lowe, who is finishing his second term on the board, said he looks forward to working on all the programming aspects of the new library.

Whitley, who is finishing his first term on the board, said he would like to remain on the board to see the new library project through to the end. Whitley has been an architect for 45 years and feels his knowledge of architecture will prove to be very beneficial to the board.

"There is a very exciting group of people who work on this board and I hope to continue to be a part of it," Whitley said.

There is one seat up for re-election on the Planning Board. Chairman Al Moore's term expires this year and while he did not want to commit to running he said, "there's a good chance" he will run. He declined to comment further.

There is one term that expires on the sewer commission this year. Raymond Kasperowicz, who is finishing his first term, intends to run again. He said it takes a long time to amass the knowledge of the sewer issues and feels an obligation to the town to continue on the board.

"After three years of accumulating knowledge, it's my duty to continue to serve," he said. He said in his tenure the board has made a lot of procedural decisions. His goals for his next term include trying to make sure the sewer department is as cost-efficient as possible.

Glenn Pratt, who has served on the water commission for a year, said he intends to run for reelection when his term expires this year. Pratt, who was filling an unexpired term, said he has been very interested in the water department which may stem from his father's involvement. His father was chairman of the commission for 22 years. Pratt said he looks forward to improving the problem areas around town and implementing a five-year plan for the commission.

There are severl other seats up for re-election including, William Smith's seat on the Board of Assessors, Robin Lawrence's seat on the Board of Health, Ralph Perroncello's seat on the Cohasset Housing Authority, and Lillian Curley's and Mary Muncy's seats on the Recreation Commission. The Mariner was not able to contact these incumbents by press time.

Residents who are interested if taking out nomination papers can begin picking them put the Town Clerk's office on Jan. 7. The last day to pick up the papers is Feb.14 and all papers need to be returned by Feb. 19. For more information contact Marion Douglas at the Town Clerk's office, 781-383-4100.

LIBRARY CORNER

Library Director Janet Husband would like to thank the Friends of the Cohasset Library for providing the lovely holiday wreaths that decorate the library. They were installed by Trustee Barbara M. Power and Custodian Joe Corcoran.

Once again, the library has a computer that can be used for word processing by the public. It is equipped with Word and Microsoft Works and has a black and white laser printer. It is located in the Reference Room. By offering this limited-function computer, the library hopes to relieve congestion at the three Internet terminals.

The library will close at 1 p.m. on both Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve.

Harbor walk comes into focus

The selectmen gave the go ahead to Town Manager Mark Haddad to pursue grants that could possibly fund the entire harbor-walk project.

Dean Rizzo gave a short presentation to selectmen Tuesday to update them on proposed harbor-walk improvements. Rizzo said the bulk of the village revitalization issues are winding down and Cohasset Revitalization Corporation, a private company working in conjunction with the village revitalization task force, is concentrating its efforts on the harbor area.

Rizzo said the budget for the project will depend on the final design but he estimates could be anywhere from $500,000 to $1.2 million.

"We feel confident there are grants available that could pay for the majority of improvements," he said.

The areas slated for improvement start in front of Kimball's by the Sea and extend to the entrance of Government Island.

"We want to provide safe pedestrian access in the area," Rizzo said.

Selectman Michael Sullivan suggested the CRC look into putting a bike path in the area.

Rizzo said there will probably be a public forum in the middle of January to discuss design ideas.

Recalling Cohasset Christmas 50 years ago

By Joel S. Pratt
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset Railroad Station being moved.

Do you remember Cohasset Center 50 years ago? There were three grocery stores, three barbershops, two drugstores (each with a soda fountain), two car dealers, two banks, two hardware stores, two real estate offices, two restaurants, two clothing stores, and the Police Station. The St John house stood behind a fence next to the A&P store. Towle Electric sold appliances on Brook Street.

The last elm tree in the center stood in front of Danny Campbell's jewelry store on South Main. There was a gas station, a liquor store; a news store (which sold galoshes too), a TV and Radio store (above Delory's drugstore), an inn, a taxi service, and a shoe repair shop. Shoe repair shop? Yes. Amid the wonderful smell of leather and glue, shoes were resewn, resoled and reheeled. In the winter, eager kids left their skates to be sharpened. Sneakers were for summer: they weren't allowed in school except for gym. Everyone wore leather shoes and leather shoes were expected to last. The Post Office was on Depot Court with the telephone exchange upstairs. Nearby were a lumberyard, a coal dealer and the railroad station.

Cohasset Center had grown over many years. Homes had given way to the A&P, the First National Store, Kerr Motors Ford garage and other business places. When I was small, families bought almost everything they needed 'Downtown'. As the second half of the century began, growth gave way to change.

The railroad station was elegant. Morning commuters were dropped off to wait for their trains under the long platform roof. In the evening, wives waited to pick up tired husbands. But in April 1951, the station moved! Really! The platform roof and the porte-cochere were torn off. Then the two-story brick building was jacked up and pulled 100 feet along Ripley Road! A new wing was added which became a store and a Buick dealership. The large waiting room became a store. A narrow corridor with a ticket window was all that remained to serve train travelers.

Joel working on Kayak.

The high school also moved in 1951 — not the building, just the teachers and students. The old, old Osgood School had stood on Elm Street since 1891. It had cost $20,000. All during 1950 and 1951 we watched the new Junior-Senior High rise on Pond Street. The doors of the old brown-shingled school closed forever in June. In September, grades 7 through 12 started classes on the hill. We went from a rickety, ornate three-story wooden building to an unbelievably grand palace of brick and concrete. Every student had a locker! There was a real gym with locker rooms, an auditorium with a real stage, a lunchroom, a huge manual arts shop, and a library, all under one roof! It cost the town $890,000 to build and equip.

That year, summer theater left the Town Hall for Sohier Street. There the Music Circus tent opened in June. Wanting full houses for the first production, the management gave free tickets to students. I took a seventh-grade classmate to see the Wednesday matinee of 'Showboat.' It was my first date!

The changes which started in 1951 continued. Within a few years, shopping centers had replaced woods on Route 3A. Downtown businesses had closed or moved. The shoe repair shop had become a dry cleaner. The old High School had disappeared, the last elm tree in the center had died and the trains had stopped running.

Driving lessons

1951 brought me that most wonderful moment in a young teenage boy's life. Pop (my father) said I could learn to drive. I was 13. Mother did not agree. But drive I did. In April, the family went to Mt. Vernon, New Hampshire to retrieve a truck given to Pop by a business friend. It was not really a truck, it was a cut-down 1932 Ford sedan with a wooden truck body. My sister named it "George". Driving lessons started in our driveway and soon extended to Joy Place and Gammons Road. It was amazing how many jobs couldn't be done without driving George. Taking the oars and outboard to the boat. Moving the lawn chairs. Hauling brush to the burn pile and building materials to my shanty.

Boys' shanties were an old Pratt family tradition. I had started building mine in 1950 using scrap boards from our new house. Tarpaper and roll roofing ordered from Sears Roebuck arrived at the Hingham freight depot on Railroad Express. Pop and I discovered a pile of discarded shingles at the dump: hung weathered side in, they looked new. Pop made frames to fit a discarded door and two windows. I bought Celotex wallboard at Cohasset Lumber Company for the inside walls. By fall I had my own private place.

1951 was our first full year living on Little Harbor. A neighbor gave me an old kayak made of canvas and wood. I patched the canvas using airplane dope then painted it battleship gray. My wonderful cockleshell took me to every rock, creek and clam flat in the harbor. I learned to respect winds and currents and to avoid sharp rocks and shells on the bottom. Nonetheless the canvas soon needed many more patches.

The kayak afforded me a close up look at a seaplane that summer. The pilot had expected Little Harbor to be a normal body of water: shallow on the edges and deep in the middle. So he aimed for the middle. The plane came to an abrupt stop against the clam flats. It sat there several days until declared fit to fly, then took off in the deep water at the harbor's edge.

By 1951, TV had come to most Cohasset homes. In September, Cohasset came to peoples' homes on TV. A Saturday morning series profiled Boston suburbs. The host was filmed as he walked around the town. Kids tagged along, hoping to appear on screen. Two of them succeeded! Not having a TV, we watched at a neighbor's as Selectmen, shop owners and other familiar faces appeared. Then we saw the two kids. Jimmy Brennan and Chandler Thompson stood in front of Reddy's Studebaker Garage as the host asked if the Braves or the Red Sox had any chance for a pennant. Neither team made it to the World Series that year, despite the enthusiastic support of two young Cohasset fans.

Joel Pratt standing on the door of his shanty - pretending to smoke.

At 13, childhood was ending. I had begun to drive, I had my own shanty and kayak. I had been on a date. My Christmas expectations had grown up too. There was just one item on my list: a set of mechanical drawing instruments. For years I had watched Pop at his drafting board drawing house plans, book illustrations and hardware designs. I wished that I could draw as well as he could. On Christmas day, other kids couldn't understand my enthusiasm as I showed them my drawing set. To me, the compasses, pens and dividers were treasured tools, not toys.

Something else moved from downtown in 1951. For many Christmastimes the town Christmas tree had stood in the triangle in front of Cohasset Hardware. But traffic had grown and the tree had become a hazard. So it was moved to the Common across from the Town Hall.

That Christmas, the high school band and chorus held the very first concert in the new school auditorium. I remember hearing the carol 'I Wonder as I wander' for the first time. Seventh-grader Louis Watson, the only African-American in the Cohasset schools, sang in a strong, clear alto voice. Minority families were rare in Cohasset in 1951. Perhaps, in time, that too would change.

Nowadays Joel Pratt lives in Roque Bluffs, Maine.

BEHAVIORAL CONCERNS

Hello Cohasset and Happy Holidays!

It is finally beginning to feel like December and Christmas is less than a week away. I would like to wish all of you a very, Merry Christmas with lots of love, happiness and giving. The last few weeks have been amazing for me to watch as I have seen witnessed some pretty "grinch like" behaviors from adults. Yes, I think we all have times when we are feeling scrooge-like but please try to remember that the help at stores are not to blame for long lines, the bus drivers are not to blame for you being late and our kids are not to blame for all the chaos that holiday preparations bring. This past Tuesday was the Osgood holiday concert and some of the actions that I witnessed and that many people were talking about was just not called for.

For some reason, there are still people who feel that they don't need to follow the same rules as others and for them to park wherever they want, block traffic and buses whenever they want and then, stand in front of everyone in the audience with no care whatsoever to those behind them really makes me wonder if we have truly found the holiday spirit. It makes me really take a good look at myself and try to put everything into focus. If we all work on trying to be a little more respectful of others, having a little more patience when needed and making sure to help in ways that may inconvenience us a bit, think about the examples we will be showing our children. Just something to think about for the upcoming holiday week.

BIRTHDAY WISHES

Happy Birthday to one very special and sweet young lady, Miss Natalie Dignam is turning nine years old today and I want to send her a super huge birthday wish! Natalie is a third-grader who attends the Osgood School and she is a very special part of all our lives. Natalie, I hope that you have a wonderful day celebrating being NINE!

BOUNCING BABY BOY!

I got a wonderful bit of news about a bouncing, baby boy who arrived just in time for the holidays. Jimmy and Kim Gallagher welcomed James Laurence Gallagher IV on Dec. 14. Little James weighed in at 7 pounds and was 18 ins. long. This is one little guy who is going to be surrounded with love and attention from so many. James' paternal grandparents are Jim and Patti Gallagher, who live in Scituate and maternal grandparents, Kevin and Stephanie Sage from Plymouth. Congratulations to all of you on this happy celebration of new life.

HOLIDAY RAFFLE

The Second Annual Holiday Calendar Raffle is almost two weeks old and some great prizes have already been won. Each day, a member of the Hockey Boosters brings the box of raffle stubs to the merchant who has donated the raffle prize for that day so the donating merchant can draw the winning ticket. The prize is personally delivered to the winner by the Hockey Booster. Everyone is having great fun both drawing and winning the prizes. The lucky winners to date are: Dec 1-$100 Gift Certificate to King Jewelers, Gary Coyne, NH; Dec 2-$70 GC to Exotic Flowers, Jody Caron, Cohasset; Dec 3-Maui Jim Sunglasses, Maui Jim, Joe Sandblom, Cohasset; Dec 4-Gift bag of hair care and styling products, Charlottes Salon and Boutique, Dan Steele, Cohasset; Dec 5-$25 GC to Buttonwood Books and Toys & a Deluxe Photo Album, Nobles Camera, Terry Kahn, Cohasset; Dec 6-$50 GC Jakes Seafood, Rick Flynn, Cohasset; Dec 7-$20 GC to French Memories & $15 GC to Dunkin Donuts and 2 lbs. of Coffee, Archie Rasmussen, Scituate; Dec 8-2 tickets to a 2002 show, Music Circus, Sarah Porter, Dec 9-$100 GC to Cohasset Jewelers; John Chapman; Dec 10-$30 GC to the Village Greenery, Robert Ruisi, Marshfield; Dec 11-$50 savings bond from Rockland Trust Co., Margaret Scanlon, Scituate; Dec 12-$25 Gas card, Leos Exxon, James Maher; Dec 13-$25 GC to The Shoe Market, The Scribner Famil; and Dec 14-$25 GC to the Red Lion Inn, Kate Devine of Dennis. This year's raffle was a huge fundraising success!

The Cohasset Hockey Boosters, and the Varsity and JV coaches and players sincerely thank all our local merchants who donated raffle prizes and the Friends of Cohasset Hockey who purchased raffle tickets. The generous support of our Ice Hockey Teams is greatly appreciated.

NEW YEAR'S EVE

Still wondering what to do on New Year's Eve? How about enjoying an evening surrounded by friends at the Atlantica, enjoying a DJ, heavy hors d'oeuvres, a cash bar and a very, SHORT trip home after celebrating and ringing in the New Year? This is a fundraiser being held by the CYBSA and the monies raised are being put towards the new ball fields here in town. Tickets are only $35 and you can get them by calling Lynne DeGiacomo at 781-383-6413, Mal McCunney at 781-383-6387 or Anne Kearney at 781-383-1451.

COLLEGE SOCCER

Morgan Sandell received a Blue award for having earned three varsity letters as a member of the Trinity College's men's soccer team. The 2001 Bantams, coached by Eddie Mighten, posted a 6-8 record in 2001 to finish eighth in the New England Small College Athletic Conference (NESCAC).

HELPING VETERANS

The Col. Thomas Lothrop-Old Colony Chapter DAR held a Christmas party at the home of Barbara Dillon. Each December the chapter members bring various gifts and pool them to make up packages for veterans. These packages are then delivered to the Brockton Veterans Hospital. This year, approximately 90 wrapped gifts were sent from the chapter. What a wonderful way to share what the holidays are all about!

OVERSEAS SOLDIERS

If anyone knows of any local soldiers who have been deployed during Operation Enduring Freedom, please leave a message for Tommy Wigmore at the American Legion. Tommy, who is commander of the Sons of the American Legion, says the Sons don't want any solider or his or her family to be forgotten this Christmas. The number at the Legion is 781-383-9657.

That is it for this week. Please send in all your news, information and photos to me in one of the following ways. PHOTOS: These can be left at Cohasset News in an envelope marked, "Around Town, Cohasset." Please make sure to mark on the back all names of people in the picture.

Wrapping up in a fur for Christmas

length coat and it sold within a week. It was extremely high style."

The sellers either have bought a new fur, are moving to warmer climes, or find their life has changed and they don't have the occasion to wear furs.

The buyers, who range in age from 20s to 70s, are usually shopping for themselves although it's not unusual for a spouse or boyfriend to tag along.

"Most of the men say, 'buy it, buy it,'" Merrill says.

She's sold several coats to women who take the commuter boat and want to stave off the freezing wind chill when they get off the boat.

Merrill said she decided to develop a fur business at the shop about 12 years ago because she sensed there was market out there.

"I personally love furs," she says. "I felt there must have been people out there no longer interested in wearing their furs and we could be a good outlet for the working girl, who could not afford to go to Kakas or I.J. Fox."

Coats at the consignment shop range from about $400-$3,000 where at a furrier, they usually run from $2,000-$8,000 or more. Unsold coats go back to the owners. If a customer needs alterations, such as changing the length or different buttons, they are referred to I. J. Fox on Winter Street in Boston, Merrill said.

Turning heads at the plaza for the holiday season are the two consignment shop windows where several coats including a full-length coyote, red fox stroller and blush mink jacket with a fox tuxedo front are displayed, and act as a teaser to some 60 more inside.

Merrill says fur coats aren't likely to go out of fashion, even in a slow economy.

"They make women feel feminine and luxurious," she says.

The consignment shop is a 48-year tradition on the South Shore and sells the gamut of items ranging from clothing to fine china — all "on consignment" — meaning the shop sells the gently used item for the owner and gets a percentage of the sale.

Consignment Shop has lots to offer

Avoid the traffic and mall crowds and discover the treasurers at the Cohasset Consignment Shop located on Route 3A Tedeschi Plaza in Cohasset.

To assist the late holiday shoppers, the Consignment Shop will be open for sales only from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. every Thursday through Dec. 20. Manager Andi Merrill of Scituate said the regular hours are Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and for consigning Monday through Friday 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

Merrill added that "just-in" are hand-made children mittens and hat/mitten sets in assorted colors. The shop also has velvet children dresses, sweaters and warm jackets.

Lots of men's and women's wool sweaters in all sizes as well as men's and women's suits and a wide selection of wool coats are also offered.

For the holiday crowds there are glasses in all sizes, full china sets of bone china, linens and silver serving dishes as well as Wedgwood items.

For the relative that has everything, come view the collection of kaleidoscopes by Carolyn Bennett who holds a degree in fine arts from New York University and has made a career as a full time kaleidoscope artist. Each of her kaleidoscopes is an interesting piece of sculpture. Manager Merrill urges all to come and view the unique collection.

Shoppers will not only find treasurers but their purchases help support many worthy programs of the Social Service League that serves the towns of Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Cohasset. Call 781-383-0687.

OPINION

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus

(Editor's note: Francis P. Church's editorial, "Yes Virginia, There is a Santa Claus" first appeared in the The New York Sun in 1897, and was reprinted annually until 1949 when the paper went out of business. When it first appeared, it was an immediate sensation, and became one of the most famous editorials ever written.)

We take pleasure in answering thus prominently the communication below, expressing at the same time our great gratification that its faithful author is numbered among the friends of The Sun:

"I am 8 years old. Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus. Papa says, 'If you see it in The Sun, it's so.

"Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?

Virginia O'Hanlon"

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours, man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus.

He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The external light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies. You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if you did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived could tear apart. Only faith, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus? Thank God he lives and lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay 10 times 10,000 years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

Setting the record straight

Last week's page 3 story on plans to install an anchor on a granite and cobblestone base on the grassy island in front of the sailing club incorrectly identified one of the project's opponents who spoke at the selectmen's meeting.

Due to a reporting error, Paul Pattison was identified as being vehemently opposed to the project. Not only did Pattison not attend the Dec. 11 selectmen's meeting during which the anchor was discussed but he is not against the project.

"I was not even at the selectmen's meeting," Pattison said. "I'm not opposed to the anchor and I've never been questioned about it.

"I'm in favor of Herb Jason and his grandson (John Small). They do great work."

Jason and Small are spearheading the anchor project.

The Mariner regrets the error.

Chamber thanked

TO THE EDITOR:

The South Shore Community Center in Cohasset would like to extend many thanks to the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce for their support of our recent Jingle Bell Walk. The chamber has been a loyal and generous supporter of the annual holiday festivities for the past seven years, starting with our very first annual festivities. We are extremely grateful for their continued support and for helping to make this year's Jingle Bell Walk a huge success, enjoyed by hundreds of onlookers of all ages.

Historical society appeal

TO THE EDITOR:

For most of the 35 years my wife and I have lived in Cohasset, we've been members of the Cohasset Historical Society but have not been very active.. We have visited the Lothrop House, the Wilson House and the Maritime Museum a few times without giving much thought as to how they were maintained and operated.

Our attention level went up when we heard that all three buildings need serious repairs, which will cost more than $100,000. That seemed like an awful lot of money until we found out that the entire historical society budget has been running at the $40,000 level annually. It now becomes apparent that the society has tried hard to keep its expenditures to a minimum — an amount that didn't allow for repairs that weren't genuine emergencies.

Tight fiscal management is certainly better than running deficits. But it seems that we're now faced with making amends for the years of low budgets. The directors of the historical society have made an appeal for at least $100,000. I think the people of Cohasset will come through. The alternatives are completely unacceptable — they include selling one or more of the properties. And once a historical building passes on to a private owner, it is gone forever, and may even become a "knockdown."

Please consider responding to the Cohasset Historical Society's recent appeal with whatever sum you can afford.

Anchor better at Mariner Park

TO THE EDITOR:

Mr. Mark Haddad,
Town Manager
Cohasset Board of Selectmen:

We appreciated your time for the discussion of the "Anchor Project." Our position is "advisory" in the description of our duties and we look at ideas and suggestions like this one in relation to the overall picture of Government Island.

We are trying our best to maintain it as a very beautiful historical area to be enjoyed by the townspeople and visitors. We felt, and still do, that this very large anchor would fit in, size-wise, better in Mariner Park. If it must be placed somewhere in this area, then the Mariner Park spot is just plain and simple — ideal. Please take a moment out of your schedule to visit Mariner Park and see what you GIAC is saying. I would be delighted to visit the area with anyone of you at a time convenient to both parties and to look at the spot we have in mind.

Along these lines, we are writing to make a very basic request—for the benefit of Government Island and it's just this: we request that a moratorium be placed on any future additions of marine artifacts and/or memorials to Government Island. If and when any new addition is brought up, the GIAC asks they be evaluated by the Town Manager, the Board of Selectmen, the Historical Commission, the Design Review Board, and the GIAC before any action is taken. We, the GIAC, feel strongly that Government Island, a very small beautiful area is being littered, and overwhelmed by artifacts and memorials.

Hamilton T. Tewksbury,
Chairman, GIAC

Editor's note: This letter was in "Selectmen's Correspondence."

CHL fight not over

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset has been successful in stopping all of the proposed expansions of the Cohasset Heights Ltd. (CHL) landfill, which was forced to close in 1998 because, without those proposed expansions, it ran out of space. These victories have ensured that there will be no further expansion of CHL, limiting the existing problem.

However, the Town of Cohasset still has a problem from CHL. The 1,000,000 tons or more of waste at CHL sit at the top of Scituate Hill, one mile uphill from Lily Pond, our public drinking water supply. If CHL is ever completely capped and closed, that will still not end the ongoing problem of contaminated leachate from the landfill from continuing to drain into the Lily Pond watershed.

The CHL fight started over ten years ago because many residents of Cohasset were concerned about the pollution of the watershed by the landfill. Unless this pollution is stopped, by requiring CHL to install a groundwater interception trench to prevent the drainage of leachate into the Lily Pond watershed, this fight will not really be over.

COHASSET CARES

Some more nice people

By Allan MacDonald
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

We have a continuing series here with this nice people category. It's a great gift to the community to be able to conclude the year on a positive note. So here we go:

Last Saturday at our monthly recycling committee meeting we were all pleasantly surprised to have one of the Veterans Day 'culprits' [this turned out to be an exemplary 'culprit'] not only show up to apologize for dropping off rubbish and recyclables when the RTF was closed that day, but then go out and put in several hours of compensatory work cleaning up debris that had been blown around at the RTF estate. That's conscience for you!

Secondly, still at the meeting, we were delighted to learn that legal expert John McNabb has been more than instrumental [N.B.], the guiding light of the new, eminently sensible Producer Take-Back 'solid waste management strategy for the 21st century' effort as Research Director for the Clean Water Fund in Massachusetts. You know, the way some European countries [i.e., Germany] have been so eminently sensible with their waste management for over ten years now, having the packaging manufacturers responsible for what they produce after its useful life. Fascinating business! Stay tuned for this one! John hopes to lead Cohasset and the state to a level of extreme ethical and technological efficiency.

Finally, before the year is out, we want to congratulate Joe Laugelle for his conscientious handling of the recyclables he collects in his private hauling business. Joe's caring helps his customers, helps the town, and shows other private haulers that of course they could and should be recycling also, instead of incinerating everything. Thanks, Joe.

Road kill: Giving wildlife a brake

COMMON GROUND

AMY WHORF MCGUIGGAN

Road kill is a world-wide problem and concern, and the toll that our modern lifestyle and transportation system takes on wildlife is shocking.

Browse the internet with the words "road kill" and you're likely to enter a cyber eatery called the Road Kill Cafe, serving "meals under wheels" and boasting that "eatin' food is more fun when you know it was hit on the run!" Included on the menu is the Chicken that didn't cross the road, Flat Cat, served single or in a stack, Smidgen of Pigeon, Shake-n-Bake Snake, Chunk of Skunk and Awesome Possum. If you are so inclined, you can buy a road kill cookbook, posters and coffee mugs.

I admit to having had a nervous laugh while perusing the menu, you know, a I-really-shouldn't-be-laughing-at-this kind of laugh, the kind of laugh that gallows humor inspires because the subject makes us uneasy. The carnage on the roads is, indeed, no laughing matter. We all know too well the sight of an animal with its guts strewn on the pavement or, worse yet, an animal dazed and writhing from internal injury, oozing life. Road kill is a world-wide problem and concern, and the toll that our modern lifestyle and transportation system takes on wildlife is shocking. While there are no specific numbers, estimates put the death toll from road kill at a mind-boggling one million vertebrates — the group of animals that include amphibians, reptiles, birds and mammals — every day in the United States alone. I did my own informal survey during a recent drive to Pawtucket: 18 dead animals, including a calico cat, one of the more than five million cats killed each year. And that was only on 95 South. I didn't bother to count the dead on the ride home.

Road kill is one prong of a two-prong assault on wildlife. Indirectly, the more than four million miles of roads that enable us to explore virtually every nook and cranny in America, have had even a more negative impact on wildlife. From our human perspective, roads are progress, "opening up" otherwise inaccessible areas. What seems to be the innocuous act of upgrading a dirt road or cutting a swath through a lonely, neglected wilderness has, in fact, dire consequences for wildlife. When trees are eliminated from the landscape, so too is the shade and cover they provide for animals. When soil is compacted, water absorption is decreased, the flow and quality of runoff are altered, and dust, dirt and sediment are increased, compromising adjacent aquatic environments. New roadsides typically are colonized by invasive, alien plants that raise eco-havoc and displace the native species that provide food for wildlife. Road maintenance introduces petroleum products, salts and other toxins into the soil and ground water. Homesteaders arrive, eager for their own "wilderness" experience, eager to get away from it all, but bringing with them the very things they were trying to escape traffic, trash, noise, utility poles, Jersey Barriers, fencing, housing, parking lots and strip malls - all in the name of progress.

Habitat loss, reduction and fragmentation force wildlife — elusive and cautious by nature — to modify patterns of movement and behavior to avoid people. Without open tracts for animals to range free, far and wide, the search for food and shelter brings wildlife into our suburban backyards and onto roads and highways. The notion that wild animals will instinctively avoid danger is only true as it applies to natural predators. The 18-wheeler and the SUV are another sort of predator altogether.

If anything positive can be said about the slaughter on the roadways it is that road kill gives us passersby an opportunity to see animals we might not otherwise see and provides biologists with information about species and habitat so that subsequent protective measures can, if necessary, be implemented.

Drive around town and you'll find our roads littered with opossums, raccoons and skunks. All three are nocturnal creatures who will scavenge road kill at night, thus putting themselves in the paths of vehicles and headlights that "freeze" them with fear. Nationwide, more than ten million opossum are killed each year by vehicles. The relatively slow moving opossum, North America's only marsupial, has the habit of playing dead — playing possum — when startled, a trick that may save it from natural predators, but dooms it when the predator is a speeding car or truck. The raccoon, with its rolling gait, travels in pairs or family groups, tending to young. As much as any wild animal, the raccoon "bandit" has learned to exploit the presence of humans, turning door knobs, lifting latches and brazenly helping itself to food and trash. Fierce fighters, raccoons instinctively turn to confront danger, even stepping into the path of danger, but are no match for a car or truck. Skunks, who usually leave whole neighborhoods "perfumed" after being hit, are at their most vulnerable when they awaken from hibernation in a groggy state in late winter and set out in search of food. When they sense danger, even in the form of a car, the skunk's instinct, like the raccoon's, is to turn, confront and attack.

Squirrels, chipmunks and rabbits, active by day when they forage for fruits and nuts along woodsy roadsides, must contend with an even more formidable flow of traffic than their nocturnal brethren. Studies have shown that the speed of vehicles is not as much a factor in the death of these animals as is their habit of darting, zigzagging and circling back in the face of danger. Their unpredictable avoidance behaviors make them among the hardest of wildlife for drivers to avoid.

Reptiles and amphibians, the group of creatures known fondly as the "herps," are the most unnoticeable to drivers and the least visible of road killed wildlife to passersby. An integral part of any ecosytem, playing the dual role of prey and predator, the cold-blooded herps - turtles, salamanders, snakes and frogs - are ectotherms whose body temperature varies with their surroundings. Cold weather sends them into hibernation, but warmth and sun-baked surfaces like roads and highways, devoid of shade, bring them out to bask, making them vulnerable to vehicles. Many of the herps depend on aquatic habitats during their reproductive and juvenile phases, moving after metamorphosis to terrestrial uplands. Roadways have eradicated many wetlands and disrupted herp populations by segregating and isolating them from one another and from their breeding waters with unpassable barriers.

All the news, however, is not disheartening. As biologists better understand animal behavior and as public awareness of the importance of biodiversity grows, efforts will be stepped up to mitigate the negative impact of our modern lifestyle on wildlife.

We can all make a difference. Already, in areas where salamander populations move in early spring from upland forests to vernal pools for breeding, tunnels and culverts have been built under roadways to allow a safe passage. Even communities without tunnels are assisting by closing off roads to vehicles until the migration is finished.

Wildlife signs posted along highways warn drivers that it is easier to anticipate animals in the road than to avoid them when they bolt out from the darkness. The signs exist as much for the safety of drivers as they do for the animals. Several hundred human fatalities are recorded each year from vehicle collisions with larger animals like deer and moose whose size propels them onto the hoods of cars and through windshields. Heed the signs and slow down, especially when the visibility is low. Drive with high beams on and, if possible, stop and allow animals to pass safely. Swerving only makes the animal vulnerable to the next car.

Watch for movement along roadsides in brush, shrubs or drain ditches and refrain from disposing food that might attract animals to the roadside. Get involved in local conservation efforts and encourage the building of more wildlife corridors. Monitor new road building projects to ensure minimal environmental impact. Encourage highway department employ- promptly remove and dispose of road kill to discourage scavenging. Finally, pay attention to road kill and if an animal looks rare or unusual, notify the conservation commission so that sensitive habitats and surviving populations can be protected.

Fortunately, many of the animals we see on our roads are not endangered or threatened — yet. But, how many creatures that were once taken for granted now live only in lore and legend?

I see where they're out after Yakoo again.

In case you came in late, Yakoo is the mascot of the North Quincy High School athletic teams, named for Allan Yacubian, Class of 1958, now a Wollaston dentist who is of Armenian descent.

His glowering image appears on North Quincy football programs dressed in the national costume of Armenia — war paint, breechclout, moccasins and feathered headband, carrying a tomahawk.

Some people, including Ed Grogan, think that this makes him more Indian than Armenian, particularly since the nickname of the North Quincy High athletic teams is a Red Raider who scalps a rival mascot from Quincy High at halftime in their Thanksgiving Day football game.

Grogan, an Atlantic Middle School teacher in Quincy for 30 years who led an unsuccessful campaign against Yakoo in the early '90s, has filed a complaint with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination, claiming Yakoo is a racial stereotype demeaning to Native Americans.

And the MCAD has agreed to "authorize an investigation" into the case, which means Yakoo probably will be the loser this time around.

The heat has been turned up under sports teams with Indian nicknames and mascots since last spring.

The heat has been turned up under sports teams with Indian nicknames and mascots since last spring when the U. S. Commission on Civil Rights called for an end to such ethnic insults at non-Indian schools, colleges, and universities.

Since that time, Quinnipiac University in Hamden, Conn., has dropped its old nickname, the Braves, as offensive to Indians, but will retain its corporate name in spite of the fact that the school itself is named for a local Indian tribe.

Ditto the University of Illinois, where Native Americans have been campaigning against the nickname, the Fighting Illini, for the past 13 years in a state that owes its own name to the same old Midwest Indian tribe.

Some schools and colleges have gone so far as to obtain the approval of a local Indian tribe to use a nickname.

Florida State University claims to have the blessing of Seminole tribal leaders for the use of its nickname, the Seminoles, and the Salamanca, N.Y., school district and the Seneca Indians actually voted on a resolution to okay use of the Warriors as a nickname.

Many schools have given up without a fight. At UMass-Amherst, the Redmen became the Minutemen, at St. John's University the Redmen became the Red Storm, and the Stanford Indians became the Cardinals, with scarcely a protest from the Vatican.

Once we get this Indian mess cleaned up, maybe we can get the MCAD to go after other ethnic nicknames.

Only recently, Elon College, with 3,500 students in North Carolina, changed its name from the Fightin' Christians, a nickname that was coined by a local sportswriter in the 1920s and stuck for 80 years. Elon teams are now known as the Phoenix.

And then there's the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame . . .

HEALTH NOTES

The Little Harbor irregulars

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The best kind of environmentalism is that which is driven by enlightened self interest. A secret fact is that most of the beautiful homes around Little Harbor host a very tenuous prospect of dealing with their wastewater. Many homeowners practice rigorous conservation of their water use to protect endangered septic systems, and others have spent enormous sums to upgrade their septic systems to advanced innovative units which will prevent polluting their property.

In order to confirm the belief that pollution is increasing in Little Harbor, some homeowners in the area are now taking wet-weather water samples

The best solution for these problems around Little Harbor is a sewer. A sewer is controversial, because some say it will promote new growth in a stable neighborhood; others say there is no proof of the need for a better system than we have right now. And indeed, there is precious little real proof that Little Harbor is polluted. Marine Fisheries data resulted in the 1981 closing of the shellfish beds. And a 1999 report obtained by the Town showed some pollution, but tidal flushing generally keeps Little Harbor quite clean. It is only during rain events that the ugly, polluted face of Little Harbor shows itself. To find out how bad Little Harbor can get, water quality data needs to be taken during rainstorms. Hiring contractors to take such data is extremely costly and, as proved by the 1999 report, not very reliable. Hence, the Little Harbor Irregulars.

The Board of Health has promoted volunteer monitoring as an assessment tool to gather data about the condition of our water bodies for several reasons: first is that it is cheaper than contracting for the data, but more important it encourages people to have an environmental concern. We have used high school students to gather data about how salinity in Cohasset Cove affects the lobster catch stored there. Other students have helped gather pollution data in the Gulf, and Little Harbor. And then we have the Little Harbor Irregulars. In order to confirm the belief that pollution is increasing in Little Harbor, some homeowners in the area are now taking wet-weather water samples. This is not easy duty. They don boots and rain gear, because the data must be taken within the first few hours of heavy rainstorms, and go out onto the shore of the Harbor; dip their specimen jars into the water and carefully screw on the top. They then pack the jars in ice and deliver them to the Board of Health within a few hours of collection. These specimens are then picked up by local labs and processed within eight hours.

Cholesterol screening

Free Cholesterol screening for ages 18-25 at the Cohasset Middle High School Cafeteria on Jan. 3, from 12:30–4 p.m. and 5–7 p.m.

John McCarthy, one of the Little Harbor irregulars, taking water samples in upper Little Harbor as Steve Bobo looks on.

Nor are The Irregulars shiny eyed environmentalists. They recognize that, if there isn't enough pollution data, the plans for a sewer, which will prevent disrupting their property with a costly innovative septic system, may not come to fruition. So, it's a money thing as well as an environmental one. At latest count, there are seven irregulars, and we have gotten some encouraging (high pollution) data. Since bacteria will not survive at temperatures under 40 degrees Fahrenheit, data taking for the season is now over. As soon as the results are evaluated, we'll publish them here.

Historic buildings in trouble

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

The historical society is asking the residents of Cohasset to donate money to its capital project plan.

The society, in a letter sent to all registered voters in the town, described the need for more than $100,000 in order to maintain its three buildings.

The society owns three historic buildings in town that also serve as museums, which includes the society's headquarters, the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer St., and the Maritime Museum and John Wilson House on Elm Street in the village.

All three need repairs. The Lothrop House needs the roof repaired as well as an exterior paint job. The Maritime Museum needs upgraded lighting, display cases, and signage. Perhaps the most expensive endeavor is to the Wilson House in which drainage problems need to be corrected. There is also a need to create handicap access at the Wilson House and the Maritime Museum as well as provide museum quality storage and display for the gowns and textiles at the locations. The most pressing matter is addressing the drainage problems at the Wilson House.

> "If this is not addressed, the Wilson House will continue to deteriorate."
> — Paula Kozol, co-president of the society

"If this is not addressed, the Wilson House will continue to deteriorate," said Paula Kozol, co-president of the society.

Kozol feels Cohasset residents will support this venture.

"In the aftermath of Sept. 11 there has been an increased sense of community and allegiance to roots," Kozol said. She feels the residents of town want to preserve the town's character and there is no better way to do that then through the historical museums.

Co-president Kathy O'Malley said the group has already raised $13,000 from 98 donors, and the money is still coming in. The gifts have consisted of checks, matching grants and securities. In the letter sent to residents, the society encouraged donations of $100.

"This is something that would be really nice for the town," she said.

Kenneth Cook, 28 Pond St. and member of the historical society, said he is very concerned about the state of the buildings and hopes Cohasset residents will come through. He states in a letter to the editor, "the alternatives are completely unacceptable. they include selling one or more of the properties."

Both Kozol and O'Malley said while this is a very distant possibility, if the society does not receive the money it needs, it will be forced to go elsewhere to raise the funds.

Kozol said the society has been energized recently and is very excited about its fundraising campaign.

"We have new board members and a realization of what a wonderful collection we have," she said. Kozol added one of the society's goals it to try and appeal to a younger generation.

"It's time for us to get more involved with the schools," she said.

The historical society is planning to install a "thermometer" to place outside the museums as a measuring stick of where the society stands in its fundraising efforts. It also plans to send out membership renewal packages in the coming weeks.

New cable company may come to town

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

Cohasset may be seeing a new cable company come to town.

Selectmen lambasted AT&T at their meeting Tuesday for poor customer service and expensive billing rates.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he will invite representatives from other companies to Cohasset in order to establish some competition among the cable companies.

Selectman Michael Sullivan was irate at the lack of service that he says many in the town receive.

"The response time for your customer service center is abysmal," he said. "It is a very frustrating system and the message from you people is that you don't care."

Lou Russo, the manager of government affairs for AT&T, said the company has acquired myriad small companies over the past few years and customer service has been slow to pick up the extra customers.

"We knew it was going to be ugly but it was something that had to be done," she said.

Selectman Tom Callahan said he has received calls from residents at 10:30 p.m. who were angry they could not get through to customer service.

"It is not my job to satisfy your customers," Callahan said.

Russo said there are currently four different call centers which have more than 1100 representatives.

"We are trying to serves our customers as best we can," she said.

Another issue raised was over the escalating cost of cable in the town. Russo said the Fedeal Communications Commission (FCC), not AT&T dictates the charge for basic cable in every town. She said her company has no authority to alter the price.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris blamed the federal government for the cost increase.

"Ever since deregulation everything has gone downhill," she said.

Selectman Merle Brown was upset over the channel selection that AT&T provides for Cohasset.

"Why do we need two Spanish channels?" he asked. "Doesn't anyone speak English anymore?"

Brown continued by claiming, "who needs that MTV station, all we want is the History Channel."

Who's the town's top citizen?

In keeping with an eight-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

The deadline for nominations for the 2001 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 4. Please see the nomination form on page 22. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2001 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2002.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

for Father Bill's Place.

"Father Bill's will always be a part of me," he said. "Someday I intend to sit on the board of directors there." After living at the shelter for more than a year, Taylor became good friends with Father Bill's Executive Director John Yazwinski. He added he and Yazwinski are currently thinking about writing a book on homelessness together.

For the first time in years, things are looking up for Taylor and his family.

"I love hearing my kids saying 'Good morning, Daddy,'" he said. "It's beautiful. This year will mark the first year I've ever had a sober Christmas in my own apartment.

"I used to have a really bad temper too. I couldn't deal with the problems I had in a rational way. These days, instead of panicking, I just deal with problems. Things are just going so good. It's overwhelming."

But Taylor said he will never forget that dark chapter of his life.

"I think about it everyday," he said. "I still go visit the Common quite a bit. There are still a lot of people there who I remember from when I was staying there. It's a part of my life and I need to talk about it. I don't ever want to forget it, because if I do, that could take me back there again."

Taylor remembers all sorts of things about those days. He remembers the teenage girls selling themselves on the streets. He remembers babies sleeping out on the Common in makeshift cribs constructed from cardboard boxes. He remembers sleeping in unclean shelters, where rats would run over him while he slept. He remembers people being shot all around him. Taylor actually once had a gun pressed against his head on the Common — his assailant made off with all of his blankets.

"It's time for me to be the father I should have been a long time ago. But I can't dwell on what's already happened. Things are different now. I'm just grateful to have a second chance. I'm now chasing sobriety the same way I was chasing getting high."

Brian Taylor, former member of Fr. Bill's Place in Quincy

There were two main things Taylor hated about being homeless.

"When I used to wake up on the Common, people going to work used to look at me like I was a piece of crap," he said. "It gave me a really empty feeling. The other thing I hated was being away from my kids."

Those days are gone now, and the main thing Taylor is focusing on is keeping his sobriety. He said he is having a great time being a father.

"It's time for me to be the father I should have been a long time ago," he said. "But I can't dwell on what's already happened. Things are different now. I'm just grateful to have a second chance. I'm now chasing sobriety the same way I was chasing getting high."

Although he is happy with his life, Taylor is concerned about the growing homelessness problem on the South Shore and beyond.

"It just keeps getting worse," he said. "It's unbelievable." He said he believes part of the growing problem is due to more and more teens picking up hard drugs.

Taylor has a lot of goals he wants to achieve. He wants to take his speaking program national. He wants to write the book with Yazwinski. He also wants to own a nice car.

"The best part about my life is my life," he said. "I'm working everyday, I'm taking care of business and I'm a full-time parent. I just love it."

When it comes to the issue of homelessness, Taylor had one thing to say about how people should feel about the less-fortunate.

"If you see people pan-handling, don't look down on that person," he said. "Pray for them."

For more information on the Big Daddy Says program call Taylor at (617) 821-0533 or e-mail him at Bigdaddysays2002@yahoo.com.

GIFTS of HOPE

A child's smile brings hope to all.

What will make your children happy this holiday? For some, new toys under the tree. For others maybe a week off from school. But for many children in the Greater Boston area, it is something as simple as food. This holiday season, there will be over 200,000 hungry people in Eastern Massachusetts. In fact, one in five children under the age of 12 lives in a household that struggles to put food on the table.

Many people are looking for a way to help, but don't know how. Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program can help you reach those in need in your area. For the past 10 years, readers' Gifts of Hope donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children in the Greater Boston community. Another season is upon us. And more people need your help.

Please join the Cohasset Mariner and Community Newspaper Company in giving the greatest gift of all – the gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way toward helping those in need.

Here is some helpful information to plan your gift:
• $15 provides 30 people at a homeless shelter with a bowl of hot soup and a sandwich.
• $30 provides two families with a week's supply of groceries from a food pantry.
• $50 provides one neighborhood food program with 75 meals.
• $250 provides a food pantry or soup kitchen with more than 1,500 pounds of food.

PLEASE MAKE YOUR TAX DEDUCTIBLE CHECK OR MONEY ORDER PAYABLE TO: (Choose from one of the local charities) Father Bill's Place, Carolina Hill or South Shore Friends of the Homeless and mail to: Gifts of Hope, c/o Anne Rodwell, 16 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050 (Please do not make your check payable to this newspaper or to Gifts of Hope as that will only delay disbursement efforts. Thank you.)

SPORTS

Star of the Week

Kristin Sheerin

The Cohasset High senior picked right up where she left off last season, winning all four events and the all around competition to lead the Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics team past Notre Dame, 128-125.15, in the season opener on Tuesday.

C.H.S. hockey team itching for top competition

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset hockey team has the look of a young thoroughbred raring to cut loose.

This is not to suggest that the Skippers were held back much by either of their first two opponents on the season — Randolph or Trinity Catholic — a point of conjecture bared out pretty well by the combined score of 23-0.

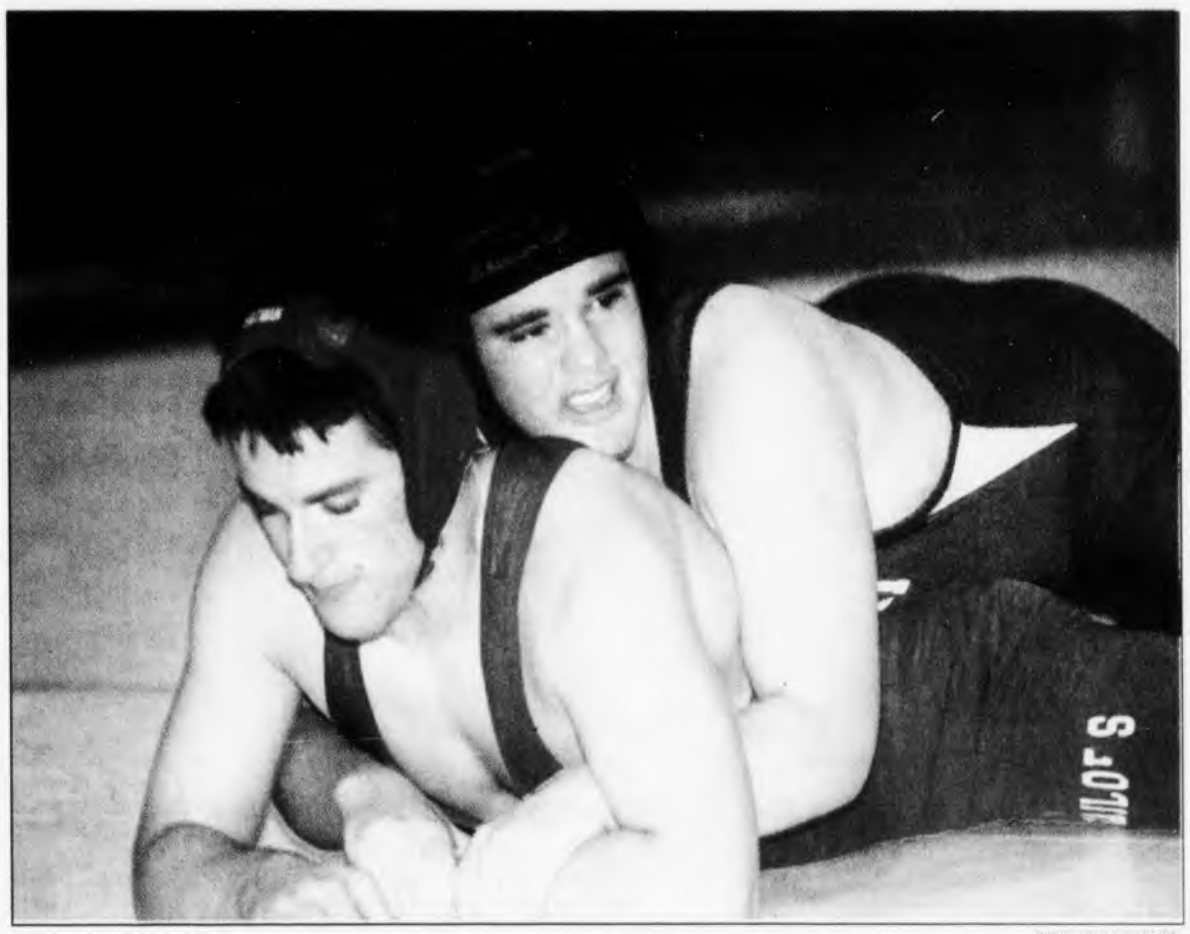
It's just that these two "warm up" matches have these upstart CHS skaters chomping at the bit for play in the South Shore League to begin.

"The kids are looking forward to seeing what they can do against their old rivals," said veteran Cohasset coach Dennis Walsh. "They feel like they're ready for the next step."

Last season, the Skippers fell just one win short of qualifying for the post-season, finishing 8-10 overall. So much for needing any extra motivation this season.

"Focus hasn't been a problem," confirmed Walsh. "The kids have been working hard. They know this could be a big year."

The Skippers returned all but one regular from last year's squad, and Walsh noted of the returnees: "every one of them seems to be bigger, better and faster."



To this talented returning mix has been added a talented senior in Will Moody, who didn't play last winter after transferring to C.H.S., a 2001 junior transfer in Mike Calorio, and a crop of talented freshmen, headlined by big, hard-skating winger Ted Straughn, who scored his second and third goals of the season in Saturday's 9-0 whitewashing of Trinity Catholic.

Tom Anderson was the number one offensive star in this lopsided match that, if anything, was not as close as the score indicated. The junior wing scored all three of his goals during a 6-0 first period explosion that had Walsh liberally rotating in players from his JV squad for the last two periods.

Solo goals were added by senior defenseman Tim Straughn (Ted's brother), Pete Whoriskey, Sean Chase and Chris Caron.

The Skippers were able to jump on both Randolph and Trinity Catholic quickly by coming at them with wave after wave of fresh forwards. Walsh is using four lines regularly, one or two more than most of the area's high schools, and a real oddity for a school the size of Cohasset High.

Cohasset freshman Matt Baroudi (top) gains the advantage in his 6-4 win over Scituate's David Kramer last Wednesday in the 189 pound weight class.

Wrestling team falls to .500

The wrestling team fell to 3-3 on Saturday, besting only Shephard Hill in a quad-match that also included Canton and Dedham.

Freshmen Bill Carbone (125 pounds) and Jonathan Littauer (103) each won two matches by pin.

Newcomers Drew Musto, a sophomore, and Cosimo Cambi, a junior, also notched their first varsity wins.

The Skippers took the measure of Shephard Hill, 50-24, but were nipped in close matches by the bigger Canton (38-30) and Dedham (43-34).

The C.H.S. grapplers did manage an impressive 33-15 win over Scituate last Wednesday, paced by the Baroudi and Casey brother combinations.

Both Casey brothers, freshman Matt (at 140 pounds) and junior Mike (171) notched victories by pin. Junior Terry Baroudi also slapped on a pin in his 135 pound bout, while "little" brother Matt, a freshman, took a 6-4 decision in the 189 pound division.

The Cohasset basketball team opened its season with a nice morale booster, taking home the South Shore Voc Tech Tip-off Classic. Cohasset won both its games in the four team field over Div. 4 opponents to begin their season 2-0.

After their first round win, Cohasset played their hosts in the championships. Although the Vikings are usually viewed as a weaker opponent, the Skippers could not hold anything back on the Injury-riddled Lady Skippers drop a pair to go to 1-2

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

Still riddled with injuries, the Cohasset High girls basketball team faced two hard losses this past week.

Most recently, the girls were taken down by Norwell on Tuesday, 68-41. That final score is somewhat deceiving, however, as the Lady Skippers played the perennial powerhouse Norwell squad quite competitively throughout most of the second half.

The difference in the game was the tremendous success the Lady Clippers had running their 2-1-2 full court press, pouncing on the ballhandler as soon as the inbounds pass was thrown. With quick hands and good anticipation, Norwell converted fast break after fast break to run up the score early.

Naturally, it did not help that two

Mariner All-Scholastic Boys Soccer Team

Cohasset's Bilodeau, Maitland and O'Connell named among area's elite

Again, another brutal selection process. We had 29 league all-stars from our nine schools, including nine Eastern Mass. All-Stars. All but one of our teams made it to the state tourney, with these eight teams combining for a regular season record of 80-33-28.

Long story shortened, we had a lot of soccer talent in Marinerland this fall.

Subsequently, many hard choices had to be made. Several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received strong consideration for this All-Scholastic honor. After consulting with area coaches, however, these are the choices we made for our 2001 Mariner All-Scholastic boys soccer team.

Matt Bilodeau – Senior (Capt.)
Midfield – Cohasset

Matt Bilodeau

A remarkable ballhandler and playmaker who quarterbacked a potent attack for the Skippers (12-4-2) this season, as witnessed by his team best scoring totals (8 goals, 17 assists)…a master on restart kicks…two time South Shore League All-Star…2001 Eastern Mass All-Star…four year varsity starter…plays club soccer year-round for the South Shore Blazers…also a captain and standout for the C.H.S. basketball team…Matt has applied for early acceptance to Williams College, whose soccer coach has actively recruited him…the middle of three Bilodeau brothers who have starred athletically at Cohasset High: TJ (now a freshman at Harvard and playing JV basketball) was a top player in baseball and basketball, and sophomore Chris was a South Shore League All-Star football wideout this fall and is also a very good hoopster…Cohasset coach Dave Nigro: "Matt's main attribute on the field is his vision. He has the ability to make everyone around him better. He just seemed to play at a little higher level than everyone else out on the field."

Pete Maitland – Senior (Capt.)
Fullback – Cohasset

Pete Maitland

The backbone of the Skippers defense this season, moving back and forth between fullback and sweeper… South Shore League and Eastern Mass All-Star…a three-year varsity starter…also a captain of the basketball team and star with the spring track team…as a javelin thrower, became the first Cohasset track athlete this past spring to advance to the New England track championships in over a decade…an Applachia Service Project volunteer…would like to play soccer and/or run track in college…looking primarily at New England schools, such as Trinity, UMass and URI…leaning toward majoring in some sort of engineering…Cohasset coach Dave Nigro: "Pete really improved from last year and was really solid all season. You can tell he really worked hard to improve. He was a constant for us."

Marc Sulmonte - Senior (Capt.)
Midfielder - Abington

Marc Sulmonte

This two-time South Shore League All-star was Abington's leading scorer this season with 40 points (18 goals and 22 assists)…His tough play on the Green Wave's offensive midfield helped Abington (10-9-2) advance to the quarterfinals of the Div. 3 South Sectional… The senior captain cites the team's quarterfinal game against Ashland as his favorite noting that despite the 1-0 loss, the squad played some of its best soccer…Was the top playmaker for Abington using his strong passing skills to create many offensive opportunities for the Green Wave…Sulmonte also plays basketball and track for AHS…He is considering attending UMass Amherst or Bryant and would like to play soccer. Abington coach Steve Schlicting: "Marc is a very strong midfield player. He's a relentless worker on the field and has always had a high commitment to working hard. He never gives up."

Ryan Murray - Senior Defense - Abington

This multi-talented South Shore League All-star was Abington's own ironman, playing a variety of positions…Murray's work as a back, sweeper and in the offensive and defensive midfield helped Abington advance to the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney, where the team suffered a tough 1-0 loss to Ashland…Murray scored two goals in each of the team's tourney wins over South Shore Christian Academy (4-0) and Cape Cod Tech (6-0). Murray also scored the winning goal in Abington's 1-0 win over neighboring rival Rockland which qualified the team for the tourney...This was the senior's favorite game...The senior was voted MVP of his team by its players...Murray also competes on the track team in the spring...He is considering attending Marist or UMass Amherst. Abington coach Steve Schlicting: "He played a very unique role on the team playing almost every position. He was always willing to do anything and always put the team before himself. He did a super job for us this year."

Ryan Murray

Pat Maguire - Senior (Capt.)
Goalie - Marshfield

This Eastern Mass. and All-state All-star wasn't a captain at the beginning of the season, but his leadership on the field earned him the honor midway through the season...The talented keeper shutout seven Old Colony League opponents (eight overall) helping the Rams capture the league title...Maguire was the league's best keeper, allowing only eight goals in 14 OCL games, while allowing 11 overall in 18 for a .61 goals against average. Although the senior didn't have a height advantage, his quickness in the net proved more than made up for it and could always be counted on to make the key saves. His tough play in the net helped Marshfield advance to the Div. 1 South Sectional semifinals. The keeper cites the team's 1-1 tie with Falmouth as his favorite game. Maguire also plays baseball at MHS and is on the National Honor Society, Key Club, and AFS. He is considering attending a number of colleges including Babson, BC, Providence, and Villanova and would like to play soccer. Marshfield coach Frank Blonde: "As a keeper people might say he doesn't have the right build, but he's as quick as a cat. He made saves that people never thought he'd make. He was always positive and always talked to his team. He was strong enough to make the key saves."

Pat Maguire

Joe Cronin - Senior (Capt.)
Defense - Marshfield

This versatile player filled a number of positions this season for the Rams, including sweeper, stopper, outside back, and defensive midfielder...His tough play on defense played a major role in Marshfield winning the Old Colony League title...His ability to shut down opponents best offensive players reduced the amount of shots taken on keeper Pat Maguire, resulting in eight shutouts, only 11 goals against, and a 14-game win streak...Cronin cites the team's 4-0 tourney win over Nauset as his favorite because he scored the first goal of the game...The three-year varsity player, captain, and OCL All-star is a member of the National Honor Society and coaches youth soccer in Marshfield...He is considering attending Babson, Stonehill, Merrimack or Bryant and would like to play soccer. Marshfield coach Frank Blonde: "Joe wants to hide amongst the others on the team. He just plays the game. When game-time comes around, he's ready to play. He's been a real pleasure to coach."

Joe Cronin

Joe Dinececco - Junior (Capt.)
Midfielder - Marshfield

This three-year starter and captain had a solid offensive year for the Rams...The outside midfielder scored 18 points on 11 goals and seven assists, helping Marshfield capture the Old Colony League title...Although just a junior, Dinececco's leadership on the field in directing the team's offense earned him the role of captain this season and he will reprise that role as a senior next year...His leadership and offensive skills helped lead Marshfield to the Div. 1 South Sectional semifinals...The OCL All-star cites the Rams' 1-1 tie with Newton North as his favorite game because it was "the turning point of the season"...The junior plays soccer year round both with MHS and with the South Shore United and Boston Bulldogs club teams...Dinececco is an honor roll student and is already considering colleges at which he would like to play soccer. Marshfield coach Frank Blonde: "Joe was our main offensive threat this year. We knew that if we got the ball to him, he'd take care of things. He's a good leader and he works hard. As good as he is I think he's still putting his game together and will bring a major element to the team next year."

Joe Dinececco

Joe Jackson - Senior
Sweeper - Hanover

This Patriot League All-star had a great defensive year for Hanover...As the team's sweeper, Jackson was often called on to mark on the Indians' opponents best offensive player...His tough play and top-notch skills helped decrease the number of shots taken at keeper Paul Maniscalco by highly talented Patriot League players...His solid efforts helped Hanover qualify for the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney with an 8-6-3 record...Jackson cites the Indians' season-ending 1-0 win over former South Shore League rival Norwell as his favorite game because the team had not beat them in more than eight years...Jackson is also a member of the hockey team and will captain the lacrosse team in the spring...He is considering a number of schools including Tufts, Villanova, UVM, and UMass Amherst and would like to play lacrosse. Hanover coach Jim Sylvia: "I think he's the top sweeper around. He sees the field extremely well and reads the defense well. He plays one of the most important positions and handles it very well."

Joe Jackson

Dan Breda - Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Hanover

This talented senior was Hanover's leading scorer this season and was voted unanimously to the Patriot League All-star team...The highly-skilled and extremely quick forward was among the league's most dangerous forwards, weaving through defenses and scoring when Hanover needed it most...His play on the frontline helped the Indians qualify for the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney...Breda is a three-sport letterman at Hanover High...He is captain of the hockey team this winter and played a key role in the Indians winning a Div. 3 state title last year...Breda also plays baseball for HHS...He cites Hanover's 1-0 win over former South Shore League rival Norwell as his favorite game because it marked the first time in eight years they had come out on top...The senior is considering attending UMass Amherst, URI, Suffolk, or Western New England and would like to play hockey. Hanover coach Jim Sylvia: "He was a tremendous leader for us this year. He's fast and has a strong foot. Our opponents learned pretty quickly that if you leave him alone, he's going to put the ball in the net."

Dan Breda

Ben Prime - Junior Forward - Hingham

This talented junior has started all three years he's played at Hingham High...Prime proved to be the Harbormen's most productive forward scoring 19 points on 13 goals and six assists...Although still a junior, Prime represented Hingham on both the Eastern Mass. and All-state All-star teams...He was also a Patriot League All-star...Prime's intensity and high work rate helped the Harbormen reach the semifinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney, where the team suffered a tough loss to Patriot League champ and rival Duxbury...Prime has already been elected to captain the Hingham team next season. Hingham coach Ken Carlin: "Ben has the best work rate I've ever seen. He is always willing to try new things and does his best to work within the frame of the team. He's a leader on and off the field and is the type of kid that everyone wants for their own."

Ben Prime

Darrell Smith - Senior (Capt.)
Sweeper/Stopper - Hingham

This three-year varsity player has overcome two years of injuries to emerge as one of the top defensive players in the Patriot League...Despite missing a number of games due to nagging injuries in his sophomore and junior years, Smith returned healthy this season and played in almost every game for Hingham...This hard-nosed defenseman's work in the backfield for the Harbormen contributed greatly to the team's qualifying for the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney and making it to the semifinals where old PL rival Duxbury won a tough battle...Smith just missed making the Eastern Mass. team, as he was the sixth man voted in the league...Smith was also Hingham's nomination for the PL Sportsmanship Award...The senior is considering attending college. Hingham coach Ken Carlin: "As tough a player as he is, he never received a card in three years of varsity play. He's a hard-nosed player who always dusted himself off and continued to play. He was a good, clean competitor, and would get back at you by out-playing you on the field."

Darrell Smith

Connor Fitzgerald - Senior
Midfielder - Hingham

Fitzgerald was brought up to varsity as a freshman for the post-season tourney and has spent the last three seasons earning his spot in Hingham's defensive midfield...His time spent in off-season training allowed the senior to greatly improve over the last three years, according to his coach...Fitzgerald's tough play and great skills in the midfield no doubt contributed to Hingham getting to the Div. 2 South Sectional semifinals...The senior cites the Harbormen's 2-0 quarterfinal win over top-seeded Dighton-Rehoboth as his favorite game as they were the team that knocked Hingham out last season...Fitzgerald is also a talented lacrosse player for HHS and played a key role in the team's Div. 2 state title...Fitzgerald has been accepted to Bowdin and plans to play lacrosse. Hingham coach Ken Carlin: "He's a work horse. He came back for preseason and beat everyone in pushups, situps, and our two-mile run. His intensity proved that anyone who wants to play hard can. He put in the time off-season and it showed."

Alex Knight – Senior
Midfield – Scituate

After missing all of his sophomore and much of his junior campaign with injuries, Alex bounced back to have a monster senior season, tallying a team best 11 goals and seven assists for the 10-5-3 Sailors...a gifted ballhandler and passer in the open field...played with a broken wrist in Scituate's heartbreaking 2-1 overtime loss (by shootout) in the state tourney last month ...Patriot League and Eastern Mass All-Star...varsity starter in his freshman year...second baseman for the Scituate High baseball team that went 17-3 last season...plays for Scituate/Cohasset Legion baseball team... leaning toward attending a prep school next year, with Cushing Academy and Bridgeton Academy the principal two he is looking at...would like to play college soccer after that...Scituate coach Jim Willis: "Soccerwise, Alex is just extremely talented. He was the guy who made our offense go this season. He just hasn't had a lot of chance to show that because of injuries. I think a year of prep school in just what he needs... I could see Alex being a very solid Division 2 or 3 (college) soccer player, and maybe even Div. 1 if he works his butt off."

Alex Knight

Greg Levin – Senior (Capt)
Keeper – Scituate

Showed remarkable toughness playing through a heartbreaking overtime loss by shootout last month in the state tourney with a broken jaw... Throwing out a 7-1 Duxbury loss in which he was moved to forward early on, compiled an impressive goals against average of 1.0 (18 goals/18 games)...Eastern Mass and Patriot League All-Star...a two-year soccer captain, something coach Jim Willis said was a "testament to his incredible leadership"... a three year varsity starter in net...also a gifted offensive player, who would frequently move to the frontline in games the Sailors were losing... scored the lone goal for the Patriot League stars in the 1-1 tie against the South Shore League All-Stars...also a standout for the Scituate High baseball (outfield) and basketball (starting point guard) teams...plays for the Scituate/Cohasset Legion baseball team...ranked second in his class...would like to play soccer or baseball in college, but says that he likely will only try that if he winds up at a smaller school like Bowdoin, Trinity or Dartmouth...is also looking at Div. 1 schools Georgetown and Boston University...is leaning towards majoring in pre-med or something to do with math...Scituate coach Jim Willis: "Obviously, he's a phenomenal goalie. Bigger than that in my mind, he's just about the toughest kid I've ever seen on a soccer field. The example he set is going to affect this program for years to come. He's just a great, great leader. I think he's going to make some college coach very happy."

Greg Levin

Ryan Herrick – Senior
Keeper – Silver Lake

Topped off an impressive high school career by making 10 saves in the Eastern Mass. All-Star game on his way to winning team MVP honors for that Nov. 23 post-season game....finished the season with a goals against average of .85 per game, and .71 in Old Colony League play...backstopped the Lakers to consecutive unbeaten seasons in OCL play...a two year starter in net and three year varsity team member...an OCL All-Star...would like to play soccer in college, and has talked to several coaches...interested in a career as a firefighter...is looking into the Fire Science program at Massassoit, one of the few schools in the area to offer this course of study...he is also being heavily recruited by that school's soccer coach...Silver Lake coach Jeff Doyle: "Ryan has an outstanding shot-saving ability and is an all around technically sound goalie. In league games this season he really seemed to rise to the occasion, particularly against (arch-rivals) Bridgewater- Raynham and Marshfield."

Ryan Herrick

Jason Gordan – Senior (Capt)
Midfield – Silver Lake

A serious knee injury couldn't prevent the Silver Lake captain from wrapping up his high school soccer career in style...led the Lakers in scoring (10 goals, 4 assists), despite missing the opening two games with a torn MCL, and wound up playing the rest of the season with the painful condition...also missed the Lakers two post-season games with a fractured foot...three year varsity team member and starter...Old Colony League All-Star...a Patriot Ledger and Brockton Enterprise All-Scholastic...plays club soccer year round as a member of the Mass Bay Blazers...Student Council member and Class Representative...works off-season as a soccer instructor at the Plymouth Sports Dome...is talking to a few major Div. 1 soccer programs, including Seton Hall, Northeastern and Providence College...Silver Lake coach Jeff Doyle: "Jason has the ability to play at an extremely high level and make other players around him better. And the better the quality of players around him, the better he is."

Jason Gordan

Pete Donovan – Senior
(Capt.)
Sweeper – Norwell

The estimable final line of the defense for the Clippers this season, Donovan played a huge role in holding opponents to a .67 goals against average and helping the Clippers to a 12-3-3 season...the two time South Shore League All-Star was selected for the Eastern Mass All-Star game this season, and off his performance here was named to the Div. 3 state All-Star team...scored one goal this season in a rare offensive opportunity...defense was the name of his game, though, as opposing forwards seldom got past him...possessing one of the strongest legs on the South Shore, he started many an odd man rush with his booming clears...plays soccer year round as member of the South Shore Spartans...also a standout lacrosse player for Norwell High...is leaning away from playing college soccer, as he's applied to several Div. 1 schools with an eye toward pre-med studies...may well play intramural or club soccer...Norwell coach Jack Browne: "I know it's a cliche, but Pete really was the kind of kid who gave you 110 percent all of the time. He was our savior too many time to count. People just didn't get by him. He's so strong and athletic, but he's also a very intelligent player."

Pete Donovan

John Conlon– Senior (Capt.)
Keeper – Norwell

The rock stops here... surrendered just 12 goals in 18 games this season for a South Shore League best .667 goals against average, with four of those goals coming in the season finale...this was also a Marinerland best mark, not bad considering John was one of our four Eastern Mass. All-Star keepers...Div. 3 State All-Star...2001 Eastern Mass. All-Star... two time South Shore League All-Star...two year starter...also a baseball standout for the Clippers as a shortstop and pitcher...National Honor Society...works at the YMCA as a Nautilus Trainer and lifeguard...may attempt to play college soccer if winds up at a Div. 2 or 3 school, but his top collegiate choices (Virginia and William & Mary) compete in Div. 1...leaning toward a major in Sports Medicine...Norwell coach Jack Browne: "He was always in the right place at the right time, and he has incredible reflexes. So often, he just makes the extremely difficult save look routine. As a coach, he spoils you."

John Conlon

Ryan Cahill – Junior
Sweeper – Scituate

The rugged 6-foot-2 sweeper was one of the Patriot League's most physically dominating forces this season, earning him league All-Star honors... took all of the team's re-start kicks, which helped him tally five assists this season...almost impossible to beat one-one-one...possesses an extremely strong leg, as well as a nice touch, which has Scituate coach Jim Willis considering moving him up front next season...has been named a team captain for next season...a Patriot League All-Star and Mariner All-Scholastic in tennis last spring...also plays varsity basketball for S.H.S... Scituate coach Jim Willis: "Ryan is just so solid. There were games he just took over this year. People didn't go around him. He's got deceptive footwork, is a nice touch passer and has a great shot. I can see him really dominating next year."

Ryan Cahill

Greg O'Connell – Junior
Sweeper – Scituate

An extremely versatile performer... was shifted liberally between forward, midfield and sweeper this season, shining in all roles...finished with nine goals and seven assists... South Shore League All-Star...three year varsity starter...plays soccer year round as a member of the South Shore United Blazers...also a standout hockey player for C.H.S...led hockey team in scoring last season (19 goals, 13 assists)...Cohasset coach Dave Nigro: "I probably cost Greg a lot of the exposure he might have gotten because I moved him around so much. He could have scored a lot if I left him alone up front, but he's such a good defensive player too, and that's where I felt we needed him more at times."

Greg O'Connell

Jason Grier - Junior
Forward - Norwell

The leading scorer for the surprising Clippers (12-3-3) this fall with 15 goals and 10 assists... South Shore League All-Star...three year varsity starter...used to play club soccer with the Galway Rovers and South Shore United... also a standout wrestler and lacrosse player for NHS...plays indoor lacrosse in the winter... senior brother Adam is a returning Pilgrim Conference and Mariner All-Scholastic in lacrosse...Norwell coach Jack Browne: "Jason put up some good numbers, and these was primarily the result of hard work. That's Jason's biggest asset: how hard he works all the time."

Honors rained on C.H.S. football coach

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

After leading Cohasset High football to its first league championship and post-season game in over 20 years, it is hardly surprising to see post-season approbation being rained on head coach Tony Rolfe.

Since the season ending playoff loss to Tyngsboro, 21-7, on Nov. 27, Rolfe has been named the New England Patriots "Coach of the Week", WATD's "Coach of the Year," and the Boston Globe's "Division 5 Coach of the Year."

Drawing from the smallest school in the South Shore League by far, with just over 300 enrolled students in grades 9-12, this year's Skippers were a great story, rolling to a 9-1 regular season under the direction of their fourth year head coach.

"The thing that strikes me about Tony is the way he expects to win every game," said Cohasset High Athletic Director Rob Ford. "He said the day we hired him that he'd be taking us to the Super Bowl, and he delivered much faster than I think most people would have expected.

"His attitude is just so infectious. It's obvious how well the kids respond to him. He just did a sensational job this year, and I think these honors are well deserved."

Swim team glides past Quincy

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

The Scituate-Cohasset joint swim team opened its season with a splash last week, trouncing Quincy/North Quincy 98-65.

"I cannot think of a better way to open a season than that," effused second year coach Jamie Kearney. "Everyone seemed really excited to start the season, and their swimming definitely reflected that."

Sci-Coh did receive an early scare, as their hosts took first place in the first two events, the 200 yard medley relay and the 200 yard freestyle.

But the team made up the points in the 200-yard Individual medley, with freshman Danielle Swain and junior David Ingber sweeping the top two spots for a 20 point swing.

"I cannot think of a better way to open a season than that. Everyone seemed really excited to start the season, and their swimming definitely reflected that."

Scituate/Cohasset swim coach Jamie Kearney

Senior captain Jen Kruetzberg took second place in the shortest race, the 50-yard freestyle, to keep her team ahead going into the diving competition.

In the diving, Scituate's Becky Keys volunteered to compete, even though she hadn't seen a springboard since August. Impressively, she took first place points over Quincy's diver, adding some padding to her team's lead.

After the break, Ingber took second place in the 100-yard butterfly behind Quincy's senior captain Nick Rice, who qualified for states with his time. Sophomore Elise Jerome took third place to keep points flowing in her team's direction.

Junior captain Bryan Bilton of Cohasset won the 100 freestyle, nearly breaking a minute in the sprint.

With the outcome of the meet still in question, Sci-Coh pulled away for good in the 500 yard freestyle. Swain, Keys, and freshman Liz Tierney took the top three spots, good for 13 points and a virtually insurmountable lead.

"Those three have worked so hard at conditioning," lauded Kearney of the young trio. "They all just look so effortless swimming the distance races."

After Quincy took the top spot in the 200-yard freestyle relay, Bilton recorded his second individual first place in the 100-yard backstroke.

Kruetzberg and her fellow Scituate captain Sean "Rock" Sorensen finished second and third in the 100-yard breastroke, for momentum going into the final event.

The Sailor/Skippers capped off the afternoon with a 1-2 finish in the 400-yard free relay, a perfect finish to a dominant meet.

"If everyone keeps swimming like they did today, this should be one heck of a season," concluded the coach.

Honors keep piling up for Brown too

Cohasset star halfback Jason Brown has been named a WATD's Player of the Year, adding to a long list of post-season honors for the senior.

Brown, who rushed for 15 touchdowns and over 1,400 yards for the South Shore champion Skippers (9-2) this fall, has previously been named to the All-Scholastic teams of the Mariner, Patriot Ledger, Boston Globe and Boston Herald.

team that nearly stole a win from Cohasset on last year's senior night.

Cohasset did win handily in this match up, 55-34, but only after pulling away from a seven point half time lead.

Junior Ben Lydon led the scoring with 20 points and also had a team high 10 rebounds for his 11th career double-double.

Senior captain Matt Billelleau threw in 13 points, and snatched eight second half rebounds, an extreme rarity for point guards.

In last year's debacle against Voc Tech, Cohasset managed to escape with an 80-72 victory in spite of the Vikings shooting unbelievably well from long range.

To avoid that same scenario, 11th year coach Ron Ford had his team playing tight man-to-man defense to keep the Vikings shooters from getting wide open looks. Cohasset did have some success with a zone defense in the second half, forcing nine turnovers.

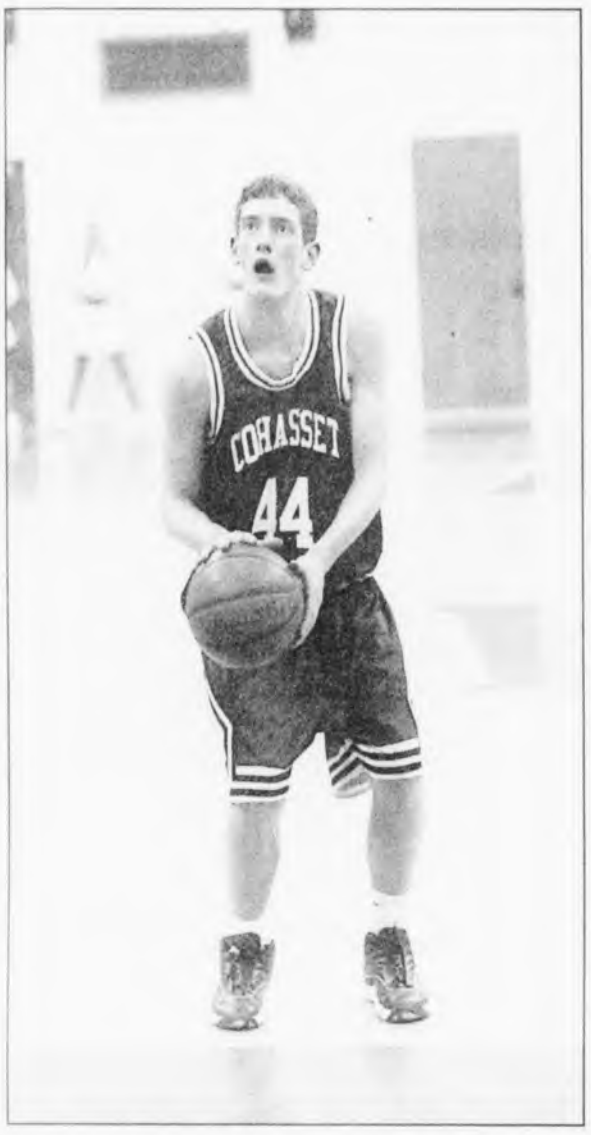
Still, Ford did give his opponents credit for a solid effort at keeping the game competitive, noting their high number of offensive rebounds.

In the first round contest against Holbrook, Cohasset did get the better of the Panthers by a margin of 16 points. Junior Ian Kidder led the squad with a double-double of his own, tallying 10 point and 10 boards.

Holbrook showed what it could do the next day, dismantling South Shore Christian Academy by 52 points in the consolation round.

As the Skippers now prepare to begin league play, they will need to return to full strength as quickly as possible. Lost players, seniors Nick Bolster and Liam Martin and sophomores Chris Bilodeau and Scott Connolley, all of whom might be in the starting line up by the end of the season, rookie on the bench for injuries.

"As of right now, we are a little limited with what we can do," noted Ford, referring to his much shortened bench.



At least the one upside to having players on the injured list is that the team can only get better. And that is what any team will want to do if it wants to contend in this year's brutally competitive South Shore League.

Boys Hoop Notes

Unfortunately, the winning did n't continue for the Skippers. On Tuesday, the boys lost their South Shore League opener to state power Norwell, 60-38.

For whatever it's worth, the Cohasset squad did get to see history made while suffering this lopsided loss, as Norwell scoring phenom Gerry Corcoran reached the 1,000 career point plateau late in the first half.

Achieving this feat just two games into his junior campaign, Corcoran is the fastest Clipper ever to reach this benchmark and appears well on his way to shattering the school's scoring record of 1,800 points.

Cohasset center Sean Connolley is on the mend, and made a brief appearance in Tuesday's 60-38 loss to Norwell.

"All of the lines are producing, and that's quite a weapon to have," said Walsh. "I have a lot of options.

"If one line isn't getting much done, I can pull them for a while and just go with three lines, or I can use all four with quick line shifts and keep fresh bodies flying around out there the whole game to just wear down the opposition."

As impressive as the 12 forward rotation has been, Walsh is even more anxious to talk about the job being done by his four top defensemen: senior captain Eric Libby and sophomore Mike Devine, along with Straughn and Calorio.

"Randolph and Trinity Catholic never really had many chances to score, and a lot of that had to do with the job these four guys did," said Walsh. "They all just did such a great job of clearing away the front of the net and getting the puck out of our zone quickly. We feel extremely comfortable right now with all four of those players back there."

One of the big beneficiaries of all of this outstanding two-way play has been Dan Kinchla. Facing a scant number of true testers, the senior netminder has been credited with two wins and two shutouts.

The Skippers were scheduled to wrap up 2001 with another pair of non-league games. Rockland, of the Patriot League, was on the schedule last night, with the Mayflower League's Avon slated for Saturday night (at Randolph, 6 p.m.).

Cohasset finally opens SSL play on Jan. 5 against Harwich, and then takes on Mashpee on the ninth. The first big early season test will likely come against Norwell on Jan. 12.

"The kids have got to be patient, and take on each opponent as they come," warned coach Walsh. "I know they're anxious, but we can't get caught looking too far ahead."

of Cohasset's best ballhandlers, junior guards Heather Peraino and LaRaine Langford, were on the bench with injuries.

Junior Lindsay Grossman and sophomore Jen Buckley did an admirable job trying to bring the ball up the floor, but shouldering the backcourt load, especially against pressure the likes of what Norwell can throw around, between just two people is too tall an order for almost any guard tandem.

"We really need them back to take some of the pressure off," observed Carr, referring to Peraino and Langford.

"I think things are going to change on the guard line," said Peraino, who is continuing to nurse her broken pinky, "because Jen and Lindsay will finally get some breaks."

Grossman was again the team's high scorer with 19. The junior also contributed six steals, most of them coming from great anticipation in a high-jump zone.

Junior Lindsay Grossman and sophomore Jen Buckley did an admirable job trying to bring the ball up the floor.

Sophomore Danielle Pinkus threw in 10 points with three blocks to lead the frontcourt. Unfortunately, she was saddled with foul trouble much of the evening.

As expected, the Clippers were led by junior phenom Sarah Cox, who shot her way to a game high 33 points. A threat to shoot long range and to drive to the hoop, the 5-foot-10 Cox has emerged as one of the premiere scorers in the South Shore League.

Cox leads a very fast team that can run the floor with anyone, as the Lady Clippers showed in advancing to the Div. 3 state sectional championship game last winter.

"They really know how to move the ball around," complimented Carr, citing her opponents extremely crisp passing game.

Last Friday, Cohasset lost to Wayland, 41-32, another quick team with a similar style as Norwell: press, press and press.

Carr claimed that her team "felt hurried" against Wayland, forcing some quick decision shots.

"We had a lot of shots that were good looks, but they just didn't fall for us," said the coach.

Grossman again led the way for her team, tallying 12 points, while Pinkus and junior Maura O'Brien both notched seven.

"I think this team has so much potential," concluded Carr. "This is a key year for us."

OBITUARIES

Eleanor B. Morse

Eleanor B. (Murphy) Morse, 84, of Hanover died Dec. 18, 2001, at home after a brief illness.

Mrs. Morse was born, raised and educated in Boston. She graduated from Girls High School in Boston. She was a Hanover resident for almost 60 years.

Before her marriage of 59 years to her husband Everett A. Morse, she worked for the Rand-Avery Book Publishing Co. in Boston and later the New England Telephone Company, also in Boston.

Mrs. Morse was a member of the Hanover School Building Commission, Hanover Willing Workers, Hanover PTA, Scholarship Committee Hanover High, and was a volunteer at the John Curtis Free Library.

Besides her husband, she leaves three sons, Everett Abraham Morse III and his wife Jenifer of Maryland, Martin Irvin Morse and his wife Karen of Illinois and Samuel Alexander Morse and his wife Patricia of Cohasset; four daughters, Marcia Lane Morse and her partner Paul Gorman of Chatham, Susan Kate Wienzkowski of Colorado, Margaret Elizabeth Anglin and her husband Jerry of Canada and Eleanor Jean Haskell and her husband Stephen of Texas; 14 grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren.

A funeral service will be held at 9:30 a.m. Friday at the Magoun-Biggins Funeral Home, 135 Union St., Rockland. The Rev. Donald Remick will officiate. Interment will follow in Hanover Center Cemetery.

Calling hours are 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to Friends of the Scituate Animal Shelter, P.O. Box 823, Scituate, 02066, or to the Alzheimer's Association, 36 Cameron Ave., Cambridge, 02140.

Paul Rizzotto

Paul Rizzotto, 83, of St. Petersburg, Fla., formerly of Scituate, died Dec. 14, 2001, in Scituate after a brief illness.

Born and educated in Hingham, he was the son of the late John Rizzotto and Josephine (Carita) Rizzotto.

He was a World War II veteran serving in the Army as a captain in the artillery.

Mr. Rizzotto spent 30 years in Scituate before moving to St. Petersburg. He spent his summers in Skowhegan, Maine. He was a resident of Florida for 17 years.

He was the owner of Rizzotto Markets in Hingham and Cohasset.

He was a former member of Hingham and Scituate Chamber of Commerce, Satuit Masonic Lodge, Old Colony Masonic Lodge in Hingham, Order of the Sons of Italy in Hingham, Egypt Temple of Tampa, Fla., Scottish Rites Consistory Chapter, Skowhegan-Madison Elks Lodge, American Legion of Skowhegan, Maine.

He was a member of St. Stephens Church of Cohasset for 40 years.

He leaves his wife, Mary Jean (Stoodley) Rizzotto of St. Petersburg Fla. and Skowhegan Maine; one son, Paul Rizzotto Jr. and his wife Grace L. of Marshfield; one daughter, Marcia A. Rizzotto of Scituate; stepchildren Ronald D. Chadbourne and his wife Tammy of W. Palm Beach Fla., and Maria C. Jordan and her husband Paul of Medfield; a sister, Sadie Lanza of St. Petersburg, Fla.; several grandchildren, nieces, and nephews.

Mr. Rizzotto was also the husband of the late Angela P. Rizzotto.

A service was held at St. Stephens Episcopal Church in Cohasset. Interment was in Hingham Centre Cemetery. Arrangements by the Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home of Scituate.

Donations in Mr. Rizzotto's name may be made to the charity of your choice.

WORSHIP NOTES

Christmas worship at St. Stephen's

Christmas worship at Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., features a variety of worship celebrating Christ's birth. The Christmas Eve Family Holy Communion Service will be held on Monday, Dec. 24 at 5 p.m. The Saint Gregory's Children's Choir will sing and the star of Bethlehem will be lit on the church tower. The Rev. Andrew Stossel will tell a story for children in place of the sermon. The three kings and their camels will be in the east at the altar to begin their journey to Bethlehem.

The Festal Candlelight Christmas Eve worship will take place beginning at11 p.m. A special program of Christmas music will precede the service commencing at 10:30 p.m. Musical selections sung by the Saint Stephen's adult choir will include "Torches" by John Joubert, "Good King Wenceslas," arranged by R. Jaques, and a composition by our Music Director Fred Guzasky titled, "O Bethlehem, Receive."

At worship, the traditional story from the Gospel of Luke is read from the King James Bible, the Eucharist is celebrated, and candlelight will illumine the singing of "Silent Night." The beautiful bells of the church carillon will ring out the music of Christmas across the town under the stars of the still night sky.

Christmas Day, Tuesday, Dec. 25 will be celebrated with the worship of Holy Communion at 10 a.m. highlighted with the singing of Christmas carols.

The church school is busy preparing an Epiphany Pageant to take place on Sunday, Jan. 6 at the 10 a.m. worship celebrating the appearance of Jesus to the three kings representing all the world. Children will portray angels, shepherds hurrying to Bethlehem, Joseph and Mary with Baby, and of course, the three kings bearing their gifts.

Christmas at St. Anthony's

The sacrament of reconciliation in preparation for Christmas will be offered at St. Anthony Church Saturday, Dec. 22, from 11 a.m. to noon and from 3:45 to 4:45 p.m. Confessions will also be heard Sunday, Dec. 23, from 4 to 5 p.m.

The Mass schedule for Christmas will be Monday, Dec. 24, children's Mass at 4 p.m., choir Mass at 7 p.m. (caroling at 6:30 p.m.), and midnight Mass Tuesday, Dec. 25, at 8, 9:30 and 11:30 a.m.

Masses for Jan. 1, the holy day of the Feast of the Maternity of Mary, will be Monday, Dec. 31, at 7 p.m. and Tuesday, Jan. 1, at 8 and 9:30 a.m.

American Cancer Society seeks volunteer drivers

The American Cancer Society's Road to Recovery program in Hingham is currently seeking area volunteers to drive patients to and from their treatment appointments or to work in the Hingham office and help coordinate the rides. Drivers willing to travel to Boston are urgently needed.

If you have a car and are able to donate any amount of time between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays, you can really make a difference in the life of a cancer patient by becoming a volunteer driver. Drivers' availability is matched with the needs of patients who call.

To volunteer as a Road to Recovery driver or Hingham office volunteer, contact the Hingham Hotline at 781-749-2535. Information is also available through the American Cancer Society's 24-hour information line at 1-800-ACS-2345.

His art imitates life

Dean Morrissey finds inspiration all around him

By Kathleen Zigmont
CORRESPONDENT

It was as if the pages of Dean Morrissey's newest book had come to life.

The illustrator's friends and neighbors whose faces appear in Morrissey's newest book, "A Christmas Carol," were all at Front Street Book Shop for the first South Shore signing Morrissey has done for the book, an adaptation of the Charles Dickens classic.

Morrissey, who lives in Scituate with his wife and son, said he often uses friends and loved ones as inspiration for his illustrations, which have been gracing book covers and pages for years.

"I like to use people I know instead of stock models. It adds something, a little more expression, more feeling to their faces," said Morrissey. Expression and feeling are plentiful in Morrissey's art. The author of several books of his own, as well as the illustrator of many other children's books, Morrissey uses light, color and uncanny realism to bring his art to life.

To bring realism to "A Christmas Carol," Morrissey went to the most logical place for inspiration: London.

"I wanted to get a sense of what he (Dickens) was, what he saw. I actually got into his home and saw his slant-top writing table as he left it. It even had the scratchings of his writings in it," said Morrissey.

"I wanted to smell the same smells he did, to hear the same creaks of the floorboards. I was definitely inspired. There was pub he frequented on the Thames, he wrote there. I used that in my illustrations of Scrooge and Marley's office," he said.

Morrissey said the 64-page book, a faithful adaptation of the original with only a few editing changes, took about 18 months to complete. But Morrissey said choosing the project was easy.

"It just jumped out at me, to do this story. It still works today in the way a lot of the older stories don't. And I think that with recent events, the story of a man appreciating his fellow man is a relevant one," said Morrissey.

Morrissey, who grew up in Quincy as the son of a carpenter, has no formal art training, but has been drawing all his life. He was inspired as a child by comic books and adventure stories and grew to admire Rockwell, Wyeth, Vermeer, Sargent and Rembrandt.

In the midst of a 20-city tour promoting his new book Dean Morrissey made stops at Front Street Book Shop in Scituate and Buttonwood Books in Cohasset to sign and to offer advice to young artists.

Morrissey, who worked a variety of jobs as a young adult, didn't earn a living as an illustrator until he was in his 30s, and even then didn't have a lot of satisfaction with his work.

"As an illustrator, it's your job to create just what the specifications call for. There isn't a lot of room for creativity," he said. During this time, Morrissey was using his free time to create art for a children's book he had in his head. Three years later, "Ship of Dreams," the New York Times Best Illustrated Book Award winner for 1994, was published. Saks Fifth Avenue used the images and story to decorate their famed holiday windows that year.

Morrissey's second book, "The Great Kettles," was released in the fall of 1997 and won a Gold Medal from the Society of Illustrators. Morrissey has also written and illustrated "The Christmas Ship" and "The Moon Robber," both children's books.

Morrissey said he considers his transition into book writing to be a natural evolution of his art.

"Every time I draw or paint a picture, I find myself creating a narrative about it in my head. That's how many of my stories come about," he said.

Morrissey said he draws a lot of his inspiration from living on the South Shore.

"This is such a beautiful place. If you look at my illustrations in my books, you will probably recognize some places like the Scituate Harborfront and the Cape Cod Canal. I always use what's available to me," he said.

Morrissey, who just completed a 20-city national tour to promote "the Christmas Carol," said he is enjoying the reaction to his art.

"It's a kind of culture shock because you spend months and months in near solitude with the work and then to go out and promote it and get all this feedback is almost overwhelming, but very gratifying. It's nice to have people appreciate your work," he said.

Morrissey said he is working now on a project with his 7-year old son, which germinated from a nightly routine of "monster-trapping" under beds and in closets.

"He's drawn for me 10 or 12 variations of monsters he has 'seen,' and we are coming up with a story for it. It's been fun," said Morrissey.

Morrissey is also working on a series of chapter books for children aged seven to 10, with lots of pictures, of course.

"I know books for kids that age don't get good pictures, but I think they need them. I know I do," said Morrissey.

"A Christmas Carol," adapted by Stephen Krensky and published by Harper Collins, is available at most South Shore bookstores including the Front Street Book Shop in Scituate and Buttonwood Books and Ives in Cohasset.

Scituate author/illustrator Dean Morrissey's latest work in Stephen Krensky's adaptation of Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" is getting rave reviews.

Holiday habits

Dan Bolton has only been appearing in "Nuncrackers: The Nunsense Musical" since November, but he feels like he's been rehearsing for the show his entire life. Bolton portrays Father Virgil Manly Trott — the only male cast member — in the fourth and latest "Nunsense" installment, now at Boston's Lyric Stage.

"I grew up with three sisters," the Braintree-based performer explained by telephone last week. "So I know the dynamic of being around a group of women. It is a blast doing this show, and so far these sisters have been very kind to me."

Dan Bolton of Braintree is the only male member of the cast in the current Boston Lyric Stage production of "Nuncrackers: The Nunsense Musical," with performances through Dec. 29.

Audiences have been enjoying the antics of the comic order of The Little Sisters of the Hoboken since the early 1980s when creator Dan Goggin first debuted "Nunsense" in New York. That show has since become the second longest-running production in off-Broadway history, after "The Fantasticks," leading to over 5,000 productions around the world, translated into 26 languages. Three sequels have followed.

This time out, the four nuns are filming a Christmas Special in the cable access television studio the Reverend Mother has built in the convent basement. As they did in "Sister Amnesia's Country Western Nunsense Jamboree," the nuns have enlisted the help of Father Virgil. A local radio personality, the Father is the brother of Sister Mary Leo. In addition to holiday standards, the show also features new songs including "Twelve Days Prior to Christmas," "The Holly and the Ivory," and "Santa Ain't Comin' to Our House." Like the three earlier editions, this "Nunsense" is filled with sight gags and one-liners. The new show also includes a sing-along and even a "Secret Santa" audience participation game.

"The audience is almost like a sixth cast member in the show. We really make a great connection with the people who come to see us," Bolton points out. "We don't bring anyone on stage, however, just to embarrass them. We treat everyone with respect. The idea of audience interaction even scared me at first, but now I love it. The audiences are very important and, so far, they've been just great."

Bolton is joined on-stage in "Nuncrackers: The Nunsense Musical" by his fellow South Shore actors Sarah deLima of Cohasset, as Mother Superior, and Mary Callanan of Weymouth, as Sister Robert Anne.

When he is not on stage in a clerical collar, Bolton dons period garb for his "day job" with "The Victorian Carolers," an a cappella quartet which brings traditional holiday music to shopping malls, private parties and corporate events.

"I bought the rights to the group 12 years ago and it has really grown since then," says Bolton. "This season, I have a pool of 80 different singers who will do about 600 gigs. We have exclusive contracts to perform at all Lord & Taylor, Macy's, and Borders Books stores throughout New England.

By the end of this Holiday season, Bolton will have made 35 appearances as a Caroler and 32 as a Catholic. He will also have begun rehearsals for his next production. Beginning Feb. 2, 2002, Bolton will star in a revival of "Tuck Everlasting" at the Wheelock Family Theater in the Fenway.

"Nuncrackers: The Nunsense Musical" will be performed through Dec. 29 at the Lyric Stage, 140 Clarendon Street, Boston. For tickets and information, call 617/437-7172. To book an appearance by "The Victorian Carolers," call 781/356-0639.

The colors of summer

Thomas Dunlay on display at Plymouth gallery

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Students of the nouveau classicism school of contemporary painting believe that the more things change, the more they stay the same.

No exception to this rule is Weymouth-born painter Thomas Dunlay, whose richly colored and detailed images of quaint New England villages and sunlit beaches are firmly rooted in traditional illustration disciplines and as much a presence of modern life as they were a century ago. New England's own tradition of respectfully preserving the past naturally makes an ideal artistic vantage point for Dunlay, who now lives in Westwood. The artist's contemporary Yankee traditionalist renderings convey the ultimate timelessness of his subjects.

"Summer Friends" is one of the signed lithographs and limited edition giclees on display through Dec. 31 at Plymouth's Gallery by the Sea.

In a manner perhaps as timely as timeless, Plymouth's Gallery By the Sea this month devotes a full wall of its display area to an exhibit of Dunlay's oil and watercolor works in limited edition prints, on view through Dec. 31. Surrounded by the Gallery's usual and diverse displays of original artworks, serigraphs, blown glass, pottery, brass, pewter and other wares, the Dunlay prints are transposed in lithograph and giclee forms and available with custom framing on consignment.

"Thomas (Dunlay) has, I think, an extraordinary ability to take subjects from different and unusual perspectives," said Gallery co-owner Eileen Agostini. "And with his selections of colors, the texture on the giclees in particular really comes through. His palette is really remarkable, with intense blues and other colors. He's really able to effectively capture a moment in time."

Dunlay, who turned 50 this year, was painting at an early age. His formal training began at Massachusetts College of Art, which he soon abandoned in favor of more tradition-rooted study with the well-known Boston master painter Robert Douglas Hunter at the atelier of Hunter's own mentor, R.H. Ives Gammell, one of the better known painters of the famed 20th century Boston school.

The artist's subjects of choice are inspired by the contrasting scenery, urban and rural, of his native New England. Dunlay's typical works portray the enduring appeal of the Boston Public Garden and the Swan Boats, boating on the Charles, children along the shore and the wealth of picturesque village scenes on Nantucket, where the artist spends his summers.

Most of these are enhanced to elegant, state-of-the-art effect by the giclee print form. An ideal meeting of art and modern technology, giclee, a French printmaker's term for "fine spray," is believed to be more able than the traditional lithograph to faithfully reflect the vibrancy of color, richness of detail and lushness of texture of an original painting or other medium work.

Dunlay generally expresses equal empathy for animated as well as non-animated figures. The romanticized beachside human figures in pieces like "Seeking Shells" and "Summer Breeze" are as likely to strike notes of recognition among viewers as the panoramic Boston scenes of "City Lights," "View of the Back Bay" and "Winter Evening, Copley Square" and Nantucket portraits of "Quince Street" and "Macy House."

Thomas Dunlay's work can be viewed at Gallery By the Sea through Dec. 29. The Gallery is located at 44 Main Street in Plymouth and is open Tuesday through Thursday 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Sunday from 12 to 5 p.m. For more information call (508) 746-8823.

Pasta and Bean Soup

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Around the holidays, I like to include a dish that reminds me of humble beginnings. Although pasta e fagioli is often upgraded to a white tablecloth offering, it is, at heart, peasant food, and is therefore a well-chosen reminder of the true spirit of the season. The basic recipe starts with sautéed aromatic vegetables, beans, liquid, optional meat, and tomato which are then finished with pasta. The problem? Many pasta and bean soups are watery with mushy beans while others have an unpleasant starchy liquid and an overbearing porky flavor. I wanted something simple, rustic, and well-balanced.

First, I wondered if canned beans were acceptable since they greatly simplify this recipe. They turned out okay but not nearly as creamy and earthy tasting as dried beans. Next, I wondered if the beans had to be presoaked and partially precooked. The answer was a resounding yes. Cooking raw beans in with the other ingredients produces a muddy, starchy liquid and the beans themselves were inferior in taste and texture. Finally, I found that precooking the beans with a small onion or shallot, a couple of cloves that I pushed into the onion, a bay leaf, and 1/2 teaspoon salt was beneficial. (Some cooks swear that salting the water makes beans tough and split apart. I did not find this to be true. In fact, cooking beans in unsalted water leaves them with a dull, insipid flavor.)

As for the other ingredients, I found that one large diced carrot, one medium diced onion, and 3 large or 4 medium minced garlic cloves was about right. As for meat as a flavoring component, I tested pork chops, prosciutto, pancetta, ham hocks, ham bone, and bacon. Pork chops provided little flavor, the subtle flavor of prosciutto boiled away in the pot, and pancetta was sweet and meaty although sometimes hard to find. Ham hocks, ham bone and bacon were all overpowering. The answer was that the soup fares well without any meat although a bit of pancetta is a nice addition.

For the tomatoes, one 28-ounce can of whole peeled tomatoes, not packed in purée, was just fine. In addition, 4 cups of chicken stock was necessary to provide enough liquid. (Water resulted in soup that was flat tasting.) If you were lucky enough to have one, this is a great time to use a Parmesan rind which adds a great deal of flavor. Now the pot is set to simmer for about 40 minutes or so, until the beans are just tender and the ingredients have married. Finishing touches included fresh sage and rosemary. The pasta should be cooked separately and added to bowls just before ladling the soup. For this amount of soup I used 1/2 pound of ditalini or another small tubular pasta. The final issue was puréeing. A blender or food processor adds air to the mixture - it also requires cleaning an appliance. I found that simply crushing some of the beans with a potato masher worked just fine. (If you have a food mill, you can use that instead of a masher.) However, the amount of mashing you do is a matter of personal preference - some prefer a thick soup, others like more of a clear broth. Once the pasta is place in the bowls, about 1/3-cup in each, and the soup is ladled over, the soup must be topped with a drizzle of best quality olive oil and freshly grated Parmesan cheese.

PASTA AND BEAN SOUP

The easiest way to finely chop pancetta is to freeze it for about 45 minutes, or until it becomes firm. When reheating the soup for leftover, you will find it has thickened and additional stock will be required.

1 pound white beans, navy or cannellini, rinsed and picked over
1 small onion or 1 shallot
2 whole cloves
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon salt
1 28 ounce can whole tomatoes not packed in puree, such as Muir Glen
2 tablespoons best quality olive oil plus more for drizzling over the finished soup
1 medium onion cut into 1/2-inch dice
1 large carrot cut into 1/2-inch dice
2 ounces of pancetta, finely chopped (optional)
3 medium or 4 large garlic cloves, finely chopped or pressed
4 cups low sodium chicken stock or a combination of half broth and water
Freshly ground black pepper
1 Parmesan rind, optional
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh sage
1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh rosemary
1/2 pound small tubular pasta or shape of your choice Freshly grated Parmesan cheese

1. Place the beans in a medium saucepan and cover with 2 inches of water. Stick the cloves into the onion or shallot and add it to the pot along with the bay leaf and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Bring to a simmer and cook, covered, for 30 minutes for the navy beans and 40 minutes for cannellini or until the beans have begun to soften but remain firm.

2. Drain the tomatoes, crush them with your hands and reserve. Place the olive oil in a soup pot over medium heat. Add the onion and carrot (and optional pancetta) and saute for about 7 minutes or until the onion is translucent and softened. Add the garlic and saute an additional 2 minutes. Remove the clove-studded onion and bay leaf from the bean pot. Drain the partially cooked beans and add them to the onion, carrot, and garlic mixture. Add the tomatoes, chicken stock or stock/water combination, the remaining 1/2-teaspoon salt, several grinds of black pepper and the optional Parmesan rind and stir to combine. Bring to a simmer, cover and cook for about 40 minutes or until the beans are just tender. Add the sage and rosemary and simmer an additional 10 minutes or until the beans are creamy. Adjust the seasoning with salt and pepper if necessary.

3. In a separate pot, cook pasta until just done but still firm and toothy. Drain and if not using immediately, add two tablespoons olive oil and stir to coat pasta. Cover to keep warm if necessary. Remove optional Parmesan rind from soup pot. If desired, you may use a potato masher to puree some of the beans. (If pureeing some of the beans, you may wish to add additional chicken stock to adjust the consistency of the soup.)

4. Place about 1/3 cup pasta in the bottom of soup bowls. Ladle the soup over the pasta and top with a generous drizzle of best quality olive oil and freshly grated Parmesan cheese. Serve immediately.

Serves 10-12.

CANNED BEAN VARIATION

With minimal loss of flavor and texture the soup can be made with four 15 1/2 ounce cans cannellini beans. Skip step 1 in the above recipe. The beans should be drained and added to the pot as stated in step 2.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 19

Above-average planetary influences are in effect today. You can cut through obstacles and achieve goals. New starts are recommended. The moon continues active travel in Aquarius until 9:41 p.m. In addition, Venus forms a harmonious alignment to Uranus, the planetary ruler of Aquarius. All group activities, team sports, community endeavors are highlighted. This is a great day to collaborate with others to achieve common goals.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 20

At 1:09 a.m. the moon enters Pisces, remaining there for the next 2 1/2 days. You can make gains developing projects that require imagination and creativity. This is an ideal period for arts and crafts, baking, decorating or wrapping gifts. There are a couple of rough spots, however, this evening, when the moon aligns with Mars and Saturn. Sidestep fears, anxiety. Prayer and meditation can help you to maintain inner peace.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 21

A challenging lunar alignment to Pluto warns you to avoid morning hassles or the blues. Storm clouds move out by 10:00 a.m., and a harmonious Mercury/Mars alignment takes over. If you carefully organize your time, you can be most productive. The Winter Solstice arrives at 2:22 p.m., when the sun enters Capricorn. An applying alignment of Mars/Saturn may raise stress levels. It's okay to burn the midnight oil catching up on work projects.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22

The Pisces moon aligns with Venus at 3:44 a.m. and becomes inactive for the remainder of the morning. However, a 90-degree alignment of Mars/Saturn takes center stage. Its influence serves as a reminder that there is much work yet to be done. Make up a list of things to do and go for it. The moon enters Aries at 1:45 p.m., bringing an energy boost. The first quarter phase of the moon occurs at 3:56 p.m. A Mercury/Jupiter opposition sets the stage for a fun social evening.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 23

An Aries moon sets a hectic pace today and tomorrow. Channel high energy constructively. You can get a lot accomplished, if you carefully organize your time. Lunar alignments to Jupiter and Mercury this afternoon urge you to give greater attention to details in order to avoid making careless errors. Last-minute shopping expeditions get the green light.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 24

Energy and enthusiasm continue to run high today. Mars, the planetary ruler of Aries, forms a harmonious alignment to Jupiter at 2:54 p.m. You can be most productive, if you have a clear plan of action and stick to it. The Aries moon aligns with social Venus at 10:21 p.m. and becomes inactive. The stage is set for a special evening with close friends and family.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 25

All things considered, planetary influences could not be better for this holiday. At 1:12 a.m., the moon enters earthy Taurus and forms a harmonious contact to the sun at 8:36 a.m. Put recent pressures on the back burner; this is a day to relax and enjoy life's blessings. Lunar alignments to Jupiter and Mars keep the party going late into the evening.

Last minute gifts and greens for gardeners

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

The holiday rush is on!

The leisurely days of browsing through the malls, specialty shops and on-line for the perfect gifts are over and the time has come to make those last minute acquisitions for neighbors, friends and family. Trees are trimmed, the heavenly aroma of fresh-baked cakes and gingerbread fills our kitchens and the fresh scent of pine boughs revives fond memories of our childhood. The holiday season is a magical time of wishes and dreams, the laughter of children, Santa, gifts and family gatherings.

Time is growing short for creating those festive, holiday displays. In mixed evergreen arrangements, consider adding contrast to your needled greens with the broader leaves of holly, boxwood, mountain laurel, variegated creeping euonymus, and leucothoe. Rose hips, the bright red berries of hollies and the icy blue berries of juniper will introduce a vibrant color variation to the subtle shades of green. Twigs and pods sprayed white, gold or silver offer a dazzling touch of elegance.

Among the easiest and most attractive solutions for decorating during this hectic season is to purchase a collection of holiday plants. A strategically placed poinsettia provides instant color to brighten even the darkest room, creating a handsome focal point or decorative element which brings warmth and vitality to any living space. Traditional holiday plants also make perfect, last minute hostess gifts for the gardeners on your list. Christmas cactus, kalanchoe, and cyclamen, in addition to the showy poinsettias, are available at this time of year. Hybridization continues to produce many new cultivars in unusual forms and color combinations. Consider planting paper white narcissus or an amaryllis bulb in a decorative container for a unique and rewarding gift. Try to purchase these plants on days when temperatures are above freezing, insist that they be wrapped in protective paper or plastic sleeve and warm up your car in advance of your purchase, making sure it is your last stop on your way home.

For the gardeners on your list, there are numerous possibilities to delight and educate both the casual dirt-digger and the passionate hobbyist. Books, magazines, tools, gloves, garden ornaments, and when in doubt, the all-purpose gift certificate to the gardener's favorite nursery or catalog company, should please every gardener.

No matter what the level of expertise, a gardener can never acquire too many garden-ing references. Gardening books and magazines make ideal last minute gifts. For novice gardeners, there are numerous, excellent reference books touching on many aspects of gardening and landscape design. Better Homes and Garden and Reader's Digest have compiled several excellent texts covering a wide range of topics. A more experienced gardener may have developed specific interests and would welcome references which focus on a particular topic including roses, herbs, house plants, or perennials.

Magazine subscriptions are particularly welcome during the dreary winter months to inspire and inform the gardener on your list. A subscription to one or more gardening magazines offers a yearlong guide to the latest trends in gardening, delectable new plant introductions and innovative design concepts. Fine Gardening is a personal favorite with glorious photography and a list of sources included with each article enabling the reader to obtain the featured items or plants. To place a gift subscription, call (800) 888-8286. For gardening information appropriate to the New England area, consider a subscription to People, Places & Plants, (800) 251-1784. Once I have placed my order, I purchase a copy of the magazine at a local newsstand and wrap one issue for the recipient to open, especially if there is insufficient time to receive a special gift notification.

Quality tools are a perfect gift since many gardeners have a tendency to spend their available resources on plant material and purchase inexpensive implements only to have them bend or break during their first season of use. Well-made trowels, pitchforks, spades and shovels are worthwhile investments and should be available at local nurseries or hardware stores. Perhaps my most valued tool is my Felco pruning shears. Clean cuts are a necessity for the health and survival of all plants, trees and shrubs and few pruners can match the quality of the Swiss-made Felco which tends to be the pruner of choice for professional nurserymen. Several styles are available in addition to replacement parts and blades making these rather costly by-pass pruners a long-term investment.

Most gardeners share a love of nature and wildlife in addition to their passion for plants. Hummingbird feeders, bird feeders, birdhouses, bat houses, and birdbaths can be enjoyed by all ages. Reference guides on birds, butterflies, insects, wildflowers and related topics make excellent supplemental gifts.

Last, but certainly not least, is the all-purpose gift certificate to the gardener's favorite local nursery or catalog company. For those of us who passionately collect plants, a gift certificate often alleviates some of the guilt associated with over-spending on plant material. In this time of hectic schedules, this quick and easy solution may be the perfect choice for the gardeners on your list, enabling them to purchase plants, tools or garden ornaments they might otherwise do without.

Some memorable quotes this year

"We're comfortable with the agreement."
— Selectman Michael Sullivan on the Greenbush mitigation agreement with the MBTA

"Life has changed forever."
— Fire Chief Roger Lincoln on the aftermath of the Sep. 11 attacks.

"Why do we need two Spanish channels? Doesn't anyone speak English anymore?"
— Selectman Merle Brown chastising AT&T for not providing the History Channel.

"We want to craft a by-law that preserves the meaningful ledge that contributes to the character of the town."
— Beach Street resident Mark DeGiacomo on the importance of a ledge article.

"It looks like an erector set."
— Town Manger Mark Haddad on the construction at Cohasset Middle/High School

"Our goal is to keep kids alive, not to imprison them."
— Police Chief Brian Noonan explaining the police stance on underage drinking

"I like to tell people that the cost of the project is now somewhere between $407 million and the sky."
— State Sen. Robert Hedlund on the soaring cost of the Greenbush project

"Some distinguished themselves scholastically, some through the arts, and some public service. But all seem to be passionately involved in what they are doing."
— CHS Principal Michael Jones on the Class of 2001

"The project is a hoax and I use that meaning lie."
— Attorney William Golden on Massport's proposed runway that would increase air traffic over the South Shore.

"We pause to honor the new American heroes and pray for those who sail in harm's way."
— Sgt. Robert Jackson, US Navy veteran, during a special prayer and remembrance service after Sept. 11.

"We have met every challenge so far, legislatively, legally and environmentally."
— MBTA spokesman Brian Pedro on the AfTA lawsuit

"People ask me how much snow we're going to get. I tell them, 'I'll let you know on April 15.'"
— DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield

"We really don't have any other plan, other than take it down or let it fall down."
— Linda Shropshire, spokeswoman for Peter Roy on the future of the Mill River Marine boatyard

"I e-mailed the other commissioners asking whether we should issue the abatement and asked them to send their vote by e-mail."
— Sewer Commission Chairman Gary Vanderweil when questioned on the vote that resulted in an Open Meeting Law violation

"Cohasset is an ancient seacoast town and it is not meant to be a mecca of industry."
— Planning Board chairman Al Moore on Cohasset's small commercial/industrial tax base

"There's absolutely nothing negative about this project."
— Library trustee Sheila Evans on asking Special Town Meeting for more money for the new library

"I look forward to the opportunity to cross-examine the MBTA in court."
— John Bewick, AfTA president

Cholesterol tests for young adults

Cholesterol screening for ages 18-25 will be held at the Cohasset Middle High School cafeteria on Jan. 3 from 12:30-4 p.m. and 5-7 p.m. Twenty percent of adults between 18 and 25 who have high cholesterol which can contribute to premature heart disease. Also free, healthy snacks and informational literature. Screening is sponsored by Hingham Institution for Savings.

Contract awarded for new wells

The Water Commission, at its Dec. 18 meeting, voted to award to the T.J. Ogden Company the contract for the installation of six new wells in the Ellms Meadow Wellfield.

"Ogden was the only bidder, at $132,930, for the project," said Water Commission Chairman John McNabb, "but that price was acceptable since it was very close to our engineer's estimate of $125,000."

"Reactivation of the Ellms Meadow Well, which is expected to provide up to 200,000 gallons per day, will, along with the 200,000 gallons per day from the Sohier Street wellfield when that is reactivated, provide a source of emergency water supply for the Town, and will allow us to supplement our existing supply during times of high demand," said McNabb.

Work on the new wellheads has already begin, and will continue until mid-February. Because of the presence of an endangered species that lives in the wetlands around the wellfield, said McNabb, the state mandated that the work to restore the wellheads be conducted only in the winter when the ground is frozen.

The current work includes just replacement of the wellheads. The pumphouse and pump, which is more than 100 years old, will also be replaced next year. The Sohier Street Well will be reactivated after the wells are relocated away from the Greenbush Right of Way during 2002. The relocation costs will be reimbursed by the MBTA.

Slides, lecture

The Hull Lifesaving Museum is launching a five-part winter lecture series, beginning Friday, Jan. 4 at 7 p.m. with "Trekking in Bolivia," presented by Billy Guild and Paul Breneman. The lecture and slide show will focus on the Cordillera Real, which has some of the highest peaks in the Americas, as well as on the indigenous highland people of the region. Both Massachusetts natives, Guild and Breneman are seasoned outdoorsmen and extensive backcountry-travelers.

Light refreshments will be served. Cost is $3 for members and $5 for non-members. The museum is located at 1117 Nantasket Ave., Hull.

For more information, call Corinne Leung at 781-925-5433 or check out the museum's Web site at www.bostonharborheritage.org.

The stories that helped shape Cohasset in 2001

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

As Cohasset says goodbye to 2001, it's a good time to reflect on the past 12 months. It was a year of high marks for Cohasset High students whose college board and MCAS scores continued to rise and high-fives for the School Building Committee which was hard at work bringing the $40 million school projects in on time and on budget.

It was a year of challenges for Cohasset, which was the second South Shore town to ink a mitigation agreement with the MBTA, as a new, anti-train group AfTA vowed to continue to fight Greenbush. The town was also introduced to Chapter 40B – the so-called anti-snob zoning act – which could allow a 254-unit apartment building (with 20 percent set aside as affordable housing) on Route 3A.

Residents took the new PAYT trash disposal system in stride; the long-time police chief announced his retirement and our venerable former state representative was named Citizen of the Year.

Village revitalization continues to be in the news and the future of the old Hagerty House is still up in the air.

So here's a look back with text, quotes and photos from stories that appeared in The Cohasset Mariner in 2001. But hold onto your hats and stay strapped in because we're sure that 2002 holds a lot for Cohasset. And here at the Mariner, we promise to be there covering the news and bringing you the features and photos you've come to expect.

Jan. 4

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray closes as chapter on Beacon Hill. Murray is stepping down after 24 years of unparalleled constituent service to the Third Plymouth District. New state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, is sworn in at the State House in front of proud family members and friends.

A 52-year-old Cohasset man out for a morning skate on Lily Pond falls through the ice and is rescued by Cohasset police and firefighter/paramedics. He is treated and released at South Shore Hospital.

A new proposal by Peter Roy, who owns the Mill River Marine Railway boatyard on Border Street, is aired during a walk-through at the site requested by the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs. Plans are to fix up the deteriorating site, add additional apartment space, and allow the Cohasset Lobster Pound and boatyard business to remain there. There will also be additional access to the Gulf River and harbor for canoeists and kayakers.

Jan. 11

Restoration of the Greenbush line takes another step toward becoming a reality as selectmen agree to a mitigation package with the MBTA. They won't sign the agreement until a public hearing is conducted later this month. The agreement could be worth upwards of $3.5 million. Highlights include $1.2 million reimbursement for the James Brook flood control project and $1 million in exchange for a "friendly" land taking of the town-owned right of way; median strips at all grade crossings; and a bridge from North Main Street, over the tracks to Rocky Lane.

Cohasset police nab three Scituate youths in the alleged theft of four trays of donuts and several bags of bagels from Marylou's News in Cohasset and North Scituate.

State Sen. Robert L. Hedlund is sworn in for a fifth term in front of a boisterous crowd of 350 at the Broad Cove Ballroom in Hingham.

Terry Atherton of the planning board and sewer commissioner Henry Rattenbury announce they won't seek reelection this spring.

John K. McNabb and SAFE are concerned about the state lifting the moratorium on new landfills.

Town Manager Mark Haddad says the town will need a $300,000 override this spring to avoid layoffs.

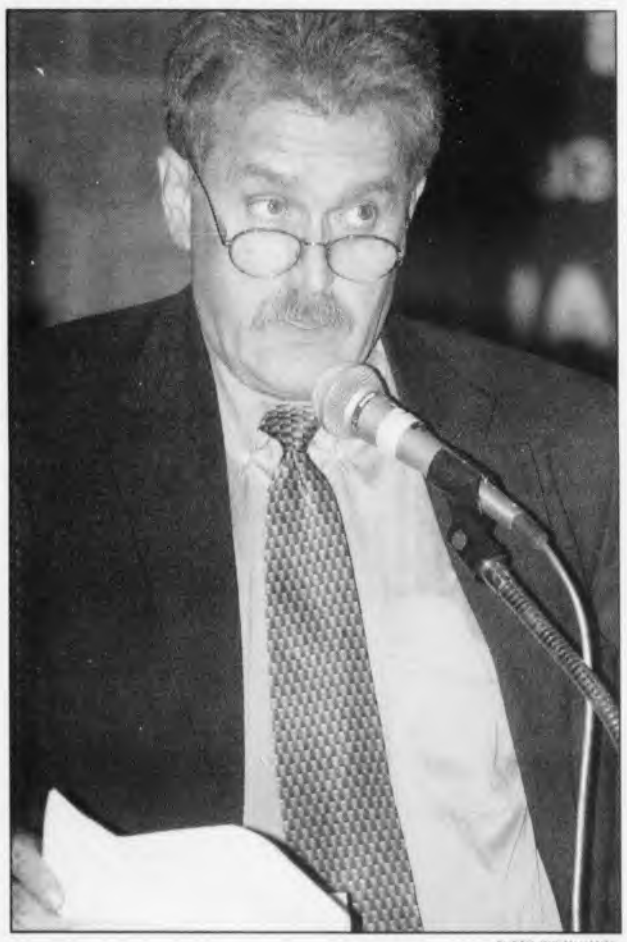
Jan. 18

The town announces it hopes to sign a mitigation agreement deal with the MBTA at the end of the month. The announcement draws a mixed reaction from the town.

The Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, Water Commission and Sewer Commission all convened in Town Hall to examine the latest sewer feasibility study of Little Harbor. Though two studies had been done before, this one, conducted by Stearns and Wheeler of Burlington, was designed to be the final word in whether the area could and should be sewered. The answer is yes, but at a cost.

After a year of planning, the Pay-As-You-Throw program at the Recycling Transfer Facility will kick off soon. Residents will be able to purchase an RTF sticker for $50, along with either 30-gallon trash bags for $1 apiece, or two 15-gallon bags for $1. Residents must use the bags — that will be available in bundles of ten — to dispose of their trash.

Jan. 25



The town's newest millionaires don't live on Atlantic Avenue or drive a new Mercedes. In fact, until last Tuesday, they weren't even sure if they could keep their house, let alone buy a new car. But now, Sohier Street residents Richard and Donna Herbert can do both. The Massachusetts State Lottery announced the couple won $4 million on a single scratch ticket, and will collect $134,000 over the next 20 years after taxes.

The Department of Public Health released its set of regulations including a ban of tattoos for people under the age of 18 and a requirement that a parent be present for a minor to get a body piercing.

Feb. 1

Anti-Greenbush residents got a bit of a reprieve Tuesday night when the town put off signing a mitigation agreement with the MBTA, and said it will try to head back to the negotiating table. However, selectmen said the town will eventually sign a deal, in order to make sure the town is protected when the train does come.

Freshman State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, spent more than $126,000 in his 2000 campaign for the legislative seat, according to campaign finance reports, and outspent his Republican rival by a near 3 to 1 margin.

Feb. 8

For her many years of dedicated public service and undying loyalty to her constituents, Mary Jeanette Murray has been named the Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year. This is the eighth consecutive year the newspaper has sponsored the local award.

A rift between selectmen and the Cohasset Police Department that had apparently been bubbling just below the surface for some time reached a full boil this week. The patrolman's union sent the board a lengthy letter claiming certain members of the board of selectmen don't support the police, a situation they say has affected morale and may be compromising the level of service the police can provide the community.

A public hearing will be held to discuss the Cohasset School Committee's proposed $10.75 million fiscal year 2002 budget, that includes money for five new teachers, additional music and art instruction and reinstating the middle school's "no-cut" sports policy.

Feb. 15

A cold day and a big fire in an improperly lined fireplace combined to force 150 Red Lion Inn patrons to leave the restaurant's Sunday brunch when a fire broke out behind the fireplace. According to Cohasset Fire Chief Roger Lincoln, "a piece of construction" behind the restaurant's main fireplace and chimney caught fire and burned for a while until firefighters were able to break through the wall and locate the fire.

For the third straight year editor Mary Ford and the Cohasset Mariner editorial team were nominated in the General Excellence category by the New England Press Association. Again this year, the paper took First Place, as it did two years ago.

What started out as a routine budget presentation between the School Committee and selectmen Tuesday dissolved into a heated discussion over the cleanliness of the town's schools with fingers being pointed back and forth across the table. Triggering the debate were results from a recent walk through of the town's schools at which health agent Dr. Joseph Godzik reported a number of health and cleanliness concerns.

Cohasset may have received a big gift from the state this week when Transportation Secretary Kevin Sullivan said the MBTA would have to pay fair-market value when it takes the six-mile town-owned, railroad right-of-way as part of the Greenbush restoration project.

The Weir River Watershed that provides water for about 38,000 people living in Hingham, Hull, Norwell and north Cohasset is taxed in both its capacity to provide a stable public water supply and its ability to maintain adequate habitat for aquatic wildlife, according to a state watershed resources study.

Cohasset Harbor's biggest employer and largest private landholder is looking for representation on the town Harbor Committee. Margin Street resident, and owner of Atlantica Restaurant, Kimball's Hotel, and the Mill River Marine Railway site, Peter Roy, is looking to have say in what goes on in the harbor.

March 1

A new petition circulating around town is trying to mend fences with the Cohasset Revitalization Corporation, the private, non-profit group formed to get village improvements moving. Results of a survey conducted by CRC show many in town want to see the village infrastructure fixed up.

The Cohasset Police/Fire Building Committee has asked Trustees of Reservations about a possible land swap that would give the town land on Route 3A for a new police and fire station, and give the preservation group a parcel of town-owned land near the Hingham line. Though nothing has been etched in stone, Town Manager Mark Haddad said it is one of the options being examined.

March 8

A group of Cohasset citizens has succeeded in putting the issue of community preservation before voters at the April 7 Town Election. While the town has a large amount of open space and historic buildings which add to its small-town charm, proponents feel more must be done to preserve Cohasset's character.

President George W. Bush has announced he intends to nominate Cohasset native Lincoln P. Bloomfield Jr. as assistant secretary of state for political military affairs. Bloomfield should be another familiar face in the White House, he spent 12 years there during the Reagan/Bush working in various roles in the administration.

By 9 a.m. Monday in anticipation of a huge blizzard, the line of parents, children and teens at Blockbuster Video was outside the door and wrapped along two store fronts at Cohasset Plaza. Stop & Shop had been picked clean the night before, restocked, and bombarded again that morning. The package store was doing a brisk

The support inside the 80-foot Town Common flag-pole near the door to the halyard broke loose and slipped down during last week's storm. The fiberglass pole should be able to sustain winds of up to 120 miles per hour, according to the company brochure, far more than the 45 mph gusts in last week's nor'easter.

Time is running out for Kevin Ulmer and his Cohasset Lobster Lab. Tuesday night, Ulmer was given until Oct. 1 to raise $326,000 and start construction work on the town-owned Hagerty House on Parker Avenue, or have his lease terminated.

After months of studying water and salinity levels in James Meadow, the Army Corps of Engineers has decided two more months of studying is needed. Cohasset officials are waiting for word from the Corps about whether they have to revisit the James Brook tide gate installation project.

March 22

The school day is stressful enough. So several Cohasset High seniors think they have found a way to eliminate at least one of life's hassles, the unworkable traffic pattern in the lower school parking lot from 7-7:30 a.m.

The Cohasset Revitalization Corporation is pushing for a major redesign in the village traffic pattern, that would create a one-way traffic circling counter-clockwise around Cohasset Hardware and the adjoining block of buildings.

Hollywood is once again knocking on Cohasset's door for permission to film in town. This time, it's Walt Disney which hopes to roll film in town, for a movie starring Academy Award winners Dustin Hoffman and Susan Sarandon. Walt Disney has asked the board of directors of the Central Cemetery on Joy Place for permission to shoot on the property in late April.

After more than 15 years of work, the Cemetery Committee is a Town Meeting vote away from completing its mission. On March 31, residents will be asked to allocate $600,000 for the expansion of Woodside Cemetery and solve the town's burial plot crunch for the next 50 years.

March 29

A new organization says the best Greenbush deal a town can get, is no train at all. At first, it may sound like another grassroots attempt to derail the $408 million project, one that would likely fail given current momentum behind the train. But Advocates for Train Alternatives, dubbed AfTA thinks Greenbush restoration is anything but a sure bet.

Cohasset grew by 186 people in the past 10 years, said Census 2000 results released last week. But although that equals just a 2.63 percent rate, the number of residents under the age of 18 grew at a rate of 4.74 percent.

The Board of Health announced that none of the tobacco vendors in town sold to minors under the age of 18 during a recent tobacco sting.

Attendees at the Cohasset Revitalization Corporation's public forum on Monday were unified about one aspect of the presented village improvement plan: don't make South Main Street one-way.

April 5

Town voters have a chance on Saturday to create a trust fund that can be used to preserve Cohasset's open space and historical buildings, and be eligible to receive state matching grants. The Community Preservation Act, a hot issue on many of the South Shore's town ballots, would add a 1.5 percent surcharge to a Cohasset homeowner's tax bill, and could be used to purchase new park land, do capital improvements to historic properties, and help develop community housing.

By approving the town's operating budget at the annual Town Meeting, Cohasset citizens set the stage for a vote on a $300,000 override question at the polls Saturday. The override is needed to balance the fiscal year 2002 budget, which found itself on the short side, thanks to an 18 percent increase in health insurance costs for town employees, and unexpected increase in legal expenses and police overtime this year.

In less than 48 hours Cohasset residents will head to the polls and help decide the path the town will take. Despite the seemingly important ballot items, Town Clerk Marion Douglas is skeptical that the election will draw a big turnout.

April 12

Residents voted to put a little extra in town coffers by approving a $300,000 Proposition 2-1/2override and adopting the Community Preservation Act at Saturday's election.

Adrienne MacCarthy came up three votes shy in her quest for a School Committee seat in the initial ballot count at this past Saturday's Town Election.

An anti-train group has launched the first of what it promises to be several lawsuits against the Greenbush project. Tuesday in Suffolk Superior Court, Advocates for Transportation Alternatives, known as AfTA, filed suit against the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority and two other state agencies.

April 19

Some local legislators believe primary enforcement of the seatbelt law in Massachusetts could lead to some bumpy roads if it were to become law because certain civil liberties are at stake. But local police departments say the trade-off

YEAR IN REVIEW, PAGE 14

Three months in town: What an education!

MY VIEW

EVAN SCHIFF

Happy New Year, Cohasset!

It is now my daunting task to take you through the year that was and the year that will be. What makes this column even more formidable is the fact I've only been enjoying the town for three months. So maybe it would be easier to concentrate on what I've learned in my time here and what I'm looking forward to.

In my first three months of my first real job, I can say I learned more than in four years of college. (That statement comes with an apology to my parents, who shelled out more money for my college education than I can fathom.) Even though those memories are slightly clouded, I am certain my first selectmen's meeting taught me more than Journalism 101.

My roommates constantly look at me with guarded concern when I excitedly tell them Little Harbor may get a sewer hook-up. My ex-girlfriend, a different story for a later column, would politely shy away from me as I labored over the details of the ledge preservation article. My parents act amazed as I tell them with an enthusiasm they haven't seen from me since the Phillies got to the World Series in 1993, that I'm looking forward to that night's School Committee meeting. And you know what, I never leave the School Committee meetings with a sense of crushing despair like I had when Joe Carter hit the homerun that ended the Phillies' dreams in the '93 Series.

I've learned about tax rates and appropriation issues, sewer hook-ups and zoning problems. I've interviewed WW II vets and new chefs, stonemasons and sports agents. While the time I've spent in the office isn't helping my dream of becoming a rock star, it is helping me towards covering those stars.

My roommates constantly look at me with guarded concern when I excitedly tell them Little Harbor may get a sewer hook-up.

Many have been welcoming in my stint so far. Without the generous time spent by town officials and others explaining numerous conundrums, I would probably be back waiting tables (and making more money). So without further ado I present my list of issues that should garner the most interest in 2002. In no particular order, here we go:

1) Paul Pratt Library — the construction of the new library was one of the first issues I was hit with when I came to town. It should be a thrill to every resident of Cohasset watching the walls go up.

2) Village Revitalization — the town should have its plans complete, and construction begun by the end of 2002. With public interest so keen on this issue, it is bound to grab headlines throughout the year.

3) School Renovations — by the beginning of the 2002/2003 school year, Cohasset's students should be enjoying state-of-the-art schools. Both the middle-high school and Deer Hill School are on schedule and it should be an exciting process to watch.

4) Town Elections — while in covering my first political race I don't envision uncovering any Watergate scandals, the elections should prove to be interesting. There are two seats up for grabs on the Board of Selectmen and one open seat on the School Committee that should be highly sought after.

5) Greenbush — I can almost here the T rolling into the station now...

6) School Building Assistance Bureau program — the resolution of this problem will be very important to taxpayers. If the SBAB doesn't come through with reimbursement on schedule, taxpayers stand to see a dramatic increase in their rates.

7) Annual Town Meeting — is where many issues will be resolved. Some interesting items that may or not be in the warrant include, ledge preservation, sewer commission asking for additional appropriation, police station still concerned about it current quarters, and other important matters.

While there are many others issues too numerous to elaborate on, the resolution (or not) of these seven items could impact the town for years. Stay tuned!

The Old Man and the Kid

The Old Man in the flowing white robes leaned his scythe against the wall and checked once again the sundial on his wrist. The shadow was creeping inexorably toward the XII. His sash, labeled 2001, sagged on his emaciated body. Late again, he mused with a sigh. These kids . . .

Suddenly the door opened and the Kid came in. His face was flushed with exertion and anger. His hair was disheveled. He held his diaper up with one hand. Around his head the air was blue with words not usually heard until the third or fourth month.

"You're late," said the Old Man.

"(Expletive deleted)," said the Kid, adjusting his sash with the figures 2002 on it.

"What happened to you?"

"I was going through the gate at the airport," said the Kid, "when the bells started ringing and the lights began going on and off. Some men in camouflage suits hustled me into a side room. They took away my diaper pin. 'A typical terrorist weapon . . . a veritable box cutter,' they said.

"Well, they must have questioned me for a couple of hours. I guess I convinced them there wouldn't be any 2002 without me so they let me get on the plane. Did you ever fly all this way holding your diapers up with one hand? What kind of a place are you running here?"

"2001 was not one of our best years," the Old Man admitted, "but it wasn't my fault. I was as surprised as anyone when those planes smashed into the World Trade Center towers. But we're taking care of that for you, don't worry."

"What have you done?"

"Well, for one thing, we've bombed Afghanistan back into the Stone Age."

"The Afghans did it, huh?"

"Well, no, but they hid the guy who did, fellow named Osama bin Laden."

"You got him, huh?"

"Not exactly. He was there but he escaped and we really don't know where he is."

"Geez, I guess if you want something done you still have to do it yourself. Let's see, I'll clean this thing up in a week or so . . ."

The Old Man looked at the Kid sadly.

". . . and then I can turn to the important things, the kind of things people can dig their teeth into, like Gary Condit," the Kid went on. "You didn't find Chandra Levy, did you?"

"No," said the Old Man. "I left that for you."

"I'll take care of that next and then I can get to the fun things, like harassing Jane Swift and Tom Finneran. I'm going to enjoy this yet. I may even get a new pin for my diapers."

"Not so fast," said the Old Man. "There's a few things you'll have to do first."

"Like what?"

"George (43) Bush says he's going after terrorists wherever they are, not just bin Laden. He's going after the people who protect them, too, like Saddam Hussein and Moammar Khadafi and whoever is the ayatollah du jour in Iran. It could take a full year, or two years, or ten years."

"That long, eh?" said the Kid. A furrow started to crease his forehead as he contemplated what a year full of terrorist-hunting would be like. It was totally unappealing, he thought.

"Yes. And even then you can't be sure you've got them all because new ones are popping up all the time. And speaking of time . . ." The Old Man checked the sundial on his wrist and saw that the shadow was now starting to cover the XII. He picked up his scythe. ". . . I've got to be going now."

"You'll never make it with that beard," said the Kid. "You look like an aging terrorist if I ever saw one. They'll probably throw you in jail and hold you for one of those military tribunals."

"I'll take the chance."

"Tell you what," the Kid said. "Why don't you stick around a bit until things cool down." His confidence was beginning to melt away now. "You know all about this terrorist thing. You could advise me. That's it! You could tell me how to handle these terrorists when we catch them."

"Sorry," said the Old Man. "I gotta go." Suddenly he was feeling at peace with himself for the first time since Sept. 11. "You know how the Boss is. He likes his people to be punctual. You're on your own now. Good luck, Kid."

And he was gone.

What to do with Christmas debris

By Allan MacDonald
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Having just brought over a 20-gallon plastic bag of Styrofoam shipping peanuts to the proprietor of Thompson's Business Services at Front Street in Scituate Harbor, on the west side of the intersection diagonally across from where the Playhouse used to be, and getting his thumbs-up [because a 30-gal. plastic bag of the Styrofoam peanuts costs him $25], I am reminded that a Cohasset resident phoned me the other day about Christmas debris just before our 'Postal Patron' card from the RTF arrived.

Yes, Virginia, there is a place for Santa's debris. Christmas wrapping paper is recyclable. Please put it in the junk mail bin. Plastic bags and brown paper bags go in their proper places. Ribbons and bows are not recyclable and should be put in your PAYT bag if you don't/can't reuse them. Large-size Styrofoam blocks [not the peanuts] may be put in the trash bin with impunity [how about that] except, I know, with the ethical burden that here is a petroleum product that takes up a lot of "non-compactable" space, and then what happens to it?

Cardboard is the one item that constantly pays. We don't lose money having it hauled, unlike all those catalogs — which are a real glut on the market. Contacting the catalog companies will put a stop to their delivery.

Ribbons and bows are not recyclable and should be put in your PAYT bag if you don't reuse them.

The tree — what we always do is to stand it up outside for the birds and for our own pleasure until it dries out enough for firewood. [I wonder what dealers will do with all their leftover trees?]

Best wishes for 2002!

2001 Christmas Bird Count — every bird counted

A BIRDERS EYE VIEW

JOANNE C. NORTON

Every year I report on the Christmas Bird Count (CBC) which has replaced the old Christmas Day "Side Hunt" tradition. For that event, people would divide up into sides, or teams, the winner being the one that could produce the largest number of dead animals at the end of the day. In 1900 Frank Chapman, ornithologist and editor of Bird-Lore, called instead for people to join him in keeping a list of the number of live birds they could identify during Christmas Day.

Thus began the annual Christmas Bird Count, which the National Audubon Society has been coordinating for more than a century. To correct inconsistencies in data collecting, the methodology has been improved over the years. All CBC counts take place inside non-overlapping 15-mile diameter circles, 33 of which are in Massachusetts. The counts are held between Dec. 14 and Jan. 9 each year, in order to give a "snapshot" of early winter bird populations. It is up to the compiler for each circle to choose the specific date and to designate leaders for areas within the count circle. Counting is done either by groups of birders or by individuals, both professional and amateur. They count every bird, not just the number of species.

Hingham falls within the Quincy circle, which this year scheduled its count for Dec. 15. The weather forecast called for "cold rain until 1 p.m., with increasing winds and decreasing temperatures as the day progresses". Unfortunately for us, the weather forecast was very accurate, with the weather indeed being "cold rain until 1 p.m., with increasing winds and decreasing temperatures as the day progressed". The adjective most often voiced by CBC birders that day was "miserable".

We set out at 6:30 a.m., and headed for World's End. Susan Shapiro was our leader, and Michelle LoConte, my husband Dick, and I made up the foursome trying to cover all of Hingham. We debated whether to dress more for the wet or for the cold. One of us hedged his bets by trying to fit a rain parka over a winter parka. I chose a knitted cap to keep my ears warm, then crammed a brimmed rain hat on top in a vain attempt to keep rain out of my binoculars. Never mind, the CBC is not about fashion. Fogged-up and rain-splattered optics were a continual challenge.

There were a lot of species that we hoped to find on World's End but did not. No owls could be flushed or heard, no loons or grebes could be seen in the choppy white caps at the far end, and many small songbirds were among the missing. The wind and the rain were cold, especially out on the causeway and the more open areas. In spite of this, most of our total species were seen at World's End, even though we were able to increase the numbers of individual birds seen or heard at other locations.

Counting is done either by groups of birders or by individuals, both professional and amateur. They count every bird, not just the number of species.

From World's End, we went to the Weir River area below Foundry Pond where we usually can depend on finding a kingfisher. This year there was no kingfisher, probably because a Cooper's Hawk was on patrol there. Oh well, it was nice to have a Cooper's Hawk. Foundry Pond had almost no birds, not even the swans that are regularly there until the pond freezes over.

Turkey Hill did not have many birds either. At this point we decided we would treat our chilled and damp bodies to lunch indoors. We went to our house, where we could watch my feeders while eating, in an attempt to justify less aggressive birding for a short while. We added a few chickadees, titmice, and juncos to the total numbers, but no new species.

Refreshed and much more comfortable, we headed for the Transfer Station. Now that the landfill has been capped, there is a marked decrease in the number of gulls and crows hanging out in that area. We listened carefully to the few crows we saw, hoping to hear Fish Crows. These can only be distinguished from American Crows by voice. No such luck, even though this has been a reliable place for them in the past.

Next we walked through Bare Cove Park. Again things were pretty quiet, with no sign of the Field Sparrow that has been there most other years. Moving on to the Shipyard area, we were able to pick up a Double-crested Cormorant and some Brant. This cormorant was a good find, since it is mostly a summer resident, being replaced by the Great Cormorant in the winter.

At the Hingham Bathing Beach, we were able to increase our numbers of gulls substantially, especially the Ring-billed Gulls. We went from there to Wompatuck State Park, along the way counting geese on the High School fields and checking out some backyard feeders. There were plenty of geese, but the feeders were empty. We had time only to sample the Park, and did not find much activity.

At the tally supper party, we learned that the numbers for the whole Quincy circle were 100 species, up from 93 last year. Our Hingham total was 39 species, down from 55 last year. Two new birds for the Quincy CBC were a Green Heron in Milton, and a Northern Fulmar seen off Hull. In 50 years of CBC record keeping, neither of these birds has shown up before.

Despite disappointing totals and messy weather, the challenge of doing the CBC was an enjoyable experience. You can check the tallies for other CBC counts as they get recorded from all across the United States and Canada at http://www.birdsource.com/cbc/index.html.

Joanne Norton is Master Bander for the New England Wildlife Center, and counts birds for FeederWatch, WetlandWatchers and International Shorebird Surveys.

A tip of the hat to 2001

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I would be remiss if I allowed certain persons, places and things to pass from 2001 into history without a tip of the hat.

Like Kansas State Senator O'Connor, who was invited to speak before the League of Women Voters of Johnson County in their celebration of the passage of the 19th amendment to the Constitution that guaranteed women the right to vote.

"We have a society that does tear families apart," said the senator. "I think the 19th amendment, while it's not evil in and of itself, is a symptom of something I don't approve of."

No, the senator is not a unreconstructed male chauvinist pig of the 19th century. In fact, the senator is not even a he. The senator's first name is Kay. She's a she.

Then there was Wendy Albert of West Palm Beach, Fla., 63 and retired, who was fined $500 and forced to write a letter of apology to Theresa LePore, supervisor of elections in and for the county of Palm Beach.

She registered her dog, a poodle named Cocoa Fernandez, to vote and, this being Florida, the supervisor of elections accepted it.

Her crime? She registered her dog, a poodle named Cocoa Fernandez, to vote and, this being Florida, the supervisor of elections accepted it.

Cocoa, incidentally, was a Republican, but only as long as it took the embarrassed LePore to swear out a complaint.

The Iowa legislature approved a bill that would make it a crime, subject to a $1,500 fine and a year in jail, for a politician to say things about a rival that he or she "knew to be untrue, deceptive or misleading."

We were surprised to learn that 13 other states, including Maine, have similar laws but, since the dawn of time, no politician is known to have a night in jail for violating its conditions.

There must be something about the water in Maine because Joe Brooks, one of its legislators, filed an anti-litter measure adding a five-cent surcharge to every filter-tip cigarette sold in the state, the nickel to be refunded when the butt is returned.

Brooks figured that if only half the remains of the 2.2 billion cigarettes sold in the state were returned at $1 a pack or $10 a carton the state would stand to gain as much as $60 million in unclaimed surcharges.

The barge Santa Lucie, which left Philadelphia in 1986 with 14,000 tons of incinerated garbage for disposal, was still sailing the Seven Seas after 15 years seeking a place to dump the last remaining 3,000 tons of its cargo.

Thus far, it had been rejected by the Bahamas, the Dominican Republic, Honduras, Guinea-Bissau and the Netherlands Antilles. Haiti allowed it to land under the impression it was badly needed fertilizer, then found out (or smelled out) what the barge really contained and sent it on its way.

Simeon Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, 64, was named prime minister of Bulgaria when his newly formed center-right party, the National Movement, won a majority in parliament.

The last time he was in Bulgaria was in 1946 when he was King Simeon II, a 9-year-old forced into exile by the Communists.

"He is at least rich and won't be stealing like the incumbents," said Alexandra Georgieva, a voter.

And lastly, there were the red-faced folks in the Interior Department who had the municipal landfill (that's PC for what we used to call the city dump) in Fresno, Calif., designated as a National Historic Landmark, just like Walden Pond, for its cultural significance.

That was before they found out it had already been listed — as a Superfund Toxic Waste Site by the Environmental Protection Agency in 1989.

And a happy New Year to you, too.

Grants for Elder Affairs

State Sen. Robert Hedlund announced the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs has received two Service Incentive Awards in the amount of $5,265 and $1,000. These grants shall be used to fund the position of volunteer coordinator and to conduct a Caring for Elders Program.

"I am pleased to see that all of the hard work and dedication shown by the staff and volunteers at the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs have paid off. This grant will be an additional help to providing the senior citizens of Cohasset with important services that they rely upon," said Hedlund.

Service Incentive Grants are highly competitive and are used to enhance or expand Council on Elder Affairs service capabilities. A number of communities applied, particularly for transportation needs.

"Given the tough competition that the Council on Elder Affairs faced when applying for the grant and being selected, it shows just how wonderful a job they do for the senior citizen community in Cohasset," Hedlund said.

GIFTS of HOPE

A child's smile brings hope to all.

What will make your children happy this holiday? For some, new toys under the tree. For others maybe a week off from school. But for many children in the Greater Boston area, it is something as simple as food. This holiday season, there will be over 200,000 hungry people in Eastern Massachusetts. In fact, one in five children under the age of 12 lives in a household that struggles to put food on the table.

Many people are looking for a way to help, but don't know how. Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program can help you reach those in need in your area. For the past 10 years, readers' Gifts of Hope donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children in the Greater Boston community. Another season is upon us. And more people need your help.

Please join the Cohasset Mariner and Community Newspaper Company in giving the greatest gift of all – the gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way toward helping those in need.

Here is some helpful information to plan your gift:
- $15 provides 30 people at a homeless shelter with a bowl of hot soup and a sandwich.
- $30 provides two families with a week's supply of groceries from a food pantry.
- $50 provides one neighborhood food program with 75 meals.
- $250 provides a food pantry or soup kitchen with more than 1,500 pounds of food.

PLEASE MAKE YOUR TAX DEDUCTIBLE CHECK OR MONEY ORDER PAYABLE TO: (Choose from one of the local charities) Father Bill's Place, Carolina Hill or South Shore Friends of the Homeless and mail to: Gifts of Hope, c/o Anne Rodwell, 16 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050 (Please do not make your check payable to this newspaper or to Gifts of Hope as that will only delay disbursement efforts. Thank you.)

Teams of the Year

The 2001 football team had a remarkable and historic season. The highlight of the season was a thrilling 20-16 win over Abington.

The 2001 girls tennis team finished 13-2 with two tournament wins and a share of the South Shore League crown. Leading the way was all-star Lindsay Grossman.

A look back in sports

What a remarkable year this was for Cohasset High athletically.

Last winter saw many noteworthy achievements. The undersized boys basketball team advanced to the second round of the state tourney after compiling a 13-7 record in the South Shore League, one of the most competitive conferences top to bottom in Eastern Mass. Four wrestlers advanced to the Div. 3 state championships, where Dan Littauer finished fifth overall, one spot shy of qualification for state tourney qualification. The gymnastics team finished second in the Pilgrim Conference with a 6-2 record with all-around league champion Kristin Sheerin leading the way.

Things got even better in the spring, as four of the five teams qualified for the state tourney, and the boys track team won its first league crown in over 25 years behind two-time sectional 200 meter champ Brian Krupczak and the versatile Pete Maitland—who, in the javelin, became the first Cohasset athlete to advance to the New England track and field championship in several years. Perhaps the biggest story of the spring, though, was the boys lacrosse team's dramatic run to the Div. 2 state championship game.

There was also a little bit of magic this past fall, as Cohasset football wound up with its first league championship and post-season game in over 20 years. The boys soccer team also fared quite well, advancing through the opening round of the state tourney for the second year in a row.

And that's just our overview.

Kristin Sheerin is something to behold on the lacrosse field. She led the 9-6-1 C.H.S. lady laxers in scoring this spring with an eye-popping 58 goals.

Football

It was a magical 2001 fall campaign for the Cohasset High gridders. The Skippers shocked most close observers by capturing the South Shore League championship with an overall record of 9-1 and earning the first post-season game for the school's football program in more than 20 years.

The Skippers pulled it off with the help of a tremendously diversified offense. Jason Brown was the main man on offense. With standout returning ball carrier Nick Bolster lost for the season to a detached retina, Brown, a senior captain, made the conversion from quarterback to halfback and wound up with a 1,400-yard, 15 touchdown season. This earned him not only league all-star honors, but also All-Scholastic selections from the Mariner, Patriot Ledger and both Boston papers.

Brown's conversion to halfback was made easier by the presence of junior Mike Snowdale, an accurate passer who took quickly to the quarterback role and wound up throwing for 14 touchdowns and approximately 1,200 yards, both South Shore League highs. He also wound up a South Shore League all-star and Mariner All-Scholastic selection.

When team captain Liam Martin, a starting wideout and defensive back, went down in the season opener to a broken leg, junior Tom Anderson and sophomore Chris Bilodeau both stepped forward to emerge as extremely reliable targets for Snowdale, the later earning SSL all-star recognition.

These skill position players were helped immeasurably by the undersized but overachieving offensive line of Brendan Goff, Stephen Davis, Jari Martin, Wil Prendergast and Cosimo Cambi, along with fullback Braun Goodson.

In fact, "undersized overachievers" was a moniker that could be hung on the team as a whole, and not only in deference to the fact that Cohasset High has, by far, the smallest student enrollment in the South Shore League (303 student, 9-12).

The biggest player on defense was 5-foot-11, 200 pound Ben Lynner, and he was dwarfed by the vast majority of offensive lineman he was forced to butt heads with 50 or so times a game. The other notable mighty mites on the defensive side of the ball included middle linebacker Paul Previte (5-8, 175), who joined Lynner on the SSL all-star team, Chris Caron, John Hussey, Marc Musco, Tom Bilodeau, Dave Bouchard and Eric Libby.

The highlight of the season was undoubtedly the thrilling 20-16 win over Abington on Nov. 2, a battle of the South Shore League's unbeaten teams that saw four lead changes in the four quarter.

A 21-7 loss to a much bigger Tyngsboro squad (650 enrolled students) in the Div. 5 playoff showdown on Nov. 27 was naturally disheartening, but could not overshadow what was a remarkable and historic season.

Boys soccer

The boys enjoyed a second outstanding season under coach Dave Nigro.

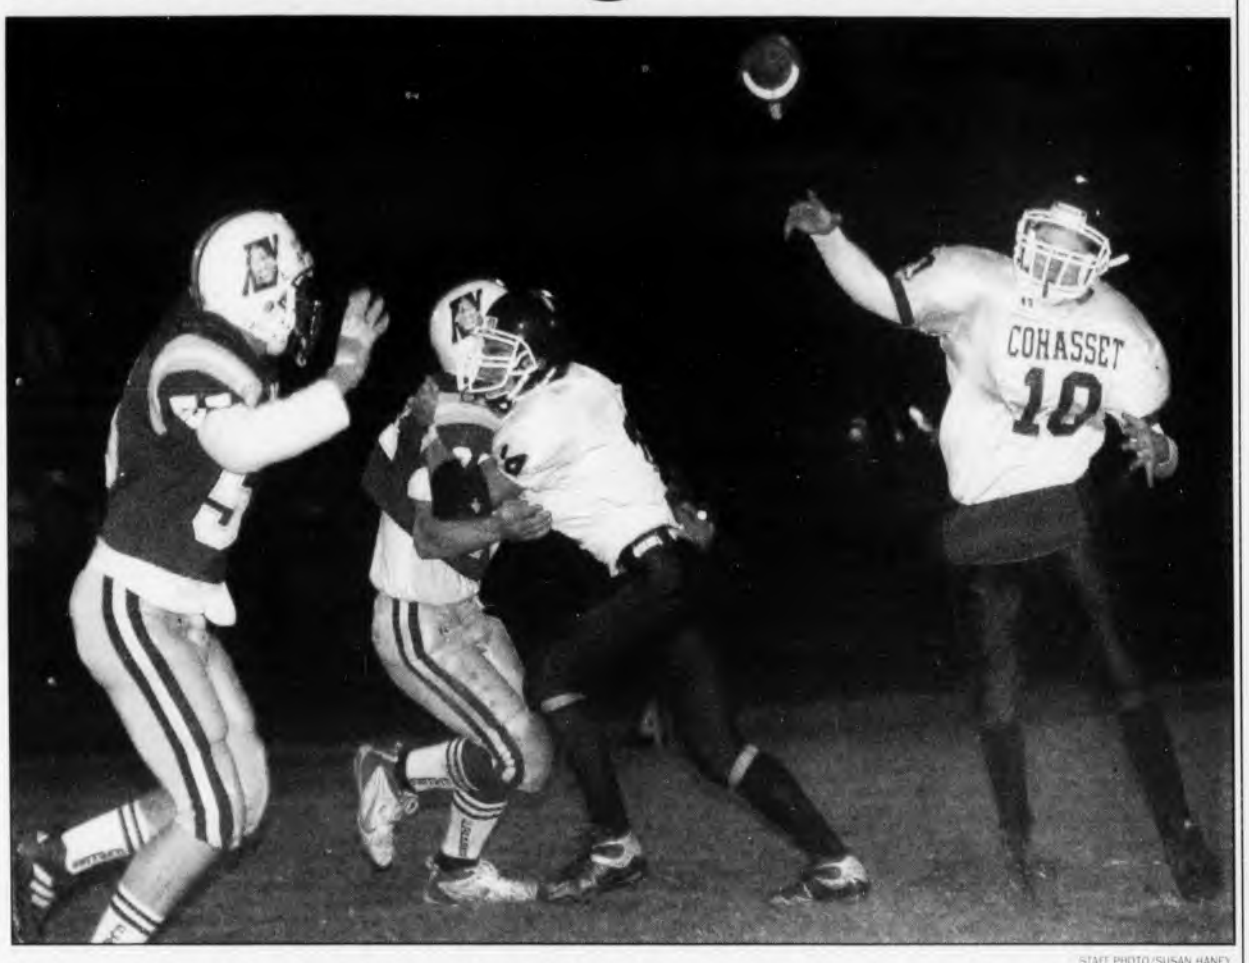
After completing a 12-3-2 regular season, the boys drew the seventh seed in the state tournament. The Skippers dominated first round opponent West Bridgewater in the opening round, but were eliminated in the second round by South Shore League rival Norton, a team the Lancers had tied in their two regular season meetings. A tournament loss to a league opponent is always devastating.

The Skippers were led by captains Matt Bilodeau and Pete Maitland, the former directing the offense (8 goals, 17 assists) from his center-midfield position, the latter anchoring the defense. Both earned league and Eastern Mass all-star honors for their efforts.

Junior Greg O'Connell was a versatile performer, making huge contributions whether he played up front (nine goals, seven assists) or on defense at the all-important sweeper position.

Senior forwards Tim Baird and Dan Kinchla were also huge contributors in the Skippers potent offensive attack.

Girls Soccer



After a slow start, the girls put together a strong stretch run that saw them finish with a respectable record, capping the season off with a huge upset win over Holbrook—a team that went into the state tourney as a number three seed.

The Lady Skippers were led by senior captains Kate Grimm and Maggie O'Neill, a Mariner All-Scholastic selection and South Shore League all-star midfielder. Both will be missed next season, as well forward Becky Ross.

There is a strong returning core of players, however, which includes South Shore League all-star fullback Julie Lordan, a junior. She anchors a strong young defense that also features junior Maura McKenney, and sophomores Holly Graham and Brenna O'Donnell.

The offense will likely be paced by Mike Snowdale (#10) was a pleasant surprise this season at quarterback for the Skippers. The junior took over the position to throw for 14 touchdowns and 1,200 yards, both South Shore League highs.

Spring campaigns successful for Skippers

Lacrosse, track and baseball lead the way

Boys lacrosse

The crown jewel in what was already a brilliant 2001 sports year at Cohasset High was the boys lacrosse team.

The 9-3 loss in the Div. 2 state championship game now seems almost an afterthought where the 2001 lacrosse season is concerned. Indeed, the 15-5 season under first year head coach was the thing of which legends are made.

In fact, the 12-11 semifinal win over Mashpee, in which the team rallied from an 11-5 deficit in the final seven minutes, arguably rivals anything of an athletic nature Cohasset has ever seen.

The team loses most of its defensive core to graduation, along with three-year All-Conference mid-fielder Ronan Buick, who led the Skippers in scoring this spring with 90 points despite missing five games to injury.

The team does return most of its attackers, including top goal scorer Paul Previte and Curt Kahn, as well as All-Conference goalie Kyle Webber.

Girls Lacrosse

In just their third year of existence and with an extremely young team, there wasn't a lot expected of the Lady Skippers this past season, but the Lady Skippers went out and earned the first playoff berth in the history of the program with an impressive record of 9-6-1.

Junior co-captain Kristin Sheerin led the charge into the post-season, scoring nearly forty percent of her team's goals with 58 on the season. A third year starter, she also led the team in assists, and became the first athlete in the history of her sport in Cohasset to leap over the 100 career goal mark.

Juniors Carlie Carter, Emma Gardner, Kate Grimm and Suzanne Lynner all held starting roles when healthy, and were all great contributors on both ends of the field.

Sophomore attackers Maura McKenney and Sera Genovese came in second and third on the team in scoring, with 35 and 25 points, respectively. Sophomore Gia Petrakis had a fantastic season in net, with 255 saves, 40 more than last year.

Cohasset's season came to an end with a first round playoff loss to the highly seeded Sandwich team, 14-6, an improvement from the 17-3 thumping the Lady Skippers received from them in an early season meeting.

Girls Tennis

Having made the state tournament in each of the last 10 years, Skipper fans have come to expect the type of excellence that was displayed by this year's Sectional Semi-final team.

This past spring, the Lady Skippers finished 13-2, with two tournament wins and a share of the South Shore League crown for the seventh consecutive season. Unfortunately, this season came to an end with a loss to top seeded Bourne, 4-1 in the Div. 2 South semifinals.

Leading the way for the Skippers all year was all-star Lindsay Grossman at first singles. The super soph went 14-1 on the season at the top position, her only loss coming to Bourne's ace in the semi-finals.

Sophomore Julie Shea had a phenomenal year at second singles to also earn league all-star acknowledgement along with Grossman, and freshman Holly Graham emerged as a force at third singles or doubles. Senior captain Aryanna Afshar, was a consistent winner in both singles and some first doubles.

The top doubles team for Cohasset was junior captain Kelly Stone and freshman Courtney Caron. This dynamic duo came up big with two tourney victories.

Boys Tennis

The boys earned their first tourney berth in over five years with an 8-4 record.

Unfortunately, the team looses four of its top seven players to graduation, including top two singles players Erik Shea and Jeff Golden, and doubles ace Jeff Scribner.

Poised and consistent junior David Ingber will likely assume a top singles spot this spring after putting together an 11-2 South Shore League all-star season with partner Scribner last year.

Hard hitting senior Joe Niessink also appears a strong singles candidate, and sophomores Jesse Brewer and Robbie Carpenter should return as a formidable doubles combo.

Baseball

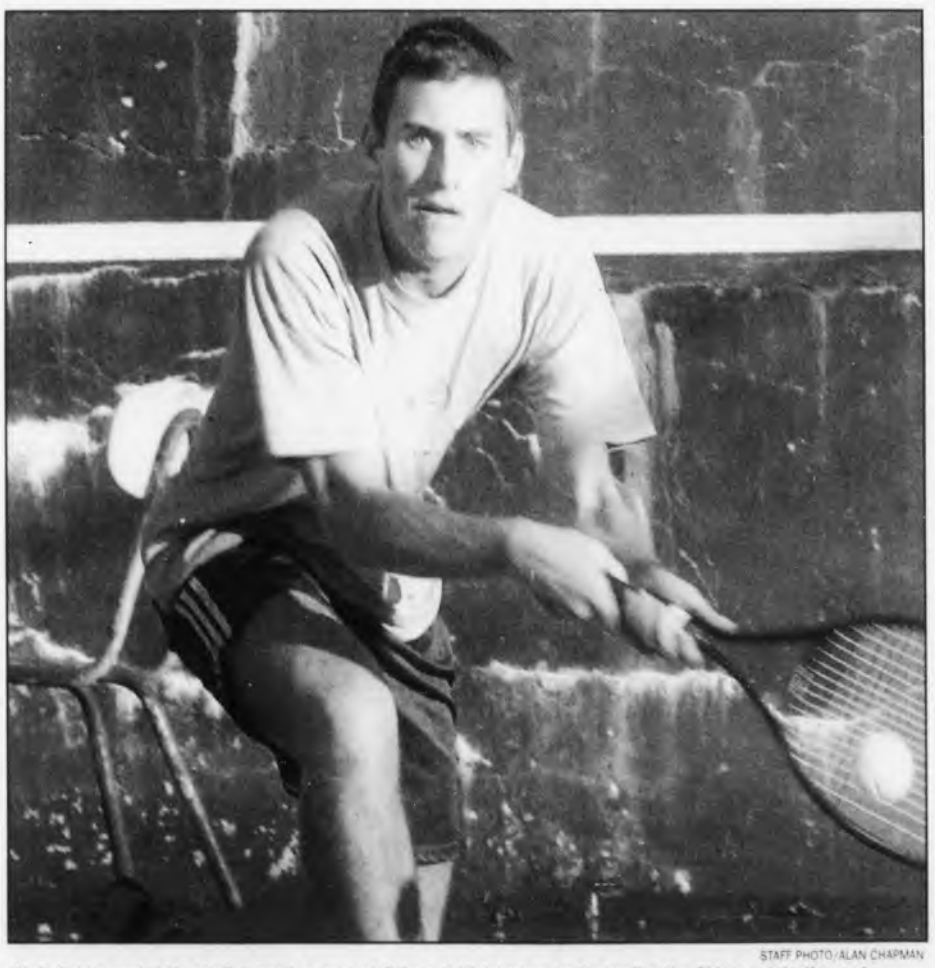
It was a rough season for the Cohasset baseball team, but it should have some good things to look forward to in the coming years.

Although the team finished the year with a record of 6-14, ending the season with a five game losing streak, the team showed its mettle by never giving up, even when post-season play became an impossibility. Next year's team will be led by a very capable class of 2002, including several who performed very well as everyday players.

One of the best all-around players for the Skippers last spring was Tim Straughn, who led the team in RBIs, and with a .426 batting average. On the other side of the plate, Straughn, now a senior, was one of the top pitchers for the squad, compiling 27 strikeouts in 28 innings, with a 2.56 ERA.

It is hoped that senior Nick Bolster, a three sport standout at C.H.S. who missed last baseball season and this past football season with a detached retina, will be able to return to the diamond this spring. As a sophomore, he hit third in the order and was one of the team's top hurlers, so he'd undoubtedly be a huge addition.

Three other players who will return to play major roles this spring are senior outfielder Robin Murphy, junior pitcher/second baseman Mike Snowdale and sophomore third baseman Mike Dooley



Captains Doug O'Brien (two time South Shore League all-star) and TJ Bilodeau—last year's star center fielder and shortstop, respectively—will be missed, as will their fellow 2001 graduates Tim Grassey and Andrei Skorupa.

Track

To say it was a special season for the Cohasset boys spring track team doesn't even come close to summing it up.

Indeed, just winning their first league title in 25 years would be spe-

Chris Golden ended his sterling tennis career at Cohasset High last spring by leading the Skippers into the post-season for the first time in five years.

Winter teams are looking forward to new seasons

Wrestling

Senior Dan Littauer was looking like a good bet to build on his fifth place finish at last March's state Div. 3 championships until suffering a dislocated elbow two weeks ago that may well cost him his entire final high school season.

After the team finished the regular season with a 9-12 record, Littauer was one of four individual Cohasset wrestlers to advance from the sectional to the divisional championships last year. The other three were freshman Phil Strazzula, sophomore Terry Baroudi and senior captain Dan Duffy.

Overall numbers are way up this winter, and veteran coach Torin Sweeney is eyeing a return above .500 even with the loss of Littauer.

Hockey

The Cohasset hockey team, returning all but two regulars, is off to the kind of start this winter many predicted after it missed the state tourney by just one win last season. Through three games, the Skippers are 3-0 and have outscored their opponents by a mind-numbing 35-2.

This is coach Dennis Walsh's 30th and final season on the Cohasset bench.

Top scorers Matt Davis and Greg O'Connell are back to lead a potent offense that features four regular forward lines that include gifted scorer Tom Anderson, along with Rob Carpernter, Pete Whorisky, John Durkin, Dave Bouchard, Chris Caron, Mike Rasmussen, Sean Chase, Ted Straughn and Will Moody.

Seniors Eric Libby and Ted Straughn, junior Mike Calorio and sophomore Mike Devine anchor the defense in front of much improved second year starter in net, senior Dan Kinchla.

Boys basketball

With a record of 14-8 last winter, the undersized Skippers were a great story playing amid some of the stiffest South Shore League competition in years. The Skippers even notched a win in the state tourney over a much bigger Foxboro team.

Cohasset started out the season by winning eight of its first 10 games to put the playoffs well within reach.

The start was more impressive as numerous key players were forced out of action due to illness or injury. Character was one of the principal assets of this team, as indicated by its record of 5-1in games decided by three or fewer points.

The leadership of senior tri-captains Erik Shea, TJ Bilodeau (both South Shore League all-stars) and Doug O'Brien was vital all year.

Freshman Sean Connolley and sophomore Ben Lynner stepped in—at center and power forward, respectively— to give Cohasset a couple of much needed threats in the low post. Junior point guard Matt Bilodeau ran the offense smoothly all year, and gave some much needed offensive support, a rarity at that position.

This year, Cohasset will move down into Div. 4 come tournament time, with an enrollment that puts the Skippers as one of the smallest schools in that division.

Girls basketball

The girls finished with just one win last winter, but prospects for the future look bright with four sophomore in the starting lineup.

LaRaine Langford ran the point, using great ball-handling skills to break traps and run the halfcourt set offenses.

Sophomores Heather Peraino and shooting guard Lindsay Grossman spent the entire season leading the team in scoring, and both have a chance of becoming the first girls in the history of Cohasset High School to reach the 1,000 career points plateau.

Sophomore power forward and captain Maura O'Brien led the team in rebounding for the second consecutive year, and looks to be an inside threat down the line and freshman center Danielle Pinkus emerged as another threat in the paint.

Gymnastics

All things considered, last season was a remarkable one for the Cohasset-Norwell Gymnastics team.

Between the settling in of first year coach Cara Cunnerty, multiple injuries to all-star captain Carly Carter, and an absence of seniors, it seems a wonder the girls team wound up second in the South Shore League with a 6-2 record.

Captain Kristin Sheerin was selected to be a South Shore League all-star for the fifth straight season, dating back to when she was a seventh grader. She highlighted the regular season by breaking the only event record at Cohasset High she did not already hold by scoring an 8.9 on the vault. In the post-season, she then reset her own school record in the All-around, by receiving a 35.65 in the high pressure atmosphere of the All-League Meet to take first place. Sheerin even went on to State competition, where she was seeded ninth overall, and finished seventh in the vault.

Carter, who tore her ACL in one of the final few meets of the season, was selected to her third consecutive all-star team in the uneven bars event.

Sophomore Meredith Bixby, also of Cohasset, took over for Carter as the second All-around gymnast to help the 'Sclippers' to the win. Bixby wrapped up the season in grand style filling in for Carter in the All-Around, and was selected to her second Pilgrim Conference 2 all-star team to compete in the vault.

sophomores Gillian Weber and Jen Buckley, a Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mention.

Field Hockey

Deb Bostwick loved the character her 23 girls showed in their spirited 5-3-2 stretch run that saw them ultimately come up just one point short of post-season qualification at 6-7-5.

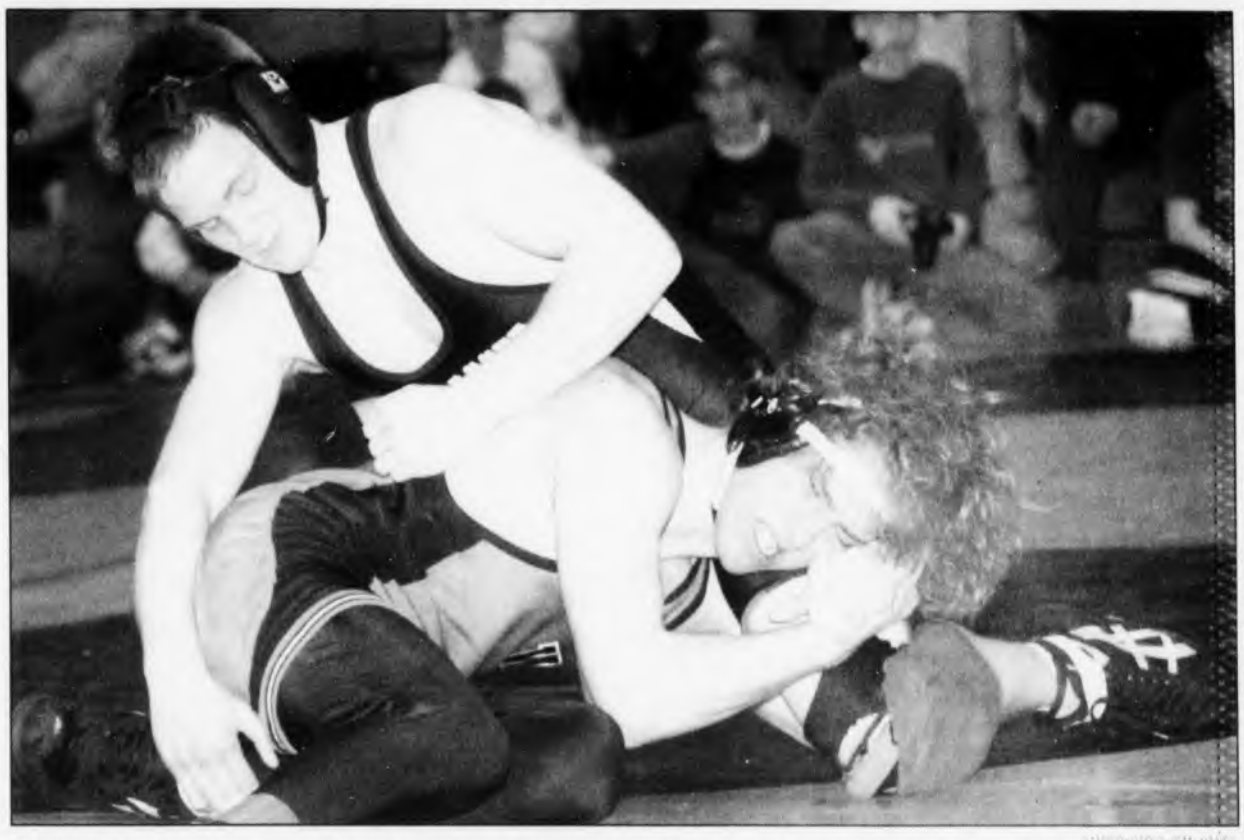
"I look back at a lot of those ties and losses that could have been wins and I think if we'd gotten just one more goal in any of those situations we'd be getting ready for the tourney rather than saying good-bye to the seniors and see you next year to the rest of the girls," said Bostwick this week following the season ending 1-0 win over Silver Lake on Friday.

Don't despair too much for the veteran coach or her Cohasset field hockey program as she gets all but five of these girls back for next season—which leaves the Lady Skippers in much better position than most of the teams that just barely squeaked by them this season.

This is not to say Cohasset won't miss captain Abbey Coakley, who scored the lone goal in the season finale, or her four fellow seniors—Allison Scott, Suzanne Lynner, Jackie Goines and Katie Silva—all of whom started for Cohasset.

Whatever retooling needs to take place will be done around junior captain midfielder Heather Peraino—a South Shore League all-star, along with Goines and Coakley.

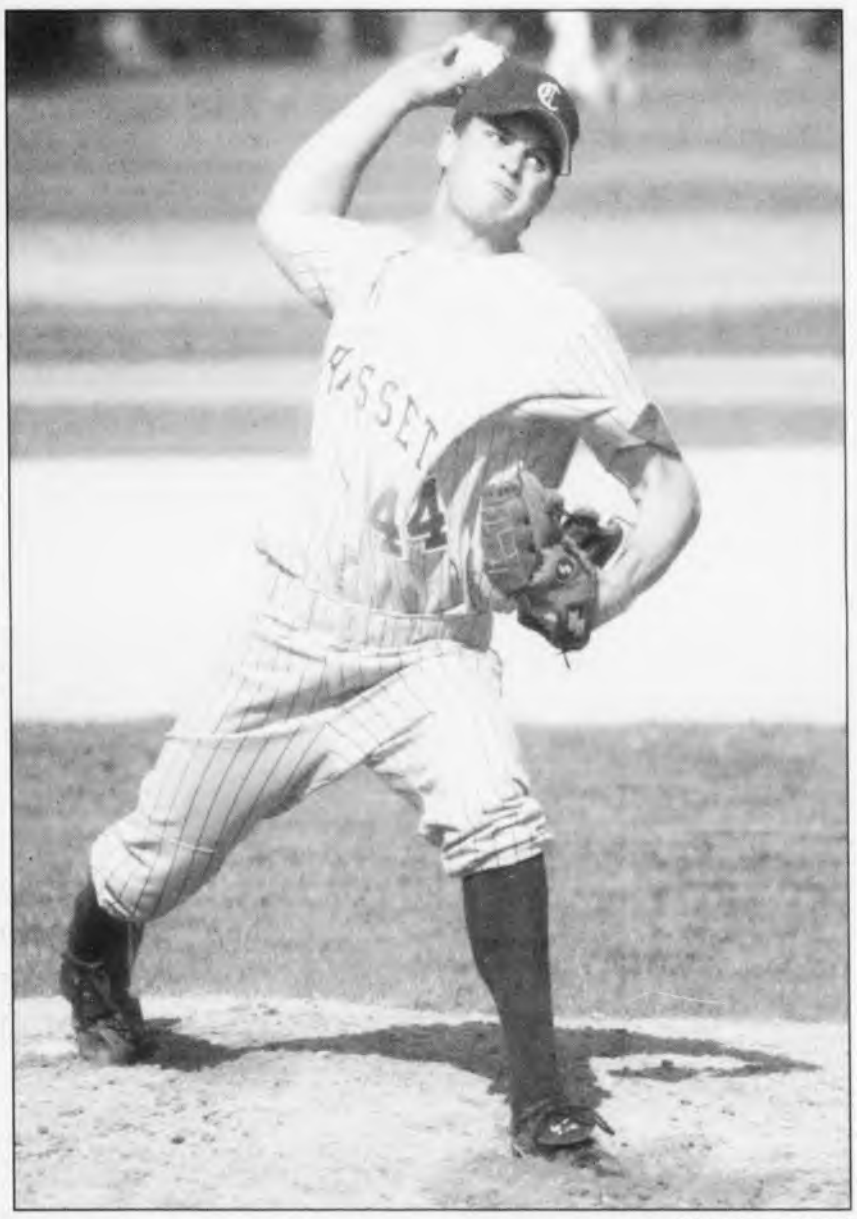
Other juniors who played a key role this season include starters Sera Genovese in goal, midfielder Lindsay Grossman and Deanna Brown, forwards Sarah Brady and Rachel Smith, and fullbacks Sarah Dennis and Kimmy Ulmner.



Golf

Although their record might not have indicated it, this year's very young golf team should be expecting big things in the future.

With 18 of 21 players returning, Cohasset's golf squad might very well contend for a league title as soon as next fall. Also, the fact that they had so many underclassmen this year shows how well they are loaded further down the line.



The three seniors of the team—Will Moody, Robin Murphy and Matt O'Grodnik— all had very solid seasons for the Skippers, and will be missed. Moody, the team's captain, was the leader of the team through and through.

D.J. Silvia, one of 11 freshmen on the team this year, had a terrific rookie season, earning his way to the top spot. He, Moody, and junior Greg O'Brien all competed at the All-League meet at Squirrel Run in Plymouth, all shooting in the low 70s. Silvia shot an 84 at the All-State competition, good for 24th place in the 60-player field.

Cohasset High senior Dan Littauer appeared a lock this winter to improve considerably on last year's fifth place finish at the Div. 3 state championships until a crushing elbow dislocation knocked him out of action.

Cohasset High three sport star Nick Bolster has missed three sport seasons in a row due to a freak detached retina injury - 2001 baseball, football and basketball. It is hoped he can return to the baseball diamond this spring for his final high school season. He's pictured here throwing his no-hit gem as a sophomore.

cial enough. When you throw in the fact that they did it with a roster that was literally 25 percent the size of some of their top competition, though, it becomes something quite a bit bigger. Often, many of the team's top performers were forced to compete in as many as four events per meet.

Junior Pete Mailtland became the first Cohasset trackster in coach Al Lafontain's four year tenure to advance to the New England Track and Field championships when he finished fifth at the State championships in the javelin with a throw of 178-6.

In the state sectionals, senior tri-Captain Brian Krupczak defended his 200 meter title despite suffering with a pulled hamstring. Unfortunately, he had to pull out of the state championships due to the injury.

Junior Tim Baird captured sixth at the sectionals in the mile with a time of 4:38.24, and the boys 4 x 100 relay team took fourth with a time of 45.73.

On the girls side, freshman Gillian Weber opened some eyes by finishing sixth at sectionals in the 800. Weber leads a strong core of underclass females into this spring season.

between civil liberties and protection of the public is worth it.

Cohasset firefighters took another step toward the purchase of a new thermal imaging camera for the town fire department, thanks to a camera demonstration outside the annual Town Election.

April 26

Firefighters successfully brought a marsh fire off Atlantic Avenue in Sandy Cove under control Sunday afternoon before it threatened any nearby houses. Firefighters went in the driveways of numbers 99 and 85 Atlantic Ave. to attack the fire from both sides.

Selectmen gave initial approval to a one month trial period for the proposed one way traffic pattern in the Cohasset Village. The circular pattern would make South Main Street, from the Elm Street intersection down to Brook Street, one-way going south. Elm Street would become one way from Brook Street to South Main Street, heading toward the common.

May 3

Cohasset Common was sent back in time yesterday to film a scene for its upcoming movie, "Baby in Black". Scores of extras battled 90-degree heat and their heavy, 70s vintage wardrobe, as filmmakers shot a funeral procession slowly moving up North Main Street, past the common and First Parish Church.

A new 80-foot fiberglass flagpole was installed Tuesday afternoon on the Town Common.

May 10

Cohasset Post Office workers will again work for the Cohasset Food Pantry when residents are asked to leave food and household supplies by their mailboxes to be picked up by mail carriers for eventual delivery to the pantry.

Selectmen announced Tuesday they have reached a tentative Greenbush mitigation agreement with the MBTA and the state Executive Office of Transportation and Construction. After three months of uncertainty, Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said mitigation talks got back on track over the past week, and the town feels it is time to sign a deal.

May 17

The Cohasset Common Historic District Commission will hold public hearings on May 29 to discuss a number of proposed additions to buildings within the district. The proposals include a major addition to the side of the First Parish Church parish house; a 16-foot by 20-foot wing addition to the South Shore Community Center; and an expanded roof and side porch on the Capt. Samuel Bates Jr. House.

Renovation work at the Red Lion Inn is expected to be finished by mid-June, says owner Gerd Ordleheide. The inn, originally built in 1704, has been undergoing a multi-million dollar renovation and expansion for nearly two years.

Cohasset selectmen made history Tuesday when they unanimously voted to enter into a Greenbush mitigation agreement with the MBTA. By signing the deal, the board ended years of wrangling and debate over proper mitigation measures and reparations for restoration of the long-dormant Greenbush commuter rail line.

A middle-high school marching band is something Cohasset hasn't see in about 20 years. But, thanks to first-year teacher Greg Lessard that's changing.

The Cohasset Common Historic District Commission approved major changes to three district houses Tuesday, including wing additions to the First Parish Church's parish house, as well as the South Shore Community Center.

Despite being beaten to the punch by a number of backhoes earlier in the week, the Cohasset School Building Committee dug its ceremonial shovels into the ground and officially kicked off the $41 million school renovation project last Friday.

June 7

Cohasset High School will say goodbye to 72 seniors Saturday, described as one of the best and brightest classes in recent years. High school principal Dr. Michael Jones called the group "exceptionally well-rounded" and was a great senior class to preside over in his first year at the school.

Come July, Judy Fitzsimmons, the town's public health nurse, is going to set up office at Town Hall, just a few hundred yards from where she's been based for the past 15 years at St. Stephen's Church.

A town committee has voted to recommend developing athletic fields on the site of the former town gravel pits off North Main Street.

June 14

Town officials are bracing for the possibility of a 200-plus unit housing development at the former Norfolk Conveyer site off Route 3A. According to Elizabeth Harrington, Avalon Bay Communities, a Quincy-based development company, has proposed constructing up to 250 high-end apartments on the 60-acre property.

The library construction project got a bit of bad news this week when it was not one of the ten projects to be awarded a Massachusetts Library Construction Grant.

Police have interviewed up to a dozen more local teenagers about a money counterfeiting ring, following the arrest of two Cohasset youths last week, and say the dollar amount of counterfeit bills circulating in the are could total several thousand.

June 21

Peter Pratt asked selectmen to hold a disciplinary hearing over Town Manager Mark Haddad's alleged behavior toward the Planning Board member after he questioned Haddad's authority to conduct an informal meeting with other officials last week. Pratt, who was elected to the planning board in April and did not know about the Avalon meeting beforehand, said he "forcefully" questioned Haddad during an impromptu visit to the selectmen's office. Then, according to Pratt, Haddad "exploded" and became "threatening and intimidating" toward to him.

Despite extreme weather on different ends of the spectrum, the 46th annual South Shore Arts Festival was a roaring success.

Former state senator William Golden slammed Massport's environmental impact report on the proposed new Logan Airport runway, calling it "fraudulent" and filled with "outright lies," suggested launching a lawsuit to force the state to review the matter.

June 28

Interest in fine arts that include visual arts, instrumental and choral music and photography are on the rise at the middle-high school. To that end, Principal Michael Jones said the fine arts department needs both a new leader and a new position. Due to retirements and the ability to shift some staff, the new posts would not add to the budget this year, he said.

The Board of Health has begun its annual testing of Cohasset waters for high bacteria levels.

The South Shore Music Circus turns 50 this week, and although the shows and technology have changed, the basic purpose has remained the same.

The new Pay As You Throw trash system takes effect on Sunday. Starting July 1, residents will not be able to dump their trash at the Recycling Transfer Station without a sticker and if their trash isn't one of the new blue PAYT bags.

July 5

Despite dozens of legal cases involving town boards, the town legal budget finished fiscal year 2001 in the black by about $15,000.

Hingham Lumber has filed plans with he town that would move the 54-year old business to Route 3A in Cohasset.

July 12

Although they are cropping up in Scituate, Hingham, and Norwell, it's hard to compete with Cohasset when it comes to homes priced at more than a million dollars. The average asking price around town is currently about $1.2 million per home.

Selectmen voiced their support for Town Manager Mark Haddad Tuesday, and one went so far as to characterize him as the victim of a "smear campaign" at the hands of Planning Board member Peter Pratt. Pratt was irate that selectmen will not hold a disciplinary hearing over the altercation.

July 19

The town Gravel Pit Reuse Committee hopes to go before this fall's special Town Meeting to ask for funds to construct the first of two Little League fields planned for the former town gravel pit site off North Main Street.

With a collective sigh of relief, the town Village Revitalization Task Force on Tuesday took its final votes on the general village renovation plan it will recommend to the town.

July 26

Residents frustrated with local zoning issues or who want to have an impact on the town's future, get their chance starting tonight at the Beechwood Congregational Church at 7:30 p.m. The neighborhood forum is the first of four such public meetings the town Growth and Development Committee has planned to get residents input on topics such as economic development, land use, traffic and transportation, and town facilities in Cohasset.

Aug. 2

Interested residents like a "scaled-down" version of the harbor improvement plan and asked engineers to come up with a common theme for the improvements.

The Cohasset Mariner has asked the Norfolk County District Attorney's office to look into a possible violation of the Open Meeting Law involving apparent deliberations and votes taken by the Cohasset Sewer Commission over e-mail. Last week's Sewer Commission meeting agenda listed a confirmation of e-mail vote under its new business.

Aug. 9

Selectmen have agreed with the MBTA on a $1.6 million price-tag for the six-mile long, town-owned right-of-way that could house the Greenbush commuter rail line in the near future. Town Manager Mark Haddad said the amount was a fair split between the $1.1 million MBTA appraisal and $2.05 million town appraisal of the land.

The Planning Board hopes the town's need for developable commercially-zoned land outweighs its need for affordable housing, and could be the basis upon which Cohasset could reject a proposed Chapter 40B comprehensive permit application along Route 3A.

Three Cohasset police cruisers, the police SUV and a paddy wagon from Weymouth ran a shuttle service from a house on Hillside Drive to the police station to transport 32

Citizen deadline approaches

In keeping with an eight-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

The deadline for nominations for the 2001 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 4. Please see the nomination form on page 6. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2001 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2002.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

teenagers and young adults being placed under arrest for alcohol offenses and disturbing the peace.

Aug. 16

Called the Great Neck Ledge Preservation Group, the grass-roots organization is focusing on preserving 13.6 acres of land abutting Great Brewster Woods, while also raising awareness of other similar areas around town.

While arresting four men in Hingham in connection with Friday's armed robbery of the Rockland Trust Company, Hanover and Hingham police officers believe they discovered property taken during a series of Cohasset burglaries last month.

The Cohasset Historical Society is worried that its denied request for an abatement of sewer betterment costs for two Cohasset Village museums will place an undue burden upon the historically rich, but financially poor organization.

Aug. 23

More students and longer routes have backed up the town's afternoon school bus service to the point where it isn't uncommon for students to have to wait in their classrooms for up to a half an hour until their bus arrives. In an effort to have school buses actually at the Deer Hill and Osgood schools when class ends in the afternoon, the Cohasset School Committee unanimously voted last week to start and dismiss the school day 15 minutes later than last year.

The Planning Board voiced its support last week for local businessman Peter Roy's initial plans to renovate the Mill River Marine Railway site on Border Street.

Aug. 30

For some concerned Cohasset residents, the idea of a massive housing development on one of Cohasset's last stretches of commercially zoned land has become all too real. Since July, Avalon Bay Properties has been in preliminary discussions with town boards about the feasibility of using a comprehensive permit to construct a 250-unit rental apartment complex.

Hingham Lumber's proposal to move to Route 3A in Cohasset his a snag last week when the Conservation Commission approval was held up by the existence of a rare freshwater crustacean on the site. The Mystic Valley Amphipod, a on-quarter to half-inch crustacean that lives in cool, shallow, slow moving water, is considered a species of special concern by the Natural Heritage & Endangered Species Program.

Sept. 6

As one of the town's crown jewels, Cohasset Common is in need of a long-term planning and preservation effort as much as any area in town. In order to help ensure the 232-year old common's longevity, the Department of Environmental Management announced late last month that the town has been awarded a $16,200 Historic Landscape Preservation Grant for Cohasset Common.

A bill allowing Cohasset to repay the loan for the long-awaited expansion of Woodside Cemetery over a period of 10 years, rather than five, was passed last week.

Sept. 13

Tuesday, Sept. 11, 2001, has become the 21st century's Day of Infamy, with thousands undoubtedly killed, and millions of lives changed. The shock waves from the terrorist strikes sent tremors throughout the nation, including the South Shore, where residents were frantically trying to locate family members and friends who may have been at either location.

School opening at Deer Hill School was clouded with unnecessary parental fears over asbestos, officials say.

Cohasset Police Chief Brian Noonan announced this week that he intends to retire at the end of the year.

Sept. 20

With the images of last Tuesday's tragedy still vivid in many minds, the town of Cohasset has helped the healing process by joining the national relief effort. The Town Hall Auditorium became a drop-off site for a canned food and clothing drive, and other efforts are being planned at the town's schools.

In God We Trust. That phrase, so familiar to all Americans, rang true for the nearly 1000 residents who packed St. Anthony's Church for a town-wide ecumenical service to share their feelings patriotism and personal faith Sunday.

Sept. 27

Selectmen, fed up with the lack of progress, voted Tuesday to terminate its lease with Kevin Ulmer and his Cohasset Lobster Lab proposal. For the past 3-1/2 years, the town has leased the house on the former Hagerty Property off Parker Avenue to Ulmer for $1 a year.

Hungry area residents were still driving up to the Newport Creamery at Shaw's Plaza this week hoping to stop in for a grilled cheese sandwich or hot fudge sundae. "Due to Newport Creamery's Chapter 7, our store will be closed. Thank you, the management," read a lime-green, poster bard that could be seen through the glass door inside the vestibule.

As promised, Advocates for Transportation Alternatives, with John Bewick at the helm, filed a lawsuit in Plymouth Superior Court Friday, with the hopes of forcing the MBTA to reexamine less environmentally damaging alternatives to the Greenbush commuter rail line.

Oct. 4

On advice of town counsel, the Sewer Commission is requiring the historical society hook up its two Elm Street museums, the Capt. John Wilson House (1810) and Maritime Museum (1750), to the sewer and pay the required betterment of about $3,000.

The old voting booths of Cohasset could become part of the history they helped create. For safety reasons the 25-30 year old portable structures need to be replaced.

Oct. 11

There will be no welcome mat from the school department for the proposed 254-unit apartment complex off Route 3A. Although the developer, AvalonBay Communities Inc., says the luxury project with a heated pool, spa, exercise facility and clubhouse is geared toward "empty-nesters" and young professionals with no kids — school officials fear it would flood the schools with more children than they can absorb.

There's a new face at the children's library desk in the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, one that many may remember from 15 years ago. Sharon Moody of Cohasset is excited about the opportunity to work in the library.

Oct. 18

Herb Jason and John Small are at it again. After building a monument on Government Island to two fallen lightkeepers, Jason and Small got approval to put a large anchor on Government Island near the sailing club.

Logan Airport's proposed runway plan is still alive, though not a top priority, according to Massport spokesman Barbara Platt. The plan is on hold till January, she said.

District Attorney William R. Keating's office has determined the Sewer Commission unintentionally violated the Open Meeting Law when its members held e-mail conversations last summer to discuss abatement requests.

The Cohasset Police Department has a copy of the revised Anthrax Threat Protocol from the State Fire Marshall's office. Last Sunday, Cohasset became one of the 60 municipalities across the state with an Anthrax scare.

Oct. 25

The Department of Education has mandated a formal teacher mentoring program begin for all public schools starting this month. A new teacher to a school system will be assigned a mentor who has been with the school system for at least three years.

Jack Buckley hopes selectmen will be enthusiastic about his proposal to expand CMI into the first floor of the Hagerty House. He sees CMI as "co-stewards" of the building working in partnership with the town to maintain and improve the structure.

Nov. 1

First it was Bergson's, then Newport Creamery - and now the future of the 3,500 square foot building at the entrance to Shaw's plaza on Router 3A is anybody's guess. The odds are the site will remain a restaurant or be sold to a bank or retail business because of restrictions in the land lease.

Special Town Meeting is only days away. As it stands now, the warrant contains 25 articles but 22 will likely be voted on at special Town Meeting, the Planning Board continued its public hearing on three zoning articles without voting on them, effectively tabling them until annual Town Meeting this spring.

Nov. 8

Cohasset students are up to the test. MCAS scores were released last week and Cohasset 10th-graders fared very well. Tenth-grade students scored high on both the English/Language Arts section and the math section. The students ranked 26 out of the 319 schools in the state on the two sections.

To the tune of thunderous applause, Monday's special Town Meeting approved Article 17 which appropriates $2.1 million towards the construction of the new library.

With a top attendance of more than 350 citizens in the high school gym, Town Meeting decided the fate of 22 articles or items of business. Eleven of the articles were decided on in one motion as there was no opposition to them.

A memorial to Cohasset's Gold Star Mothers is dedicated at Woodside Cemetery.

Nov. 15

Selectmen listened to public debate in an effort to make a decision on the fate of the Hagerty House at the end of Parker Avenue. The town bought the house and the 2.1 acre Hagerty property nine years ago.

Cohasset residents could suffer from "sticker shock" when they see how much their home is worth. The Board of Assessors recently made public the results of a town-wide revaluation that increased the assessed value of homes in town an average of 41 percent over last year.

Nov. 22

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he received a total of 54 applications for the post and has appointed a committee of seven to review the resumes and come up with a list of finalists.

The Cohasset School Department released the results from its first audit since 1987 last week. The state Department of Education gave the Cohasset School Department until Dec. 10 to respond to its audit that was conducted last May.

Nov. 29

The current budget tossed around Beacon Hill reduces funding the School Building Assistance Bureau program by almost 50 percent. This means towns lower on the list for reimbursement, like Cohasset, will have to wait longer for compensation from the state for their school building projects.

Dec. 6

The contentious battles between the Government Island Study Committee and Herb Jason and John Small look to be headed for another round. The committee is now opposing a ship's anchor that would be added to Government Island. While the committee previously supported the incorporation of the anchor, at Tuesday's selectmen's meeting Ham Tewksbury and Bob Davenport said the group had not realized how big the anchor would be.

The Children's Global Discovery Center to be housed in the 1929 wing of the old Osgood School kicked off its fundraising campaign Tuesday.

Cohasset will take the lead in an effort to stop the state Department of Education from making significant cuts to the School Building Assistance Bureau program.

The village improvement plans for St. Stephens sidewalk got the go-ahead from selectmen. The plans will now be sent to MassHighway which reviews them, and sends them back with either its seal of approval or suggestions for improvements.

Dec. 13

Cohasset and Hull are not getting along too well. Hull is selling sewer access to the private developer of a proposed subdivision off Jerusalem Road when Cohasset, which is under a court order to solve its wastewater woes, could use additional capacity.

Ledge preservation proponents promised to return in the spring and they plan to keep their word by drafting a new article for the March 30 annual Town Meeting. They will go ahead with or with-out the Planning Board's blessing although the group hopes the Planning Board will be "on board" this time around.

No one wants to see the Mill River Marine Railway - part of which is known as Cohasset's Motif #1 - collapse into the rapids where the Gulf River meets the harbor. But local lobstermen, members of the Cohasset Sailing Club, rowing center, Government Island Study Committee, and Harbor Committee also don't want to see access to the harbor - particularly parking - be usurped by proposed development of the site.

Dec. 20

A recent study shows the Beechwood-3A intersection is accident prone.

The sewer plant's "new clothes" could cost a lot more than the estimated $150,000 appropriated at Town Meeting. But rather than go back to the voters for more money, the improvements to the exterior of the sewer plant buildings may be done in phases.

The Straits Pond Watershed Association does not want a new development on Jerusalem Road because of potential run-off into the pond.

According to a presentation delivered by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection, a sewer may be the best option for the Little Harbor area.

New year, new look for Cohasset

By Evan Schiff
ESCHIFF@CNC.COM

With all the improvements slated to begin in the New Year, Cohasset should have a new look by the end of 2002.

Dean Rizzo, the executive director of CRC, a private corporation working in conjunction with the village revitalization taskforce, is looking forward to the New Year.

"It should be a great year for the village," Rizzo said.

The St. Stephen's sidewalk, which is being paid for through a state grant, would be the first part of the village revitalization project to see construction.

Rizzo said all design choices, including light fixtures and the type of material used for the sidewalks, should be finalized in the coming year.

Thanks to a state grant and the Greenbush project, the estimated $2-1/4 million cost for village revitalization could be paid for with no direct cost to Cohasset taxpayers.

The Harbor Walk area is slated to take center stage in 2002, and Rizzo said he is looking forward to working with the community on it.

"We hope to generate a community consensus on the design for the waterfront area and ensure the correct permitting is completed," he said. Rizzo said he has asked selectmen to start looking at funding opportunities for the Harbor Walk area so the renovations can be done at no cost to the taxpayers.

Selectmen recently gave the go ahead to Town Manager Mark Haddad to pursue those grants. Rizzo said the budget for the project will depend on the final design but he estimates could be anywhere from $500,000 to $1.2 million.

"It should come together well," he said.

He said he hopes the entire village project can be put out to bid in 2002 so all construction can begin in 2003.

Another area Rizzo said he is anticipating to be an exciting project in 2002 is the landscape preservation for the town common.

"We look forward to working with the town on that," he said.

A more comfortable Danke Shoen says thanks for the treatment.

Creature comfort

Cats and other animals can benefit from chiropractic care

By Alice Coyle
ACOYLE@CNC.COM

Danke Schoen has a lot to be thankful for. The 13-year-old red tabby is one well-adjusted feline thanks to Scituate chiropractor Debra Tranberg. Danke Schoen, or "Dunkie" as owners Anne and Rick Rodwell of Marshfield call her, suffers from arthritis in her neck, back and hind quarters.

"About a year ago we began noticing she was having trouble sitting down and getting up," Anne said. "She seemed to be stiff."

After their veterinarian diagnosed Dunkie with arthritis, the Rodwells were given the option of putting the family pet on Glucosamine — the same drug used to help build joints in humans over a prolonged period of time— or try something that more and more animal owners are trying —chiropractic care.

Rick has benefited from chiropractic care, so even though friends and family members told them it sounded "really out there," Anne said they figured they had nothing to lose.

The first treatments Dunkie received were through Veterinarian Dr. Phillip Pare who is not a certified chiropractor but used what is commonly known as the VOM (veterinary orthopedic manipulation) method in which a pulsar instrument is used to make the adjustments. Pare has left the Plymouth animal hospital for South Boston leaving Dunkie in Tranberg's capable hands.

Anne said she's delighted to have local chiropractic care for Dunkie, whose mobility and personality improve vastly following treatment.

"I see an immediate difference," she said, noting that Dunkie is able to bound up and down stairs, sits more comfortably and will allow people to pet her for longer.

In her first visit with Tranberg, Dunkie was in obvious discomfort, snapping and hissing when a sore area was touched. That's pretty much par for the course, said Tranberg, who's been adjusting animals for about six years. "Animals are more black and white than humans," Tranberg said of an animal's reactions to chiropractic care. "Most are nasty in the beginning, but when they've had it done a few times they're happy to be here because they know it will make them feel better."

Tranberg is a certified member of the American Veterinary Chiropractic Association (AVAC) a group that focuses its work on offering healing care to cats, dogs, horses, goats, ferrets and just about any other vertebrate animal you can think of.

"If it has a spine, it can be adjusted," said Tranberg. "I was once asked to adjust a snake."

Tranberg never got her hands on the snake, but she recently wrapped up a presentation at the AVCA'S "Options for Animals" program in Moline, Ill., where she spoke about the benefits of chiropractic care to both horse and rider.

Tranberg got in the saddle working on local dressage champion and Abington resident Tom Noone's horse and explains if a rider needs an adjustment they can cause the same imbalance and injury to the horse they ride.

Often when an animal has an injury or problem it has been caused in part by their human owner, Tranberg said. Dogs on runs or leashes, pulled or yanked by their owners often suffer neck and back injuries.

But whatever the cause of the animal's pain, the same philosophy used in chiropractic care for humans applies for animals. Chiropractic is grounded on the basis that the body is a self-regulating, self-healing organism. Impairments to the nervous system can cause malfunctions to the body's tissues, bones and organs. One common cause of this problem is what is known as "subluxation" which is a partial dislocation of the bones of the spine.

By adjusting a bone out of place in the spine which could be interrupting the flow between the nervous system and other bones, tissues, cells or organs, chiropractors help the body heal itself.

"The power that made the body can heal the body," Tranberg said. With improved spinal function there is often improved function in the nervous system.

"It's not just about healing back or neck pain," Tranberg notes. "It's about the nervous system which controls all functions in the body."

Tranberg, a Pembroke resident who has practiced in Scituate for 15 years said she became certified to give chiropractic care to animals after several of her human patients asked her to treat their pets.

But she's quick to point out to those who seek her help for their animals that chiropractic care does not replace good veterinary care.

"I insist that all animals be seen by their vet to be sure nothing else is going on."

Tranberg in fact works out of vet offices on the South Shore or travels to horse farms in the area. Just before speaking with the Mariner, Tranberg had been working on a horse in Abington. While her animal patients can't all lie on a table, Tranberg can make her animal adjustments standing on a hay bale just as well as in the office.

There are definite challenges that come with chiropractic for animals, but Tranberg said the good thing is they don't have expectations at the outset.

And generally adjustments take just a few minutes, unless the animal being treated is "really uncooperative," Tranberg said.

"I had some trouble with a pony that could kick sideways. And there was a cat that had a club foot, but could take your eye out with that foot."

And the same satisfaction she feels in bringing relief to her human patients, Tranberg enjoys in seeing in the animals she treats.

"It's a lot of fun."

Curled up comfortably across the room from her new chiropractor, Danke Schoen appears to be in purr-fect agreement.

Danke Shoen bears up well during the adjustment.

New habit for NDA grad

Former Hingham resident Adrienne Cote also plays the role of "Sister" in "Late Nite Catechism," sharing the spotlight with Maripat Donovan, pictured here.

Hingham native stars in 'Late Night Catechism'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Adrienne Cote hopes to see some familiar faces, from her high school days at Notre Dame Academy, in the audience when she performs in the play "Late Nite Catechism" at Boston's Shubert Theatre.

"I really want the nuns to come out for this show," the former Hingham resident said. "It would give them a good laugh to see me dressed as a nun."

Co-written by Vicki Quade and Maripat Donovan, "Late Nite Catechism" has been giving audiences a good laugh since it first debuted in Chicago in 1993. A one-woman show, the play takes audience members back to childhood as they attend an adult Catechism class taught by a nun known simply as Sister. Between 1995-1997, Donovan "taught" her "Catechism" class at Boston's Church of All Nations. During this limited this Boston engagement, Donovan will be alternating with Cote in the role of Sister.

"When I was first auditioning for this show, I attended many performances by Maripat. I realized pretty quickly that she is a brilliant actress. When I was chosen I was blown away. I wasn't even sure I could play the part," says Cote. "Knowing how great Maripat is in the role, makes me word even harder to get it right. When we share an engagement like this, I always learn something from her."

Learning is a central part of "Late Nite Catechism." Throughout the play, Sister goes from kindly teacher —rewarding her best students with laminated prayer cards and glow-in-the-dark rosaries — to demanding drill instructor. These unpredictable mood swings are bound to be familiar to anyone who remembers grade school authority figures.

The character of Sister is close to Cote's heart. "At Notre Dame, I met many nuns like the one I portray. Nuns are women with a calling. They feel their responsibility very deeply," the now New York-based actress points out. Having performed in more than one production of "Nunsense," Cote is well aware that nuns are often portrayed in a humorous light.

"Sister is very funny and her interaction with the audience can be hilarious," she says. "We're respectful, however, even when we're being irreverent. This show is definitely more about the Catholic Church. We definitely poke fun, but only in a loving way. I couldn't do this if I thought we were just making fun of nuns. We have a lot of fun, but in a loving and faith-filled way."

Cote has performed in "Catechism" on and off for the past four years. She has also performed in regional theaters around the country in plays like "Deathtrap" and "The Diary of Anne Frank" and musicals including "The Pirates of Penzance" and "Into the Woods." Earlier in her career, Cote performed with the Company Theatre in Norwell and Braintree's Curtain Call Theatre. Her current assignment, however, marks her debut on a commercial Boston stage.

With a mother and sister in Marshfield, and other sisters in Weymouth, Marshfield and Stoughton, Cote expects her family, in particular, and the South Shore, in general, to be well represented at the Shubert. There is also one more person she would really like to see.

"If my high school music teacher, Sister Patricia Gertrude, shows up she will be the one I am most eager to please. She really made a lot of people at Notre Dame shine, including me. Her support was really instrumental in helping me make my career choice. Sister Patricia Gertrude is just a great woman."

("Late Nite Catechism" will be performed through Jan. 6, at the Shubert Theatre, 265 Tremont Street, Boston. To learn which performances will feature Adrienne Cote, please call 1-207-583-0955. For tickets and other information, call 1-800-447-7400.)

Perfect Popovers

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Popovers are culinary magic: the batter consists of only five ingredients, it can be made in a blender, and it literally "pops" in the oven creating a spectacular finish without a trace of yeast or chemical leavener. Bad popovers, however, are squat, heavy and wet, burn on the outside, or turn out lopsided or sunken in the middle. With such a simple recipe, how could one get such variable results?

I began with a basic recipe consisting of 1 cup flour, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 2 large eggs, and melted butter to grease the pan. I tested higher and lower amounts of flour but 1 cup was perfect. Cake flour made shorter popovers and sifted flour made no difference at all. The one cup of whole milk was the right amount and type. Two percent milk was okay but half-and-half produced slightly heavier results. I boosted the eggs to three for a puffier, crisper, and tastier popover. Most recipes include melted butter (as mine did) but I found that batter made without was superior – the popovers were lighter and far crispier. The salt was upped to a 1/2 teaspoon and now I was done with the ingredient list.

My favorite aspect of any popover recipe is that the ingredients can simply be dumped into a blender or whisked by hand. Nothing sensitive about this batter! What is truly unusual, however, is that popover batter must sit for a half hour before baking. This gives the finished produce more height and a more uniform shape.

The actual baking of popovers is as close to oven magic as one will find in the kitchen. There are three theories: cold pan into a hot oven, a hot pan into a hot oven, and a cold pan into a cold oven. (Some cooks swear that the muffin tin and oven must not be preheated while others claim this is essential for lift.) I tried all three methods and ended up preferring a cold muffin tin into a cold oven. The baking time had to be extended but the popovers were bigger, lighter, and crispier. Preheated ovens tend to produce lopsided popovers with concave tops and preheating the pan didn't seem to make much difference. As for oven temperatures, 450 degrees for 30 minutes followed by 15 minutes in a 350 degrees was just right.

However, for those of us who do not have an extra oven to spare around the holidays and must use a preheated oven, I wanted a variation on the recipe that worked well. The solution was to place the muffin tin with batter in a hot oven, set the oven to 450 degrees, bake for 20 minutes, reduce the oven to 325 degrees, and bake 20 minutes longer. The popovers will be a touch lopsided but nobody will complain!

HIGH-RISE CRISPY POPOVERS

If you don't have a cold oven available, follow the variation below.

1 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 large eggs
1 cup whole milk
2 tablespoons butter, melted, for brushing the muffin cups

1. Place flour, salt, eggs, and milk in a blender and mix until well combined, about 30 seconds. Alternatively the ingredients may be whisked in a medium bowl either by hand or with an electric mixer. Let stand for 30 minutes. Meanwhile, using a pastry brush generously butter a 12-cup muffin pan.

2. Pour the batter into the prepared pan filling each muffin cup halfway up. Place in the center of a cold oven set for 450 degrees. Bake for 30 minutes. Rotate the pan 180 degrees and lower the temperature to 350 degrees. Bake until deep golden brown, about 15 minutes longer. Serve immediately. Makes 12 popovers

HOT OVEN VARIATION

In step 2, place the pan in your already heated oven and set the temperature to 450 degrees. Bake for 20 minutes. Rotate the pan 180 degrees and lower the temperature to 350 degrees and bake until deep golden brown, about 15 to 20 minutes longer.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 26

Venus enters Capricorn at 2:25 a.m., remaining there until January 18. The moon continues to travel in steady Taurus throughout the day. If you are working, it is okay to initiate new activities or sign contracts before 9:51 a.m., when the moon aligns with Mercury. On the other hand, influences continue to run high for relaxing and recharging your batteries. A lunar alignment to Uranus at 7:22 p.m. may disrupt the flow of the day. Be adaptable. At this time the moon becomes inactive.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 27

An inactive Taurus moon makes for a slow start to this day. Take your time. Influences turn around completely at 9:39 a.m., when the moon enters lively Gemini. Handle a variety of chores, errands, odds and ends of things, if you want to be productive. People will be sociable, talkative but easily distracted. A lunar alignment to Neptune makes this a great evening to gather with friends and go for the good times.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 28

Stormy astrological weather moves in today. Keep it light. Don't force issues. The Gemini moon forms challenging alignments to Saturn and Mars in the morning and Pluto in the afternoon. Making important decisions or launching new ventures are off limits. Instead, focus on jobs that need to be finished, cleaned out, reorganized. Keep a low profile. Pursue activities that help you to maintain a positive, easygoing attitude.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29

Gear up for another hectic day. The Gemini moon becomes inactive at 1:24 a.m. This is a morning to stay busy with projects that have been left hanging; finish and follow through. The final windup to a potent full moon begins at 2:40 p.m., when the moon enters the sign Cancer. Others may be hypersensitive, emotional. Be more compassionate; patient. Back off rather than stir up resentment. Find time alone; prayer and meditation can help you to gain deep penetrating insights.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 30

Turbulent astrological weather continues. Wake up in a good mood. Remain calm no matter what is happening around you. The lunar eclipse/full moon culminates at 5:40 a.m., 9-degrees of the sign Cancer. People often have difficulty sleeping in full moon periods and, as a result, can be grouchy and difficult to get along with. Don't overpersonalize. In addition, a 90-degree alignment of Mars and Pluto may spark disagreements, power struggles, accidents. Stay alert and use common sense. Meditate for clarity and peace of mind.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 31

Potentially difficult planetary influences begin to ease up in the nick of time. The Cancer moon opposes Mercury at 8:43 a.m. and becomes inactive. An upbeat Leo moon takes over at 5:09 p.m., setting the stage for fun and games this evening. In addition, a sun/Jupiter polarity occurs, generating a festive, optimistic mood. Put on your party hat and let the good times roll.

Proper care for holiday houseplants

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

With the official arrival of winter upon us, more seasonable temperatures have greeted South Shore residents. Despite the inevitability of snow, ice and frigid temperatures in the weeks to come, the passing of the winter solstice and the shortest day of the year are always a positive landmark for this avid gardener who thrives on sunlight and warmer weather. As long as the ground remains free from snow cover, my garden cleanup continues. There are winter mulches to spread, hundreds of empty pots to sort and new projects to mastermind for the spring. Outdoor gardening in winter can be most invigorating.

On days when chilly temperatures or inclement weather necessitate indoor activities, I browse through enticing, colorful, gardening catalogs and tend to my holiday houseplants. Despite my personal indifference to indoor gardening, I purchase several holiday plants each December as they are among the easiest and most attractive solutions for instant holiday decorating and I must confess that the winter months seem more bearable if there are green plants present. No matter what the season, a well-placed plant in full bloom, or even a healthy foliage plant, can become an immediate focal point or decorative element providing warmth and vitality to any living space.

The winter months tend to be a difficult time to maintain healthy houseplants. Low light and dry indoor environments pose serious challenges for the majority of indoor plants. Most holiday plants prefer bright light and cool temperatures. Select locations, which are away from drafts or heat sources. Avoid growing plants on narrow window-sills in winter due to the chill of the glass on very cold days and the fact that many windows have heaters located directly beneath them.

Improper watering is the most common cause of houseplant failures. Water early in the day with lukewarm water, providing enough water so that some comes out the bottom of the pot. Although decorative holiday foils make the standard plastic pot look more festive, it is better to remove this so the water can drain into a saucer and the excess can be poured off shortly after watering. A pot which sits in a water-filled saucer can eventually lead to rot or disease. Plants require less moisture during extended periods of cloudy, gloomy weather. Avoid the temptation to water all plants on a set schedule since this is often the cause for over-watering which tends to be the primary cause of houseplant deaths. Poke a finger into the soil for the most accurate determination.

Humidity is another key factor for healthy houseplants. In especially warm homes, a pebble tray beneath you plants may be helpful. Place a few small stones in a saucer underneath your plants and allow a minimal quantity of water to remain at all times. Remember that the bottom of the pot should not sit in standing water. Grouping plants will help to increase humidity levels and an occasional misting, or even a quick shower in the kitchen sink or bathtub, will help to rehydrate stressed plants and remove dust which may have accumulated on the foliage. Brightly lit bathrooms are particularly ideal locations for houseplants as the humidity which results from showers and running water creates a greenhouse-like environment.

Apply a dilute, liquid soluble fertilizer at least once a month. Slow release granular fertilizers, such as Osmocote, offer a convenient alternative to mixing and require only one application to the soil surface every few months. Nutrients are released to the plant each time you water.

Keep a close watch for pests. Spider mites thrive in warm, dry environments and aphids, scale, or mealy bugs often become a problem if plants spent the summer out-of- doors. Early detection and quick action will minimize the use of chemicals. An application of a light horticultural oil spray can be safely executed in a shower enclosure. It should be noted that healthy plants are much less susceptible to insects and diseases.

The colorful poinsettia is worthy of its popularity, its brightly-colored flowers pro- viding an elegant display which may persist for weeks and months after the holidays. Their showy flowers are actually highly colored leaves or bracts with the true, tiny, insignificant yellow flowers located in the center. Although poinsettias prefer bright light, they will tolerate low light conditions. Keep the soil moderately moist and water when the surface feels dry to the touch. They prefer cool temperatures and should be protected from drafts. Occasional fertilizing will help to maintain the rich, deep green foliage.

In recent years, the crab cactus (Zygocactus truncatus) tends to have replaced its epiphytic relative, the Christmas cactus (Schlumbergera bridgesii). Both plants are leafless with flat, jointed stems, but the crab cactus features wider, more rigid and upright segments, with pointed, tooth-like projections. These plants are remarkably tolerant of neglect, but prefer bright light, quick draining soils, and like to be pot-bound. Short day length and cool temperatures in autumn are required to set flower buds.

For passionate gardeners, maintaining a healthy collection of indoor plants during the dormant winter months helps to satisfy our need to work the soil. The new season's catalogs have already started to arrive and in only a few weeks, it will be time to begin sowing seeds.
